WORKS OF

The Printer to the Reader.

I SVPPOSE it altogether needlesse (Christian Reader) by commending Mr WILLIAM PERKINS, the Author of this Booke, to wooe your holy affection, which either himselfe in his life time by his Christian conuersation hath woone in you, or sithence his death, the never-dying memorie of his excellent knowledge, his great humilitie, his sound religion, his fervent zeale, his painefull labours, in the Church of God, doe most justly challenge at your hands. Only in one word I dare be bold to say of him, as in times past Nazianzen spake of Athanasius. His life was a good definition of a true Minister and preacher of the Gospel. And needlesse also is it (if not injurious) by praysing of his learned and godly writings, to thinke to incline your better judgement which in so holy a subject (as is the body of Divinitie, and principles of Religion) I dare not suspect to be unsetled; and in so easie a method and familiar a style, which he useth in them both, I am sure can hardly miscarrie. Such is his love to all, that, as for the matter of his doctrine, he contenteth and satisfieth the most learned: so for the manner of his delivering the same, he condescendeth to the capacitie of the meanest of Gods children. I here once more present unto you the Workes of this worthy man. Reade them diligently, and judge of them freely. I doubt not but in your exactest censure, you will conspire with those learned Men, who for the profitable instruction they containe in all, or the most points of Christianitie, for the more common good of the Church of God, have deemed them worthy their godly labours by translating them into divers languages, as into Latine, Dutch, Spanish, &c. A thing not ordinarily observed in other writings of these our times.

Concerning this new Edition, if you aske why I have not added those other Treatises of his, which have beene published since the former impression? I answer, it is not done without the advice of graue and learned men, in two respects: First to set a difference (as indeed there is great oddes) betwixt those bookes which the Author himselfe yet living, by his owne care not onely in the penning, but likewise in the correcting of the same, did set forth: and those other which are Posthumi, that is, borne after his death, gathered and collected by others. Such as are these following:

1. Vpon three chapters of the Revelation.
2. Sathans Sophistrie.
3. Vpon the Epistle of Saint Iude.
4. The dignitie of the Ministerie.
5. Vpon the eleventh chapter to the Hebrewes.
6. Vpon three chapters of Saint Matthewes Gospel, &c.

Secondly, because I have remaining by me, so many other Treatises in divers prints and formes of the same Authors owne collection, which I purpose (by Gods permission) to set forth, as will amount to a second Volume equall to this, if not bigger.

In the meane time, what heretofore I have wished concerning such as have the interest in those Afterbirths, viz. that they would agree likewise, to draw them all into one Volume, that so they that take delight in Mr. Perkins his writings, might with lesse labour of their owne, attaine to the compleate body of his studies: it being also more convenient for their use, to have them rather compacted in one Volume, then scattered into divers parcels of divers formes: I now understand, is effected, and nothing henceforth to bee added. Thus with promise to make all possible expedition in setting forth the second Volume of his workes: I commend this to your diligent reading, my endeavours to your charitable construction, and us all to the blessing and holy protection of Almightie God. ## A GRAINE OF MVSTARD-SEED.

THE CONTENTS.

I. Conclusion.
A man that doth but begin to be first converted, is even at that instant the very child of God, though inwardly he be more carnall then spirituall. 637,1,c

II. Conclusion.
The first materiall beginnings of the conversion of a sinner, or the smallest measure of renewing grace, have the promises of this life, and the life to come. 638,1,b

III. Conclusion.
A constant and earnest desire to be reconciled to God, to beleeve and to repent, if it be in a touched heart, is in acceptation of God, as reconciliation, faith, repentance it selfe. 638,2,d IV. Conclusion.

To see and feele in our selves the want of any grace, pertaining to salvation, and to be grieved therefore, is the grace it selfe. 641,2,b

V. Conclusion.
He that hath begun to subject himselfe to Christ, and his word, though as yet he be ignorant in most points of religion: yet if he have a care to increase in knowledge, and to practise that which he knoweth, he is accepted of God, as a true beleever. 642,1,a

VI. Conclusion.
The foresaid beginnings of grace are counterfeit, unlesse they increase. ibid. d

TO ALL IGNORANT PEOPLE
that desire to bee instructed.

POORE people, your manner is to sooth up your selves, as though you were in a most happie estate: but if the matter come to a just tryall, it will fall out farre otherwise. For you leade your lives in great ignorance, as may appeare by these your common opinions which follow;

1 That faith is a mans good meaning, and his good serving of God.

2 That God is served by the rehearsing of the ten commandements, the Lords Prayer, and the Creed.

3 That ye have beleeved in Christ ever since you could remember.

4 That it is pitie that he should live which doth any whit doubt of his salvation.

5 That none can tell whether he shall be saved or no certainly: but that all men must bee of a good beleefe.

6 That howsoever a man live, yet if hee call upon God on his death-bed, and say, Lord have mercie upon me, and so goe away like a lambe, he is certainely saved.

7 That if any be strangely visited, he is either taken with a planet, or bewitched.

8 That a man may lawfully sweare, when he speakes nothing but the truth, and sweares by nothing but that which is good, as by his faith or troth.

9 That a Preacher is a good man no longer then he is in the pulpit. They thinke all like themselves.

10 That a man may repent when he will, because the Scripture saith; At what time soever a sinner doth repent him of his sinnes, &c.

11 That it is an easier thing to please God, then to please our neighbour.

12 That yee can keepe the commandements, as well as God will give you leave.

13 That it is the safest to doe in Religion as most doe.

14 That merry ballads and bookes, as Scogging, Bevis of Southhampton, &c. are good to drive away the time, and to remoove heart-qualmes.

15 That yee can serve God with all your hearts, and that yee would be sorrie else.

16 That a man neede not heare so many Sermons, except he could follow them better.

17 That a man which commeth at no Sermons, may as well beleeve, as he which heares all the Sermons in the world.

18 That yee know all the Preacher can tell you. For hee can say nothing, but that every man is a sinner, that we must love our neighbours as our selves, that every man must be saved by Christ: and all this yee can tell as well as hee.

19 That it was a good world, when the old Religion was, because all things were cheape.

20 That drinking and bezeling in the ale-house or taverne, is good fellowship, and shewes a good kind nature, and maintaines neighbourhood.

21 That a man may sweare by the Masse, because it is nothing now, and byr Lady, because she is gone out of the Countrey.

22 That every man must bee for himselfe, and God for us all.

23 That a man may make of his owne whatsoever he can.

24 That if a man remember to say his prayers every morning (though hee never understand them) hee hath blessed himselfe for all the day following.

25 That a man prayeth when he saith the ten commandements.

26 That a man eates his Maker in the Sacrament.

27 That if a man be no adulterer, no theefe, no murderer, and doe no man harme, he is a right honest man.

28 That a man neede not have any knowledge of religion, because he is not booke-learned.

29 That one may have a good meaning, when he saith and doth that which is evill.

30 That a man may goe to wizzards, called wise men, for counsell: because God hath provided a salve for every sore.

31 That yee are to be excused in all your doings, because the best men are sinners.

32 That yee have ſo ſtrong a faith in Chriſt, that no evill company can hurt you.

Theſe and ſuch like ſayings, what argue they but your groſſe ignorance? Now where ignorance raigneth, there raignes ſinne: and where ſinne raignes, there the divell rules: and where he rules, men are in a damnable caſe.

Yee will reply unto mee thus: that yee are not ſo bad as I would make you. If neede bee you can ſay the Creede, the Lords prayer, and the ten Commandements: and therefore you will be of Gods beleefe, ſay all men what they will, and you defie the divell from your hearts.

I anſwer againe, that it is not ſufficient to ſay all theſe without booke, unleſſe you can underſtand the meaning of the words, and be able to make a right uſe of the Commandements, of the Creed, of the Lords prayer by applying them inwardly to your hearts and conſciences, and outwardly to your lives and converſations. This is the very point in which you faile.

And for an helpe in this your ignorance, to bring you to true knowledge, unfained faith, and ſound repentance: here I have ſet downe the principall points of Chriſtian religion in ſixe plaine and eaſie rules: even ſuch as the ſimpleſt may eaſily learne: and hereunto is adjoyned an expoſition of them word by word. If yee doe want other good directions, then uſe this my labour for your inſtruction. In reading of it, firſt learne the ſixe Principles: and when you have them without booke, and the meaning of them withall, then learne the expoſition alſo: which being well conceived, and in ſome meaſure felt in the heart, yee ſhall bee able to profit by Sermons, whereas now ye cannot, and the ordinary parts of the Catechiſme, namely, the ten Commandements, the Creede, the Lords prayer, and the inſtitution of the two Sacraments, ſhall more eaſily bee underſtood.

Thine in Chriſt Ieſus,

WILLIAM PERKINS.

THE FOVNDATION OF CHRISTIAN Religion, gathered into sixe Principles.

The first Principle.

Question.

WHAT doest thou beleeve concerning God?

A. There is one God, Creator and Governour of all things, distinguished into the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost.

Proofes out of the Word of God.

1. There is a God.

Rom. 1. 20. For the invisible things of him, that is, his eternall power & Godhead, are seene by the Creation of the world being considered in his workes, to the intent, that they should bee without excuse. Nevertheless, he left not himselfe without witnes, in that he did good, and gave us raine from heaven, and fruitfull seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladnes.

Act. 14 17

2. This God is one.

1 Cor. 8. 4. Concerning therefore meate sacrificed to Idols, wee know that an Idol is nothing in the world: and that there is none other God but one.

3. He is Creator of all things.

Gen. 1. 1. In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

Heb. 11. 3. Through faith wee understand, that the world was ordained by the word of God: so that the things which we see, are not made of things which did appeare.

4. He is governour of all things.

Pro. 15 3. The eyes of the Lord in every place behold the evill and the good.

Matth. 10. 30. Yea and all the haires of your heads are numbred.

5. Distinguished into the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost.

Mat. 3. 16 And Iesus when he was baptized came straight out of the water: and loe, the heavens were opened unto him, and Iohn saw the spirit of God descending like a Dove and lighting upon him.

Verse 17. And loe a voice came from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Sonne, in whom I am well pleased.

1 Ioh. 5. 7 For there are three which beare record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghost: and these three are one.

The second Principle.

Q. What doest thou beleeve concerning man, and concerning thine owne selfe?

A. All men are wholly corrupted with sin through Adams fall, and so are become slaves of Satan, and guiltie of eternall damnation.

1. All men are corrupted with sinne.

Rom. 3. 10. As it is written, There is none righteous, no not one.

2. They are wholly corrupted.

1 Thess. 5. 23. Now the very God of peace sanctifie you throughout, & I pray God that your whole spirit, and soule, and body, may be kept blamelesse unto the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ.

This I say therefore and testifie in the Lord, that Eph. 4. 17 ye henceforth walke not as other Gentiles walke, in vanitie of their minde.

Vers. 18. Having their cogitation darkened, & being strangers from the life of God, through ignorance that is in them, because of the hardnesse of their heart.

Gen. 6. 5. When the Lord saw that the wickednes of man was great in the earth, and all the imaginations of the thoughts of his heart, were evil only continually.

3. Through Adams fall.

Rom. 5. 12. Wherefore, as by one man sinne entered into the world, and death by sinne, and so death went over all men, for so much as all men have sinned.

4. And so are become slaves of Sathan.

Eph. 2. 2. Wherein in times past yee walked according to the course of the world, and after the prince that ruleth in the ayre, even the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience.

Heb. 2. 14 For as much then as the children were partakers of flesh and blood, he also himselfe likewise took part with them, that he might destroy through death, him that had the power of death; that is, the divell.

2 Cor. 4. 4 In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds, that is, of Infidels, that the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, which is the image of God, should not shine unto them.

5. And guiltie of eternall damnation.

Gal. 3. 10. For as many as are of the workes of the law, are under the curse: for it is written, Cursed is every man that continueth not in all things, which are written in the booke of the law, to doe them.

Rom. 5. 18 Likewise then, as by the offence of one, the fault came on all men to condemnation: so by the justifying of one, the benefit abounded toward all men, to the justification of life.

The third Principle.

Q. What meanes is there for thee to escape this damnable estate?

A. Iesus Christ, the eternall Sonne of God, being made man, by his death upon the Crosse, and by his righteousnesse, hath perfectly alone by himselfe accomplished all things that are needfull for the salvation of mankinde.

1. Christ Iesus the eternall Sonne of God.

Ioh. 1. 14 And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we saw the glory thereof, as the glory of the onely begotten (Sonne) of the Father, full of grace and truth.

2. Being made man.

Heb. 2. 16 For hee in no sort tooke the Angels, but he tooke the seede of Abraham.

3. By his death upon the Crosse.

Esa. 53.5. But he was wounded for our transgressions, hee A was broken for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed.

4. And by his righteousnesse.

Rom.5. 19. For as by one mans disobedience many were made sinners: so by the obedience of one, shall many also be made righteous.

2 Cor. 5. 21. For hee hath made him to be sinne for us, which knew no sinne, that we should be made the righteousnesse of God in him.

5. Hath perfectly.

Heb.7.25 Wherefore he is able also perfectly to save them that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.

6. Alone by himselfe.

Act.4.12. Neither is there salvation in any other: for among men there is given none other name under heaven, whereby we must be saved.

7. Accomplished all things needfull for the salvation of mankind.

1 Ioh.1.2. And he is the reconciliation for our sinnes: and not for ours only, but also for the sinnes of the whole world.

The fourth Principle.

Q. But how maist thou be made partaker of Christ and his benefits?

Answ. A man of a contrite and humble spirit, by faith alone apprehending and applying Christ with all his merits unto himselfe, is justified before God and sanctified.

1. A man of a contrite and humble spirit.

Isa.57.15. For thus saith hee that is high and excellent; Hee that inhabiteth the eternitie, whose name is the Holy one, I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit; to revive the spirit of the humble, and to give life to them that are of a contrite heart,

Psal.51. 17. The sacrifices of God, are a contrite spirit: a contrite and broken heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

2. By faith alone.

Mar.5.36 As soone as Iesus heard that word spoken, hee said unto the ruler of the Synagogue, Bee not afraid, only beleeve.

Num.21. 19. So Moses made a serpent of brasse, and set it up for a signe, and when a serpent had bitten a man, then hee looked to the Serpent of brasse, and lived.

Ioh.3.14. And as Moses lift up the Serpent in the wildernesse, so must the Sonne of man bee lifted up.

Verse 15. That whosoever beleeveth in him, should not perish, but have eternall life.

3. Apprehending and applying Christ with all his merits unto himselfe.

Ioh.1.12. But as many as received him, to them hee gave power to be the sonnes of God, to them that beleeve in his name.

Ioh.6.35. And Iesus said unto them; I am the bread of life, hee that commeth to mee, shall not hunger, and hee that beleeveth in mee; shall never thirst.

4. Is justified before God.

Rom.4.3. For what saith the Scripture; Abraham beleeved God, and it was counted to him for righteousnesse.

Verse 6. Even as David declareth the blessednesse of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousnesse, without workes: saying,

Verse 7. Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sinnes are covered.

5. And sanctified.

Act.15.19 And hee put no difference betweene us and B them, after that by faith hee had purified their hearts.

1 Cor.1. 30. But yee are of him in Christ Iesus, who of God is made unto us wisedome, and righteousnesse, and sanctification, and redemption.

The fifth Principle.

Q. What are the ordinary or usuall meanes for obtaining of faith.

A. Faith commeth onely by the preaching of the Word, and increaseth daily by it: as also by the administration of the Sacraments and prayer.

1. Faith commeth onely by the preaching of the Word, and increaseth daily by it.

Rom. 10. 14. But how shall they call on him, in whom they C have not beleeved: how shall they beleeve in him, of whom they have not heard? And how shall they heare without a Preacher? Where there is no vision, the people decay: but he that keepeth the law is blessed.

Prov. 29. 18. My people are destroyed for lacke of knowledge: because thou hast refused knowledge, I will also refuse thee, that thou shalt bee no Priest to mee: and seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children.

Hos.4. 8.

2. As also by the administration of the Sacraments.

Rom.4. 11. After hee received the signe of circumcision, D as the seale of the righteousnesse of faith, which he had when he was uncircumcised, that hee should bee the father of all them that beleeve, not being circumcised, that righteousnesse might bee imputed to them also.

1 Cor. 10.1. Moreover, brethren, I would not that yee should bee ignorant, that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea, &c.

3. And Prayer.

Rom.10. 13. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

The sixth Principle.

Q. What is the estate of all men after death?

A. All men shall rise againe with their owne bodies, to the last judgement, which being ended, the godly shall possesse the kingdome of heaven: but unbeleevers and reprobates shall be in hell, tormented with the divell and his angels for ever.

1. All men shall rise againe with their owne bodies.

Ioh. 5. 28. Marvell not at this, for the houre shall come, in the which all that are in the graves shall heare his voyce.

Verse 29. And they shall come forth that have done good, unto the resurrection of life: but they that have done evill, unto the resurrection of condemnation.

2. To the last judgement.

Eccl. 12. 14. For God will bring every worke unto judgement, with every secret thing, whether it be good or evill.

Matth. 12. 36. But I say unto you, that of every idle word that men shall speake, they shall give an account thereof, at the day of judgement.

2 Pet. 2 7. 3. Which being ended the godly.

And delivered just Lot, vexed with the uncleane conversation of the wicked.

Ezech. 9 4. And the Lord said unto him: goe thorow the middest of the Citie, euen thorow the middest of Ierusalem, and set a marke upon the foreheads of them that mourne, and cry for all the abominations that be done in the middest thereof.

4. Shall possesse the kingdome of God.

Matth. 25. 34. Then shall the king say to them on his right hand, Come yee blessed of my Father, inherit yee the kingdome prepared for you from the beginning of the world.

5. But unbeleevers and reprobates shall be in hell, tormented with the divell and his angels.

Verse 41. Then shall hee say unto them on the left hand, Depart from mee yee cursed into everlasting fire, which is prepared for the divell and his angels.

The Scriptures for proofe were onely quoted by the Author, to moove thee to search them: the words themselves I have expressed at the earnest request of many, that thou maiest more easily learne them: if yet thou wilt be ignorant, thy malice is evident; if thou gainest knowledge, give God the glory in doing of his will.

THE EXPOSITION OF THE PRINCIPLES.

The first Principle expounded.

Question.

WHat is God?

A. God is a [a] spirit, or spirituall substance, most wise, most holy, eternall, infinite.

a Ioh. 4. 24.

Q. How doe you perswade your selfe that there is a God?

A. Beside the testimony of the Scriptures, plaine reason will shew it.

Q. What is one reason?

A. When I consider [b] the wonderfull frame of the world, me thinks the silly creatures that be in it could never make it: neither could it make it selfe, and therefore besides all these, the maker of it must needs be God. Even as when a man comes into a strange country, and sees faire and sumptuous buildings, and yet finds no living creatures there, besides birds and beasts, hee will not imagine, that either birds or beasts reared those buildings, but hee presently conceives, that some men either are or have beene there.

b Rom. 1. 20. Acts 14. 17.

Q. What other reason have you?

A. [c] A man that commits any sinne, as murther, fornication, adultery, blasphemie, &c. albeit hee doth so conceale the matter, that no man living know of it, yet oftentimes he hath a griping in his conscience, and feeles the very flashing of hell fire; which is a strong reason to shew, that there is a God, before whose judgement seat he must answer for his fact.

c Rom. 2. 15. Gen. 3. 8. 10. and 42. 21.

Q. How many Gods are there?

A. No [d] more but one.

d 1 Cor. 8. 9.

Q. How doe you conceive this one God in your minde?

A. Not [e] by framing an image of him in my minde (as ignorant folkes doe, that thinke him to be an old man sitting in heaven) but I conceive him by his properties and works.

e Deut. 4. 16. Amos 4. 13.

Q. What be his chiefe properties?

A. First, hee is [f] most wise, understanding all things aright, and knowing the reason of them. Secondly, he is [g] most holy, which appeareth, in that hee is most just and mercifull unto his creatures. Thirdly, hee is [h] eternall, without either beginning, or end of dayes. Lastly, hee is (i) infinite, both because hee is present in all places, and because he is of power sufficient to doe whatsoever he [k] will.

f Iob 12. 13. g Esa. 6. 3. Exod. 20. 5. h Esa. 41. 4. i Psa. 139. 12. k Iob 9. 4. Deut. 10. 17. Iier. 10. 12. Psal 33. 6.

Q. What be the works of God?

A. [l] The creation of the world, and every thing therein, and the preservation of them; being created, by his speciall providence.

Q. How know you that God governeth every particular thing in the world by his speciall providence?

A. To omit the [m] Scriptures, I see it by experience: [n] Meate, Drinke and Clothing, being voide of heate and life, could not preserve the life of man, unlesse there were a speciall providence of God to give vertue unto them.

m Matth. 10. 30. Prov. 16. 33. n Levit. 26 26. Mat. 4. 4. o 1 Ioh. 5. 7. Matth. 3. 16, 17. p Iob 15. 26.

Q. How is this one God distinguished?

A. [o] Into the Father, which begetteth the Sonne; into the Sonne, who is begotten of the Father; into the holy Ghost, [p] who proceedeth from the Father and the Sonne.

The second Principle expounded.

Q. Let us now come to our selves, and first tell me, What is the naturall estate of man?

A. Every man is by nature [q] dead in sinne as a loathsome carrion, or as a dead corpse lying rotting and ſtinking in the grave, having in him the ſeed of all ſinnes.

Q. What is ſinne?

A. Any [b] breach of the law of God, if it bee no more but the leaſt want of that which the law requireth.

Q. How many ſorts of ſinne are there?

A. Sinne is either the [c] corruption of nature, or any evill actions that proceed of it, as fruits thereof.

Q. In whom is the corruption of nature?

A. In all men [d] none excepted.

Q. In what part of man is it?

A. In every [e] part both of body and ſoule, like as a leproſie that runneth from the crowne of the head to the ſoale of the foot.

Q. Shew mee how every part of man is corrupted with ſinne?

A. Firſt, in the [f] minde there is nothing but ignorance and blindneſſe concerning heavenly matters. Secondly, [g] the conſcience is defiled, being alwaies either benummed with ſinne, or elſe turmoyled with inward accuſations and terrors. Thirdly, [h] the will of man onely willeth and luſteth after evill. Fourthly, the [i] affections of the heart, as love, joy, hope, deſire, &c. are moved and ſtirred to that which is evill to embrace it, and they are never ſtirred unto that which is good, unleſſe it be to eſchew it. Laſtly, the (k) members of the body are the inſtruments and tooles of the minde for the execution of ſinne.

Q. What be thoſe evill actions that are the fruits of this corruption?

A. [l] Evill thoughts in the minde, which come either by a mans owne conceiving, or by the ſuggeſtion of the divell: [m] evill motions and luſts ſtirring in the heart, and from theſe ariſe evill words and deeds, when any occaſion is given.

Q. How commeth it to paſſe that all men are thus defiled with ſinne?

A. By [n] Adams infidelitie and diſobedience, in eating the forbidden fruit: even as we ſee great perſonages by treaſon doe not onely hurt themſelves, but alſo ſtaine their blood, and diſgrace their poſteritie.

Q. What hurt comes to man by his ſinne?

A. [o] He is continually ſubject to the curſe of God in his life time, in the end of his life, and after this life.

Q. What is the curſe of God in this life?

A. [p] In the body diſeaſes, aches, paines: in the ſoule, blindneſſe, hardneſſe of heart, horror of conſcience: in goods, hinderances, and loſſes: in name ignominie and reproch: laſtly, in the whole man, bondage under Sathan the prince of darkeneſſe.

Q. What manner of bondage is this?

A. This bondage [q] is when a man is the ſlave of the divell, and hath him to raigne in his heart as his God.

Q. How may a man know whether Sathan be his God or not?

A. He may know it by this, if he give obedience to him in his heart, and expreſſe it in his converſation.

Q. And how ſhall a man perceive this obedience?

A. If he [r] take delight in the evill motions that Satan puts into his heart, and doe fulfill the luſts of the divell.

Q. What is the curſe due to man in the end of this life.

A. [ſ] Death, which is the ſeparation of body and ſoule.

Q. What is the curſe after this life?

A. [t] Eternall damnation in hell fire, whereof every man is guiltie, and is in as great danger of it, as the traytor apprehended is in danger of hanging, drawing and quartering.

The third Principle expounded.

Q. If damnation be the reward of ſinne: then is a man of all creatures moſt miſerable: a dogge or a toade when they die, all their miſery is ended; but when a man dyeth, there is the beginning of his woe.

A. It were ſo indeed, if there were no means of deliverance, but GOD hath ſhewed his mercy, in giving a Saviour to mankinde.

Q. How is this Saviour called?

A. [u] Ieſus Chriſt.

Q. What is Ieſus Chriſt?

A. [x] The eternall Sonne of God made man in all things, even [y] in his infirmities like other men, ſave onely in ſinne.

Q. How was he made man void of ſinne?

A. He was [z] conceived in the wombe of a Virgin, and ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt at his conception.

Q. Why muſt our Saviour be both God and man?

A. He [a] muſt be a man, becauſe man had ſinned, and therefore a man muſt die for ſinne, to appeaſe Gods wrath: he muſt be God, to ſuſtaine and uphold the manhood, to overcome and vanquiſh death.

Q. What be the offices of Chriſt to make him an all-ſufficient Saviour?

A. [b] He is a Prieſt, a Prophet, a King.

Q. Why is he a Prieſt?

A. To worke the meanes of ſalvation in the behalfe of mankinde.

Q. How doth hee worke the meanes of ſalvation?

A. (c) Firſt, by making ſatisfaction to his Father for the ſinne of man: ſecondly, by making interceſſion.

Q. How doth he make ſatisfaction?

A. By two meanes: and the firſt is by offering a ſacrifice.

Q. What is the ſacrifice?

A. [d] Chriſt himſelfe, as he is a man conſiſting of body and ſoule.

Q. What is the [e] Altar.

A. Chriſt as hee is God, is the Altar on which he ſacrificed himſelfe.

Q. Who was the Prieſt?

A. None but [f] Chriſt, and that as he is both God and man.

Q. How

[f] Heb. 5. 5, 6.

Q. How oft did he sacrifice himselfe?

A. Never but [p] once.

Q. What death did he suffer when he sacrificed himselfe?

A. A death upon the crosse, peculiar to himselfe alone: for (q) besides the separation of body and soule, hee felt also the pangs of hell, in that the whole wrath of God due to the sinne of man, was powred forth upon him.

Q. What profite commeth by his Sacrifice?

A. [a] Gods wrath is appeased by it.

Q. Could the sufferings of Christ, which were but for a short time, countervaile everlasting damnation, and so appease Gods wrath?

A. Yea: for seeing Christ suffered, [b] God suffered, though not in his Godhead: and that is more then if all men in the world had suffered for ever and ever.

Q. Now tell me the other meanes of satisfaction.

A. It is the perfect fulfilling of the law.

Q. How did he fulfill the law?

A. By (c) his perfect righteousnesse: which consisteth of two parts; the first, the integritie and pureneſſe of his humane nature: the other, [d] his obedience in performing all that the law required.

Q. You have shewed how Christ doth make satisfaction, tell me likewise how he doth make intercession?

A. Hee alone doth continually [e] appeare before his father in heaven, making the faithfull, and all their prayers acceptable unto him, by applying of the merits of his owne perfect satisfaction to them.

Q. Why is Christ a Prophet?

A. To (f) reveale unto his Church the way and meanes of salvation, and this hee doth outwardly by the ministery of his word, and inwardly by the teaching of his spirit.

Q. Why is he also a King?

A. That (g) he might bountifully bestow upon us, and convey unto us all the aforesaid meanes of salvation.

Q. How doth he shew himselfe to be King?

A. In [h] that beeing dead and buried, he rose from the grave, quickened his dead body, ascended into heaven, and now sitteth at the right hand of his Father, with full power and glory in heaven.

Q. How else?

A. In [i] that hee doth continually inspire and direct his servants, by the divine power of his holy spirit, according to his holy word.

Q. But to whom will this blessed King communicate all these meanes of salvation?

A. He [k] offereth them to many, and they are sufficient to save all mankinde; but all shall not be saved thereby, because by faith they will not receive them.

The fourth Principle expounded.

Q. What is faith?

A. Faith is a [l] wonderfull grace of God, by which a man doth apprehend and apply Christ, and all his benefits unto himselfe.

Q. How doth a man apply Christ unto himselfe, seeing wee are on earth, and Christ in heaven?

A. This [m] applying is done by assurance, when a man is verily perswaded by the holy Spirit, of Gods favour towards himselfe particularly and of the forgiveneſſe of his owne sins.

Q. How doth God bring men truly to beleeve in Christ?

A. First, hee prepareth their hearts, that they might be capable of faith: and then hee worketh faith in them.

Q. How doth God prepare mens hearts?

A. [n] By bruising them, as if one would breake an hard stone to powder: and this is done by humbling them.

Q. How doth God humble a man?

A. By working in him a sight of his sinnes, and a sorrow for them.

Q. How is this sight of sinne wrought?

A. By the [o] morall Law: the summe whereof is the ten Commandements.

Q. What sinnes may I finde in my selfe by them?

A. Tenne.

Q. What is the first?

A. [a] To make something thy God, which is not God, by fearing it, loving it, and so trusting in it more then in the true God.

Q. What is the second?

A. [b] To worship false gods, or the true God in a false manner.

Q. What is the third?

A. [c] To dishonour God in abusing his titles, words, and workes.

Q. What is the fourth?

A. To [d] breake the Sabbath, in doing the workes of thy calling, and of the flesh; and in leaving undone the workes of the spirit.

Q. What be the sixe latter?

A. To doe any thing that may hinder thy neighbors [e] dignity, [f] life, [g] chastity, [h] wealth, [i] good name, [k] though it bee but in the secret thoughts and motions of the heart unto which thou giveſt no liking nor consent.

Q. What is sorrow for sinne?

A. It is [l] when a mans conscience is touched with a lively feeling of Gods displeasure for any of these sinnes: [m] in such wise, that hee utterly despaires of salvation, in regard of any thing in himselfe, acknowledging that hee hath deserved shame and confusion eternally.

Q. How doth God worke this sorrow?

A. By the terrible curse of the law.

Q. What is that?

A. Hee [n] which breakes but one of the Commandements of God, though it bee but once in all his life time, and that onely in one thought, is subject to, and in danger of eternall damnation thereby.

Q. When mens hearts are thus prepared, how doth God ingraft faith in them?

A. By working certaine inward motions in the heart, which are the ſeeds of faith, and of which it breedeth.

Q. What is the firſt of them?

A. When a man humbled under the burden of his ſinne, doth [o] acknowledge and feele that he ſtands in great need of Chriſt.

Q. What is the ſecond?

A. An [p] hungring deſire and a longing to be made partaker of Chriſt and all his merits.

Q. What is the third?

A. A [q] flying to the throne of grace, from the ſentence of the law pricking the conſcience.

Q. How is it done?

A. By (r) praying, with ſending up loud cries for Gods favour in Chriſt, in the pardoning of ſinne: and with fervent perſeverance herein, till the deſire of the heart be granted.

Q. What followeth after this?

A. God then (s) according to his mercifull promiſe, lets the poore ſinner feele the aſſurance of his love wherewith he loveth him in Chriſt, which aſſurance is a lively faith.

Q. Are there divers degrees and meaſures of true faith?

A. (t) Yea.

Q. What is the leaſt meaſure of true faith that any man can have?

A. When a man of an humble ſpirit, by reaſon of the [u] littleneſſe of his faith, doth not yet feele the aſſurance of the forgiveneſſe of his ſinnes, and yet he is perſwaded that they are pardonable; and therefore deſireth that they ſhould be pardoned, and with his heart prayeth to God to pardon them.

Q. How doe you know that ſuch a man hath faith?

A. Theſe [x] deſires and prayers are teſtimonies of the Spirit, whoſe propertie it is to ſtirre up a longing and a luſting after heavenly things with ſighes and groanes for Gods favour and mercie in Chriſt. [y] Now where the Spirit of Chriſt is, there is Chriſt dwelling: and where Chriſt dwelleth, there is true faith, how weake ſoever it be.

Q. What is the greateſt meaſure of faith?

A. When a man daily increaſing in faith comes to be (a) fully perſwaded of Gods love in Chriſt towards himſelfe particularly, and of the forgiveneſſe of his owne ſinnes.

Q. When ſhall a Chriſtian heart come to this full aſſurance?

A. Not [b] at the firſt, but in ſome continuance of time, when he hath beene well practiſed in repentance; and hath had divers experiences of Gods love unto him in Chriſt: then after them will appeare in his heart the fulneſſe of perſwaſion: which is the (c) ripeneſſe and ſtrength of faith.

Q. What benefits doth a man receive by faith in Chriſt?

A. Hereby [d] he is juſtified before God, and ſanctified.

Q. What is this, to be juſtified before God?

A. It [e] comprehendeth two things: the firſt, to be cleared from the guiltineſſe and puniſhment of ſinne; the ſecond, to bee accepted as perfectly righteous before God.

Q. How is a man cleared from the guiltineſſe and puniſhment of his ſinnes?

A. By Chriſts [f] ſufferings and death upon the Croſſe.

Q. How is hee accepted for righteous before God?

A. By the [g] righteouſneſſe of Chriſt imputed to him.

Q. What profit comes by being thus juſtified?

A. Hereby [h] and by no other meanes in the world, the beleever ſhall bee accepted before Gods judgement ſeate, as worthy of eternall life by the merits of the ſame righteouſneſſe of Chriſt.

Q. Doe not good workes then make us worthy of eternall life?

A. No: For God, who is perfect righteouſneſſe it ſelfe, will find in the beſt workes we doe, more matter of damnation then of ſalvation: and therefore [i] we muſt rather condemne our ſelves for our good workes, then looke to be juſtified before God thereby.

Q. How may a man know that he is juſtified before God?

A. Hee neede not aſcend into heaven to ſearch the ſecret counſell of God: [k] but rather deſcend into his owne heart to ſearch whether he be ſanctified or not.

Q. What is it to be ſanctified?

A. It comprehendeth two things: the firſt, to be purged from the corruption of his owne nature, the ſecond, to be indued with inward righteouſneſſe.

Q. How is the corruption of ſinne purged?

A. By the [l] merits and power of Chriſts death, which being by faith applyed is as a corroſive to abate, conſume, and weaken the power of all ſinne.

Q. How is a man indued with inherent righteouſneſſe?

A. Through the [m] vertue of Chriſts reſurrection: which being applyed by faith, is as a reſtorative to revive a man that is dead in ſinne, to newneſſe of life.

Q. In what part of man is ſanctification wrought?

A. In [n] every part of body and ſoule.

Q. In what time is it wrought?

A. It is [o] begun in this life, in which the faithfull receive onely the firſt fruits of the Spirit, and it is not finiſhed before the end of this life.

Q. What graces of the Spirit doe uſually ſhew themſelves in the heart of a man ſanctified?

A. The hatred [p] of ſinne, and the love of righteouſneſſe.

Q. What proceeds of them?

A. Repentance, which is [q] a ſetled purpoſe in the heart, with a carefull endeavour to leave all his ſinnes, and to live a Chriſtian life, according to all Gods Commandements.

Q. What goeth with repentance?

A. * A continuall fighting and struggling against the assaults of a mans owne flesh, 2. against the motions of the divell, and the inticements of the world.

Q. What followeth after a man hath gotten the victory in any temptation or affliction?

A. [t] Experience of Gods love in Christ, and so increase of peace of conscience, and joy in the holy Ghost.

Q. What followeth if in any temptation he be overcome and through infirmitie fall?

A. After a while [u] there will arise a godly sorrow, which is, when a man is grieved for no other cause in the world, but for this onely, that by his sin he hath displeased God, who hath beene unto him a most mercifull and loving Father.

Q. What signe is there of this sorrow?

A. The true signe [x] of it is this, when a man can bee grieved for the very disobedience of God in his evill words or deeds, though hee should never be punished, and though there were neither heaven nor hell.

Q. What followes after this sorrow?

A. Repentance [y] renewed afresh.

Q. By what signes will this repentance appeare?

A. By [z] seven. 1. A care to leave the sinne into which hee is fallen. 2. An utter condemning of himselfe for it, with a craving of pardon. 3. A great anger against himselfe for his carelesnesse. 4. A feare lest he should fall into the same sinne againe. 5. A desire ever after to please God. 6. A zeale of the same. 7. Revenge upon himselfe for his former offence.

The fifth Principle expounded.

Q. What outward meanes must wee use to obtaine faith, and all the blessings of God which come by faith?

A. The preaching [a] of Gods word, and the administration of the Sacraments, and prayer.

Q. Where is the word of God to bee found?

A. The whole word of God, needfull to salvation, is set downe in the holy Scriptures.

Q. How know you that the Scriptures are the word of God, and not mens policies?

A. I am assured of it: first [b] because the holy Ghost perswadeth my conscience that it is so. Secondly, I see it by experience: for the preaching of the [c] Scriptures have the power of God in them to humble a man, when they are preached, and to cast him downe to hell, and afterward to restore and raise him up againe.

Q. What is the use of the word of God preached?

A. First, it [d] breedeth, and then it increaseth faith in them which are chosen to salvation: but unto them that perish, it is by reason of their corruption, an occasion of their further damnation.

Q. How must we heare Gods word, that it may be effectuall to our salvation?

A. Wee [e] must come unto it with hunger-bitten hearts, having an appetite to the word; we must marke it with attention, receive it by faith, submit our selves unto it with feare and trembling, even then when our faults are reprooved: Lastly, we must hide it in the corners of our hearts, that wee may frame our lives and conversations by it.

Q. What is a Sacrament?

A. A [f] signe to represent, a seale to confirme, an instrument to convey Christ and all his benefits to them that doe beleeve in him.

Q. Why must a Sacrament represent the mercies of God before our eyes?

A. Because we are dull to conceive and to remember them.

Q. Why doe the Sacraments seale unto us the mercies of God?

A. Because we are full of unbeleefe, and doubting of them.

Q. Why is the Sacrament the instrument of the spirit to convey the mercies of God into our hearts?

A. Because we are like Thomas, wee will not beleeve till we feele them in some measure in our hearts.

Q. How many Sacraments are there?

A. Two [g] and no more: Baptisme, by which we have our admission into the true Church of God, and the Lords Supper; by which we are nourished and preserved in the true Church after our admission.

Q. What is done in Baptisme?

A. [h] In the assembly of the Church the covenant of grace betweene God and the partie baptized, is solemnly confirmed and sealed.

Q. In this covenant, what doth God promise to the partie baptized?

A. [i] Christ, with all blessings that come by him.

Q. To what condition is the party baptized bound?

A. To [k] receive Christ, & to repent of his sins.

Q. What meaneth the sprinkling or dipping in water?

A. It [l] seales unto us remission of sins, and sanctification by the obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Christ.

Q. How commeth it to passe, that many after their baptisme for a long time feele not the effect and fruit of it, and some never?

A. The fault is not in God, who keeps his Covenant, but the fault is in themselves, in that they doe not keepe the condition of the covenant, to receive Christ by faith, and to repent of all their sinnes.

Q. When shall a man then see the effect of his baptisme.

A. At [m] what time soever hee doth receive Christ by faith, though it bee many yeeres after, he shall then feele the power of God to regenerate him, and to worke all things in him, which he offered in baptisme?

Q. How

Q. How if a man never keepe the condition to which he bound himselfe in baptisme?

A. His damnation (l) shall be the greater, because he breaketh his vow made to God.

Q. What is done in the Lords Supper?

A. The former covenant solemnely ratified in baptisme, is renued [m] in the Lords Supper, betweene the Lord himselfe, and the receiver?

Q. Who is the receiver?

A. Every one [n] that hath beene baptized, and after his baptisme hath truly beleeved in Christ, and repented of his sinnes from his heart.

Q. What meaneth the bread and wine, the eating of the bread and drinking of the wine?

A. These outward actions [o] are a second seale, set by the Lords owne hand unto his covenant. And they doe give every receiver to understand, that as God doth blesse the bread and wine, to preserve and strengthen the body of the receiver: so Christ apprehended and received by faith, shall nourish him, and preserve both body and soule unto eternall life.

Q. What shall a true receiver feele in himselfe after the receiving of the Sacrament?

A. [p] The increase of his faith in Christ, the increase of sanctification, a greater measure of dying to sinne, a greater care to live in newnesse of life.

Q. What if a man after the receiving of the sacrament, never find any such thing in himself?

A. He may well suspect himselfe, whether he did ever repent or not: and therupon is to use meanes to come to sound faith and repentance.

Q. What is another meanes of increasing faith?

A. Prayer.

Q. What is prayer?

A. [r] A familiar speech with God in the name of Christ, [s] in which either wee crave things needfull, or give thankes for things received.

Q. In asking things needful, what is required?

A. Two things, an earnest desire, and faith.

Q. [t] What things must a Christian mans heart desire?

A. Sixe things especially.

Q. What are they?

A. 1. [a] That he may glorifie God. 2. That [b] God may reigne in his heart, and not sinne: 3. That [c] hee may doe Gods will, and not the lusts of his flesh. 4. [d] That he may rely himselfe on Gods providence for all the meanes of this temporall life. 5. [e] That he may be justified, and be at peace with God: 6. [f] That by the power of God he may be strengthened against all temptations.

Q. What is faith?

A. A [g] perswasion, that those things which wee truely desire, God will grant them for Christs sake.

The sixth Principle expounded.

Q. After that a man hath led a short life in this world, what followeth then?

A. Death, which is the parting a sunder of body and soule.

Q. Why do wicked men & unbeleevers dy?

A. That their bodies may goe to the earth, and their [b] soules may bee cast into hell fire.

Q. Why doe the godly dye, seeing Christ by death hath overcome death?

A. They dye for this end, that [i] their bodies may rest for a while in the earth, and their soules may enter into heaven immediately.

Q. What followeth after death?

A. The day of judgement.

Q. What signe is there to know this day from other dayes?

A. [k] Heaven and earth shall bee consumed with fire immediately before the comming of the judge.

Q. Who shall be judge?

A. Iesus Christ the Sonne of God.

Q. What shal be the comming to judgment?

A. Hee shall come [l] in the cloudes in great Majesty and glory, with infinite company of Angels.

Q. How shall a man be cited to judgement?

A. At the [m] sound of a trumpet, the living shall bee changed in the twinckling of an eye, and the dead shall rise againe every one with [n] his owne body: and all shall be gathered together before Christ; and after this, the good shal be severed from the bad, [o] these standing on the left hand of Christ, the other on the right.

Q. How will Christ try and examine every mans cause?

A. The [p] bookes of every mans doings shall bee laid open, mens consciences shall be made either to accuse them, or excuse them, and every man shall be tryed by the workes which he did in his life time, because they are open and manifest signes [p] of faith or unbeliefe.

Q. What sentence will he give?

A. Hee will give [q] sentence of salvation to the elect and godly, but he will pronounce sentence of damnation against unbeleevers and reprobates.

Q. What state shall the godly be in, after the day of judgement?

A. They shall [r] continue for ever in the highest heaven in the presence of God, having fellowship with Christ Iesus, and reigning with him for ever.

Q. What state shall the wicked, bee in after the day of judgement?

A. In eternall perdition and destruction in hell fire.

Q. What is that?

A. It [s] stands in three things especially: First, a perpetuall separation from Gods comfortable presence. Secondly, fellowship with the divell and his angels. Thirdly, an horrible pang and torment both of body and soule, arising of the feeling of the whole wrath of God, powred forth on the wicked for ever world without end: And if the paine of one tooth for one day bee so great, endlesse shall be the paine of the whole man, body and soule for ever.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THEOLOGIE.

Containing the order of the causes of Salvation and Damnation, according to Gods Word. A view whereof is to be seene in the Table annexed.

Hereunto is adjoyned the order which Mr. Theodore Beza used in comforting afflicted consciences.

To the Christian Reader.

CHRISTIAN Reader, there are at this day foure seuerall opinions of the order of Gods Predestination. The first is, of the old and new Pelagians; who place the causes of Gods Predestination in man; in that they holde, that God did ordaine men either to life or death, according as hee did fore-see, that they would by their naturall Free-will, either reiect or receiue grace offered. The second of them, who (of some) are termed Lutherans; which teach, that God fore-seeing, how all mankinde being shut vp vnder vnbelieſe, would therefore reiect grace offered, did hereupon on purpose choose some to saluation of his meere mercy, without any respect of their faith or good workes, and the rest to reiect, beeing mooued to doe this, because he did eternally fore-see that they would reiect his grace offered them in the Gospel. The third Semi-Pelagian Papists, which ascribe Gods predestination, partly to mercy, and partly to mens fore-seene preparations and meritorious workes. The fourth, of such as teach, that the cause of execution of Gods Predestination, is his mercy in Christ, in them which are saued; and in them which perish, the fall and corruption of man: yet so, as that the decree and eternall counsell of God, concerning them both, hath not any cause besides his will and pleasure. Of these foure opinions, the three former I labour to oppugne, as erronious, and to maintaine the last, as being truth, which will beare weight in the ballance of the Sanctuary.

The Father of our Lord Iesus Christ grant, that according to the riches of his glory, thou maist bee strengthened by his spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in thy heart by faith; to the end that thou being rooted and grounded in loue, maiest be able to comprehend with all Saints, what is the breadth, and length, and height thereof; and to know the loue of Christ which passeth knowledge, that thou maiest be filled with all fulnesse of God. Amen. Farewell, Iuly 23. the yeare of the last patience of Saints. 1592.

Chap. I.

Of the body of Scripture, and Theology.

THE Body of Scripture is a doctrine sufficient to live well.

It comprehendeth many holy sciences, whereof one is principall, others are handmaids or retainers.

The principall science is Theologie.

Theologie, is the science of living blessedly for euer. Blessed life ariseth from the knowledge of God, Ioh. 17. 3. This is life eternall, that they know thee to be the only very God, and whom thou hast sent Christ Iesus. Isa. 53. 11. By his knowledge shall my righteous servant (viz. Christ) justifie many. And therefore it ariseth likewise from the knowledge of our selves, because we know God by looking into our selves.

Theologie hath two parts: the first of God, the second of his workes.

Chap. II.

Of God, and the nature of God.

THat there is a God, it is evident, 1. by the course of nature: 2. by the nature of the soule of man: 3. by the distinction of things honest and dishonest: 4. by the terror of conscience: 5. by the regiment of civill societies: 6. the order of all causes having ever recourse to some former beginning: 7. the determination of all things to their severall ends: 8. the consent of all men well in their wits.

God is Iehovah Elohim, Exod. 6. 2, 3. And Elohim spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am Iehovah: and I appeared unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Iacob, by the name of God almighty, but by my name Iehovah, was I not knowne unto them. Exod. 3. 13. If they say unto mee, What is his name? What shall I say unto them? And God answered Moses, I am that I am: Also he said, thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I am hath sent me unto you. And God spake further to Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, Iehovah Elohim, &c. hath sent mee unto you. In these words, the first title of God, declareth his Nature, the second his Persons.

The nature of God, is his most lively and most perfect essence.

The perfection of the nature of God, is the absolute constitution thereof, whereby it is wholly complete within it selfe, Exod. 3. 13. I am that I am. Act. 17. 24. God that made the world, and all things that are therein, seeing that he is the Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not A in temples made with hands, neither is worshipped with mens hands, as though he needed any thing; seeing he giveth to all life and breath, and all things.

The perfection of his Nature, is either Simpleness, or the Infiniteness thereof.

The Simpleness of his nature, is that by which hee is voide of all Logicall relation in arguments. He hath not in him subject or adjunct. Ioh. 5. 26. As the Father hath life in himselfe, so hath he given to the Sonne to have life in himselfe: conferred with Iohn 14. 6. I am the Way, the Truth, & the Life. 1. Ioh 1. 7. But if we walke in the light, as he is Light: conferred with v. 5. God is light, and in him is no darknes. Hence it is manifest that to have Life, and to be Life: B to be in Light, and to be Light, in God are all one. Neither is God subject to generalitie, or specialty: whole, or parts: matter or that which is made of matter: for so there should be in God divers things, and one more perfect then another. Therefore, whatsoever is in God, is his essence, and all that he is, he is by essence. The saying of Augustine in his 6. booke and 4. chap. of the Trinitie, is fit to proove this; In God (saith he) to be, and to be just or mightie, are all one: but in the mind of man, it is not all one to be, and to be mighty, or just: for the mind may be destitute of these vertues, and yet a minde.

Hence it is manifest that the nature of God is immutable and spirituall.

Gods immutability of nature is that by C which he is voide of all composition, division, and change, Iam. 1. 17. With God there is no variablenesse nor shadow of changing. Mal. 3. 6. I am the Lord, and am not changed. Where it is said that God repenteth, &c. Gen. 6. 6. the meaning is, that God changeth the action, as men doe that repent: therefore repentance signifieth not any mutation in God, but in his actions, and such things as are made and changed by him.

Gods nature is spirituall, in that it is incorporal, and therefore invisible, Ioh. 4. 24. God is a Spirit, 2 Cor. 3. 17. The Lord is the Spirit. 1 Tim. 1. 17. To the King eternall, immortall, invisible only wise God, be glory and honour for ever, and ever. Col. 1. 15. who is the image of the invisible God. D

The infiniteness of God is two-fold: his Eternitie, and exceeding greatnesse.

Gods eternitie, is that by which he is without beginning and ending, Psal. 90. 2. Before the mountaines were made, and before thou hadst formed the earth and the round world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art our God. Rev. 1. 8. I am Alpha and Omega, that is, the beginning and ending, saith the Lord: Which is, Which was, and Which is to come.

Gods exceeding greatnesse, is that by which his incomprehensible nature is every where present, both within & without the world, Ps. 145. 3. Great is the Lord & worthy to be praised and his greatnesse is incomprehensible, 1 Kings 8. 27. Is it true indeed that God will dwell on the earth? Behold the heavens, and the heavens of heavens are not able to containe thee, how much leſſe is this houſe that I have built? Ier. 23.24. Doe not I fill the heaven and earth, ſaith the Lord? Hence it is plaine.

First, that he is onely one, and that indiviſible, not many, Eph.4.5. One Lord, one faith, one baptiſme, one God and Father of all, Deut.4.35. Vnto thee it was ſhewed, that thou mighteſt know that the Lord he is God, and that there is none but he alone. 1.Cor.8.4. We know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one: and there can be but one thing infinite in nature.

Secondly, that God is the knower of the heart. For nothing is hidden from that nature, which is within all things, and without all things, which is included in nothing, nor excluded from any thing. Becauſe, 1 Kings 8. 39. The Lord ſearcheth all hearts, and underſtandeth every worke of the minde. Pſal. 139.1, 2. Thou knoweſt my ſitting downe, and my riſing up, thou underſtandeſt my cogitations afarre off.

CHAP. III.

Of the life of God.

HItherto we have ſpoken of the perfection of Gods nature: Now followeth the life of GOD, by which the Divine Nature is in perpetuall action, living, and mooving in it ſelfe, Pſal. 42.2. My ſoule thirſteth for God, even for the living God, when ſhall I come and appeare before the preſence of God? Heb.3.12. See there be not at any time in any of you an evill heart to depart from the living God.

The divine Nature, is eſpecially in perpetuall operation by three attributes, the which doe manifeſt the operation of God towards his creatures. Theſe are his Wiſedome, Will, and Omnipotency.

The wiſedome or knowledge of God, is that by the which God doth, not by certaine notions abſtracted from the things themſelves, but by his owne eſſence: nor ſucceſſively and by diſcourſe of reaſon, but by one eternall and immutable act of underſtanding, diſtinctly and perfectly know himſelfe, and all other things, though infinite, whether they have beene or not, Mat.11.27. No man knoweth the Sonne but the Father, nor the Father but the Sonne, and he to whom the Sonne will reveale him. Heb.4.13. There is nothing created, which is not manifeſt in his ſight: but all things are naked and open to his eyes, with whom we have to doe, Pſal.147.5. His wiſedome is infinite.

Gods wiſedome hath theſe parts: his foreknowledge, and his counſell.

The foreknowledge of God, is that by which hee moſt aſſuredly foreſeeth all things that are to come, Act.2.23. Him have ye taken by the hands of the wicked, being delivered by the determinate counſell and foreknowledge of God, and have crucified and ſlaine. Rom.8.29. Thoſe which he knew before, he alſo predeſtinated to be made like to the image of his Sonne. This is not properly ſpoken of God, but by reaſon of A men to whom things are paſt or to come.

The counſell of God, is that by the which he doth moſt rightly perceive the beſt reaſon of all things that are done. Prov.8.14. I have counſell and wiſedome, I am underſtanding, and I have ſtrength.

The will of God, is that by the which he both moſt freely, and juſtly with one act willeth all things. Rom.9.18. Hee hath mercy on whom he will, and whom hee will hee hardeneth. Eph.1.5. Who hath predeſtinate us to be adopted through Ieſus Chriſt unto himſelfe, according to the good pleaſure of his will. Iam.4.15. For that which you ſhould ſay, If the Lord will, and wee live, we will doe this or that.

God willeth that which is good, by approving it; that which is evill, in as much as it is B evill, by diſallowing and forſaking it. And yet he voluntarily doth permit evill; becauſe it is good that there ſhould be evill. Acts 14.16. Who in time paſt ſuffered all the Gentiles to walke in their owne wayes. Pſal.81.12. So I gave them up to the hardneſſe of their heart, and they have walked in their owne counſels.

The will of God, by reaſon of divers objects, hath divers Names, and is either called Love and Hatred, or Grace and Iuſtice.

The Love of God is that, by the which God approoveth firſt himſelfe, and then all his creatures as they are good, without their deſert, and in them doth take delight, 1 Iohn 4.16. God is love, and who ſo remaineth in love, remaineth in God, and God in him, Ioh.3.16. So C God loved the world, that he gave his onely begotten Sonne, &c. Rom.5.8. God ſetteth out his love towards us, ſeeing that while we were yet ſinners, Chriſt dyed for us.

The Hatred of God, is that by the which he diſliketh and deteſteth his creature offending, for his fault, 1 *Cor.*10.5. But many of them the Lord miſliked, for they periſhed in the wilderneſs. Pſ.5.5. Thou hateſt all the workers of iniquity, Pſ.45.7. Thou haſt loved juſtice & hated iniquity

The grace of God, is that by which he freely declareth his favour to his creatures, Rom. 11.6. If it be of grace, it is no more of workes: otherwiſe grace is not grace; but if it be of works it is no more grace. Tit. 2.11. The ſaving grace of D God ſhined to all men, teaching us to deny impietie, &c.

The Grace of God, is either his goodneſſe, or his mercy.

The Goodneſſe of God, is that by which he being in himſelfe abſolutely good, doth freely exerciſe his liberalitie upon his creatures, Matth.19.17. Why calleſt thou mee good? there is none good but one, even God. Matth.5.45. He maketh the Sunne to ſhine upon the good and bad, and he raineth upon the juſt and unjuſt.

Gods mercy, is that by which he freely aſſiſteth all his creatures in their miſeries, Eſa. 30.18. Yet will the Lord waite, that he may have mercy upon you. Lam. 3. 22. It is the Lords mercy that we are not conſumed, becauſe his compaſſions faile not. Exod.33.19. I take pitie on whom I take pittie, and am mercifull to whom I am mercifull.

Gods juſtice, is that by which hee in all things willeth that which is juſt. Pſal. 11. 7. The juſt Lord loveth juſtice. Pſal. 5. 4. For thou art not a God that loveth wickedneſſe.

Gods juſtice is in word or deede.

Iuſtice in word, is that truth by which he conſtantly, and indeede willeth that which he hath ſaid. Rom. 3. 4. Let God be true, and every man a lyer. Matth. 24. 35. Heaven and earth ſhall paſſe away, but my word ſhall not paſſe away. Hence it is, that there is a certaine juſtice of God in keeping his promiſe. 1. Ioh. 1. 9. If we confeſſe our ſinnes, God is faithfull and juſt to forgive our ſinnes, 2. Tim. 4. 8. Hencefirth is laid vp for mee the crowne of righteouſneſſe, which the Lord the righteous judge ſhal give me at that day

Iuſtice in deede, is that by which he either diſpoſeth or rewardeth.

Gods diſpoſing Iuſtice, is that by which he, as a moſt free Lord, ordereth rightly all things in his actions. Pſal. 145. 17. The Lord is righteous in all his waies.

Gods rewarding Iuſtice, is that by which hee rendreth to his creature according to his worke. 2. Theſſ. 1. 6 It is juſt with God, to render affliction to ſuch as afflict you, but to you which are afflicted, releaſing with us. 1. Pet. 1. 27. Therefore if you call him Father, which without reſpect of perſons judgeth according to every mans worke, paſſe the time of your dwelling heere in feare. Iere. 51. 56. The Lord that recompenſeth, ſhall ſurely recompence.

The Iuſtice of God is either his Gentlenes or Anger.

Gods gentleneſſe, is that by which hee freely rewardeth the righteouſneſſe of his creature. 2. Theſ. 1. 5. Which is a token of the righteous judgement of God, that ye may bee counted worthy the kingdom of God, for the which ye alſo ſuffer. Mat. 10 41, 42. He that receiveth a Prophet, in the name of a Prophet, ſhall have a Prophets reward: and he that receiveth a righteous man, in the name of a righteous man, ſhall have the reward of a righteous man. And whoſoever ſhall give unto one of theſe little ones to drinke a cup of cold water onely in the name of a Diſciple, verily I ſay unto you, he ſhall not loſe his reward.

Gods Anger is that by which hee willeth the puniſhment of the creature offending, Rom. 1. 18. For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven againſt all ungodlineſſe, and unrighteouſneſſe of men, which withhold the truth in unrighteouſneſſe. Ioh. 3. 36. He that obeyeth not the Sonne, ſhall not ſee life, but the wrath of God abideth on him.

Thus much concerning the will of GOD; Now followeth his Omnipotencie.

Gods Omnipotencie, is that by which hee is moſt able to performe every worke. Matth. 19. 26. With men this is impoſſible, but with God all things are poſſible.

Some things notwithſtanding are heere to be excepted. Firſt, thoſe things whoſe action argueth an impotencie, as to lie, to denie his word. Tit. 1. 2. Which God, that cannot lie, hath promiſed. 2. Tim. 2. 13. Hee cannot denie himſelfe. Secondly, ſuch things as are contrary to the nature of God, as to deſtroy himſelfe, and not to beget his Sonne from eternity. Thirdly, ſuch things as imply contradiction. For God cannot make a truth falſe; or that which is, when it is not, to be.

Gods power may bee diſtinguiſhed into an abſolute and actuall power.

Gods abſolute power, is that by which he can doe more, then hee either doth or will doe. Mat. 3. 9. I ſay unto you, God is able of theſe ſtones to raiſe up children to Abraham. Phil. 3. 21. According to the working, whereby he is able to ſubdue even all things to himſelfe.

Gods actuall power, is that by which hee cauſeth all things to bee, which hee freely willeth. Pſ. 135. 6. All things which God will, thoſe he doth in heaven, and in earth, and in all depths.

Chap. IV.

Of Gods glorie, and bleſſedneſſe.

OVt of the former attributes, by which the true Iehovah is diſtinguiſhed from a fained god, and from Idols, ariſe the glorie of God, and his bleſſedneſſe.

Gods glorie or majeſtie, is the infinite excellencie of his moſt ſimple and moſt holy divine Nature. Heb. 1. 3. Who being the brightnes of his glory, and the ingraved forme of his perſon, &c. Nehem. 9. 5. Let them praiſe the glorious name O God, which excelleth above all thankaſgiving and praiſe.

By this wee ſee, that God onely can know himſelfe perfectly. Ioh. 6. 46. Not that any man hath ſeene the Father, ſave he which is of God, he hath ſeen the Father 1. Tim. 6. 16. Who only hath immortality, and dwelleth in the light that none can attaine unto, whom never man ſaw, neither can ſee. Exod. 33. 20. Thou canſt not ſee my face.

Notwithſtanding there is a certaine manifeſtation of Gods glory: partly more obſcure, partly more apparent.

The more obſcure manifeſtation, is the viſion of Gods majeſtie in this life, by the eyes of the minde through the helpe of things perceived by outward ſenſes. Iſa. 6. 1. I ſaw the Lord ſitting upon an high throne, and lifted up, and the lower parts thereof filled the Temple. Exod. 33. 22. And while my glory paſſeth by, I will put thee in a cleft of the Rocke, and will cover thee with my hand while I paſſe by: after I will take away mine hand, & thou ſhalt ſee my backparts, but my face ſhall not be ſeene. 1. Cor. 13. 12. Now we ſee as through a glaſſe darkely.

The more apparent manifeſtation of God is the contemplation of him in heaven face to face. 1. Cor. 13. 12. But then ſhall we ſee face to face. Dan. 7. 9, 10. I beheld till the thrones were ſet up, and the ancient of daies did ſit, whoſe garment was white as ſnow, &c.

Gods bleſſednes, is that by which God is in himſelfe, and of himſelfe all-ſufficient. Gen.

17.1. I am God all-ſufficient, walke before me, and be thou upright. Col. 2. 9. For in him dwels all the fulneſſe of the Godhead bodily. 1. Tim. 6. 15. Which in due time he ſhall ſhew, that is bleſſed and Prince onely.

Chap. V.

Concerning the perſons of the Godhead.

THe perſons are they, which ſubſiſting in one Godhead, are diſtinguiſhed by incommunicable properties. 1. Ioh. 5. 7. There are three that beare record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one. Gen. 19. 24. Then Iehovah rained upon Sodome, and upon Gomorah, brimſtone, and fire from Iehovah in heaven. Ioh. 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and that Word was God.

They therefore are cocquall, and are diſtinguiſhed not by degree, but by order.

The Conſtitution of a perſon is, when as a perſonall propertie, or the proper manner of ſubſiſting is adjoined to the Deity, or the one divine nature, Diſtinction of perſons, is that, by which albeit every perſon is one and the ſame perfect God, yet the Father is not the Sonne or the holy Ghoſt, but the Father alone; and the Sonne is not the Father or the holy Ghoſt, but the Sonne alone; and the holy Ghoſt is not the Father or the Sonne, but the holy Ghoſt alone: neither can they bee divided, by reaſon of the infinite greatneſſe of that moſt ſimple eſſence. Which one and the ſame, is wholy in the Father, wholy in the Sonne, and wholy in the holy Ghoſt: ſo that in theſe there is diverſitie of perſons, but unitie in eſſence.

The communion of the perſons, or rather union, is that by which each one is in the reſt, and with the reſt, by reaſon of the unitie of the Godhead: and therefore every each one doth poſſeſſe, loue, and glorifie another, and worke the ſame thing. Ioh. 14. 10. Beleeveſt thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father is in me? the word that I ſpeake unto you I ſpeak not of my ſelfe, but the Father that dwelleth in me, hee doth the workes, Pro. 8. 22. The Lord hath poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his way: I was before the workes of old. And v. 30. Then was I with him as a nouriſher, and I was daily his delight, reioycing alway before him. Ioh. 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and that Word was God, and cap. 5. 19. The Sonne can doe nothing of himſelfe, ſave that he ſeeth the Father doe: for whatſoever things he doth, the ſame doth the Sonne alſo.

There be three perſons: the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt. Matth. 3. 16, 17, And Ieſus, when he was baptized, came ſtraight out of the water, and loe, the heavens were opened unto him, and Iohn ſaw the Spirit of God deſcending like a done, and lighting upon him: and loe, a voice came from heaven, ſaying, This is my beloved Sonne, in whom I am well pleaſed.

A The Father, is a perſon without beginning, from all eternity begetting the Sonne, Heb. 1. 3. Who being the brightneſſe of the glory, and the ingraved forme of his perſon. Pſal. 2. 7. Thou art my Sonne, this day have I begotten thee.

In the generation of the Sonne, theſe properties muſt be noted: I. Hee that begetteth, and hee that is begotten are together, and not one before another in time. II. Hee that begetteth, doth communicate with him that is begoten, not ſome one part, but his whole eſſence. III. The Father begot the Sonne, not out of himſelfe, but within himſelfe.

The incommunicable property of the Father, is to be unbegotten, to bee a Father, and
B to beget. Hee is the beginning of actions, becauſe hee beginneth every action of himſelfe, effecting it by the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt. 1. Cor. 8. 6. Yet unto us, there is but one God, which is the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him, and one Lord Ieſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, and we by him. Rom. 11. 36. For of him, and through him, and for him, are al things.

The other two perſons have the Godhead, or the whole divine eſſence, of the Father by communication, namely, the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt.

The Sonne is the ſecond perſon, begotten of the Father from all eternity. Heb. 1. 5. For unto which of the Angels ſaid hee at any time, Thou art my Sonne, this day begate I thee? Col.
C 1. 15. Who is the image of the inviſible God, the firſt borne of every creature. Iohn 1. 14. And we ſaw the glory thereof, as the glory of the onely begotten Sonne of the Father, Rom. 8. 32. He who ſpared not his owne Sonne.

Although the Sonne be begotten of his Father, yet nevertheleſſe hee is of and by himſelfe very God: for he muſt bee conſidered either according to his eſſence, or according to his filiation or Sonſhip. In regard of his eſſence, he is (αὐτόθεος) that is, of and by himſelfe very God: for the Deitie which is common to all the three perſons, is not begotten. But as he is a perſon, and the Sonne of the Father, hee is not of himſelfe, but from another: for hee is the eternall Sonne of his Father. And thus hee D is truly ſaid to be very God of very God.

For this cauſe he is ſaid to be ſent from the Father, Iohn 8. 42. I proceeded forth and came from God, neither came I of my ſelfe, but hee ſent mee. This ſending taketh not away the equality of eſſence, and power, but declareth the order of the perſons, Ioh. 5. 18. Therefore the Iewes ſought the more to kill him, not onely becauſe he had broken the Sabbath: but ſaid alſo that God was his Father, & made himſelfe equall with God. Phil. 2. 6. Who being in the forme of God, thought it no robbery to be equall with God.

For this cauſe alſo he is the WORD of the Father, not a vaniſhing, but eſſentiall word, becauſe as a word is, as it were, begotten of the mind, ſo is the Sonne begotten of the Father; and alſo, becauſe he bringeth glad tidings from the boſome of his Father. Nazian, in his Oration of the Sonne. Basil in his preface before Iohns Gospell.

The property of the Sonne, is to bee begotten.

His proper manner of working, is to execute actions from the Father, by the holy Ghost. 1. Cor. 8. 6. Our Lord Iesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him. Iohn. 5. 19. Whatsoeuer things hee doth, the same doth the Sonne also.

The holy Ghost, is the third person, proceeding from the Father and the Sonne. Ioh. 15. 26. But when the comforter shall come, whom I will send vnto you from the Father, euen the spirit of truth, which proceedeth of the Father, hee shall testifie of me. Rom. 8. 9. But yee are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, seeing the spirit of God dwelleth in you. But if there be any that hath not the spirit of Christ he is not his. Iohn 16. 13, 14. But when the Spirit of truth shall come: he shall conduct you into all truth: for he shall not speake of himselfe, but whatsoeuer he heareth, hee shall speake, and shall declare vnto you such things as are to come. He shall glorifie mee, for he shall receiue of mine, and shew it vnto you.

And albeit the Father, and the Sonne are two distinct persons, yet are they both but one beginning of the holy Ghost.

What may bee the essentiall difference betwixt proceeding, and begetting, neither the Scriptures determine, nor the Church knoweth.

The incommunicable property of the holy Ghost, is to proceede.

His proper manner of working is, to finish an action, effecting it, as from the Father and the Sonne.

Chap. VI.

Of Gods workes, and his Decree.

THus far concerning the first part of Theologie: the second followeth, of the workes of God.

The workes of God, are all those, which he doth out of himselfe, that is, out of his diuine essence.

These are common to the Trinitie, the peculiar manner of working alwaies reserued to euery person.

The end of all these, is the manifestation of the glory of God. Rom. 11. 36. For of him are all things, to him be glory for euer.

The worke or action of God, is eyther his Decree, or the execution of his Decree.

The Decree of God, is that by which God in himselfe, hath necessarily, and yet freely, from all eternity determined all things. Eph. 1. 11. In whom also wee are chosen, when wee were predestinate, according to the purpose of him, which worketh all things after the counsell of his owne will. and v. 4. As he hath chosen vs in him before the foundation of the world. Math. 10. 29. Are not two sparrowes sold for a farthing, and not one of them falleth on the ground without your Father? Rom. 9. 21. Hath not the potter power

A on the clay to make of the same lumpe one vessell to dishonour, and another to honour.

Therefore the Lord, according to his good pleasure, hath most certainely decreed euery thing and action, whether past, present, or to come, together with their circumstances of place, time, meanes, and end.

Yea, he hath most iustly decreed the wicked works of the wicked. For if he had nilled them, they should neuer haue beene at all. And albeit they of their owne nature, are and remaine wicked; yet in respect of Gods Decree, they are some wayes good: for there is not any thing absolutely euill. 1. Pet. 3. 17. For it is better (if the will of God be so) that ye suffer for well doing, then for euill doing.

B The thing which in it owne nature is euill, in Gods eternall counsell is respectiuely good, in that it is some occasion and way to manifest the glory of God in his iustice, and his mercy.

Gods foreknowledge, is conioyned with his decree, and indeed is in nature before it: yet not in regard of God, but vs: because knowledge goeth before the will and the effecting of a work. For we do nothing, but those things that we haue before willed, neither doe we will any thing which we know not before.

Gods foreknowledge in it selfe, is not a cause why things are, but as it is conioyned with his decree. For things doe not therefore come to passe, because that God did foreknow them: but because hee decreed, and willed

C them, therefore they come to passe.

The execution of Gods decree is that, by which all things in their time are accomplished which were foreknowne or decreed, and that euen as they were foreknown & decreed.

The same decree of GOD, is the first and principall working cause of all things, which also is in order, and time before all other causes. For with Gods decree is alwayes his will annexed, by the which he can will that which he hath decreed. And it were a signe of impotency, to decree any thing which he could not will. And with Gods will is conioyned an effectuall power, by which the Lord can bring to passe, whatsoeuer he hath freely decreed.

The first and principall cause, howbeit in it

D selfe it be necessary, yet it doth not take away freedome of will in election; or the nature and propertie of second causes; but onely brings them into a certaine order; that is, it directeth them to the determinate end, whereupon the effects and enents of things are contingent or necessary, as the nature of the second cause is. So Christ according to his Fathers decree died necessarily, Act. 17. 3. but yet willingly, Ioh. 10. 18. Mat. 26. 53. And if we respect the temperature of Christs body, he might haue prolonged his life; and therefore in this respect may be said to haue dyed contingently.

The execution of Gods decree, hath two branches; his operation, and his operatiue permission.

Gods operation, is his effectuall producing

of all good things, which either haue being or mooning, or which are done.

Gods operatiue permiſſion, is that by which he onely permitteth one and the ſame worke to be done of others, as it is euill; but as it is good, he effectually worketh the ſame. Gen. 50.20 You indeed had purpoſed euill againſt me, but God decreed that for good, that he might, as he hath done this day, preſerue his people aliue. And, Gen 45.7. God hath ſent mee before you to preſerue your poſterity in this land, Eſa.10.5,6,7. Woe vnto Aſſour, the rod of my wrath, and the ſtaffe in their hands is mine indignation, I will giue him a charge againſt the people of my wrath to take the ſpoile, and to take the prey, and to tread them vnder feete like the myre in the ſtreet. But he thinketh not ſo, neither doth his heart eſteeme it ſo: but he imagineth to deſtroy, and to cut off not a few nations.

God permitteth euill, by a certaine voluntary permiſſion, in that he forſaketh the ſecond cauſe in working euill. And he forſaketh his creature, either by detracting the grace it had, or not beſtowing that which it wanteth, Rom. 1.26. For this cauſe God gaue them vp vnto vile affections, 2. Tim. 2.25,26. Inſtructing them with meekeneſſe that are contrary minded, prooning if God at any time will giue repentance, that they may know the truth; and that they may come to amendment out of the ſnare of the diuell, which are taken of him at his will.

Neither muſt we thinke God herein vniuſt, who is indebted to none. Rom. 9. 15. I will haue mercy on him to whom I will ſhew mercy, Yea it is in Gods pleaſure to beſtow how much grace, and vpon whom he will. Matth. 20.15. Is it not lawfull for mee to doe as I will with mine owne?

That which is euill, hath ſome reſpect of goodneſſe with GOD: Firſt, in that it is the puniſhment of ſinne: and puniſhment is accounted a morall good, in that it is the part of a iuſt iudge to puniſh ſinne. Secondly, as it is a meere action or act. Thirdly, as it is a chaſtiſement, a triall of ones faith, martyrdome, propitiation for ſinne, as the death and paſſion of Chriſt: Act. 2.23. and 4.24. And if we obſerve theſe caueats, God is not onely a bare permiſſiue agent in an euill worke, but a powerfull effectour of the ſame; yet ſo, as he neither inſtilleth an aberration in the action, nor yet ſupporteth, or intendeth the ſame, but that he moſt freely ſuffereth euill, and beſt diſpoſeth of it to his owne glory. The like we may ſee in this ſimilitude: Let a man ſpurre forward a lame Horſe; in that he mooueth forward, the rider is the cauſe; but that he halteth, he himſelfe is the cauſe. And againe, we ſee the Sunne beames ſhining thorow a glaſſe; where the light is from the Sunne, the colour not from the Sunne but from the glaſſe.

CHAP. VII.

Of Predeſtination and Creation.

GOds decree, in as much as it concerneth man, is called Predeſtination: which is the decree of God, by the which he hath ordained all men to a certaine and euerlaſting eſtate: that is, either to ſaluation or condemnation, for his owne glory. 1. Theſſ. 5.9. For God hath not appointed vs vnto wrath, but to obtaine ſaluation by the meanes of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Rom. 9. 13. As it is written, I haue loued Iacob, and hated Eſau: and verſ. 22. What and if God would, to ſhew his wrath, and to make his power knowne, ſuffer with long patience the veſſels of wrath prepared to deſtruction: and that he might declare the riches of his glory vpon the veſſels of mercy, which he hath prepared vnto glory?

The meanes of accompliſhing Gods Predeſtination are two-fold.

The Creation, and the fall.

The Creation, is that by which GOD made all things very good, of nothing; that is, of no matter which was before the Creation. Gen. 1. 1. In the beginning God created the heaven, &c. to the end of the Chapter.

Gods manner of creating, as alſo of gouerning, is ſuch, as that by his Word alone, hee without any inſtruments, meanes, aſſiſtance, or motion, produced all ſorts of things: For to will any thing with God, is both to be able and to performe it. Heb. 11.3. By faith we vnderſtand, that the world was ordained by the Word of God, ſo that the things which we ſee, are not made of things which did appeare. Pſal. 148. 5. Let them praiſe the name of the Lord, for he commanded, and they were created.

The goodneſſe of the creature, is a kinde of excellency, by which it was voide of all defect, whether puniſhment or fault.

The creation, is of the world, or inhabitants in the world.

The world, is a moſt beautifull pallace, framed out of a deformed ſubſtance, and fit to be inhabited.

The parts of the world, are the heauens and earth.

The heauens are three-fold: the firſt is the ayre, the ſecond the skie, the third an inuiſible and incorporall eſſence, created to be the ſeat of all the bleſſed, both men, and angels. This third heauen is called Paradiſe. 2. Cor. 12.4.

The inhabiters of the world, are reaſonable creatures, made according to Gods owne Image; they are either angels or men. Gen. 1. 16. Furthermore, God ſaid, Let Vs make man in our owne Image, according to our likeneſſe. Iob 1. 6. When the children of God came and ſtood before the Lord, Satan came alſo among them.

The Image of God, is the goodneſſe of the reaſonable creature, reſembling God in holineſſe. Eph. 4.24. And put on the new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe.

CHAP. VIII.

Of Angels.

THE Angels each of them being created in the beginning, were ſetled in an vpright eſtate. In whom theſe things are to be noted; Firſt, their nature. Angels are ſpirituall and incorporall eſſences. Heb. 2. 16. For hee in no ſort tooke the Angels, but he tooke the ſeed of Abraham. Heb. 1. 7. And of the Angels, he ſaith, Hee maketh the ſpirits his meſſengers, and his Miniſters a flame of fire.

Secondly, their qualities. Firſt, they are wiſe, 2. Sam. 14. 17. My Lord the king is euen as an Angel of God in hearing good and bad. 2. They are of great might. 2. Theſſ. 1. 7. When the Lord Ieſus ſhall ſhew himſelfe from heauen with his mighty Angels. 2. Sam. 24. 17. Dauid ſaw the Angel that ſmote the people. 2. King. 19. 35. The ſame night the Angel of the Lord went out and ſmote in the campe of Aſſur, an hundreth, fourſcore, and fiue thouſand. 3. They are ſwift and of great agilitie, Eſa. 6. 6. Then flew one of the Seraphins vnto mee with an hot cole in his hand. Dan. 9. 21. The man Gabriel whom I had ſeene before in a viſion, came flying and touched mee. This is the reaſon why the Cherubins in the Tabernacle were painted with wings.

Thirdly, they are innumerable. Gen. 32. 1. Now Iacob went forth on his iourney, and the Angels of God met him. Dan. 7. 10. Thouſand thouſands miniſtred vnto him, and ten thouſand thouſands ſtood before him. Matth. 26. 53. Thinkeſt thou I cannot pray to my Father, and he will giue me more then twelue legions of angels? Heb. 12. 22. To the company of innumerable angels.

Fourthly, they are in the higheſt heauen, where they euer attend vpon God, and haue ſocietie with him. Mat. 18. 10. In heauen their Angels alwaies behold the face of my Father which is in heauen. Pſal. 68. 17. The chariots of God are twentie thouſand thouſand Angels, and the Lord is among them. Mark. 12. 25. But are as the Angels in heauen.

Fiftly, their degree. That there are degrees of Angels, it is moſt plaine. Col. 1. 16. By him were all things created, which are in heauen, and in earth, things viſible & inuiſible: whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers. Rom. 8. 38. Neither angels, nor principalities, nor powers, &c. 1. Theſſ. 4. 16. The Lord ſhall deſcend with the voyce of the Archangell, and with the trumpet of God. But it is not for vs to ſearch who, or how many be of each order; neither ought wee curiouſly to inquire how they are diſtinguiſhed, whether in eſſence, gifts, or offices. Col. 2. 18. Let no man at his pleaſure beare rule ouer you by humblenes of minde, and worſhipping of Angels, aduancing himſelfe in thoſe things which he neuer ſaw.

Sixtly, their office. Their office is partly to magnifie God, and partly to performe his commandements. Pſal. 103. 20, 21. Praiſe the Lord, ye his Angels that excell in ſtrength, that doe his commandement in obeying the voyce of his word. Praiſe the Lord, all ye his hoſtes, and ye his ſeruants that doe his pleaſure.

Seuenthly: The eſtabliſhing of ſome Angels in that integritie, in which they were created.

CHAP. IX.

Of man, and the eſtate of Innocencie.

MAn, after he was created of God, was ſet in an excellent eſtate of innocencie. In this eſtate ſeuen things are chiefly to bee regarded.

I. The place. The garden of Heden, that moſt pleaſant garden. Gen. 2. 15. Then the Lord tooke the man, and put him into the garden of Heden.

II. The integrity of mans nature. Which was, Eph. 4. 24. created in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe. This integrity hath two parts.

The firſt is wiſedome, which is a true and perfect knowledge of God, and of his will, in as much as it is to bee performed of man; yea, and of the counſell of God in all his creatures. Col. 3. 10. And haue put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge, after the image of him that created him. Gen. 2. 19. When the Lord God had formed out of the earth euery beaſt of the field, and euery fowle of the heauen, hee brought them vnto the man, to ſee what hee would call them: for howſoeuer the man called the liuing creature, ſo was the name thereof.

The ſecond is iuſtice, which is a conformitie of the will, affections, and powers of the body to doe the will of God

III. Mans dignitie, conſiſting of foure parts. Firſt, his communion with God. By which, as God reioyced in his owne image, ſo likewiſe man did feruently loue God: this is apparent by Gods familiar conference with Adam, Gen. 1. 29. And God ſaid, Behold, I haue giuen vnto you euery herb bearing ſeed, &c. that ſhalbe to you for meat. Secondly, his dominion ouer all the creatures of the earth, Gen. 2. 19. Pſ. 8. 6. Thou haſt made him Lord ouer the works of thine hands, & haſt ſet al things vnder his feet, &c. Thirdly, the decency, and dignity of the body, in which, though naked, as nothing was vnſeemely, ſo was there in it imprinted a princely maieſty, Pſal. 8. Thou haſt made him little lower then God, & crowned him with glory and worſhip. Gen. 2. 25. They were both naked & neither aſhamed. 1. Cor. 12. 25. Vpon thoſe members of the body, which we thinke moſt vnhoneſt put we more honeſtly on: and our vncomely parts haue more comlines on. Fourthly, labour of the body without paine or griefe. Gen. 3. 17. 19. Becauſe thou haſt obeyed the voyce of thy wife, &c. curſed is the earth for thy ſake, in ſorrow ſhalt thou eate of it all the dayes of thy life, &c.

IV. Subiection to God, whereby man was bound to performe obedience to the commandements of God: which are two. The one was concerning the two trees: the other, the obſeruation of the Sabbath.

Gods commandement concerning the trees, was ordained to bee a proofe and tryall of mans obedience. It conſiſteth of 2. parts: the firſt is the giuing of the tree of life, that as a ſigne, it might confirme to man his perpetuall abode in the garden of Heden, if ſtill hee perſiſted in his obedience, Revel. 2.7. To him that overcommeth will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midſt of the paradiſe of God, Pro. 3.18. Shee is a tree of life to them which lay hold on her: and bleſſed is he that retaineth her.

The ſecond, is the prohibition to eate of the tree of the knowledge of good and evill, together with a commination of temporal and eternall death, if hee tranſgreſſed this commandement. Gen. 2.17. Of the tree of the knowledge of good and evill, thou ſhalt not eate of it: for in the day that thou eateſt thereof, thou ſhalt die the death. This was a ſigne of death, and had his name of the event, becauſe the obſervation thereof would have brought perpetuall happines, as the violation gave experience of evill, that is, of all miſerie, namely of puniſhment, and of guiltineſſe of ſinne.

Gods commandement concerning the obſervation of the Sabbath, is that, by which God ordained the ſanctification of the Sabbath. Gen. 2.3. God bleſſed the ſeventh day, and ſanctified it.

V. His calling, which is the ſervice of God, in the obſervation of his commandements, and the dreſſing of the garden of Heden, Prov. 16.4. God made all things for himſelfe. Gen 2.15. He placed him in the garden of Heden to dreſſe and keepe it.

VI. His diet was the hearbs of the earth, and fruit of every tree, except the tree of the knowledge of good and evill. Gen. 1.29. And God ſaid, behold, I have given unto you every hearbe bearing ſeede, which is upon all the earth, and every tree, wherein is the fruit of a tree bearing ſeed, that ſhall be to you for meat. And chap. 2.17. But of the tree of knowledge of good and evill, thou ſhalt not eate.

VII. His free choiſe, both to will and performe the commandement concerning the two trees, and alſo to neglect and violate the ſame. Whereby wee ſee that our firſt parents were indeed created perfect, but mutable for ſo it pleaſed God to prepare a way to the execution of his Decree.

Chap. X.

Of Sinne, and the fall of Angels.

THe fall is a revolting of the reaſonable creature from obedience to ſinne.

Sinne, is the corruption, or rather deprivation of the firſt integritie. More plainely, it is a falling or turning from God, binding the offendour by the courſe of Gods juſtice, to undergoe the puniſhment.

Heere a doubt may bee mooved, whether ſinne be a thing exiſting or not. The anſwer is this: Of things which are, ſome are poſitive, other privative. Things poſitive, are all ſubſtances, together with thoſe their properties, powers, inclinations and affections, which the A Lord hath created and imprinted in their natures. The thing is called privative, which granteth or preſuppoſeth the abſence of ſome ſuch thing, as ought to bee in a thing. Such a thing is ſinne, which properly, and of it ſelfe is not any thing created, and exiſting; but rather the abſence of that good which ought to be in the creature: and though it bee inherent in things poſitive as a privation, yet it is alwaies to bee diſtinguiſhed from them.

Sinne hath two parts: A defect, or impotency: and diſorder.

Impotencie is nothing elſe, but the very want or loſſe of that good, which God hath ingrafted in the nature of his creature.

Diſorder, is the confuſion or diſturbance B of all the powers and actions of the creature.

The fall was effected on this manner. Firſt, God created his reaſonable creatures good indeede, but withall changeable, as wee have ſhewed before. For to be unchangeably good, is proper to God alone. Secondly, God tryed their obedience in thoſe things about which they were converſant. Deut. 13.3. Thou ſhalt not hearken to the words of that Prophet, or unto that dreamer of dreames: for the Lord your God prooveth you, to know whether you love the Lord your God, with all your heart, and with all your ſoule. Thirdly in this triall God doth not aſſiſt them with new grace to ſtand, but for juſt cauſes forſaketh them. Laſtly, after God hath forſaken them, and left them to themſelves, C they fall quite from God: no otherwiſe, then when a man ſtaying up a ſtaffe on the ground, it ſtandeth upright; but if hee never ſo little withdraw his hand, it falleth of it ſelfe.

The fall, is of men, and Angels.

The fall of Angels, is that by which the underſtanding, pointing out a more excellent eſtate, and of it owne accord approoving thereof, and the Will chooſing the ſame as pleaſing unto it (their nature in the meane while remaining fit to make choice either of the contrary, or of a divers object) they are the ſole authors of their fall from God. 2. Pet. 2.4. If God ſpared not the Angels which ſinned, but caſt them downe into hell, and delivered them into chaines of darkeneſſe, to bee kept unto damnation, &c. Iude 6. The Angels which kept not D their firſt eſtate, but left their owne habitation, he hath reſerved in everlaſting chaines, &c. Iohn 8.44. Hee was a murtherer from the beginning, and continued not in the truth: for there is no truth in him.

In the fall of Angels, conſider: Firſt their corruption, ariſing from the fall; which is the depravation of their nature, and is either that fearefull malice and hatred, by which they ſet themſelves againſt God, or their inſatiable deſire to deſtroy mankind; to the effecting whereof, they neglect neither force nor fraud. 1. Iohn 3.8. He that committeth ſinne is of the divell, becauſe the devill ſinned from the beginning, For this cauſe was the Sonne of God revealed, to diſſolue the workes of the devill. 1. Pet. 5.8. Your adversary the divell goeth about like a roaring lyon seeking whom he may devoure. Eph. 6. 12. You strive not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, and worldly governors; the princes of darknes of this world, against spirituall wickednesses, which are in superceleſtiall things.

II. Their degree, and diverſitie: for of theſe Angels, one is chiefe, and the reſt attendants. The chiefe is Beelzebub, prince of the reſt of the divels, and the world, farre above them all in malice. Mat. 25. 41. Away from mee ye curſed into everlaſting fire, prepared for the divell and his Angels. 2. Cor. 4. 4. Whoſe minds the god of this world hath blinded. Revel. 12. 7. And there was war in heaven, Michael, and his Angels fought with the dragon, and the dragon and his Angels fought.

Miniſtring Angels, are ſuch as waite upon the divell, in accompliſhing his wickedneſſe.

III. Their puniſhment. God, after their fall, gave them over to perpetuall torments, without any hope of pardon, Iude verſe 6. 2. Pet. 2. 4. God ſpared not the Angels that had ſinned, but caſt them downe into hell, and delivered them into chaines of darknes, to be kept unto damnation. This he did: Firſt, to admoniſh men, what great puniſhment they deſerved. Secondly, to ſhew that grievous ſins muſt more grievouſly be puniſhed.

The fall of Angels was the more grievous, becauſe both their nature was more able to reſiſt, and the divell was the firſt founder of ſin.

Their puniſhment is, eaſier, or more grievous.

Their eaſier puniſhment is double. The firſt, is their dejection from heaven, 2 Pet. 2. 4. God caſt the Angels that ſinned into hell. The ſecond, is the abridging and limitation of their power, Iob 1. 12. The Lord ſaid unto Satan, Behold, all that he hath is in thine hand, onely upon him lay not thine hand.

The more grievous paine, is that torment in the deepe, which is endleſſe and infinite, in time and meaſure. Luke 8. 31. And they beſought him, that he would not command them to goe downe into the deepe.

CHAP. XI.

Of mans fall and diſobedience.

Adams fall, was his willing revolting to diſobedience by eating the forbidden fruit. In Adams fall, we may note the manner, greatneſſe, and fruit of it.

I. The manner of Adams fall, was on this ſort: Firſt, the divell, having immediately before ſalne himſelfe, inſinuateth unto our firſt parents, that both the puniſhment for eating the forbidden fruit was uncertaine, and that God was not true in his Word unto them. Secondly, by this legerdemaine, hee blinded the eyes of their underſtanding. Thirdly, being thus blinded, they begin to diſtruſt God, and to doubt of Gods favour. Fourthly, they thus doubting, are mooved to behold the forbidden fruit. Fiftly, they no ſooner ſee the beauty thereof, but they deſire it. Sixtly, that they may ſatisfie their deſire, they eate of the fruit, which by the hands of the woman, was taken from the tree: by which act they become utterly diſloyall to God. Gen. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

Thus without conſtraint, they willingly fall from their integrity; God upon juſt cauſes leaving them to themſelves, and freely ſuffering them to fall. For we muſt not thinke, that mans fall was either by chaunce, or God not knowing of it; or barely winking at it, or by his bare permiſſion, or againſt his will: but rather miraculouſly, not without the will of God, and yet without all approbation of it.

II. The greatneſſe of this tranſgreſſion muſt be eſteemed, not by the externall object, or the baſeneſſe of an apple, but by the offence it containeth againſt Gods Majeſty. This offence appeareth by many treſpaſſes committed in that action. The 1. is doubting of Gods Word: 2. want of faith; for they beleeve not Gods threatning, (In that day ye eate thereof, you ſhall dye the death:) But being bewitched with the divels promiſe, (yee ſhall bee like Gods) they ceaſe to feare Gods puniſhment, and are inflamed with a deſire of greater dignity. 3. Their curioſity, in forſaking Gods Word, and ſeeking other wiſedome. 4. Their pride, in ſeeking to magnifie themſelves, and to become like God. 5. Contempt of God, in tranſgreſſing his Commandements againſt their owne conſcience. 6. In that they preferre the divell before God. 7. Ingratitude, that in as much as in them lyeth, they expell Gods ſpirit dwelling in them, and deſpiſe that everlaſting bleſſed union. 8. They murther both themſelves and their progeny.

III. The fruit or effects. Out of this corrupt eſtate of our firſt parents, aroſe the eſtate of infidelity or unbeliefe, whereby God hath included all men under ſinne, that hee might manifeſt his mercy in the ſalvation of ſome, and his juſtice in the condemnation of others. Rom. 11. 32. God hath ſhut up all men in unbeliefe, that he might have mercy on all, Gal. 3. 22. The Scripture hath concluded all under ſin, that the promiſe by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt ſhould bee given to them that beleeve.

In this eſtate, wee muſt conſider ſinne, and the puniſhment of ſinne. Sinne is three-fold.

The firſt, is the participation of Adams both tranſgreſſion and guiltineſſe, whereby in his ſin, all his poſterity ſinned, Rom. 5. 12. As by one man ſinne entred into the world, and by ſin death: ſo death entred upon all men, in that all men have ſinned. The reaſon of this is ready. Adam was not then a private man, but repreſented all mankind, and therefore looke what good he received from God, or evill elſewhere, both were common to others with him, 1 Cor. 15. 22. As in Adam all men dye, ſo in Chriſt all men riſe againe.

Againe, when Adam offended, his posteritie was in his loynes, from whom they should by the course of nature issue: & therefore take part of the guiltinesse with him. Heb. 7.9,10. And to say as the thing is, Levi, &c. payed tythes to Melchisedec: for he was yet in the loynes of his father Abraham, when Melchisedec met him.

CHAP. XII.

Of Originall sinne.

OVt of the former transgression ariseth another, namely Originall sinne, which is corruption ingendred in our first conception, whereby every facultie of soule and body is prone and disposed to evill. Psal. 51.5. I was borne in iniquity, and in sin hath my mother conceived me. Gen. 6.5. Tit. 3.3. We our selves were in times past unwise, disobedient, deceived: serving the lusts and divers pleasures, living in maliciousnes and envie, hatefull, and hating one another. Heb. 12. 1. Let us cast away every thing that presseth down, and the sin that hangeth so fast on.

By this we see, that sin is not a corruption of mans substance, but onely of faculties: otherwise neither could mens soules be immortall, nor Christ take upon him mans nature.

All Adams posterity is equally partaker of this corruption: the reason why it sheweth not it selfe equally in all, is because some have the spirit of sanctification, some the spirit onely to bridle corruption, some neither.

The propagation of sinne, from the parents to the children, is either because the soule is infected by the contagion of the body, as a good oyntment by a fustie vessell; or because God, in the very moment of creation and infusion of soules into infants, doth utterly forsake them. For as Adam received the image of God, both for himselfe and others: so did he loose it for himselfe and others.

But whereas the propogation of sin is as a common fire in a towne, men are not so much to search how it came, as to be carefull how to extinguish it.

That wee may the better know Originall sinne in the severall faculties of mans nature, three circumstances must be considered.

1. How much of Gods image wee yet retaine. 2. How much sinne man received from Adam. 3. The increase thereof afterward.

I. In the minde. The remnant of Gods image, is, certaine notions concerning good and evil: as, that there is a God, and that the same God punisheth transgressions: that there is an everlasting life: that wee must reverence our superiours, and not harme our neighbours. But even these notions, they are both generall and corrupt, and have none other use, but to bereave man of all excuse before Gods judgement seate. Rom. 1.19,20. That which may be knowne concerning God, is manifest in them: for God hath shewed it unto them. For the invisible things of him, that is, his eternall power and A Godhead, are seene by the creation of the world, being considered in his workes, to the intent they should be without excuse.

Mens mindes received from Adam: 1. Ignorance, namely a want, or rather a deprivation of knowledge in the things of God, whether they concerne his sincere worship, or eternall happinesse. 1. Cor. 2. 14. The naturall man perceiveth not the things of the spirit of God, for they are foolishnesse unto him, neither can hee know them, because they are spiritually discerned. Rom. 8. 7. The wisedome of the flesh is enmity to God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeede can be.

II. Impotency, whereby the minde of it selfe is unable to understand spirituall things, B although they be taught. Luk. 24.45. Then opened hee their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures. 2. Co. 3.5. Not that we are sufficient of our selves, to thinke any thing as of our selves: but our sufficiency is of God.

III. Vanity, in that the minde thinketh falshood truth, and truth falshood. Ephes. 4. 17. Walke no more as other Gentiles, in the vanity of your understanding. 1. Cor. 1. 21. It pleased God by the foolishnesse of preaching, to save those which beleeve. 23. We preach Christ crucified, to the Iewes a stumbling blocke, but to the Grecians foolishnesse. Prov. 14. 12. There is a way which seemeth good in the eyes of men, but the end thereof is death.

IV. A naturall inclination onely to conceive C and devise the thing which is evill. Gen. 6.5. The Lord saw that the wickednesse of men was great upon earth, and all the imaginations of the thoughts of his heart were onely evill continually, Ierem. 4. 22. They are wise to doe evill, but to doe well they have no knowledge.

Hence it is apparent, that the originall, and as I may say, the matter of all heresies, is naturally ingrafted in mans nature. This is worthy the observation of students in divinity.

The increase of sinne in the understanding, is 1. a reprobate sense, when GOD withdraweth the light of nature. Iohn 12. 40. Hee hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their hearts, lest they should see with their eyes, and understand with their hearts, and I should heale them, and D they be converted. Rom. 1 28. As they regarded not to know God, so God delivered them up unto a reprobate minde, to doe those things which are not convenient. 2. The spirit of slumber. Rom. 11. 8. God hath given them the spirit of slumber, &c. 3. A spirituall drunkennes. Esa. 29. 9. They are drunken, but not with wine, they stagger, but not with strong drinke. 4. Strong illusions. 2. Thesse. 2. 11. God shall send them strong illusions, that they shall beleeve lies.

The remnant of Gods image in the conscience, is an observing and watchfull power, like the eye of a Keeper, reserved in man partly to reproove, partly to represse the undridled course of his affections. Roman. 2. 15. Which shew the effect of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witnes, and their thoughts accuſing one another, or excuſing.

That which the conſcience hath received of Adam, is the impurenes thereof. Tit. 1.15. To them that are defiled and unbeleeving nothing is pure, but even their mindes and conſciences are defiled. This impurity hath three effects: the firſt, is to excuſe ſinne; as if a man ſerve God outwardly, hee will excuſe and cloake his inward impiety. Mark. 10.19,20. Thou knoweſt the commandements, Thou ſhalt not, &c. Then he anſwered, and ſaid, Maſter all theſe things have I obſerved from my youth. Againe, it excuſeth intents not warranted in Gods word. 1. Chr. 13. 9. when they came to the threſhing floore of Chidon, Uzza put foorth his hand to hold the Arke, for the oxen did ſhake it.

The ſecond, is to accuſe and terrifie for doing good. This wee may ſee in ſuperſtitious idolaters, who are grieved when they omit to performe counterfeit and idolatrous worſhip to their gods. Coloſſ. 2.21,22. Touch not, taſt not, handle not, which all periſh with uſing, and are after the commandements and doctrines of men. Eſay 29. 13. And their feare towards me was taught them by the precepts of men.

The third, is to accuſe add terrifie for ſinne, Gen. 50. 15. When Ioſephs brethren ſaw that their father was dead, they ſaid, it may bee that Ioſeph will hate us, and will pay us againe all the evill which we did unto him. Ioh. 8. 9. And when they heard it, being accuſed by their owne conſciences, they went out one by one. 1. Ioh. 3. 20. If our heart condemne us not, God is greater then our heart. Though the conſcience ſhal accuſe a man truely, yet that will not argue any holineſſe in it: which appeareth, in that Adam in his innocency had a good, yet no accuſing conſcience, Impureneſſe, increaſed in the conſcience, is firſt ſuch a ſenſles numneſſe, as that it can hardly accuſe man of ſinne. Eph. 4. 19. Who being paſt feeling have given themſelves to wantonnes, to worke all uncleanneſſe, even with greedineſſe. 1. Tim. 4.2. Having their conſciences burned with an hot yron. This ſenſleſneſſe ſpringeth from a cuſtome in ſinning. 1. Sam. 25.37. Then in the morning when the wine was gone out of Nabal, his wife told him theſe words, and his heart died within him, and he was like a ſtone.

II. Some grievous horror, and terrour of the conſcience. Gen. 4.14. Behold thou haſt caſt me this day from the earth, & from thy face ſhall I be hid. and ver. 13. My puniſhment is greater then I can beare. The Symptomes of this diſeaſe, are blaſphemies, trembling of body, fearefull dreames. Act. 24.26. And as he diſputed of righteouſneſſe, and temperance, and the judgement to come, Felix trembled, &c. Dan. 5, 6. Then the Kings countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him, ſo that the joynts of his loynes were looſed, and his knees ſmote one againſt the other.

In the will, the remnant of Gods image, is a free choice. Firſt, in every naturall action, belonging to each living creature, as to nouriſh, A to engender, to moove, to perceive. Secondly, in every humane action, that is, ſuch as belong to all men; and therefore man hath free-will in outward actions, whether they concerne manners, a family, or the common-wealth, albeit, both in the choice and refuſall of them, it bee very weake. Rom. 2. 14. The Gentiles which have not the law, by nature do thoſe things which are of the law.

The will received. I. An impotencie, whereby it cannot will, or ſo much as luſt after that, which is indeede good; that is, which may pleaſe, and be acceptable to God. 1. Cor. 2.14. The naturall man perceiveth not the things of the ſpirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſſe unto him: neither can hee know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned, Rom. 5.6. Chriſt when we were yet of no ſtrength, at his time died for the ungodly. 2. Tim. 2.26. Phil. 2.13. It is God which worketh in you both the will and the deede, even of his good pleaſure.

II. An inward rebellion, whereby it utterly abhorreth that which is good, deſiring and willing that alone which is evill.

By this it appeareth, that the will is no agent, but a meere patient in the firſt act of converſion to God; and that by it ſelfe it can neither beginne that converſion, or any other inward and ſound obedience due to Gods law.

That which the affections receive, is a diſ- C order, by which they therefore are not well affected, becauſe they eſchew that which is good, and purſue that which is evill. Galat. 5. 24. They that are Chriſts, have crucified the fleſh with the affections and luſts thereof. Rom. 1.26. Therefore God gave them over to filthy luſts. 1. Kin. 22.8. The king of Iſrael ſaid unto Iehoſaphat Yet is there one of whom thou maieſt take counſell, but him I hate, &c. and 21.4. Therefore Achab came home to his houſe diſcontented and angry for the word which Nabal ſpake unto him, and he laid himſelfe on his bed, turning away his face leſt he ſhould eate meate.

That which the body hath received, is I. fitneſſe to beginne ſinne. This doth the body in tranſporting all objects and occaſions of ſin to the ſoule, Gen. 3. 6. The woman ſeeing that the tree was good for meat, and pleaſant to the eyes, &c. tooke of the fruit thereof, and did eate. D II. A fitneſſe to execute ſinne, ſo ſoone as the heart hath begunne it. Rom. 6. 13. Neither give your members as weapons of injuſtice to ſin. and ver. 19. As you have given your members as ſervants to uncleanneſſe and iniquity, to commit iniquity, &c.

CHAP. XIII.

Of actuall ſinne.

AFter Originall ſinne in Adams poſterity, actuall tranſgreſſion taketh place. It is either inward or outward: Inward, is of the minde, will, and affections.

The actuall ſinne of the minde is the evill thought or intent thereof, contrary to Gods law. Examples of evill thoughts. God (the only knower of the heart) hath in divers places ſet downe in his word. I. That there is no God, Pſal. 10. 4. The wicked is ſo proud, that he ſeeketh not for God, he thinketh alwaies there is no God, Pſal. 14. 1. The foole ſaith in his heart, there is no God. II. That there is neither providence nor preſence of God in this world, Pſal. 10. 11. He ſaith in his heart, God hath forgotten: hee hideth away his face and will never ſee, verſe 13. Wherfore doth the wicked contemne God? he ſaith in his heart, thou wilt not regard. III. It imagineth ſafegard to it ſelfe from all perils, Pſal. 10. 6. He ſaith in his heart, I ſhall never be mooved nor be in danger. Rev. 18 7. Shee ſaith in her heart, I ſit being a Queene, and am no widow, and ſhall ſee no mourning. IV. It eſteemeth it ſelfe more excellent then other. Apoc. 18 7. I ſit as a Queene. Luke 18. 11. The Phariſe ſtanding thus prayed to himſelfe, I thanke thee, O God, that I am not as other men, extortioners, unjuſt, adulterers, nor yet as this Publican. v. 12. I faſt twice in the weeke, and give tithe of all my poſſeſſions. V. That the Goſpel of Gods kingdome is meere fooliſhnes. 1 Cor. 2. 14 The naturall man perceiveth not the things of the ſpirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſſe unto him. VI. To thinke uncharitably and maliciouſly of ſuch as ſerve God ſincerely. Matt. 12. 24. When the Phariſes heard that, they ſaid, he caſteth not out divels, but by the prince of divels. Pſal. 74. 8. They ſaid in their hearts, Let us deſtroy them altogether. VII. To thinke the day of death farre off. Eſa. 28. 15. Te have ſaid, we have made a covenant with death, and with hell we are at agreement, though a ſcourge run over us, and paſſe through, it ſhall not come at us. VIII. That the paines of hell may be eſchewed: in the place before mentioned, they ſay, With hell have we made agreement. IX. That God will deferre his both particular and laſt generall comming to judgement. Luk. 12. 19. I will ſay unto my ſoule, Soule thou haſt much goods laid up for many yeeres. and v. 45. If that ſervant ſay in his heart, My maſter will deferre his comming, &c.

Many carnall men pretend their good meaning: but when God openeth their eyes, they ſhall ſee theſe rebellious thoughts riſing in their minds, as ſparkles out of a chimney.

The actuall ſinne of both will and affection, is every wicked motion, inclination, and deſire. Gal. 5. 17. The fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit.

An actuall outward ſin, is that, to the committing whereof, the members of the body, doe, together with the faculties of the ſoule, concurre. Such ſins as theſe are infinite. Pſal. 40 12. Innumerable troubles have compaſſed me, my ſinnes have taken ſuch hold on me, that I am not able to looke up: yea, they are more in number then the haires of my head.

Actuall ſinne, is of omiſsion or commiſsion. Againe, both theſe are in words or deeds.

In the ſinne of commiſsion, obſerve theſe two points: the degrees in committing a ſinne, and the difference of ſinnes committed.

The degrees are in number foure. Iam. 1. 14, 15. Every man is tempted, when he is drawne away by his own concupiſcence, & is enticed: then when luſt hath conceived, it bringeth forth ſinne; and ſin when it is finiſhed, bringeth forth death.

The firſt degree, is temptation, whereby man is allured to ſinne. This doth Satan by offering to the mind that which is evill. Iob. 13. 2. The divell had now put into the heart of Judas Iſcariot, Simons ſon to betray him. Acts 5. 3. Peter ſaid to Ananias, Why hath Satan filled thine heart that thou ſhouldeſt lye, &c. 1. Chron. 21. 1. And Satan ſtood up againſt Iſrael, and provoked David to number Iſrael. This is alſo effected upon occaſion of ſome externall object, which the ſenſes perceive. Iob 31. 1. I have made a covenant with mine eyes, why then ſhould I looke upon a maid?

Tentation hath two parts: abſtraction, and ineſcation.

Abſtraction, is the firſt cogitation of committing ſin, whereby the mind is withdrawne from Gods Service, to the which it ſhould be alwaies ready preſt. Luk. 10. 27. Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, and all thy ſoule, and with all thy thoughts.

Ineſcation, is that whereby an evill thought conceived, and for a time retained in the mind by delighting, the will and affections doth as it were, lay a baite for them to draw them to conſent.

The ſecond degree is conception, which is nothing elſe but a conſent and reſolution to commit ſinne. Pſal. 7. 14. He ſhall travell with wickedneſſe, he hath conceived miſchiefe, but he ſhall bring forth a lye.

The third degree, is the birth of ſinne, namely, the committing of ſinne, by the aſſiſtance both of the faculties of the ſoule, and the powers of the body.

The fourth degree, is perfection, when ſin being by cuſtome perfect, and as it were ripe, the ſinner reapeth death, that is, damnation.

This appeareth in the example of Pharaoh: wherefore cuſtome in ſinne is fearefull.

Sinne actually committed, hath five differences.

Firſt, to conſent with an offendour, and not actually to commit ſinne. Eph. 5. 11. Have no fellowſhip with the unfruitfull works of darkneſſe, but reproove them rather. This is done three manner of waies.

I. When a man in judgement ſomewhat alloweth the ſinne of another. Numb. 20. 10. Moſes and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rocke, and Moſes ſaid unto them, Heare now ye rebels: ſhall we bring you water out of the rocke? verſe 12. The Lord ſpake to Moſes and Aaron, becauſe ye beleeved me not, to ſanctifie me in the preſence of the children of Iſrael, therefore ye ſhall not bring the congregation

into the land which I have given them.

II. When the heart approoveth in affection and conſent. Hither may wee referre both the Miniſters and the Magiſtrates concealing and winking at offences, 1 Sam. 2.23. Eli ſaid, Why doe yee ſuch things? for of all this people I heare evill of you. Doe no more my ſons, &c. Now that Elies will agreed with his ſonnes ſinnes, it is manifeſt, ver.29. Thou honoureſt thy children above me.

III. In deed; by counſell, preſence, inticement. Rom.1.31. They do not only doe the ſame, but alſo favour them that doe them. Mar.6.25, 26. Shee ſaid unto her mother, what ſhall I aske? and ſhe ſaid, Iohn Baptiſts head, &c. Act.22.20. When the blood of thy Martyr Steven was ſhed, I alſo ſtood by, and conſented unto his death, and kept the clothes of them that ſlue him.

The ſecond difference, is to ſinne ignorantly, as when a man doth not expreſly and diſtinctly know whether that which hee doth, be a ſinne or not; or if he know it, doe not acknowledge and marke it. 1 *Tim.*1.13. I was before a blaſphemer, and a perſecutor, and an oppreſſor: but I was received to mercy, for I did it ignorantly through unbeliefe. Numb.35.22,23,24. If he puniſhed him unadviſedly, and not of hatred, caſt upon him any thing without laying of wait any ſtone (whereby he might be ſlaine) and ſaw not, or cauſed it to fall upon him, and he dye, was not his enemy, neither ſought him any euill: then the congregation ſhall judge between the ſlayer, and the avenger of blood, according to theſe lawes, 1 Cor.4.4. I know nothing by my ſelfe, yet am I not thereby juſtified. Pſal.19.13. Cleanſe me from my ſecret ſinnes.

The third difference is to ſinne upon knowledge, but yet of infirmity, as when a man fearing ſome imminent danger, or amazed at the horrour of death, doth againſt his knowledge deny that truth, which otherwiſe hee would acknowledge and embrace. Such was Peters fall, ariſing from the over-much raſhneſſe of the minde, mingled with ſome feare.

Thus men offend, when the fleſh, and inordinate deſires ſo over-rule the will and every good endeavour, that they provoke man to that, which he from his heart deteſteth. Rom. 7.19. I doe not the good thing which I would, but the evill which I would not, that doe I.

The fourth difference, is preſumptuous ſinning upon knowledge. Pſal.19.13. Keepe thy ſervant from preſumptuous ſinnes: let them not raigne over mee. Hitherto belongeth. I. every ſinne committed with an high hand, that is, in ſome contempt of God. Numb. 15.30. The perſon that doth preſumptuouſly, &c. ſhall be cut off from among ſt his people; becauſe he hath deſpiſed the Word of the Lord, and hath broken his commandement. II. Preſumption of Gods mercy in doing evill. Eccleſ. 8. 11. Becauſe ſentence againſt an evill worke is not executed ſpeedily, therefore the heart of the children of men is fully ſet in them to doe evill. Rom 2.4. Deſpiſeſt thou the riches of his bountifulneſſe, &c. not knowing that the bountifulneſſe of God leadeth thee to repentance.

The fifth difference, is to ſinne upon knowledge and ſet malice againſt God, and to this is the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt referred.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the common puniſhment of ſinne.

HItherto wee have intreated of ſinne, wherewith all mankind is infected: in the next place ſucceedeth the puniſhment of ſinne, which is threefold. The firſt is in this life, and that divers wayes. The firſt concerneth the body, either in the proviſion with trouble for the things of this life, Gen.3.17. or a proneneſſe to diſeaſes, Matth. 9.2. Sonne, be of good comfort, thy ſins be forgiven thee. Ioh. 5.14. Behold, thou art made whole, ſin no more, leſt a worſe thing fall upon thee. Deut.28.21,22. The Lord ſhall make the peſtilence cleave unto thee, untill he hath conſumed thee from the land, &c. Or ſhame of nakedneſſe. *Gen.*3.7. Or in womens paines in child birth, *Gen.*3.16. Vnto the woman he ſaid, I will greatly increaſe thy ſorrowes, and conceptions: in ſorrow ſhalt thou bring forth children.

II. The ſoule is puniſhed with trembling of conſcience, care, trouble, hardneſſe of heare, and madneſſe, Deu. 28.28. The Lord ſhall ſmite thee with madneſſe, and with blindneſſe, and with aſtonying of heart.

III. The whole man is puniſhed. 1. with fearefull ſubjection to the regiment of Satan. Coloſſ.1.13 Which freed us from the power of darkeneſſe, and tranſlated us into the kingdome of his beloved Sonne, Hebrewes 2.14. He alſo himſelfe tooke part with them, that he might deſtroy through death, him that had power of death, that is the devill. 2. A ſeparation from the fellowſhip of God, and trembling at his preſence, Eph.4.18 Having their cogitation darkened, and being ſtrangers from the life of God. Gen.3.10. I heard thy voyce in the garden, and was afraid, becauſe I was naked, therefore I hid my ſelfe.

IV. Vpon a mans goods, divers calamities and dammages, Deut 28.29. Thou ſhalt ever be oppreſſed with wrong, and be polled, and no man ſhall ſuccour thee, &c. to the end of the chapter. To this place may be referred diſtinction of Lordſhips: and of this commeth a care to inlarge them, and bargaining with all manner of civill ſervitudes.

V. The loſſe of that lordly authority, which man had over all creatures; alſo their vanity, which is not onely a weakning, but alſo a corrupting of that excellency of the vertues and powers which God at the firſt put into them. Rom.8.20,21. The creature is ſubject to vanity, not of it owne will, but by reaſon of him, which hath ſubdued it under hope, &c.

The actuall ſinne of the minde is the evill thought or intent thereof, contrary to Gods law. Examples of evill thoughts. God (the only knower of the heart) hath in divers places ſet downe in his word. I. That there is no God, Pſal. 10. 4. The wicked is ſo proud, that he ſeeketh not for God, he thinketh alwaies there is no God, Pſal. 14. 1. The foole ſaith in his heart, there is no God. II. That there is neither providence nor preſence of God in this world, Pſal. 10. 11. He ſaith in his heart, God hath forgotten: hee hideth away his face and will never ſee, verſe 13. Wherfore doth the wicked contemne God? he ſaith in his heart, thou wilt not regard. III. It imagineth ſafegard to it ſelfe from all perils, Pſal. 10. 6. He ſaith in his heart, I ſhall never be mooved nor be in danger. Rev. 18 7. Shee ſaith in her heart, I ſit being a Queene, and am no widow, and ſhall ſee no mourning. IV. It eſteemeth it ſelfe more excellent then other. Apoc. 18 7. I ſit as a Queene. Luke 18. 11. The Phariſe ſtanding thus prayed to himſelfe, I thanke thee, O God, that I am not as other men, extortioners, unjuſt, adulterers, nor yet as this Publican. v. 12. I faſt twice in the weeke, and give tithe of all my poſſeſſions. V. That the Goſpel of Gods kingdome is meere fooliſhnes. 1 Cor. 2. 14 The naturall man perceiveth not the things of the ſpirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſſe unto him. VI. To thinke uncharitably and maliciouſly of ſuch as ſerve God ſincerely. Matt. 12. 24. When the Phariſes heard that, they ſaid, he caſteth not out divels, but by the prince of divels. Pſal. 74. 8. They ſaid in their hearts, Let us deſtroy them altogether. VII. To thinke the day of death farre off. Eſa. 28. 15. Ye have ſaid, we have made a covenant with death, and with hell we are at agreement, though a ſcourge run over us, and paſſe through, it ſhall not come at us. VIII. That the paines of hell may be eſchewed: in the place before mentioned, they ſay, With hell have we made agreement. IX. That God will deferre his both particular and laſt generall comming to judgement. Luk. 12. 19. I will ſay unto my ſoule, Soule thou haſt much goods laid up for many yeeres. and v. 45. If that ſervant ſay in his heart, My maſter will deferre his comming, &c.

Many carnall men pretend their good meaning: but when God openeth their eyes, they ſhall ſee theſe rebellious thoughts riſing in their minds, as ſparkles out of a chimney.

The actuall ſinne of both will and affection, is every wicked motion, inclination, and deſire. Gal. 5. 17. The fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit.

An actuall outward ſin, is that, to the committing whereof, the members of the body, doe, together with the faculties of the ſoule, concurre. Such ſins as theſe are infinite. Pſal. 40 12. Innumerable troubles have compaſſed me, my ſinnes have taken ſuch hold on me, that I am not able to looke up: yea, they are more in number then the haires of my head.

Actuall ſinne, is of omiſſion or commiſſion. Againe, both theſe are in words or deeds.

In the ſinne of commiſſion, obſerve theſe two points: the degrees in committing a ſinne, and the difference of ſinnes committed.

The degrees are in number foure. Iam. 1. 14, 15. Every man is tempted, when he is drawne away by his own concupiſcence, & is enticed: then when luſt hath conceived, it bringeth forth ſinne; and ſin when it is finiſhed, bringeth forth death.

The firſt degree, is temptation, whereby man is allured to ſinne. This doth Satan by offering to the mind that which is evill. Iob. 13. 2. The divell had now put into the heart of Judas Iſcariot, Simons ſon to betray him. Acts 5. 3. Peter ſaid to Ananias, Why hath Satan filled thine heart that thou ſhouldeſt lye, &c. 1. Chron. 21. 1. And Satan ſtood up againſt Iſrael, and provoked David to number Iſrael. This is alſo effected upon occaſion of ſome externall object, which the ſenſes perceive. Iob 31. 1. I have made a covenant with mine eyes, why then ſhould I looke upon a maid?

Tentation hath two parts: abſtraction, and ineſcation.

Abſtraction, is the firſt cogitation of committing ſin, whereby the mind is withdrawne from Gods Service, to the which it ſhould be alwaies ready preſt. Luk. 10. 27. Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, and all thy ſoule, and with all thy thought.

Ineſcation, is that whereby an evill thought conceived, and for a time retained in the mind by delighting, the will and affections doth as it were, lay a baite for them to draw them to conſent.

The ſecond degree is conception, which is nothing elſe but a conſent and reſolution to commit ſinne. Pſal. 7. 14. He ſhall travell with wickedneſſe, he hath conceived miſchiefe, but he ſhall bring forth a lye.

The third degree, is the birth of ſinne, namely, the committing of ſinne, by the aſſiſtance both of the faculties of the ſoule, and the powers of the body.

The fourth degree, is perfection, when ſin being by cuſtome perfect, and as it were ripe, the ſinner reapeth death, that is, damnation.

This appeareth in the example of Pharaoh: wherefore cuſtome in any ſinne is fearefull.

Sinne actually committed, hath five differences.

Firſt, to conſent with an offendour, and not actually to commit ſinne. Eph. 5. 11. Have no fellowſhip with the unfruitfull works of darkneſſe, but reproove them rather. This is done three manner of waies.

I. When a man in judgement ſomewhat alloweth the ſinne of another. Numb. 20. 10. Moſes and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rocke, and Moſes ſaid unto them, Heare now ye rebels: ſhall we bring you water out of the rocke? verſe 12. The Lord ſpake to Moſes and Aaron, becauſe ye beleeved me not, to ſanctifie me in the preſence of the children of Iſrael, therefore ye ſhall not bring the congregation

into the land which I have given them.

II. When the heart approoveth in affection and consent. Hither may wee referre both the Ministers and the Magistrates concealing and winking at offences, 1 Sam. 2.23. Eli said, Why doe yee such things? for of all this people I heare evill of you. Doe no more my sons, &c. Now that Elies will agreed with his sonnes sinnes, it is manifest, ver.29. Thou honourest thy children above me.

III. In deed; by counsell, presence, inticement. Rom. 1.31. They do not only doe the same, but also favour them that doe them. Mar. 6.25, 26. Shee said unto her mother, what shall I aske? and she said, Iohn Baptists head, &c. Act. 22.20. When the blood of thy Martyr Steven was shed, I also stood by, and consented unto his death, and kept the clothes of them that slue him.

The second difference, is to sinne ignorantly, as when a man doth not expressly and distinctly know whether that which hee doth, be a sinne or not; or if he know it, doe not acknowledge and marke it. 1 Tim. 1.13. I was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and an oppressor: but I was received to mercy, for I did it ignorantly through unbeliefe. Numb. 35.22,23,24. If he punished him unadvisedly, and not of hatred, or cast upon him any thing without laying of wait or any stone (whereby he might be slaine) and saw him not, or caused it to fall upon him, and he dye, and was not his enemy, neither sought him any harme: then the congregation shall judge between the slayer, and the avenger of blood, according to these lawes, 1 Cor. 4.4. I know nothing by my selfe, yet am I not thereby justified. Psal. 19.13. Cleanse me from my secret sinnes.

The third difference is to sinne upon knowledge, but yet of infirmity, as when a man fearing some imminent danger, or amazed at the horrour of death, doth against his knowledge deny that truth, which otherwise hee would acknowledge and embrace. Such was Peters fall, arising from the over-much rashnesse of the minde, mingled with some feare.

Thus men offend, when the flesh, and inordinate desires so over-rule the will and every good endeavour, that they provoke man to that, which he from his heart detesteth. Rom. 7.19. I doe not the good thing which I would, but the evill which I would not, that doe I.

The fourth difference, is presumptuous sinning upon knowledge. Psal. 19.13. Keepe thy servant from presumptuous sinnes: let them not raigne over mee. Hitherto belongeth. I. every sinne committed with an high hand, that is, in some contempt of God. Numb. 15.30. The person that doth presumptuously, &c. shall be cut off from among st his people; because he hath despised the Word of the Lord, and hath broken his commandement. II. Presumption of Gods mercy in doing evill. Eccles. 8.11. Because sentence against an evill worke is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the children of men is fully set in them to doe evill. Rom 2.4. Despisest thou the riches of his bountifulnesse, &c. not knowing that the bountifulnesse of God leadeth thee to repentance.

The fifth difference, is to sinne upon knowledge and set malice against God, and to this is the sinne against the holy Ghost referred.

Chap. XIV.

Of the common punishment of sinne.

HItherto wee have intreated of sinne, wherewith all mankind is infected: in the next place succeedeth the punishment of sinne, which is threefold. The first is in this life, and that divers wayes. The first concerneth the body, either in the provision with trouble for the things of this life, Gen. 3.17. or a proneneſse to diseases, Matth. 9.2. Sonne, be of good comfort, thy sins be forgiven thee. Ioh. 5.14. Behold, thou art made whole, sin no more, lest a worse thing fall upon thee. Deut. 28.21,22. The Lord shall make the pestilence cleave unto thee, until he hath consumed thee from the land, &c. Or shame of nakednesse. Gen. 3.7. Or in womens paines in child birth, Gen. 3.16. Vnto the woman he said, I will greatly increase thy sorrowes, and conceptions: in sorrow shalt thou bring forth children.

II. The soule is punished with trembling of conscience, care, trouble, hardnesse of heart, and madnesse, Deu. 28.28. The Lord shall smite thee with madnesse, and with blindnesse, and with astonying of heart.

III. The whole man is punished. 1. with fearefull subjection to the regiment of Satan. Coloss. 1.13 Which freed us from the power of darkenesse, and translated us into the kingdome of his beloved Sonne, Hebrewes 2.14. He also himselfe tooke part with them, that he might destroy through death, him that had power of death, that is the devill. 2. A separation from the fellowship of God, and trembling at his presence, Eph. 4.18 Having their cogitation darkened, and being strangers from the life of God. Gen. 3.10. I heard thy voyce in the garden, and was afraid, because I was naked, therefore I hid my selfe.

IV. Vpon a mans goods, divers calamities and dammages, Deut 28.29. Thou shalt ever be oppressed with wrong, and be polled, and no man shall succour thee, &c. to the end of the chapter. To this place may be referred distinction of Lordships: and of this commeth a care to inlarge them, and bargaining with all manner of civill servitudes.

V. The losse of that lordly authority, which man had over all creatures; also their vanity, which is not onely a weakning, but also a corrupting of that excellency of the vertues and powers which God at the first put into them. Rom. 8.20,21. The creature is subject to vanity, not of it owne will, but by reason of him, which hath subdued it under hope, &c.

VI. In a mans name, infamie and ignominie ſometimes after his death. Ier. 24. 6.

The ſecond, is at the laſt gaſpe, namely, death, or a change like unto death. Rom. 6. 23. The wages of ſinne is death.

The third is, after this life, even eternall deſtruction from Gods preſence, and his exceeding glory. 2. Theſſ. 1. 9. Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting perdition from the preſence of God, and the glory of his power.

CHAP. XV.

Of Election, and of Ieſus Chriſt the foundation thereof.

PRedeſtination hath two parts: Election and Reprobation. 1. Theſſ. 5. 9. God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtaine ſalvation by the meanes of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Election, is Gods decree, whereby on his owne free-will, he hath ordained certaine men to ſalvation, to the praiſe of the glory of his grace. Eph. 1. 4, 5, 6. He hath choſen us in him, before the foundation of the world, according to the good pleaſure of his will, to the praiſe of the glory of his grace.

This decree is that booke of life, wherein are written the names of the Elect. Revel. 20. 12. Another booke was opened, which is the booke of life, and the dead were judged of thoſe things, that were written in the bookes according to their workes. 2. Tim. 2. 10. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, and hath this ſeale, the Lord knoweth who are his.

The execution of this decree, is an action, by which God, even as hee purpoſed with himſelfe, worketh all thoſe things effectually, which hee decreed for the ſalvation of the Elect. For they whom God elected to this end, that they ſhould inherite eternall life, were alſo elected to thoſe ſubordinate meanes, whereby, as by ſteps, they might attaine this end: and without which, it were impoſſible to obtaine it. Rom. 8. 29, 30. Thoſe which hee knew before, he alſo predeſtinated to be made like to the image of his Son, that he might be the firſt borne amongſt many brethren: Moreover, whom he predeſtinated, them he called, whom he called, them he juſtified, and whom he juſtified, them alſo he glorified.

There appertaine three things to the execution of this decree. Firſt, the foundation. Secondly, the meanes. Thirdly, the degrees.

The foundation is Chriſt Ieſus, called of his Father from all eternitie, to performe the office of the Mediatour, that in him all thoſe which ſhould bee ſaved, might bee choſen. Heb. 5. 5. Chriſt tooke not to himſelfe this honour, to bee made the high Prieſt, but hee that ſaid unto him, Thou art my Sonne, this day begate I thee, gave it him, &c. Eſa. 42. 1. Behold my ſervant: I have put my ſpirit upon him, hee ſhall bring forth judgement to the Gentiles.

A Eph. 1. 4. Hee hath choſen us in him, meaning Chriſt.

Queſtion. How can Chriſt be ſubordinate unto Gods election, ſeeing he together with the Father decreed all things?

Anſw. Chriſt as he is a Mediator, is not ſubordinate to the very decree it ſelfe of election but to the execution thereof only. 1. Pet. 1. 20. Chriſt was ordained before the foundation of the world. Auguſtine in his booke of the Predeſtination of the Saints, chap. 15. Chriſt was predeſtinate that he might be our head.

In Chriſt, we muſt eſpecially obſerve two things, his Incarnation, and his Office.

To the working of his Incarnation, concurre three things: firſt, both his Natures: ſecondly, their Vnion: thirdly, their diſtinction. B

Chriſts firſt Nature, is the Godhead, in as much as it belongeth to the Sonne, whereby hee is God. Philippians 2. 6. Who being in the forme of God, thought it no robbery to bee equall with God. Ioh. 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and that Word was God.

It was requiſit for the Mediator to be God; 1. That he might the better ſuſtaine that great miſery, wherewith mankinde was overwhelmed; the greatneſſe whereof, theſe foure things declare: I. The grievouſneſſe of ſinne, wherewith Gods Majeſty was infinitely offended. C II. Gods infinite anger againſt this ſin. III. The fearefull power of death. IV. The divels tyranny, who is prince of this world. 2. That hee might make his humane nature both of plentifull merit, and alſo of ſufficient efficacy, for the worke of mans redemption. 3. That he might inſtill into all the elect eternall life, and holineſſe. Eſa. 43. 12. I am the Lord and there is none beſides me a Saviour, I have declared, and I have ſaved, and I have ſhewed, when there was no ſtrange god among you; therefore yee are my witneſſes, ſaith the Lord, that I am God.

I ſay, the Godhead, as it is the Godhead of the Sonne, is Chriſts divine Nature: not as it is the Godhead of the Father, or of the holy Ghoſt: for it is the office of the Son, to have D the adminiſtration of every outward action of the Trinitie, from the Father, by the holy Ghoſt. 1. Cor. 8. 6. And hee being by nature the Sonne of the Father, beſtoweth this priviledge on thoſe that beleeve, that they are the ſonnes of God by adoption. Ioh. 1. 12. As many as received him, to them he gave power to be the ſonnes of God.

If either the Father, or the holy Ghoſt ſhould have bin incarnate, the title of Sonne ſhould have bin given to one of them, who was not the Sonne by eternall generation: and ſo there ſhould be more ſonnes then one.

Chriſts other nature, is his humanity, whereby hee, the Mediatour, is very man. 1 Tim. 2. 5. One God, and one Mediatour betweene God and man, the man Chriſt Ieſus.

It was neceſſarie that Chriſt ſhould bee man. First, that God might bee pacified in that nature, whereby hee was offended. Secondly, that he might undergoe punishment due to sin, the which the Godhead could not, being voide and free from all passion.

Furthermore, Christ, as hee is man, is like unto us in all things, sinne onely excepted. Heb. 2. 17. In all things it became him to bee made like unto his brethren. 2. Cor. 13. 4.

Christ therefore is a perfect man, consisting of an essentiall and true soule and body, whereunto are joyned such faculties and properties, as are essentiall unto both. In his soule, is understanding, memorie, will, and such like: in his bodie, length, breadth, and thickneſse: yea, it is comprehended in one onely place, visible, subject to feeling, neither is there any thing wanting in him which may either adorne or make for the beeing of mans nature.

Againe, Christ in his humanity, was subject to the infirmities of mans nature, which are these: I. To bee temped, Matth. 4. 1. Iesus was carried by the spirit into the desart, to bee tempted of the Devill. II. To feare: Heb. 5. 7. Who in daies of his flesh, did offer up prayers and supplications with strong crying and teares, unto him that was able to save him from death, and was also heard in that which hee feared. III. To bee angrie. Marke 3. 5. Then hee looked round about on them angerly, mourning also for the hardnesse of their hearts, and said unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. IV. Forgetfulnesse of his office imposed upon him, by reason of the agonie astonishing his senses. Matth. 26. 39. He went a little further, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O Father, if it be possible, let this cuppe passe from mee: nevertheleſſe, not as I will, but as thou wilt.

Wee must hold these things concerning Christs infirmities: I. They were such qualities, as did onely affect his humaine nature, and not at all constitute the same: and therefore might be left of Christ. II. They were such as were common to all men: as to thirst, to bee wearie, and subject to die: and not personall, as are Agues, consumptions, the Leprosie, Blindnesse, &c. III. He was subject to these infirmities, not by necessity of his humane nature, but by his free-will and pleasure, pitying mankind. Therefore in him such infirmities were not the punishment of his owne sinne, as they are in us; but rather part of that his humiliation which he did willingly undergoe for our sakes.

CHAP. XVI.

Of the Vnion of the two natures in Christ.

NOw followeth the Vnion of the two natures in Christ, which especially concerneth his Mediation; for by this union in commeth to passe, that his humanity did suffer death upon the crosse in such sort, as hee could neither bee overcome, nor perpetually overwhelmed by it. Three things belong to this uniting of natures.

I. Conception, by which his humane nature was by the wonderfull power and operation of God, both immediatly, that is, without mans helpe, and miraculously framed of the substance of the Virgin Mary. Luk. 1. 35. The holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the most high shall overshadow thee.

The holy Ghost cannot bee said to bee the Father of Christ, because hee did minister no matter to the making of the humanitie, but did onely fashion and frame it of the substance of the Virgin Marie.

II. Sanctification, whereby the same humane nature was purified, that is, altogether severed by the power of the holy Ghost, from the least staine of sinne, to the end that it might bee holy, and bee made fit to die for others. Luk. 1. 35. That holy thing which shall be borne of thee shall be called the Sonne of God. 1. Pet. 3. 18. Christ hath once suffered for sinnes, the just for the unjust. 1. Pet. 2. 22. Who did not sinne, neither was there guile found in his mouth.

III. Assumption, whereby the Word, that is, the second person in Trinity, tooke upon flesh, him] & the seede of Abraham, namely, that his humaine Nature: to the end, that it being destitute of a proper and personall subsistence, might in the person of the Word obtaine it, subsisting, and as it were, being supported of the word for ever. Ioh. 1. 14. That Word was made flesh. Heb. 2. 16. He tooke not upon him the nature of Angels, but the seede of Abraham.

In the assumption, wee have three things to consider: I. The difference of the two natures in Christ. For the divine nature, as it is limited to the person of the Sonne, is perfect and actually subsisting in it selfe: the humane nature, which consisteth in whole of body and soule, doth neither subsist in it selfe, nor by it selfe: II. The manner of Vnion. The person of the Sonne did by assuming the humane nature, create it, and by creating, assume it, communicating his subsistence unto it: the like example of union is no where to be found. III. The product of the Vnion. Whole Christ, God and man, was not made a new person of the two natures, as of parts compounding a new thing; but remained still the same person. Now whereas the auncient Fathers termed Christ a compound person, wee must understand them not properly, but by proportion. For as the parts are united in the whole, so these two natures doe concurre together in one person, which is the Sonne of God.

By this wee may see that Christ is one onely Sonne of God, not two: yet in two respects hee is the Sonne of God. As he is the eternall Word, he is by nature the Sonne of the Father: As he is man, the same sonne also, yet not by nature, or by adoption, but onely by personall union; Luk. 1.35. Math. 3. 17. This is my beloved Sonne. &c.

The Phrase in Scripture agreeing to this Vnion, is the communion of properties, which is a true and reall predication: even as it ariseth of the true and reall union of natures; concerning which, observe two rules.

I. Of those things, which are spoken or attributed to Christ, some are onely understood of his divine nature. As that, Ioh. 8.58. Before Abraham was, I am. And that, Colos. 1.15. Who is the image of the invisible God, the first borne of every creature. Some againe agree onely to his humanitie, as borne, suffered, dead, buried, &c. Luke 2.52. And Iesus increased in Wisedome, and stature, and in favour with God and man. Lastly, other things are understood, onely of both natures united together. As Matth. 17.5. This is my beloved Sonne, in whom onely I am well pleased, heare him. Ephe. 1.22. He hath made subject all things under his feete, and hath appointed him over all things to bee the head to the Church.

II. Some things are spoken of Christ, as he is God, which must bee interpreted according to his humane nature. Act. 20.28. To feede the Church of God, that is, Christ, which he (according to his manhood) hath purchased with his owne blood. 1.Cor. 2.8. If they had knowne this, they would never have crucified the Lord of glorie. Contrarily, some things are mentioned of Christ, as hee is man, which onely are understood of his divine nature. Ioh 3.13. No man ascended up to heaven, but hee that hath descended from heaven, the Sonne of man which is in heaven. This is spoken of his manhood, whereas we must understand, that onely his Deitie came downe from heaven. Ioh. 6.62. What if ye should see the Sonne of man, (viz. Christs humane nature) ascend up, where he (viz. his Deitie) was before.

Lastly, by reason of this Vnion, Christ, as he is man, is exalted above every name; yea, he is adored, and hath such a great (though not infinite) measure of gifts, as farre surpasse the gifts of all Saints and Angels. Eph. 1.21. And set him at his right hand in heavenly places, farre above all principalitie, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not in this world onely, but in that also that is to come. Heb. 1.9. Where he bringeth his first begotten Son into the world, he saith, And let all the Angels of God worship him. Col. 2.3. In whom all the treasures of wisedome and knowledge are hidden. Phil. 2.9,10. Therefore God exalted him on high, and gave him a name above all names, that at the name of Iesus every knee should bowe (namely, worship, and be subject to him) both of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth.

CHAP. XVII.

Of the destinction of both natures.

THe distinction of both natures, is that, whereby they, with their properties and operations, remaine distinct without composition, mingling, or conversion, Ioh. 10.17,18. Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay downe my life, that I may take it againe. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it downe of my selfe, I have power to lay it downe, and have power take it againe. Iohn 13.31,32. Now is the Sonne of man glorified, and God is glorified in him. If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorifie him in himselfe. Here wee may obserue, that there is one will in Christ as God; another, as man, Math. 26.39. Not as I will, but as thou wilt. This also approoueth the sentence of the Chalcedon Creede. We confesse that one, and the same Christ Iesus, both Sonne, Lord, and only begotten, is knowne and preached to bee in two natures without confusion, mutation, distinction, or separation.

Lastly, hereby it is manifest, that Christ, when hee became that which hee was not (namely man) continued still that which hee was (very God.)

CHAP. XVIII.

Of Christs Nativitie and Office.

THus much concerning Christs incarnation: the cleere declaration thereof was by his nativitie.

The nativitie of Christ, is that whereby Marie a Virgin, did after the course of nature, and the custome of women, bring forth Christ the Word of the Father, and the Sonne of David: so that those are much deceived, which are of opinion that Christ, after a miraculous manner, came into the world, the wombe of the Virgin being shut, Luke 2.23. Every man-childe which first openeth the wombe shalbe called holy to the Lord. The which place of Scripture is applied to Mary & our Saviour Christ. Hence it is, that the Virgin Mary is said (θεοτόκος) to bring foorth God, albeit shee is not any way mother of the Godhead. For Christ as he is God, is without mother, and as man, without Father.

It is covenient to be thought, that Mary continued a Virgin untill her dying day, albeit wee make not this opinion any article of our beliefe. I. Christ being now to depart the world, committed his mother to the tuition and custodie of his Disciple Iohn, which it is like hee would not have done, if shee had any children, by which, as custome was, shee might have beene provided for. Iohn 19.26. II. It is likely that she who was with childe by the holy Ghost, would not after know any man. III. It is agreed of by the Christ being now borne, was circumcised the eight day, that he might fullfill all the righteousnesse of the law: and being thirty yeeres of age, hee was baptized, that hee being publikely and solemnely invested into the office of his mediatorship, might take upon him the guilt of our sinnes. He was both circumcised and baptized, that we might learne: I. That the whole efficacie of the Sacraments, depend alone and wholly upon him. II. That he was Mediatour of mankinde, both before and under the law, as also under grace. III. That hee is the knot and bond of both covenants.

Church

Church in all ages.

His office followeth, to the perfect accomplishing whereof, he was annoynted of his Father, that is, he was sufficiently furnished with both gifts and authoritie. Heb. 1. 19. Therefore God, even thy God hath annointed thee with the oyle of gladnesse above thy fellowes. Esay. 61. 1. The spirit of the Lord was upon me, therefore hee annointed mee. Iohn 3. 34. God giveth him not the spirit by measure.

If any man inforce this as a reason, that Christ could not performe the office of a Mediatour, being not the meane or middle betwixt God and man, but the partie offended, and so one of the extreames: wee must know that Christ is two waies said to bee the middle or meane. I. Betwixt God and all men: for being both God and man, hee doth participate with both extreames. II. Betwixt God and the faithfull onely: First, according to his humanity, whereby hee received the spirit without measure. Secondly, according to his divine nature, namely, as hee is the Word. Now the Word is middle, betwixt the Father, and the faithfull: 1. In regard of order because the Word was begotten of the Father, and by it wee have accesse unto the Father. This subordination, which is of the Sonne to the Father, is not in the divine essence, severally and distinctly considered, but in the relation or manner of having the essence. And those things which are subordinate after this manner, cannot be uncquall, if they have one and the same singular essence. II. In regard of his office, the which being imposed on him, by his Father, hee did willingly undergoe, and of his owne accord.

Christ doth exercise this office according to both natures vnited in one person, and according to each nature distinct one from the other For in reconciling God and man together, the flesh performeth some things distinctly, and the Word other things distinctly: Againe, some other things are done not by the Word or flesh alone, but by both together.

This office is so appropriate to Christ, that neither in whole or in part, can it bee translated to any other. Heb. 7. 24. This man because he endureth for ever, hath an everlasting Priesthood, or a Priesthood that cannot passe from one man to another.

A Therefore Christ, as he is God, hath under him Emperours, Kings, Princes, to bee his Vicegerents; who therefore are called Gods. Psal. 82. 1. But as hee is Mediatour, that is, a Priest, a Prophet, and a King of the Church of God, he hath no Vicegerent, Vicar, or Lieutenant, who in his Kingly, Priestly, or Prophetical office, in two of these, or in one, can bee in his stead.

Christs office is threefold, Priestly, Prophetical, Regall, Psal. 110. 1, 2, 3, 4. Esay 42. 1.

Christs Priesthood, is an office of his, wherin he performed all those things to God, whereby is obtained eternall life. Heb. 5. 9, 10. And being consecrate, was made the authour of eternall salvation, unto all them that obey him: and is called of God an high Priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec. Chap. 7. 24, 25. This man because he endureth for ever, hath an everlasting Priesthood; wherefore he is able also perfectly to save all them that come unto God by him.

B His Priest-hood consisteth of two parts; Satisfaction, and Intercession.

Satisfaction is that, whereby Christ is a full propitiation to his Father for the Elect. Iob 33. 23. If there be a messenger with him, or an interpreter, one of a thousand, to declare unto man his righteousnesse, then will hee have mercy upon him, and will say, Deliver him that hee goe not downe into the pit, for I have found a reconciliation. Rom. 3. 24. And are justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Iesus. vers. 25. Whom God hath set forth to bee a reconciliation through faith in his blood. 1. Iohn 2. 2. He is a propitiation for our sinnes.

C Christ satisfied Gods anger for mans offence; according to his humanity, by performing perfect obedience to the will of God; according to his Deitie, by ministring to the same perfect obedience, especiall dignity, to wit, merit before God, and efficacy. Iohn 17. 19 For their sakes sanctifie I my selfe, that they also may be sanctified though the truth. Act. 20. 28. To feede the flocke of God, which hee hath purchased with his owne blood. 2. Cor. 5. 19. God was in Christ, and reconciled the world to himselfe, not imputing their sinnes unto them.

D Satisfaction comprehendeth his passion, and fulfilling the Law.

His passion, is the first part of satisfaction, by which, hee having undergone the punishment of sinne, satisfied Gods justice, and appeased his anger for the sinnes of the faithfull. His passion was on this manner.

(a) Somewhat before his death, partly feare arising from the sense of Gods wrath imminent upon him, partly griefe possessing, as it were, each part of him, so disturbed his sacred minde, (b) that inwardly for a while it stroke into him a strange kinde of astonishment or rather oblivion of his duty imposed upon him: and outwardly (c) made him pray unto his Father (if hee would) to remoove that cup from him, the which hee did expresse with no small cry, many teares, and a bloody sweat, (d) trick-

ling from his body unto the ground. But when he came againe unto himſelfe, (e) hee freely yeelded himſelfe unto his Father to ſatisfie upon the croſſe for the tranſgreſſion of man. After this his agonie was overpaſſed, (f) by Iudas his treachery Chriſt is apprehended, and (g) firſt he is brought to Adams, after to Caiphas, where Peter denieth him: (h) from Caiphas he is led bound to Pilate, (i) Pilate poſteth him over to Herod, (k) hee tranſpoſteth him backe againe to Pilate, (l) who acknowledgeth his innocency, and yet condemneth him as an offendour. This innocent, thus condemned, is (m) pittifully ſcourged, crowned with thornes, ſcoffed, ſpitted at, ſpightfully adjudged to the death of the croſſe, (n) on which his hands and feet are faſtened with nailes. Here ſtayed not his paſſions, but after all theſe (o) he became as accurſed to God the Father, that is, God powred upon him, being thus innocent, ſuch a ſea of his wrath, as was equivalent to the ſinnes of the whole world. He now being under this curſe, through the ſenſe and feeling of this ſtrange terrour, (p) complaineth to his Father that he is forſaken: who notwithſtanding, encountring then with Satan and his angels, did utterly vanquiſh (q) and overcome them. When this was ended, his heart (r) was pierced with a ſpeare, till the blood guſhed out from his ſides, and hee gave up (s) the ghoſt: and (t) commended his ſpirit to his Fathers protection, the which immediately went into Paradiſe. His body, (u) whereof not one bone was broken, was buried, and three dayes was (x) ignominiouſly captivated of death. (a) Marke 4.32. Mat. 26.38. (b) Iohn 12.27. Marke 14.35. In this deſcription of Chriſts paſſion, wee may note five circumſtances eſpecially.

I. His Agony, namely, a vehement anguiſh, ariſing upon the conflict of two contrary deſires in him: The firſt was to bee obedient to his Father. The ſecond to avoid the horror of death. Luk. 22.44. Being in an agonie, he prayed more earneſtly, and his ſweat was like drops of blood, trickling downe to the ground. Heb. 5.7. In the dayes of his fleſh did offer up prayers and ſupplications, with ſtrong crying and teares unto him, that was able to ſave him from death, and was alſo heard in that which he feared.

II. His ſacrifice, which is an action of Chriſts offering himſelfe to God the Father, as a ranſome for the ſinnes of the elect. Heb. 9.26. Now in the end of the world hath he appeared once to put away ſinne, by the ſacrifice of himſelfe.

A In this ſacrifice the oblation was Chriſt, as he was man. Heb. 10.10. By the which will wee are ſanctified, even by the offering of Ieſus Chriſt once made.

The Altar alſo was Chriſt, as he was God. Heb. 13.10. We have an Altar, whereof they have no authority to eate which ſerve in the Tabernacle. Heb. 9.14. How much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, which through the eternall ſpirit offered himſelfe without ſpot to God, purge your conſcience from dead workes to ſerve the living God? Hence it is, that Chriſt is ſaid to ſanctifie himſelfe, as he is man, Ioh. 17.19. For their ſakes, ſanctifie I my ſelfe. As the altar, the gift; and the temple, the gold. Matth. 23.

Chriſt is the Prieſt, as hee is God and man. Heb. 5.6. Thou art a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedec. 1. Tim. 2.5,6. One Mediatour betweene God and Man, the man Chriſt Ieſus, who gave himſelfe a ranſome for all men to be a teſtimonie in due time.

III. God the Fathers acceptation of that his ſacrifice, in which he was well pleaſed. For, had it beene that God had not allowed of it, Chriſts ſuffering had beene in vaine, Matth. 3.17. This is my beloved Sonne, in whom I am well pleaſed. Eph. 5.2 Even as Chriſt loved us, and gave himſelfe for us, to be an offering and a ſacrifice of a ſweete ſmelling ſavour to God.

IV. Imputation of mans ſinne to Chriſt,
C whereby his Father accounted him as a tranſgreſſour, having tranſlated the burden of mans ſinnes to his ſhoulders. Eſa. 53.4. Hee hath borne our infirmities, and carried our ſorrowes: yet wee did judge him as plagued and ſmitten of God, and humbled: but hee was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was broken for our iniquities, &c. and ver. 12. He was counted with the tranſgreſſours, and he bare the ſinnes of many. 2. Cor. 5.21. He hath made him to be ſinne for us, which knew no ſinne, that we ſhould be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him.

V. His wonderfull humiliation conſiſting of two parts. I. In that hee made himſelfe of D ſmall or no reputation in reſpect of his Deity, Phil. 2.7,8. He made himſelfe, of no reputation, &c. hee humbled himſelfe, and became obedient unto the death, even the death of the croſſe.

Wee may not thinke, that this debaſing of Chriſt came, becauſe his divine nature was either waſted or weakened, but becauſe his Deitie did, as it were, lay aſide, and conceale his power and majeſtie for a ſeaſon. And as Irenæus ſaith, The Word reſted, that the humane nature might be crucified and dead.

II. In that hee became execrable, which is by the Law accurſed for us. Gal. 3.10. Curſed is every one that remaineth not in all things written in the booke of the Law to doe them.

This accurſednеſſe, is either inward or outward.

Inward, is the ſenſe of Gods fearefull anger upon the croſſe. Revel. 19.15. Hee it is that treadeth the winepreſſe of the fiercenes and wrath of Almighty God. Esay 53,5. He is grieved for our transgressions, the chastisements of our peace was upon him, & with his stripes we were healed. This appeared by those drops of blood, which issued from him, by his crying to his Father upon the crosse, and by sending of an Angel to comfort him. Hence was it that hee so much feared death, which many Martyrs entertained most willingly.

of

His outward accursednes, standeth in three degrees. I. Death upon the crosse, which was not imaginary, but true, because blood and water issued from his heart. For seeing that water and blood gushed forth together, it is very like, the casket or coat which investeth the heart called Pericardion, was peirced. As Columbus observeth in his Anatomy, 7 booke. Ioh. 19. 34.

His death was necessary, that hee might confirme to us the Testament, or Covenant of grace promised for our sakes, Heb. 9. 15, 16. For this cause hee is the Mediator of the new Testament, that through death, &c. they which were called, might receive the promise of eternall inheritance: for where a Testament is, there must bee the death of him that made the Testament, &c. vers. 17.

II. Buriall, to ratifie the certaintie of his death.

III. Descending into hell, which we must not understand, that hee went locally into the place of the damned, but that for the time of his abode in the grave, he was under the ignominious dominion of death. Act. 2. 24. Whom God hath raised up, and loosed the sorrowes of death because it was impossible, that he should be holden of it. Eph. 4. 9. In that he ascended, what was it, but that hee also descended first into the lowest part of the earth?

It was necessarie that Christ should bee captivated of death, that hee might abolish the sting, that is the power thereof. 1. Cor. 15. 55. O death where is thy sting! O hell where is thy victorie!

Thus we have heard of Christs marveilous passion, whereby hee hath abolished both the first and second death, due unto us for our sinnes; the which (as we may further observe) is a perfect ransome for the sinnes of all and every one of the elect. 1. Tim. 2. 6. Who gave himselfe a ransome for all men. For it was more, that Christ the onely begotten Sonne of God, yea, God himselfe, for a small while should beare the curse of the law, than if the whole world should have suffered eternall punishment.

This also is worthy our Meditation, that then a man is well grounded in the doctrine of Christs passion, when his heart ceaseth to sinne, and is pricked with the griefe of those sinnes, whereby, as with speares hee pierced the side of the immaculate Lambe of God, 1. Ioh. 3. 6. Who so sinneth neither hath seene him nor known him. Zach. 12. 10. And they shall looke upon him, whom they have pierced, and they shall lament for him, as one lamenteth for his onely sonne, and be sorie for him, as one is sorie for his first borne.

After Christs passion, followeth the fulfilling of the law, by which hee satisfied Gods justice in fulfilling the whole Law, Rom. 8. 3, 4. God sent his owne Sonne, that the righteousnesse of the Law might be fulfilled by us.

He fulfilled the Law, partly by the holinesse of his humane nature, and partly by obedience in the workes of the Law. Rom. 8. 2. The Law of the spirit of life, which is in Christ Iesus hath freed me from the Law of sinne, and of death. Math. 3. 15. It becommeth us to fulfill all righteousnesse, &c. Iohn 17. 19.

Now succeedeth the second part of Christs Priesthood, namely, intercession, whereby Christ is an Advocate and intreater of God the Father for the faithfull. Rom. 8. 34. Christ is at the right hand of God, and maketh request for us. Christs intercession, is directed immediately to God the Father. 1. Ioh. 2. 1. If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, even Iesus Christ the just. Now as the Father is first of the Trinity in order, so if he bee appeased, the Son, and the holy Ghost are appeased, also. For there is one and the same agreemennt and will of all the persons of the Trinitie.

Christ maketh intercession according to both natures. First, according to his humanitie, partly by appearing before his Father in heaven, partly by desiring the salvation of the Elect. Heb. 9. 24. Christ is entred into very heaven to appeare now in the sight of God for us. And chap. 7. 25. He is able perfectly to save them that come to God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. Secondly according to his Deitie, partly by applying the merit of his death; partly by making request by his holy Spirit, in the hearts of the Elect, with sighes unspeakeable, 1. Pet. 1. 2. Elect according to the foreknowledge of the Father to the sanctification of the spirit. Rom. 8. 26. The spirit helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what to pray as wee ought, but the spirit it selfe maketh request for us with sighes which cannot be expressed.

We are not therefore to imagine or surmise that Christ prostrateth himselfe upon his knees before his Fathers throne for us, neither is it necessary, seeing his very presence before his Father, hath in it the force of an humble petition.

The end of Christs intercession is, that such as are justified by his mercies, should by this meanes continue in the state of Grace. Now Christs intercession preserveth the elect in covering their continuall slips, infirmities, and imperfect actions, by an especiall and continuall application of his merits; that by this meanes mans person may remaine just, & mans workes acceptable to God. 1. Ioh. 2. 2. He is a reconciliation for our sins, and not for ours onely, but for the sinnes of the whole world. 1. Pet. 2. 5. Yee as lively stones, be made a spirituall house & holy priest-hood, to offer up spirituall sacrifices;

acceptable to God by Ieſus Chriſt. Rev. 8.3,4. And another Angell came and ſtood before the Altar, having a golden cenſer, and much odours was given unto him, that he ſhould offer with the prayers of all Saints upon the golden altar, which is before the throne, and the ſmoake of the odours with the prayers of the Saints, went up before God out of the Angels hand.

Thus farre concerning Chriſts Prieſthood; now follow his Prophetical, and Regall offices.

His Prophetical office, is that, whereby hee immediately from his Father, revealeth his word and all the meanes of ſalvation compriſed in the ſame. Ioh. 1.18. The Sonne, which is in the boſome of his Father, he hath declared unto you. Ioh. 8.26. Thoſe things which I heare of my Father, I ſpeake to the world. Deut. 18.18. I will raiſe them up a Prophet, &c.

The word was firſt revealed, partly by viſions, by dreames, by ſpeech; partly by the inſtinct and motion of the holy Ghoſt. Heb. 1.1. At ſundry times, and in divers manners, God ſpake in old time to our fathers the Prophets: in theſe laſt dayes he hath ſpoken to us by his Son. 2 Pet. 1.21. Propheey came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God ſpake as they were mooved by the holy Ghoſt.

The like is done ordinarily onely by the preaching of the Word, where the holy Ghoſt doth inwardly illuminate the underſtanding. Luk. 24.45. Then opened he their underſtanding that they might underſtand the Scriptures. & 21. 15. I will give you a mouth and wiſedome, where againſt all your adverſaries ſhall not bee able to ſpeake, nor reſiſt. Act. 16.14. Whoſe heart the Lord opened, that ſhee attended to the things that Paul ſpake. For this cauſe, Chriſt is called the Doctor, Lawgiver, and Counſellour of his Church, Matth. 23.10. Be not called Doctors, for one is your Doctor, Ieſus Chriſt. Iam. 4.12. There is one Lawgiver which is able to ſave and to deſtroy. Eſa. 9.6. He ſhall call his name Counſellour, &c. Yea, he is the Apoſtle of our profeſſion. Heb. 3.1. The Angell of the covenant. Mal. 3.1. And the Mediator of the new covenant. Heb. 9.15. Therefore the Soveraigne authority of expounding the Scripture, onely belongs to Chriſt: and the Church hath onely the miniſtery of judgement and interpretation committed unto her.

Chriſts Regall office, is that; whereby he diſtributeth his gifts, and diſpoſeth all things for the benefit of the elect. Pſal. 2. & 110.1,2. The Lord ſaid unto my Lord, ſit thou on my right hand till I make thine enemies thy footſtoole.

The execution of Chriſts Regall office, comprehendeth his exaltation.

Chriſts exaltation is that, by which he, after his loweſt humiliation; was by little and little exalted to glory, and that in ſundry reſpects, according to both his natures.

The exaltation of his divine nature, is an apparant declaration of his divine properties in his humane nature, without the leaſt alteration thereof. Rom. 1.4. Declared mightily to be the ſonne of God, touching the ſpirit of ſanctification by the reſurrection from the dead. Act. 2. 36. God hath made him both Lord and Chriſt, whom ye have crucified.

The exaltation of his humanity, is the putting off from him his ſervile condition and all infirmities, and the putting on of ſuch habituall gifts; which, albeit they are created and finite, yet they have ſo great and ſo marveilous perfection, as poſſibly can befall any creature. The gifts of his minde, are wiſedome, knowledge, joy, and other unſpeakable vertues: of his body, immortality, ſtrength, agility, brightneſſe. Phil. 3.21. Who ſhall change our vile body, that it may bee faſhioned like unto his glorious body. Matth 17.2. He was tranſigured before them, and his face did ſhine as the Sun, and his cloathes were as white as the light. Heb. 1.9. God even thy God hath annointed thee with the oyle of gladneſſe above thy fellowes. Eph. 1. 20.22.

Chriſts body, although, it bee thus glorified, yet is it ſtill of a ſolide ſubſtance, compaſſed about, viſible, palpable, and ſhall perpetually remaine in ſome certaine place, Luk. 24. 39. Behold my hands, and my feete, it is even I, touch me, and ſee: a ſpirit hath no fleſh and bones, as ye ſee mee have.

There bee three degrees of Chriſts exaltation.

I. His reſurrection, wherein by his divine power he ſubdued death, and raiſed up himſelfe to eternall life, 2 Cor. 13.4. Though hee was crucified concerning his infirmity, yet liveth he through the power of God. Matth. 28.6. Hee is not here, for he is riſen, as he ſaid: Come, ſee the place where the Lord was laid.

The end of Chriſts reſurrection, was to ſhew that his ſanctification, by his paſſion and death, was fully abſolute. For one onely ſinne would have detained the Mediatour, under the dominion of death, though hee had fully ſatisfied for all the reſt. 1 Cor. 15.17. If Chriſt be not raiſed, your faith is in vaine: ye are yet in your ſinnes. Rom. 4.25. Who was delivered to death for our ſinnes, and is riſen againe for our juſtification.

II. His aſcenſion into heaven; which is a true, locall, and viſible tranſlation of Chriſts humane nature from earth into the higheſt heaven of the bleſſed, by the vertue and power of his Deity. Act. 1.9. When he had ſpoken theſe things, while they beheld, he was taken up: for a cloud tooke him out of their ſight: and while they looked ſtedfaſtly towards heaven, as he went, behold two men ſtood by them in white apparell, which alſo ſaid. Ye men of Galile, why ſtand ye gazing into heaven. This Ieſus which is taken up from you into heaven, ſhall come as ye have ſeene him goe into heaven. Eph. 4.10. Hee aſcended farre above all the heavens,

The end of Chriſts aſcenſion was, that hee might prepare a place for the faithfull, give them the holy Ghoſt, and there enjoy eternall glory. Ioh. 14.2. In my fathers house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you: I goe to prepare a place for you. cha. 16.7. If I goe not away, the Comforter will not come unto you: but if I depart, I will send him unto you.

III. His sitting at the right hand of God the Father, which metaphorically signifieth, that Christ hath in the highest heavens actually all glory, power, and dominion. Heb. 1.3. By himselfe he hath purged our sinnes, and sitteth at the right hand of the Majestie in the highest places. Psal. 110.1. The Lord said to my Lord, sit thou at my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy foot-stoole. 1.Cor. 15.25. Hee must raigne till hee hath put all his enemies under his feet. Acts 7.55. He being full of the holy Ghost, looked stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Iesus standing at the right hand of God, Matth. 20.21.

His regall office hath two parts: The first is, his regiment of the kingdome of heaven, part whereof is in heaven, part upon earth, namely, the congregation of the faithfull.

In the government of his Church, hee exerciseth two prerogatives royall. The first, is, to make lawes. Iam. 4.12. There is one Lawgiver which is able to save and to destroy. The second, is to ordaine his ministers. Ephes. 4.11. He gave some to be Apostles, others Prophets, others Evangelists, some Pastours and Teachers, &c. 1 Cor. 12.28. God hath ordained some in the Church; as first, Apostles; secondly, Prophets; thirdly, Teachers; then, them that doe miracles, after that, the gifts of healing, helpers, governors, diversitie of tongues.

Christs government of the Church, is either by collection of it out of the world, or conservation being collected. Ephes. 4.12. Psal. 110.

The second part of his Regall office, is the destruction of the kingdome of darknes. Col. 1.13. Who hath delivered us from the kingdome of darknes. Psal. 2.9. Thou shalt crush them with a scepter of iron, and breake them in pieces like a potters vessell. Luke 19.27. Those mine enemies, that would not that I should raigne over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

The kingdome of darkenesse, is the whole company of Christs enemies.

The prince of this kingdome, and of all the members thereof, is the divell. Ephes 2.2. Yee walked once according to the course of the world, and after the prince that ruleth in the aire, even the prince that now worketh in the children of disobedience. 2 Cor. 4.4. The God of this world hath blinded the eyes of the infidels. 2 Corinth. 6.15. What concord hath Christ with Belial, or what part hath the beleever with the infidell?

The members of this kingdome, and subjects to Satan, are his angels; and unbeleevers; among whom, the principall members are Atheists, who say in their heart, there is no God. Psalme 14.1. And Magitians, who bargaine with the divell, to accomplish their desires. 1 Samuel 28.7. Psalme 58.5. Idolaters, who either adore false gods, or the true God in an idol. 1 Cor. 10.7.20. Turks and Iewes are of this bunch; so are Heretickes, who are such as erre with pertinacy in the foundation of religion. 2 Tim. 2.18. Apostates, or revolters from faith in Christ Iesus. Hebr. 6.6. False Christs, who beare men in hand, they are true Christs. Matth. 24.26. There were many such about the time of our Saviour Christ his first comming, as Iosephus witnesseth, booke 20. of Iewish antiquities, the 11, 12. and 14. chapters. Lastly, that Antichrist, who as it is now apparent, can bee none other but the Pope of Rome. 2 Thess. 2.3. Let no man deceive you by any meanes, for that day shall not come, except there come a departing first, and that man of sinne be disclosed, even the son of perdition, which is an adversary, and exalteth himselfe against all that is called God, or that is worshipped: so that he doth sit as God in the temple of God, shewing himselfe that he is God. Rev. 13.11,12. And I beheld another beast comming out of the earth, which had two horns like the Lamb, but he spake like the Dragon: and he did all that the first beast could doe before him, and he caused the earth, and them that dwell therein, to worship the beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

There were then, first, Antichrists at Rome, when the Bishops thereof would be entitled universall, or Bishops over the whole Church through the world: but then were they complete, when they, together with Ecclesiasticall censure, usurped civill authoritie.

After that Christ hath subdued all his enemies, these two things shall ensue: I. The surrending over of his kingdome to God the Father, as concerning the manner of regiment and spirituall policy, consisting in word and spirit together. II. The subjection of Christ, onely in regard of his humanitie, the which then is, when the Sonne of God shall most fully manifest his Majesty, which before was obscured by the flesh as a vaile, so that the same flesh remaining both glorious, and united to the Sonne of God, may by infinite degrees appeare inferiour.

Wee may not therefore imagine, that the subjection of Christ, consisteth in diminishing the glory of the humanitie, but in manifesting most fully the Majestie of the Word.

Chap. XIX.

Concerning the outward meanes of executing the decree of Election, and of the Decalogue.

After the Foundation of Election, which hath hitherto beene delivered, it followeth, that wee should intreate of the outward meanes of the same.

The meanes, are Gods covenant, and the seale thereof.

Gods covenant, is his contract with man, concerning the obtaining of life eternall, upon a certaine condition.

This covenant consists of two parts: Gods promise to man, Mans promise to God.

Gods promise to man, is that, whereby he bindeth himselfe to man to be his God, if he performe the condition.

Mans promise to God, is that, whereby he voweth his allegeance unto his Lord, and to performe the condition betweene them.

Againe, there are two kinds of this covenant. The covenant of works, and the covenant of grace. Ieremie 31.31, 32, 33. Behold the dayes come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Iudah, not according to the covenant, I made with their fathers, when I tooke them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; the which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband to them, saith the Lord. But this shall be the covenant, that I will make with the house of Israel: after those dayes, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God, and they shall be my people.

The covenant of works, is Gods covenant, made with condition of perfect obedience, and is expressed in the Morall Law.

The Morall Law, is that part of Gods Word which commandeth perfect obedience unto man, as well in his nature, as in his actions, and forbiddeth the contrary. Romanes 10. 5. Moses thus describeth the righteousnesse which is of the law, that the man, which doth these things, shall live thereby. 1 Tim. 1. 5. The end of the commandement, is love out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and faith unfained. Luke 16. 27. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thine heart, with all thy soule, and with all thy strength. Rom. 7. 14. We know that the law is spirituall.

The Law hath two parts. The Edict commanding obedience, and the condition binding to obedience. The condition is eternall life to such as fulfill the law; but to transgressours, everlasting death.

The Decalogue, or ten commandements, is an abridgement of the whole law, and the covenant of works. Exod. 34. 27. And the Lord said unto Moses, Write thou these words, for after the tenour of these words, I have made a covenant with thee, and with Israel. And he was there with the Lord fourtie dayes and fourtie nights, and did neither eate bread, nor drinke water, and he wrote in the tables the words of the covenant, even the ten commandements. 1 King. 8. 9. Nothing was in the Arke, save the two tables of stone, which Moses had put there at Horeb, where the Lord made a covenant with the children of Israel, when hee brought them out of the land of Egypt. Mat. 22. 40. On these two commandements hangeth the whole law and the prophets.

The true interpretation of the Decalogue, must be according to these rules.

A I. In the negative, the affirmative must be understood: and in the affirmative, the negative.

II. The negative bindeth at all times, and to all times: and the affirmative, bindeth at all times, but not to all times: and therefore negatives are of more force.

III. Vnder one vice expressely forbidden, are comprehended all of that kinde; yea the least cause, occasion, or enticement thereto, is forbidden; as 1 Ioh. 3. 15. Whosoever hateth his brother, is a man-slayer. Matth. 5. 21. to the end. Evill thoughts are condemned, as well as evill actions.

B IV. The smallest sinnes are entituled with the same names, that that sinne is, which is expressely forbidden in that commandement, to which they appertaine. As in the former places, hatred is named murther, and to looke after a woman with a lusting eye, is adultery.

V. We must understand every commandement of the law so, as that wee annexe this condition: unlesse God command the contrary. For God being an absolute Lord, and so above the law, may command that which his law forbiddeth: so hee commanded Isaac to bee offered, the Egyptians to be spoiled, the brazen Serpent to be erected, which was a figure of Christ, &c.

The Decalogue, is described in two tables.

C The summe of the first table, is, that wee love God with our minde, memory, affections, and all our strength. Matth. 22. 37. This is the first, (to wit, in nature and order) and great commandement (namely, in excellency, and dignitie.)

Chap. XX.

Of the first Commandement.

THE first table hath foure Commandements.

The first teacheth us to have and choose the true God for our God. The words are these.

D I am Iehovah thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, & out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have none other gods before my face.

The Resolution.

I am] If any man rather judge, that these words are a Preface to all the Commandements, then a part of the first, I hinder him not: nevertheless, it is like, that they are a perswasion to the keeping of the first Commandement: and that they are set before it, to make way unto it; as being more hard to be received, then the rest. And this may appeare, in that the three commandements next following, which are lesse then this, have their severall reasons.

Iehovah] This word signifieth three things. I. Him who of himselfe, and in himselfe, was from all eternity. Rev. 1. 8. Who is, who was, and who is to come. II. Him which giveth being to all things, when they were not, partly by creating, partly by preſerving them. III. Him which mightily cauſeth, that thoſe things which hee hath promiſed, ſhould both bee made, and continued. Exodus 6. 1. Romanes 4. 17.

Here beginneth the firſt reaſon of the firſt commandement, taken from the name of God: it is thus framed:

He that is Iehovah, muſt alone be thy God.

But I am Iehovah:

Therefore I alone muſt be thy God.

This propoſition is wanting: the aſſumption is in theſe words (I am Iehovah) the concluſion is in the commandement.

Thy God. Theſe are the words of the covenant of grace. Ier. 31. 33. wherein the Lord covenanteth with his people concerning remiſſion of ſinnes, and eternall life. Yea theſe words are as a ſecond reaſon of the commandements, drawne from the equalitie of that relation, which is betweene God and his people.

If I be thy God, thou againe muſt be my people, and take me alone for thy God.

But I am thy God:

Therefore thou muſt be my people, and take me alone for thy God.

Which brought. The aſſumption or ſecond part of this reaſon, is confirmed by an argument taken from Gods effects, when he delivered his people out of Egypt, as it were, from the ſervitude of a moſt tyranous maſter. This delivery was not appropriate onely to the Iſraelites, but in ſome ſort belongs to the Church of God in all ages: in that it was a type of a moſt ſurpaſſing delivery, from the fearefull kingdome of darkeneſſe. 1. Cor. 10. 1,2. I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all paſſed thorow the red Sea, and were all baptized unto Moſes in the cloud, and in the Sea. Coloſſ. 1. 13. Who hath delivered us from the power of darkeneſſe, and tranſlated us into the kingdome of his deare Sonne.

Other gods, or ſtrange gods. They are ſo called, not that they by nature are ſuch, or can bee; but becauſe the corrupt, and more then diveliſh heart of carnall man, eſteemeth ſo of them. Philip. 3. 19. Whoſe god is their belly. 2. Cor. 4. 4. Whoſe minds the god of this world hath bewitched.

Before my face. That is, (figuratively) in my ſight or preſence, to whom the ſecret imaginations of the heart are knowne: and this is the third reaſon of the firſt commandement, as if he ſhould ſay: If thou in my preſence reject me, it is an heinous offence: ſee therefore thou doe it not. After the ſame manner reaſoneth the Lord. Gen. 17. 1. I am God almightie, therefore walke before me, and be thou upright.

The affirmative part.

Make choice of Iehovah to be thy God.

The duties here commanded, are theſe:

I. To acknowledge God, that is, to know and confeſſe him to be ſuch a God, as he hath revealed himſelfe to be in his word and creatures. Coloſſ. 1. 10. Increaſing in the knowledge of God. Ierem. 24. 7. And I will give them an heart to know mee, that I am the Lord, and they ſhall bee my people, and I will be their God: for they ſhall returne unto mee with their whole heart. In this knowledge of God muſt wee glory, Ier. 9. 24. Let them that glorieth, glory in this, that he underſtandeth and knoweth mee: for I am the Lord which ſheweth mercy, judgement, and righteouſneſſe in the earth.

II. An union with God, whereby man is knit in heart with God. Ioſh. 23. 8. Sticke faſt unto the Lord your God, as ye have done unto this day. Act. 11. 23. He exhorted all, that with purpoſe of heart, they would cleave to the Lord. Man cleaveth unto God three manner of waies: in affiance, in love, and feare of God.

Affiance, is that whereby a man acknowledging the power and mercy of God, doth ſtedfaſtly reſt himſelfe in him, againſt all aſſaults whatſoever. 2. Chr. 20. 20. Put your truſt in the Lord your God, and ye ſhall be aſſured, beleeve his Prophets, and ye ſhall proſper. Pſal. 27. 1. God is my light, and my ſalvation, whom ſhall I feare? God is the ſtrength of my life, of whom ſhould I be afraid? v. 3. Though an hoſt be pitched againſt mee, mine heart ſhall not be afraid: though warre be raiſed againſt mee, I will be ſecure.

Hence ariſeth patience, and alacrity in preſent perils. Pſal. 39 9. I ſhould have bin dumbe, and not opened my mouth, becauſe thou didſt it. 2. Sam. 16. 10. The king ſaid, What have I to doe with you, ye ſons of Zeruiah? If he curſed, becauſe the Lord ſaid, Curſe David, what is he that dare ſay, why doeſt thou ſo? Gen. 45. 5. Be not ſad, neither grieved with your ſelves, that yee ſold me hither: for God did ſend me before you for your preſervation. v. 8. Now then, you ſent me not, but God himſelfe. 2. King. 6. 16. Feare not, for they that be with us, are moe, then they that be with them.

This affiance engendreth hope, wch is a patient expectation of Gods preſence & aſſiſtance in all things that are to come. Pſ. 37. 5. Commit thy way unto the Lord, & truſt in him & he ſhall bring it to paſſe. v. 7. Waite patiently upon the Lord, and hope in him. Pro. 16. 3. Comit thy work unto the Lord, and thy thoughts ſhall be directed.

The love of God, is that, whereby man acknowledging Gods goodneſſe and favour towards him, doth againe love him above all things. Deut. 6. 5. Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, with all thy ſoule, and with all thy ſtrength.

The markes of the true love of God are theſe: I. To heare willingly his word. II. To ſpeake often of him. III. To thinke often of him. IV. To doe his will without irkſomnes. V. To give body, and all for his cauſe. VI. To deſire his preſence above all, and to bewaile his abſence. VII. To embrace all ſuch things as appertaine to him. VIII. To love and hate that which hee loveth and hateth. IX. In all things to ſeeke to pleaſe him. X. To draw others unto the love of him. XI. To esteeme highly of such gifts and graces, as he bestoweth. XII. To stay our selves upon his counsels revealed in his word. Lastly, to call upon his name with affiance.

The feare of God, is that whereby man acknowledging both Gods mercy and justice, doth, as the greatest evill, feare to displease God. Psal.130.4. With thee is mercy, that thou mayest be feared. Habak.3.16. When I heard it, my belly trembled, my lips shooke at the voyce: rottennesse entred into my bones, and I trembled in my selfe, that I might rest in the day of trouble, when he commeth up against the people to destroy them, Psal.4.4. Tremble, and sinne not.

Hence ariseth the godly mans desire, to approove himselfe in all things to his God. Gen. 5.22. And Henoch walked with God, after that, &c. Gen.17.1. God said to him, I am al-sufficient, walke before me, and be thou perfect.

Out of these three former vertues proceedeth humility, whereby a man acknowledging Gods free bounty, and prostrating himselfe before him, doth ascribe unto him all praise and glory, 1 *Cor.*1. 31. Let him that glorieth, glory in the Lord, 1 Pet.5.5. Decke your selves inwardly with lowlinesse of mind, for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble, v.6. Humble your selves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time. 1 Chr.29.10,11. And David said, Blessed bee thou O Lord God of Israel our father for ever, and thine, O Lord, is greatnesse and power, and glory, and victory, and praise: for all that is in heaven, and in earth is thine, &c. & v.14. But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer willingly on this sort: for all things come of thee, and of thine owne hand we have given thee, &c.

The negative part.

Account not that as God, which is by nature no God.

In this place are these sinnes forbidden:

I. Ignorance of the true God and his will, which is not onely not to know, but also to doubt of such things, as God hath revealed in his Word. *Ier.*4.22. My people is foolish, they have not knowne me: they are foolish children, and have not understanding: they are wise to doe evill, but to doe well they have no knowledge. Iere 9.3. They proceed from evill to worse, and have not knowne me, saith the Lord.

II. Atheisme, when the heart denyeth either God, or his attributes: as, his Iustice, Wisedome, Providence, Presence, Psal.14.1. The foole hath said in his heart, there is no God. Ephes.2.12. Ye had no hope, and were without God in the world, Mal. 1.2. I love you, saith the Lord, yet ye say, wherein have we spoken against thee? and cha 3.14. Ye have said, it is in vaine to serve God: and what profit is it, that we have kept his Commandements, and that we walked humbly before the Lord of hosts?

III. Errours, concerning God, the persons of the Deity, or the attributes. Here is to bee reprooved Hellenisme, which is the acknowledging and adoring of a multiplicity of Gods. August. in his 6. booke of the City of God. *Chap.*7.

Againe, Iudaisme is here condemned, which worshippeth one God without Christ.

The like may be said of the heresies of the Manichees, and Marcian, who denyed God to be the creatour of the world: of Sabellius denying the distinction of three persons: and Arrius, who saith, that Christ the Sonne of God, is not very God.

IV. To withdraw, and remoove the affections of the heart from the Lord, and set them upon other things. Isa.29.13. *The Lord said, this people draweth neere mee with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is farre from me. Iere.*12.2. Thou art neere in their mouth, and farre from their reines. The heart is many wayes withdrawne from God.

I. By distrust in God, Heb.10.38. The just shall live by faith, but if any withdraw himselfe, my soule shall have no pleasure in him. From this diffidence arise. I. Impatience in suffering afflictions. *Iere.*20.14. Cursed be the day wherein I was borne, and let not the day wherein my mother bare me, be blessed. v.13. Cursed be the man that shewed my father, saying, a man child is borne unto thee and comforted him. v.18. How is it that I came forth of the wombe to see labour and sorrow, that my dayes should bee consumed with shame? II. Tempting of God, when such as distrust, or rather contemne him, seeke experiment of Gods truth and power. Matth. 4.7. Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God, 1 Cor.10.9. Neither let us tempt God, as they tempted him, and were destroyed by serpents. v. 10. Neither murmure ye, as some of them murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer. III. Desperation. Gen.4.13. Mine iniquity is greater then can be pardoned, 1 Thes. 4.13. Sorrow ye not, as they which have no hope. IV. Doubtfulnesse, concerning the truth of God, or of his benefits present, or to come. Psal.116.21. I said in my haste, all men are lyars.

II. Confidence, in creatures, whether it be in their strength, as Ierem. 17.5. Cursed is the man that hath his confidence in man, and maketh flesh his arme, but his heart slideth from the Lord. Or riches. Mat 6.24. Ye cannot serve God and riches, Eph.5.5. No covetous person, which is an idolater, hath inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. Or defenced places. *Ierem.*49.16. Thy feare, and the pride of thine heart hath deceived thee, that thou dwellest in the clefts of the Rocke, and keepest the height of the hill: though thou shouldest make thy nest as high as the Eagle, I will bring thee downe from thence, saith the Lord. Or pleasure, and dainties: to such their belly is their God, *Phil.*3.19. Or in Physitians. 2 *Chr.*16.12. And Asa in the nine and thirtieth yeere of his raigne, was diseased in his feete, and his disease was extreame, yet hee sought not the Lord in his disease, but to Physitians. Briefely, to this place, principally may be adjoyned that divelish confidence which Magitians, and all

all such as take advise at them, doe put in the divell and his works. Levit. 20.6. If any turne after such as worke with spirits, and after soothsayers, to goe a whooring after them, then will I set my face against that person, and will cut him off from among his people.

III. The love of the creature, above the love of God. Matth. 10.37. He that loveth father or mother more then me, is not worthy of me, and hee that loveth sonne or daughter more then mee, is not worthy of mee. Ioh. 12.43. They loved the praise of men, more then the praise of God. To this belongeth selfe-love, 1 Tim. 3.2.

IV. Hatred and contempt of God, when man, by reason of his declining nature from God, doth flye from him, and is angry towards God when he punisheth sinne. Rom. 8. 7. The wisedome of the flesh, is enmity with God. Rom. 1.30. Haters of GOD, doers of wrong.

V. Want of the feare of God. Psalm. 36.2. Wickednesse saith to the wicked man, even in mine heart, that there is no feare of God before their eyes.

VI. Feare of the creature, more then the Creator. Rev. 21.8. The fearefull and unbeleeving, shall have their part in the lake which burns with fire and brimstone. Matth. 10.28. Feare not them which kill the body, but feare him that can cast both body and soule into hell fire. Ierem 10.1. Be not afraid of the signes of heaven, though the heathen be afraid of such.

VII. Hardnesse of heart, or carnall securitie, when a man, neither acknowledging Gods judgements, nor his owne sinnes, dreameth he is safe from Gods vengeance, and such perils, as arise from sinne. Rom. 2. 5. Thou after thine hardnesse, and heart that cannot repent, heapest to thy selfe wrath against the day of wrath. Luk. 21. 34. Take heed to your selves, lest at any time your hearts be oppressed with surfetting, and drunkennesse, and cares of this life, and least that they come on you at unawares.

VIII. These all doe joyntly ingender pride, whereby man ascribeth all he hath that is good, not to God, but to his owne merit, and industry, referring and disposing them wholly unto his owne proper credit. 1 Corinth. 4.6. That ye might learne by us, that no man presume above that which is written, that one swell not against another, for any mans cause. v. 7. For who separateth thee? or what hast thou, that thou hast not received? if thou hast received it, why rejoycest thou, as though thou hadst not received it? Gen. 3. 5. God doth know, that when ye shall eate thereof, your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as Gods, knowing good and evill. The highest staire of prides ladder, is that fearefull presumption, by which many clime rashly into Gods seate of majestie, as if they were gods. Acts 12.22, 23. The people gave a shoute saying, The voice of God, and not of man: but immediately the Angel of the Lord smote him, because he gave not glory unto God, so that he was eaten up of wormes, and gave up the ghost. 2. Thess. 2.4. Which is an adversary, and exalteth himselfe against all that is called God, or that is worshipped: so that hee doth sit as God in the temple of God, shewing himselfe that he is God.

Chap. XXI.

Of the second Commandement.

Hitherto have wee entreated of the first commandement, teaching us to entertaine in our hearts, and to make choice of one onely God. The other three of the first table, concerne that holy profession, which we must make towards the same God. For first, it is necessary to make choice of the true God. Secondly, to make profession of the same God.

In the profession of God, we are to consider the parts thereof, and the time appointed for this profession.

The parts are two: The solemne worship of God, and the glorifying of him.

The second commandement then concerneth the manner of performing holy and solemne worship unto God. The words of the commandement are these:

Thou shalt make thee no graven image, neither any similitude of things which are in heaven above, neither that are in the earth beneath, nor that are in the waters under the earth: thou shalt not bow downe to them, neither serve them, for I am the Lord thy God, a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers, upon the children, upon the third generation, and upon the fourth of them that hate me, & shew mercy unto thousands upon them that love me, and keep my commandements.

The Resolution.

Thou shalt not make] This is the first part of the commandement, forbidding to make an idol: Now an idol is not onely a certaine representation, and image of some fained god, but also of the true Iehovah: The which may be prooved against the Papists by these arguments. The first is Deuteronom. 4. 15, 16. Take therefore good heed unto your selves: for yee saw no image in the day that the Lord spake unto you in Horeb, out of the middest of the fire, that ye corrupt not your selves, and make you a graven image or representation of any figure: whether it be the likenesse of male or female. Out of the words uttered by Moses, a reason may be framed thus:

If ye saw no image (namely of God,) ye shall make none.

But yee saw no image, onely heard a voyce.

Therefore yee shall make no image of God.

The second reason: That idolatry which the Israelites committed, the very same is prohibited in this commandement.

But the Israelites idolatry, was the worship of God in an image. Hos. 2. 16. At that day, saith the Lord, thou shalt call me no more Baali, but shalt call mee Eshi.

The golden calfe was an image of God: for when it was finished, Aaron proclaimed that to morrow should be a feast to Iehovah. Exodus 32. 5. And the same calfe is tearmed an idoll, Acts 7. 41.

Therefore the worshipping of God in an image, is here prohibited.

Any graven image] Here the more speciall is put for the more generall, namely, a graven image, for all counterfeit meanes of Gods worship:

The first part of the commandement is here illustrated by a double distribution. The first is drawne from the causes. Thou shalt not make thee an idol, whether it be engraven in wood or stone: or whether it be painted in a table. The second is taken from the place. Thou shalt not make thee an idol of things in heaven, as starres, and birds: or in the earth, as of man, woman, beast: or under the earth, as fishes.

This place is so expounded by Moses, Deut. 4. 14. to the 20. verse.

Thou shalt not bow downe to them] This is the second part of the commandement, forbidding all men to fall downe before an idoll. 1. This word Bow downe, is againe the speciall put for the generall: for in it is inhibited all fained worship of God.

For I] These words are a confirmation of this commandement, perswading to obedience by foure reasons.

The Lord] (which is strong) The first reason, God is strong, and so able to revenge idolatry, Heb. 10. 31.

A jealous God] This speech is taken from the estate of wedlocke: for God is called the husband of his Church. Esa. 5. 4, 5. Ephes. 5. 26, 27. And our spirituall worship, is as it were, a certaine marriage of our soules, consecrated unto the Lord. Ierem. 2. 2. I remember thee with the kindnesse of thy youth, and the love of the marriage, when thou wentest after mee in the wildernesse, in a land that was not sowne. Whence also Idols are rightly called Gods corrivals. Here is another argument drawne from a comparison of things that bee like. Gods people must alone worship him, because they are linked to him, as a wife to her husband, unto whom alone she is bound: Therefore if his people forsake him, and betroth themselves unto idols, hee will undoubtedly give them a bill of divorcement, and they shall be no more espoused unto him.

Visiting] To visit, is not onely to punish the children for the fathers offences, but to take notice, and apprehend them in the same faults, by reason they are given over to commit their fathers transgressions, that for them they may bee punished. And this is the third reason drawne from the effects of Gods anger.

Hate me] It may be, this is a secret answer, the objection whereof is not here in expresse words set downe, but may bee thus framed: What if we use Idols to inflame and excite in us a love and remembrance of thee? The answer is this, by the contrary: You may thinke that your use of idols kindleth in you a love of mee, but it is so farre from that, that all such as use them cannot choose but hate mee.

Shew mercy] The fourth reason derived from the effects of Gods mercy to such as observe this commandement. Here may wee first observe, that God is more ready to shew mercy then to punish. Psal. 103. 8. The Lord is full of compassion and mercy, slow to anger, and of great kindnesse. vers. 17. The loving kindnesse of the Lord, endureth for ever. vers. 9. Hee will not alway chide, neither keepe his anger for ever. Secondly, we may not surmise, that this excellent promise is made to every one particularly, who is borne of faithfull parents. For godly Isaac, had godlesse Esau to his sonne; and godlesse Saul, had godly Ionathan.

The negative part.

Many things are here forbidden.

1. The representation of God, by an image. For it is a lye. Habak. 2. 18. What profiteth the image? for the maker thereof hath made it an image, and a teacher of lies. Zach. 10. 2. The idols have spoken vanitie. Ier. 10. 8. The stocke is a doctrine of vanity. The Elib. Councel in the 39. Canon hath this Edict. We thought it not meete to have images in Churches, lest that which is worshipped and adored, should bee painted upon walles. Clem. booke 5. ad Iacob. Dom. That serpent by others is wont to speake these words: We in honour of the invisible God, are accustomed to adore visible images, the which out of all controversie is very false. Augustine in his Treatise upon the 112. Psalme.

The images also of the crosse, and of Christ crucified, and of the Saints ought to be abolished out of Churches, as the brazen Serpent was. 2 King. 18. 4. Hezekiah is commended for breaking in pieces the brazen serpent to which the children of Israel did then burne incense. This did Hezekiah, albeit at the first this serpent was made by the Lords appointment. Numb. 21. 8. and was a type of Christs passion. Iohn 3. 14. Origen in his 7. booke against Celsius. Wee permit not any to adore Iesus upon the altars in images, or upon Church-wals: because it is written, Thou shalt have none other gods but mee.

Epiphanius, in that Epistle which he wrote to Iohn Bishop of Ierusalem, saith, It is against the custome of the Church, to see any image hanging in the Church, whether it be of Christ, or any other Saint, and therefore even with his owne hands rent hee asunder the vaile, wherein such an image was painted.

Some object the figure or signe, which appeared to Constantine, wherein hee should overcome: but it was not the signe of the crosse (as the Papists doe triflingly imagine) but of Christs name: for the thing was made of these two Greeke letters ☧ conjoyned together. Euseb. in the life of Constant. booke 1. chap. 32. 25.

Neither serve the Cherubims, which Salomon placed in the temple, for the defence of images: for they were onely in the holy of holiest, where the people could not see them. And they were types of the glory of the Messiah, unto whom the very angels were subject: the which we have now verified in Christ.

If any man reply, that they worship not the image, but God in the image: let him know, that the creature cannot comprehend the Image of the Creator; and if it could, yet God would not be worshipped in it, because it is a dead thing: yea, the worke of mans hands, not of God: and therefore is more base then the smallest living creature, of which wee may lawfully say, it is the worke of God. This evinceth, that no kinde of divine worship belongeth to an image, either simply or by relation, whatsoever the sophisticall Schoole-men jangle to the contrary.

If any man be yet desirous of images, hee may have at hand the preaching of the Gospel, a lively Image of Christ crucified. Gal. 3.1. O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, to whom Iesus Christ before was described in your sight, and among you crucified? The like may be said of the two Sacraments. And that saying of Clemens is true, in his fifth booke of Recognit. If you will truly adore the image of God, doe good unto man, and yee shall worship his true image: for man is the image of God.

II. The least approbation of idolatry. Hos. 13. 2. They say one to another whilest they sacrifice a man, let them kisse the calves. Now a kisse, is an externall signe of some allowance of a thing. Gen. 48. 10.

Therefore it is unlawfull to bee present at Masse, or any idolatrous service, though our mindes be absent. 1 Cor. 6. 20. Yee are bought with a price, therefore glorifie God in your body, and in your spirits, which are Gods, Rom. 11. 4. What saith the Scripture? I have reserved unto my selfe seven thousand men, which have not bowed their knee to Baal. Euseb. 8. booke c. 3. The Martyrs, when they were haled unto the temple of Idols, cryed out, and with a loud voyce in the middest of their tortures testified, that they were not idolatrous sacrificers, but professed and constant Christians, rejoycing greatly that they might make such a confession.

That which may bee objected of Naaman the Syrian, who worshipped in the temple of Rimmon, is thus answered: that he did it not with purpose to commit idolatry, but to performe that civil obeisance which he was wont to exhibit to the Kings Majesty. 2 King. 5. 17, 18.

And for this cause, are utterly forbidden all such dauncing professions, playes, and such feasts, as are consecrated to the memoriall, and honour of idols. Exod. 32. 6. They rose up the next day in the morning, and offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings: also the people sate them downe to eate and drinke, and rose up to play. 1 Cor. 10. 7. Neither be ye idolaters as some of them were, as it is written, &c. And Paul (1 Cor. 8. 4. to the end) earnestly dehorteth the Corinthians from sitting at table in the idols temple; albeit they knew that an idoll is nothing in the world. Tripartite hystory, booke 6. chap. 30. Certaine souldiers of Iulian refused to adore, as the custome was, the Emperours banner, in which were painted the images of Iupiter, Mercury, and Mars: others bring againe the rewards, which they, after they had burned incense on an altar in the Emperours presence, had received: crying, that they were Christians, and would live and dye in that profession: and as for their former fact, it was of ignorance: yea, though they had polluted hands with idolatry of the Painyms, yet they (yet) kept their conscience cleane.

III. All reliques and monuments of idols: for these, after the idols themselves are once abolished, must be raced out of all memory. Exod. 23. 13. Ye shall make no mention of the name of other gods, neither shall it be heard out of thy mouth. Isai. 30. 22. And ye shall pollute the covering of the image of silver, and the rich ornament of the images of gold, and cast them away as a menstruous cloth, and thou shalt say unto it, Get thee hence.

IV. Society with infidels, is here unlawfull which serveth not only to maintaine concord, but also to joyne men in brotherly love. Of this society there are many branches.

The first, is mariage with infidels. Gen. 6. 2. The sonnes of God saw the daughters of men that they were faire, and they tooke them wives of all that they liked. Mal. 2. 11. Iudah hath transgressed, and an abomination is committed in Israel, and in Ierusalem: for Iudah hath defiled the holinesse of the Lord, which he loved, and hath married the daughters of a strange God. Ezra 9. 14. Should wee returne to breake thy Commandements, and joyne in affinity with the people of such abomination? 2 King. 8. 18. He walked in the wayes of the Kings of Israel, as did the house of Ahab: for the daughter of Ahab was his wife, and he did evill in the sight of the Lord.

The second, is the league in warre: namely, a mutuall confederacy to assist one another in the same warre, and to have one and the same enemies. This is sundry wayes impious: I. If it be unlawfull to crave assistance of Gods enemies, it is likewise unlawfull to indent with them, that we will assist them. II. It obscureth Gods glory, as though hee himselfe, either would not, or could not ayde his Church. III. It is a thousand to one left wee bee infected with their idolatry, and other impieties. IV. It endangereth us to bee made partakers of their punishments, 2 Chron. 19. 2. And Iehu the sonne of Hanani the Seer, went out to meete him, and said to King Iehoshaphat, wouldest thou helpe the wicked, and love them that hate the Lord? therefore for this thing is the wrath of the Lord upon thee.

The third, is traffique: as when a man wittingly and willingly, doth, in hope to enrich himselfe, make sale of such things as he knoweth must serve to an idolatrous use. This con-demneth all thoſe marchants, which tranſport wares to idolaters, and ſell them frankincenſe, waxe, cloath, or other ſuch things as helpe them in the ſervice of their idols.

The fourth, is triall of ſuites in law before Iudges which are infidels, when Chriſtian courts may be frequented: but if they cannot, and we have to deale with infidels, we may appeale to infidels. 1 Cor. 6.6. Brother goeth to law with brother, and that under infidels. Act. 25.11. Paul appealeth to Cæſar.

The fifth, is the worſhipping of the beaſt, and receiving his marke. Reu. 14. 9. If any man worſhip the beaſt, and his Image, and receive the marke in his forehead or in his hand. verſ. 10. The ſame ſhall drinke of the wine of the wrath of God. This beaſt is the Church of Rome, I meane not that old, but this new Rome, now no better then an hereticall and apoſtaticall Synagogue.

VI. Will-worſhip, when God is worſhipped with a naked and bare good intention, not warranted by the Word of God. Coloſſ. 2.23. Which things indeed have a ſhew of wiſedome in voluntary religion, and humblineſſe of mind, and in not ſparing the body: neither have they it in eſtimation to ſatisfie the fleſh. 1 Sam. 13.9,10. And Saul ſaid, Bring a burnt offering to me, and peace offerings: and he offered a burnt offering. And as ſoone as he had made an end of offering the burnt offering, behold, Samuel came, and verſe 13. ſaid to Saul, Thou haſt done fooliſhly, thou haſt not kept the Commandement of the Lord thy God, which hee commanded thee. Hitherto may we adde Popiſh ſuperſtitions in ſacrifices, meates, holidayes, apparell, temporary and bead-ridden prayers, indulgences, auſtere life, whipping, ceremonies, geſtures, gate, converſation, pilgrimage, building of altars, pictures, Churches, and all other of that rabble.

To theſe may bee added conſort in muſicke in divine ſervice, feeding the eares, not edifying the minde. 1 Cor. 14.15. What is it then? I will pray with the ſpirit, but I will pray with the underſtanding alſo, I will ſing with the ſpirit, but I will ſing with the underſtanding alſo. Iuſtinus Martyr in his booke of Chriſtian queſtions and Anſ. 107. It is not the cuſtome of the Churches, to ſing their meeters with any ſuch kind of inſtruments, &c. but their manner is onely to uſe plaine ſong.

Laſtly, monaſticall vowes, which. I. repugne the Law of God: as that unchaſt vow of ſingle life, and proud promiſe of poverty doe plainely evince: For he that laboureth not, muſt not eate, 2 Theſ. 3.10. And it is better to marry, then to burn in luſt. 1 Cor. 7.9. II. They are greater then mens nature can performe: as in a ſingle life, to liye perpetually chaſt. III. They diſanull Chriſtian liberty, & make ſuch things neceſſary, as are indifferent. IV. They renue Iudaiſme. V. They are Idolatrous, becauſe they make them parts of Gods worſhip, and eſteem them as meritorious. VI. Hypocriſie, which giveth to God painted-worſhip, that is, if you regard outward behaviour, great ſincerity; if the inward and hearty affections, none at all. Mat. 15.7. Hypocrites, well hath Eſaias propheſied of you, ſaying, This people commeth neere me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is farre from me. Pſal. 10.4. The wicked man is ſo proud, that he ſeeketh not for God.

The effects of hypocriſie are theſe: 1. To ſeeke the pompe and glory of the world, and by all meanes to enrich it ſelfe, notwithſtanding it make a glorious ſhew of the ſervice of God. 2. It is ſharpe ſighted, and hath Eagles eyes to obſerve other mens behaviour, when in the regarding its owne, it is as blind as a beetle. 3. To be more curious in the obſervation of ancient traditions, then the ſtatutes and Commandements of almighty God. 4. To ſtumble at a ſtraw, and skip over a blocke, that is, to omit ſerious affaires, and hunt after trifles, Matth. 23.4,5. To doe all things that they may bee ſeene of men, Matth 6.5.

Popiſh faſting, is meere hypocriſie: becauſe it ſtandeth in the diſtinction of meates, and it is uſed with an opinion of merit.

Externall abſtinence from meates, without internall and ſpirituall faſting from ſinne, and unlawfull deſires. Iſai. 58.5,6. Is this ſuch a faſt as I have choſen, that a man ſhould afflict his ſoule for a day, and bow downe his head as a bulruſh, and lye downe in ſackecloth and aſhes? wilt thou call this a faſting, or an acceptable day unto the Lord? Is not this the faſting that I have choſen, to looſe the bands of wickedneſſe, to take off the heavy burdens, and to let the oppreſſed goe free, and that ye breake every yoke?

VII. Contempt, neglect, and intermiſſion of Gods ſervice. Reve. 3.15,16. I know thy workes, that thou art neither cold, nor hot, I would thou wereſt cold or hot. Therefore becauſe thou art luke warme, and neither cold nor hot, it will come to paſſe that I ſhall ſpew thee out of my mouth.

VIII. Corrupting of Gods worſhip and that order of government, which hee hath ordained for his Church: the which is done when any thing is added, detracted, or any way, againſt his preſcript, mangled. Deut. 12.32. Every thing which I command you, that do: neither adde to it, nor detract from it. This condemneth that Popiſh elevation of bread in the Lords Supper, and the adminiſtration of it alone to the people without wine, together with that fearefull abomination of the Maſſe.

By this wee may learne to reject all Popiſh traditions. Mat. 15.9. In vaine doe they worſhip me, teaching for doctrines, mens precepts. Now it is manifeſt, that all popiſh traditions, they either in their owne nature, or others abuſing of them, ſerve as well to ſuperſtition and falſe worſhip, as to enrich that covetous and proud Hierarchie: whereas the Scriptures contained in the old and New Teſtament, are all-ſufficient, not onely to confirme doctrines, but alſo to reforme manners. 1 Tim. 3. v. 16. The whole Scripture is given by inſpiration of God, and is profitable to teach, to improove, and to correct, and to instruct in righteousnesse: that the man of God may be absolute, being made perfect unto all good worke.

The Romish Hierarchie is here also condemned, from the Parratour to the Pope: the government whereof is an expresse image of the old Romane Empire, whether we consider the regiment it selfe, or the place of the Empire, or the large circuit of that government. Rev. 13.15. And it was permitted to him, to give a spirit to the image of the beast, so that the image of the beast should speake, and should cause, that as many as would not worship the image of the beast, should be killed.

IX. A religious reverence of the creature, when wee attribute more unto it then wee ought. Revel. 22.8. When I had heard and seene, I fell downe to worship before the feet of the Angel, which shewed mee these things: but hee said unto mee, See thou doe it not, for I am thy fellow-servant. Acts 10.25. As Peter came in, Cornelius met him, and fell downe at his feet, and worshipped him: but Peter tooke him up, saying, Stand up, for even I my selfe am a man.

If then it bee so hainous a thing to reverence the creature; much more, to pray unto it, whether it be Saint or Angel. Rom. 10.14. How shall they call upon him in whom they have not beleeved. Matth. 4.10. Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him onely shalt thou serve.

Neither might wee pray unto Christ, unlesse, as he is man, so he were also God: for we direct not our worship unto the humanitie considered by it selfe, but to the Deitie, to which the humanitie is knit by an hypostaticall union.

This teacheth us plainly, that invocation of any creature is unlawfull: for we must pray to them, that are able to know the secrets of the heart, and discerne the wisedome of the spirit: now none is able to doe that, but such a nature as is omnipotent. Rom. 8.27. Hee that searcheth the hearts, knoweth what is the meaning of the spirit: for hee maketh request for the Saints according to the will of God.

Nevertheless, such as are Saints indeed are to bee honoured by an approbation of Gods gifts in them, and by an honourable mention of them, and also by imitation of their manners and lives, being as patternes for us to walke after.

X. Worship of divels: I. Magique, which is a mischievous Art, Accomplishing wonders by Satans assistance. For it is appropriate to God to doe miracles; for hee alone, both beyond, and against the course of nature, doth wonderfull things. Now the instruments which God useth in producing miracles, are onely they, who doe in the true Church of God, make profession of the faith. Mark. 16.17. These signes shall follow them that beleeve.

Albeit the divels cannot worke miracles, yet may they effect mervailes or wonders, A and that, not by making a new thing, which before was not at all: but rather by mooving, transporting, and applying naturall things diversly, by causing a thin body (as the ayre) to be thicke and foggie, and also by bewitching the senses of men.

The foundation of Magique is a covenant with Satan.

A covenant with Satan is such a contract, by which Magitians have mutually to doe with the divell. In this observe:

The originall of this mutuall contract: I. Satan maketh choice of such men to be his servants as are by nature either notorious bad persons or very silly soules. II. He offereth unto them B divers meanes, either by other Magitians, or by some bookes written by such: Satanicall meanes I call those, which are used in the producing of such an effect, to the which they neither by any expresse rule out of Gods Word, nor of their owne nature, were ever ordained. Such are obscure words, words of the Scripture wrested, and abused, to the great contumely and disgrace of the Lord God; holy, or rather unholy water, sieves, seales, glasses, images, bowings of the knee, and such like divers gestures. III. When the wicked see these meanes offered unto them, they presently are not a little glad, and assuredly beleeve, that in those things there is vertue to work wonders by. IV. They declare this their Satanicall C confidence, by their earnest endevour, practising, and abusing the meanes. Then the divell is at their elbowes, being thus affected, that he may both assist them, and shew them divers trickes of his legerdemaine, because he alone doth by meanes, voide of all such vertue, effect that which his wicked instrument intended.

Againe, observe Satans counterfeiting of God.

Hee is Gods Ape, and taketh upon him as though hee were God. I. As God hath his Word, his Sacraments, and Faith due unto him, so the divell hath certaine words of his owne, and to seale them unto the wicked, he annexeth certaine signes, namely, characters, gestures, sacrifices, &c. as it were Sacraments, D that both he may signifie his divellish pleasure to his Magitians, and they againe testifie their Satanicall both obedience and confidence to him. II. As God heareth such as call upon, trust in, and obey him; so the divell is greatly delighted with magicall ceremonies and invocations, because by them God is dishonoured, and he magnified: therefore, if God cut him not short, hee is ready prest to assist such, as shall use such ceremonies or invocations.

The covenant is either Secret, or Expresse.

Secret, or implicite, when one doth not expressely compact with Satan, yet in his heart alloweth of his meanes; assuredly and upon knowledge beleeving, that if such meanes were used, there might indeed that great wonder be wrought which he desired.

Expresse, when one doth not onely put his confidence in Satan, but covenanteth with him upon this condition, that he, giving himselfe wholly over to the divell, may againe, by observing certaine ceremonies, accomplish his desire.

Magique, is either divining, or working.

Divining, whereby things to come are foretold by the helpe of the divell. Now of Predictions, some are done with meanes: others without.

Predictions done with meanes, are these:

I. Sooth-saying, which is divination by the flying of birds, Deut. 8. 10.

II. The kind of divination, which is, by looking into beasts entrals. Ezec. 21. 21. The King of Babel, &c. consulted with idols, and looked in the liver.

III. Necromancy, or conjoring: by which the divell, in the forme of some dead man, is sought unto for counsell. 1 Sam. 28. 11. Then said the woman, Whom wilt thou I call up unto thee? And he said, Call up Samuel unto me. v. 13. Then said he unto her, Feare not, but what sawest thou? And the woman said unto Saul, I saw gods ascending out of the earth. v. 14. Then said he unto her, what fashion is he of? and shee answered, An old man commeth up lapped in a mantle. And Saul knew that it was Samuel, and he enclined his face to the ground, and bowed himselfe. And Samuel said to Saul, why hast thou disquieted me, to bring me up? Then Saul answered; I am in great distresse: for the Philistims make warre against me, &c. This Samuel, was not that true Prophet of God, who annointed Saul King over Israel: for 1. the soules of the Saints departed, are farre from the divels clawes and dominion. 2. That good Samuel, if it had bin hee indeed, would never have permitted Saul to worship him. 3. Hee saith to wicked Saul, to morrow shalt thou be with me. v. 14. Neither could this be a bare illusion, and, as I may say, legerdemaine of the Witch, for hee plainely foretold Sauls destruction, which an ignorant woman could not know, much lesse durst shee constantly avouch any such matter to the King: it remaineth then, that this Samuel, was a meere illusion of Satan.

Divining without meanes, is called Pythonisme: when such as are possessed with an uncleane spirit, use immediately the helpe of the same spirit, to reveale secrets. Act. 16. 16. A certaine maide having a spirit of divination, met us, which gate her master much vantage with divining. Esa. 29. 4. Thy voyce shall be out of the ground, like him that hath a spirit of divination, and thy talking shall whisper out of the dust.

Magique operative or working, hath two parts: Iugling, and Inchantments.

Iugling, whereby, through the divels conveyance, many great and very hard matters, are in shew effected. Exod. 7. 10, 11, 12. Aaron cast forth his rod before Pharoah, and before his servants, and it was turned into a serpent: then Pharoah called also for the Wisemen, and Sorcerers, and those charmers also of Egypt did in like manner with their enchantment: for they cast downe every man his rod, and they were turned into serpents: but Aarons rod devoured their rods.

Enchantment or charming, is that, whereby beasts, but especially young children, and men of riper yeeres, are by Gods permission infected, poysoned, hurt, bounden, killed, and otherwise molested; or contrarily, somerimes cured of Satan, by mumbling up some few words, making certaine characters and figures, framing circles, hanging amulets about the necke, or other parts, by hearbes, medicines, and such like trumpery, that thereby the punishment of the faithlesse may be augmented, in reposing their strength upon such rotten staves, and the faithfull may be tried, whether they will commit the like abomination. Psal. 58. 4. Their poyson is even like the poyson of a serpent: like the deafe adder that stoppeth his eare, which heareth not the voyce of the Inchanter, though he be most expert in charming. Eccl. 10. 11. If the serpent bite when he is charmed, &c.

Thus have we heard Magique described out of Gods Word; the which how common it is as yet, in those especially which are without God in the world, and whom Satan by all meanes strongly deludeth, the lamentable experience which many men, and most places have thereof, can sufficiently proove unto us. And surely, if a man will but take a view of all popery, he shall easily see, that a great part of it is meere Magique.

They which spread abroad by their writing or otherwise, that Witches are nothing else, but melancholicke doting woman, who through the divels delusion, suppose that they themselves doe that, which indeed the divell doth alone: albeit they endeavour cunningly to cloake this sinne, yet by the same meanes they may defend murther, adultery, and what other sinne soever.

II. Those which doe consult with Magitians, doe also worship the divell; for they revolt from God to the divell, howsoever they plaster up their impiety with untempered morter, that they seeke Gods helpe, though by the meanes of Magitians, 1 Sam. 28. 13. The woman said to Saul, I saw Gods ascending from the earth. Levit. 20. 6. If any turne after such as worke with spirits, and after Sooth-sayers, to goe a whooring after them, then will I set my face against that person, and will cut him off from among his people. Isai. 8. 19, 20. When they shall say to you, enquire at them which have a spirit of divination, and at the Soothsayers, which whisper and murmure. Should not a people enquire at their God? from the living to the dead? to the law, and to the testimony?

The affirmative part.

Thou shalt worship God in spirit and truth. Ioh. 4. 24. God is a Spirit, & they that worship him, must worship him in spirit and truth. For so soone as any man beginneth to worship God after an overthwart

overthwart and unlawfull manner, hee then adoreth an idoll, howsoever hee seemeth to colour his impietie. Paul therefore, Rom. 1. 23. saith, that such as worshipped the creature, and turned the glory of the incorruptible God, to the similitude of a corruptible man, did forsake the Creator. verse 25. and 1. Cor. 10. 20. Those things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to divels, and not unto God.

To this part therefore appertaineth such things, as respect the holy and solemne service of God.

I. The true and ordinary meanes of Gods worship; as calling vpon the name of the Lord by humble supplication, and heartie thanksgiving: and the Ministery of the Word and Sacraments. Act. 2. 41, 42. They that gladly received his word, were baptized: and the same day there were added to the Church about three thousand soules. And they continued in the Apostles doctrine, & fellowship, & breaking of bread, and of prayers. 1. Tim. 2. 1. I exhort you especially, that prayers & supplications be made for all men, for Kings, and all in authoritie. Act. 20. 7. The first day of the weeke, the Disciples beeing come together to breake bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow, and continued the preaching unto midnight. Tertul. Apolog. chap. 39. Wee come into the assembly and congregation, that with our prayers, as with an armie, we might compasse God. This kinde of violence offered to God, is acceptable to him. If any man so offend, that he must be suspended from the publike place of prayer, and holy meetings, all approoved Elders sit in judgement, beeing advanced to this honour, and not by bribes, but by their good report, &c. reade the rest. The like hath Iust. Martyr in his Oration to the Emperour Anton. Pius.

II. An holy use of the meanes. First, in the ministers, who ought to administer all things belonging to Gods worshippe, according to his word. Matth. 28. 20. Teaching them to observe all things, which I have commanded. 1. Cor. 11. 23. I have receeived of the Lord that, which also I have delivered. Secondly, in the rest of the assembly: whose duty is in praying unto God, in hearing the word preached and read, and in receiving the Sacraments, to behave themselves outwardly; in modestie, and without offence. 1. Cor. 14. 40. Let all things be done honestly, and by order; Inwardly, they must take heede, that their hearts bee well prepared to serve God. Eccles. 4. 17. Take heede to both thy feet, when thou entrest into the house of God, &c. and chap. 5. 1. Be not rash with thy mouth, nor let thine heart bee hasty to utter a thing before God. Having confidence of his mercy, together with a contrite and repentant heart for all their sinnes. Heb. 4. 2. The word that they heard profited not, because it was not mixed with faith in those that heard it. Psal. 26. 6. I will wash mine hands in innocencie, O Lord, and so compasse thine altar.

III. The helpes and furtherances of the true worship, are two; Vowes, and Fasting: and they are not to bee taken, as the worship of God it selfe. For we may not obtrude any thing to God, as good service, and as though it did bind the conscience, except hee have ordained it for that end and purpose.

A vow in the New Testament, is a promise to God, with a full intent to observe some corporall and externall duties, which a Christian hath on his owne accord, without injunction, imposed upon himselfe, that hee may thereby the better bee excited unto repentance, meditation, sobrietie, abstinence, patience, and thankefulnesse towards God. Gen. 28. 20. Then Iacob vowed a vow, saying, If God will bee with mee, and will keepe me in this journey which I go, and will give me bread to eate, and cloathes to put on, so that I come againe to my fathers house in safety: Then shall the Lord be my God, and this stone which I have set up as a pillar, shall be Gods house, and of all that thou shalt give me, I will give the tenth to thee.

In vowing, We have these things to observe: 1. We must not vow that which is unlawfull. 2. We ought not to vow the performance of that, which is contrary to our vocation. 3. Vowes must be of that which we can doe. 4. They must bee farre from so much as a conceit of merit, or worship of God. 5. We must so performe our vowes, as that they encroch not upon the libertie of conscience which Christ hath given us: and therefore looke how the probable causes thereof doe remaine, or are taken away, so accordingly stands our libertie in keeping a vow. Deut. 23. 18. Thou shalt neither bring the hire of a whoore, nor the price of a dogge, into the house of the Lord thy God, for any vow. verse 21. When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord thy God, thou shalt not be slacke to pay it: for the Lord thy God will surely require it of thee: but when thou abstainest from vowing, it shall be no sinne unto thee, &c. verse 23. Psal. 66. 14. I will pay my vowes which my lippes have promised.

Fasting, is when a man perceiving the want of some blessing, or suspecting and seeing some imminent calamity upon himselfe, or other, abstaineth not onely from flesh for a season, but also from all delights and sustenance, that hee thereby may make a more diligent search of his owne sinnes, and offer most humble prayers unto God, that hee would withhold that, which his anger threatned; or bestow upon us some such good thing as we want. Math. 9. 15. Can the children of the marriage chamber mourne, so long as the bridegroome is with them? 1. Cor. 7. 5. Defraud not one another, except for a time, that ye may the better fast & pray. Ioel 1. 12. Wherefore even now, saith the Lord, bee ye turned unto me, with all your heart, with fasting and prayer. verse 17. Rent your hearts, and not your garments, and turne unto the Lord your God; for he is gracious & mercifull long suffering, & of great kindnes, that he might repet him of his evil. v. 15.

Blow the trumpet in Sion, sanctifie a fast, call a solemne assembly. v.16. Gather the people, sanctifie the congregation, gather the Elders, assemble the children, and those that suck the breasts. Let the bridegroome go forth of his chamber, & the bride out of her bride chamber. ver. 17. Let the Priests the ministers of the Lord weepe betweene the porch and the altar, and let them say, Spare thy people O God, &c.

A fast is sometime private, sometimes publike. 2. Chron. 20. 3. Iehoshaphat feared, and set himselfe to seeke the Lord, and proclaimed a fast throughout all Iudah. Hest. 4. 16. Fast ye for me, and neither eate nor drinke for the space of three dayes and nights, I also and my maides will fast.

A fast, is either for one day alone, or for many dayes together. Each of them, is, as occasion serveth, an abstinence from meat at dinner alone, or supper alone, or both dinner and supper. Iud. 20. 23. The children of Israel had gone up and wept before the Lord unto the evening, &c. Dan. 10. 3. I Daniel was in heavinesse for three weekes of daies, I ate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, &c.

IV. Leagues of amitie among such as truly feare God according to his word, are lawfull: as contracts in matrimonie, league in war, especially if the warre be lawfull, and without confidence in the power of man. 2. Chr. 19. 2. Mal. 2. 11.

To these may bee added, that covenant which the magistrate and people make among themselves, and with God; for the preservation of Christian religion. 2. Chr. 15. 12. And they made a covenant to seeke the Lord God of their fathers with all their heart, and with all their soule, &c. v. 14. And they sware unto the Lord with a loud voyce, and with shouting, and with trumpets, and with cornets.

CHAP. XXII.

Of the third Commandement.

THE third commandement concerneth the glorifying of God in the affaires of our life, out of the solemne service of God.

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vaine: for the Lord will not hold him guiltlesse that taketh his name in vaine.

The Resolution.

Name] This word properly signifieth Gods title: here figuratively it is used for any thing, whereby God may be knowne, as men are by their names: so it is used for his word, works, judgements. Act. 9. 15. He is an elect vessell, to convey my name among the Gentiles. Psal. 8. 1. O Lord our GOD, how great is thy name through all the world! which setteſt thy glory above the heavens.

Take] That is, usurpe: this word is translated from precious things, which may not bee touched without license. And in truth men which are no better then wormes creeping on the earth, are utterly unworthy to take, or as I may say, touch the sacred name of God with minde, or mouth: nevertheless God of his infinite kindnesse permitteth us so to doe.

In vaine] Namely, for no cause, nor matter, and upon each light and fond occasion.

For] The reason of this commandement is taken from the penaltie annexed. Hee that abuseth Gods name, is guilty of sinne before Gods judgement seate: and therefore is most miserable. Psal. 32. 1, 2. Blessed is the man whose iniquitie is forgiven, and whose sinne is covered: blessed is the man to whom God imputeth not sinne.

Guiltlesse] That is, hee shall not bee unpunished.

The negative part.

Thou shalt not bereave God of that honour that is due unto him.

Here is included each severall abuse of any thing, that is used in the course of our lives, out of the solemne service of God.

I. Perjury, when a man performeth not that, which as he meant in his heart, hee sware to doe, Math. 5. 33. Thou shalt not forsweare thy selfe, but performe thine oath to the Lord.

Perjury containeth in it foure capitall sins, 1. Lying. 2. False invocation on Gods name, because a forswearer calleth on God to confirme a lie. 3. Contempt of Gods threatnings, that hee will most grievously punish perjury 4. A lie in his covenant with God: for the forswearer bindeth himselfe to God, and lieth unto God.

II. To sweare that which is false. This is to make God like to the devill. Iohn 8. 44. Ye are of your father the devill, & when he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of himselfe, because he is a lyer & the father of lies. Zach. 5. 4. It shall enter into the house of him, that sweareth falsely by my name.

III. To sweare in common talke. Math. 5. 37. Let your communication be yea, yea, and nay, nay: for whatsoever is more then these, commeth of evill.

IV. To sweare by that which is no God. Mat. 5. 34, 35. But I say unto you, sweare not at all, neither by heaven, for it is Gods throne: neither by the earth, for it is his footstoole, neither by Hierusalem, for it is the city of the great King. 1. Kings 19. 2. Iesabel sent a messenger to Elias, saying, Thus doe the Gods, and so let them deale with me, if I by to morrow this time, make not thy life, as is the life of every one of them. Ier. 12. 16. They taught my people to sweare by Baal. Ier. 5. 7. Thy sonnes forsake mee, and sweare by them which are no Gods.

This place condemneth that usuall swearing by the masse, faith, and such like Matth. 23. 22. He that sweareth by heaven, sweareth by Gods throne, and him that sitteth thereon.

But for a man to sweare by Christs death, wounds, blood, and other parts of his, is most horrible: and is as much, as to crucifie Christ againe with the Iewes, or account Christs members, as God himselfe.

V. Blasphemie, which is a reproch against God;

God; and the leaſt ſpeech that ſavoureth of contempt to his majeſty. Lev.24.15,16. Whoſoever curſeth his God, ſhall beare his ſinnes. And he that blaſphemeth the name of the Lord, ſhall be put to death. 2 King.19.10. So ſhall ye ſay to the king of Iudah: let not thy God deceive thee, in whom thou truſteſt, ſaying, Ieruſalem ſhall not be given into the hand of the king of Aſſur. Ajax in the Tragedy, hath this blaſphemous ſpeech, that every coward may overcome, if he have God on his ſide: as for him, he can get the victory without Gods aſſiſtance. That ſlye taunt of the Pope is likewiſe blaſphemous, wherein he calleth himſelfe the ſervant of Gods ſervants: when as in truth, he maketh himſelfe Lord of lords, and God ſubject to his vaine fantaſie.

VI. Curſing our enemies: as, Goe with a vengeance: or, the divell goe with thee. Or, our ſelves; as, I would I might never ſtirre: or, as God ſhall judge my ſoule, &c. To this place we may referre the execrations of Iob 3. Ierem. 15.

VII. To uſe the name of God careleſſely in our common talke: as, when wee ſay, good God how ſlow art thou! good Lord where haſt thou bin! O Ieſus! or Ieſus God! &c. Phil.2.10. At the name of Ieſus ſhall every knee bow, of things in heaven, things in earth, and things under the earth. Eſay 45.23. Every knee ſhall bow unto mee, and every tongue ſhall ſweare by mee.

VIII. Abuſing Gods creatures: as, when we either deride the workemanſhip of God, or the manner of working: againe, when we debaſe the excellency of the worke, obſcure Gods good gifts in our brother, or diſcommend ſuch meats as God hath ſent us to eate: finally, when as we in the uſe and contemplation of any of Gods creatures, give not him the due praiſe and glory. 1 *Cor.*10.31. Whether ye eate or drinke, or whatſoever yee doe elſe, ſee that ye doe all to the glory of God. Pſalme 19.1. The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament ſheweth his handy worke.

IX. Lots, as when we ſearch what muſt be (as they ſay) our fortune by dice, bones, books, or ſuch like. For we are not to uſe lots, but with great reverence: in that the diſpoſition of them immediately commeth from the Lord, and their proper uſe is to decide great controverſies. Prov. 16.33. The lot is caſt into the lap, but the whole diſpoſition thereof is in the Lord. Pro.18.18. The Lot cauſeth contentions to ceaſe, and maketh a partition among the mightie. For this cauſe the land of Canaan was divided by lots. Ioſh. 14. and 15. chapters. By which alſo both the high Prieſts, and the Kings were elected: as Saul; 1 Sam. 10. and Matthias into the place of Iudas Iſcariot, *Act.*1.26.

X. Superſtition, which is an opinion conceived of the works of Gods providence: the reaſon whereof, can neither be drawne out of the word of God, nor the whole courſe of nature. As for example: that it is unluckie for one in the morning to put on his ſhooe awry, or to put the left ſhooe on the right foot: to ſneeze in drawing on his ſhooes; to have ſalt fall toward him; to have an Hare croſſe him; to bleed ſome few drops of blood; to burne on the right eare. Againe, that it is contrarily good lucke, to finde old yron, to have drinke ſpilled on him, for the left eare to burne, to pare our nailes on ſome day of the weeke, to dreame of ſome certaine things. The like ſuperſtition, is to ſurmiſe that beaſts may be tamed by verſes, prayers, or the like; That the repetition of the Creede, or the Lords prayer, can infuſe into hearbs a facultie of healing diſeaſes. Deut. 18. 11. Here alſo is Palmeſtry condemned, when by the inſpection of the hand, our fortune is foretold.

Theſe and ſuch like, albeit they have true events, yet are we not to give credence unto them: for God permitteth them to have ſuch ſucceſſe, that they which ſee and heare ſuch things, may be tried, and it may appeare what confidence they have in God. *Deut.*13.

XI. Aſtrologie, whether it be in caſting of nativities, or making Prognoſtications. This counterfeit Art is nothing elſe, but a meere abuſe of the heavens, and of the ſtars. 1. The twelve houſes, which are the ground of all figures, are made of the fained ſignes of a ſuppoſed Zodiacke, in the higheſt ſpheare commonly called the firſt Mooveable: and therefore to theſe houſes a man cannot truly aſcribe any influence or vertue. 2. This art ariſeth not from experience; becauſe the ſame poſition of all ſtarres never happeneth twice: and if it did, yet could there not be any obſervation made from thence, becauſe the efficacie and influence of the ſtarres is confuſedly mixed both in the ayre and in the earth, as if all hearbs were mingled together in one veſſell. 3. This art withdraweth mens minds from the contemplation of Gods providence, when as they heare, that all things fall out by the motion, and poſition of the ſtarres. 4. Starres were not ordained to fore-tell things to come, but to diſtinguiſh dayes, moneths, and yeeres. Gen.1. 14. Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven, to ſeparate the day from the night: and let them bee for ſignes, and for ſeaſons, and for daies, and for yeeres. 5. Eſa. 47.13. Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counſels: let now the Aſtrologers, the ſtar-gazers, and Prognoſticators ſtand up and ſave thee from theſe things, that ſhall come upon thee. verſe 14. Behold they ſhall be as ſtubble: the fire ſhall burne them, &c. Dan. 2.2. The King commanded to call the Inchanters, Aſtrologers, Sorcerers, and Chaldeans, to ſhew the King his dreame. Act.19.10. Many of them which uſed curious arts, brought their bookes, and burned them before all men. 6. Aſtrologicall predictions are converſant about ſuch things, which either ſimply depend on the meere will and diſpenſation of God, and not on the heavens: or elſe ſuch, as depending upon mans free-will, are altogether contingent:

and therefore can neither be fore-ſeene, nor fore-told. 7. It is impoſſible by the bare knowledge of ſuch a cauſe, as is both common to many, and far diſtant from ſuch things as it worketh in, preciſely to ſet downe particular effects: but the ſtars are common cauſes of thoſe which are done upon earth, and alſo farre remote: and therefore a man can no more ſurely foretell what ſhall enſue by the contemplation of the ſtarres, then hee which ſeeth an hen ſitting, can tell what kinde of chicken ſhall be in every egge.

Queſt. Have then the ſtarres no force in inferiour things?

Anſwer. Yes undoubtedly, the ſtarres have a very great force, yet ſuch as manifeſteth it ſelfe onely in that operation which it hath in the foure principall qualities of naturall things namely, in heate, cold, moyſture, and drineſſe; and therefore in altering the ſtate, and diſpoſition of the ayre, and in diverſly affecting compound bodies, the ſtarres have no ſmall effect. But they are ſo farre from enforcing the will to doe any thing, that they cannot ſo much as give unto it the leaſt inclination. Now to define how great force the ſtars have, it is beyond any mans reach. For albeit, the effects of the Sunne, in the conſtitution of the foure parts of the yeere, are apparent to all, and the operation of the Moone not very obſcure; yet the force and nature both of planets and fixed ſtarres, which are to us innumerable, are not ſo manifeſt. Therefore ſeeing man knoweth onely ſome ſtarres, and their only operation, and not all with their forces, it cannot be, that he ſhould certainly fore-tell future things, although they did depend on the ſtarres. For what if the poſition of ſuch and ſuch certaine ſtarres, doe demonſtrate ſuch an effect to enſue? may not the aſpects of ſuch as thou yet knoweſt not, hinder that, and produce the contrary?

Queſtion. Is then the uſe of Aſtrologie utterly impious?

Anſw. That part of Aſtrology, which concerneth the alteration of the ayre, is almoſt all both falſe and frivolous; and therefore in a manner all predictions grounded upon that doctrine are meere toyes, by which the ſilly and ignorant people are notably deluded. As for that other part of Aſtrology, concerning Nativities, revolutions, progreſſions, and directions of Nativities, as alſo that which concerneth election of times, and the finding againe of things loſt, it is very wicked; and it is probable, that it is of the ſame brood with implicite and cloſe Magique. My reaſons are theſe: I. The word of God reckoning Aſtrologers amongſt Magitians, adjudgeth them both to one and the ſame puniſhment. II. But the Aſtrologer ſaith, hee fore-telleth many things, which, as he ſaid, come to paſſe: be it ſo: but how, I demand? and by what meanes? He ſaith by Art: but that I deny. For the precepts of his Art will appeare to ſuch as reade them not with a prejudicate affection, very ridiculous. Whence then, I pray you, doth this curious diviner fore-ſhew the truth, but by an inward and ſecret inſtinct from the divell? This is Auguſt: opinion, in his 5. booke, and 7. chap. of the City of God. If we weigh all theſe things, ſaith he, wee will not without cauſe beleeve, that Aſtrologers, when they doe wonderfully declare many truths, worke by ſome ſecret inſtinct of evill ſpirits, which deſire to fill mens braines with erroneous and dangerous opinions of ſtarry deſtinies, and not by any Art, derived from the inſpection and conſideration of the Horoſcope, which indeed is none.

XII. Popiſh conſecration of water and ſalt, to reſtore the minde unto health and to chaſe away divels. The reformed Miſſal. pag. 96.

XIII. To make jeſts of the Scripture phraſe. Eſay 66. 2. I will looke even to him that is poore, and of a contrite ſpirit, & which trembleth at my words. We have an example of ſuch ſcoffing in the Tripart. hiſt. chapter 39. booke 6. The heathen did grievouſly oppreſſe the Chriſtians; and inflicted ſometimes upon their bodies corporal puniſhments. The which when the Chriſtians ſignified unto the Emperour, hee diſdained to aſſiſt them, and ſent them away with this ſcoffe: You are to ſuffer injuries patiently, for ſo yee are commanded of your God.

XIV. Lightly to paſſe over Gods judgements, which are ſeene in the world. Mat. 26. 34. Verily, verily, I ſay unto thee, this night before the cocke crow, thou ſhalt deny me thrice. v. 35. Peter ſaid unto him, Though I ſhould die with thee, I will not deny thee. Luk. 13. 1, 2, 3. There was a certaine man preſent at the ſame ſeaſon, that ſhewed him of the Galileans, whoſe blood Pilate had mingled with their owne ſacrifices. And Ieſus anſwered, and ſaid unto them: Suppoſe ye that theſe Galileans were greater ſinners, then all the other Galileans, becauſe they have ſuffered ſuch things? I tell you nay: but except ye amend your lives, ye ſhall likewiſe periſh.

XV. A diſſolute converſation. Mat. 5. 16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they ſeeing your good works, may glorifie your Father which is in heaven. 2. Sam. 12. 14. Becauſe that by this deed, thou haſt made the enemies of the Lord to blaſpheme, the childe that is borne unto thee, ſhall ſurely die.

The affirmative part.

In all things give God his due glory. 1. Cor. 10. 31. To this appertaine:

I. Zeale of Gods glory above all things in the world beſides. Numb. 25. 8. When Phineas the ſonne of Eleazar ſaw it, he followed the man of Iſrael into his tent: and thruſt them both thorow: to wit, both the man of Iſrael, and the woman through her belly. Pſal. 69. 9. The zeale of thine houſe hath eaten me up, and the reproaches of the ſcornefull have fallen upon me.

II. To uſe Gods titles onely in ſerious affaires, and that with all reverence. Deut. 28. 58. If thou wilt not keepe and doe all the words of this law (that are written in this booke) and feare this glorious and feareſull name, THE LORD THY GOD. Romanes 9. 5. Of whom are the fathers, and of whom, concerning the fleſh, Chriſt came, who is God over all, bleſſed for ever, Amen.

III. An holy commemoration of the creature, whereby we, in the contemplation and admiration of the dignitie and excellency thereof, yeeld an approbation when we name it, and celebrate the praiſe of God, brightly ſhining in the ſame. Pſal. 64. 9,10. And all men ſhall fee it, and declare the worke of God, and they ſhall underſtand what he hath wrought: but the righteous ſhall be glad in the Lord, and truſt in him: and all that are upright of heart, ſhall reioyce. Luk. 2. 18,19. And all they that heard it, wondered at the things that were told them of the ſhepheards: but Mary kept all theſe things, and pondered them in her heart. Ier. 5. 22. Feare yee not me, ſaith the Lord? or will ye not be afraid at my preſence, which have placed the ſands for the bounds of the ſea, by the perpetuall decree, that it cannot paſſe it? and though the waves thereof rage, yet can they not prevaile, though they roare, yet can they not paſſe over it.

IV. An oath, in which we muſt regard: 1. How an oath is to be taken. 2. How it is to be performed. In taking an oath, foure circumſtances muſt be obſerved.

I. The matter or parts of an oath: the parts are in number foure. 1. Confirmation of a truth. 2. Invocation of God alone as a witneſſe of the truth, and a revenger of a lye. 3. Confeſſion, that God is a revenger of perjury when he is brought in as a falſe witneſſe. 4. A binding over unto puniſhment if we uſe deceit.

II. The forme. We muſt ſweare. 1. truly, leſt we forſweare. 2. Iuſtly, leſt we ſweare to that which is wicked. 3. In judgement, leſt we ſweare raſhly, or for a trifle. Ier. 4. 2. Thou ſhalt ſweare, the Lord liveth, in truth, in iudgement, and righteouſneſſe. Eſa. 48. 1. Which ſweare by the name of the Lord, and make mention of the God of Iſrael, but not in truth nor in righteouſneſſe, &c. Therefore the oath of drunken, furious, and franticke men, alſo oathes of children, they doe not impoſe an obſervation of them, but by law are no oathes.

III. The end, namely, to confirme ſome neceſſary truth in queſtion. Hebr. 6. 16. Men ſweare by him that is greater then themſelves: and an oath for confirmation, is among them an end of all ſtrife. I call that a neceſſary truth, when ſome doubt, which muſt neceſſarily bee decided, can none other way be determined, then by an oath: as when Gods glory, our neighbours ſafety and credit; a mans owne neceſſitie and faithfulnes is in queſtion. Rom. 1. 9. God is my witneſſe (whom I ſerve in my ſpirit in the Goſpel of his Son) that without ceaſing I make mention of you. 2 Cor. 2. 23. I call God for a record unto my ſoule, that to ſpare you, I came not as yet unto Corinth. IV. The divers kinds or ſorts of oathes. An oath is publike or private.

A Publike, when the Magiſtrate, without any perill to him that ſweareth, doth upon juſt cauſe exact a teſtimony under the reverence of an oath.

A private oath is, which two or more take privately. This, ſo that it be ſparingly and warily uſed, is lawfull. For if in ſerious affaires, and matter of great importance, it be lawfull in private to admit God as a Iudge, why ſhould he not as well be called to witneſſe? Againe, the examples of holy men ſhew the practiſe of private oathes, as not unlawfull Iacob and Laban confirmed their covenant one with another by oath; the like did Booz in his contract with Ruth.

B To this place may be added an aſſeveration, the which albeit it be like an oath, yet indeed is none, and it is nothing elſe but an earneſt aſſertion of our meaning, the name of a creature being ſometime uſed. Such was Chriſts aſſertion, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you. And Pauls, I call God to record in my ſpirit. Where is both an oath and aſſeveration. 1 Cor. 15. 31. By our reioycing which I have in Ieſus Chriſt, I die daily. 1 Sam. 20. 3. Indeed as the Lord liveth, and as thy ſoule liveth, there is but a ſtep betweene mee and death. And ſurely, in ſuch a kinde of aſſeveration there is great equitie: for albeit it be unlawfull to ſweare by creatures, leſt Gods honour and power ſhould be attributed unto them: yet thus farre may we uſe them in an C oath, as to make them pledges, and as it were cogniſances of Gods glory.

The performance of an oath, is on this manner: If the oath made, be of a lawfull thing, it muſt be performed, be it of much difficulty, great dammage, or extorted by force of him that made it. Pſal. 15. 4. He that ſweareth to his hinderance, and changeth not, hee ſhall dwell in Gods tabernacle. Yet may the Magiſtrate, as it ſhall ſeeme right and convenient, either annihilate or moderate ſuch oathes.

Contrarily, if a man ſweare to performe things unlawfull, and that by ignorance, error, or infirmitie, or any other way, his oath is to be recalled. For wee may not adde ſinne unto ſinne. 1 Sam. 25. 21. And David ſaid, Indeed I have kept all in vaine, that this fellow had in the wilderneſſe, &c. verſe 22. So and more alſo doe God unto the enemies of David: for ſurely I will not leave of all that hee hath, by the dawning of the day, any that piſſeth againſt the wall. v. 33. David ſaid, Bleſſed be thy counſell, and bleſſed be thou, which haſt kept me this day from comming to ſhed blood, and that mine hand hath not ſaved mee. 2 Sam. 19. 23. David promiſeth that Shimei ſhould not die: but 1 King. 28. 9. David ſaith to Salomon, Though I ſweare ſo, yet thou ſhalt not count him innocent, but cauſe his hoarehead to goe downe to the grave with blood.

V. Sanctification of Gods creatures and ordinances, the which is a ſeparation of them to an holy uſe. Thus ought we to ſanctifie our meats and drinks, the works of our calling, and marriage bed.

LIBRARY OF THE UNION THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY. NEW YORK.

The meanes of this ſanctification are two: Gods word, and prayer. 1 Tim. 4. 4. All which God hath created is good, and nothing muſt be rejected, if it be received with thankſgiving: for it is ſanctified by the word and prayer.

By the word we are inſtructed; firſt, whether God alloweth the uſe of ſuch things, or not: ſecondly, we learne after what holy manner, in what place, at what time, with what affection, and to what end we muſt uſe them, Heb. 11. 6. Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. Pſalme 116. 24. Thy teſtimonies are my delight, they are my counſellers. Ioſh. 22. 19, 20. 1 Sam. 15. 23.

Prayer, which ſanctifieth, is petition and thankeſgiving.

By petition, we obtaine of Gods majeſty, aſſiſtance by his grace, to make an holy uſe of his creatures, and ordinances. Coloſſ. 3. 17. Whatſoever ye ſhall doe in word or deed, doe all in the name of the Lord Ieſus, giving thanks to God even the Father by him. 1 Samuel 17. 45. Then ſaid David to the Philiſtime, Thou commeſt to mee with a ſword, and with a ſpeare, and with a ſhield: but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of Hoſts, the God of the Hoſt of Iſrael, whom thou haſt railed upon. Mich. 4. 5. We muſt walke in the name of the Lord our God, for ever and ever. Here may wee obſerve prayer made upon particular occaſion. 1. For a proſperous journey. Act. 21 5. When the dayes were ended, we departed, and went our way, and they all accompanied us with their wives and children, even out of the city: and wee kneeling downe on the ſhore, prayed, &c. 2. For a bleſſing upon meats at the table. Ioh. 6. 11. Then Ieſus tooke the bread, and when hee had given thanks, he gave it to his Diſciples, and his Diſciples to them, that were ſet downe: and likewiſe of the fiſhes as much as they would. Act. 27. 35. He tooke bread and gave thanks to God in preſence of them all, and brake it, and began to eate. 3. For iſſue in child-birth. This did Anna. 1 Sam. 1. 12. And Zachary, Luk. 1. 13. 4. For good ſucceſſe in buſineſſe, Gen. 24. 12. Abrahams ſervant prayed.

Thankſgiving is the magnifying of Gods name, even the Father through Chriſt, for his grace, aide, and bleſſing in the lawfull uſe of the creatures. Phil. 4. 6. In all things let your requeſts be ſhewed unto God in prayer and ſupplication, and giving of thankes. 1 Theſſ 5. 18. In all things give thanks: for this is the will of God, in Chriſt toward you. This we may reade uſed. 1. after meate, Deut. 8. 10. When thou haſt eaten and filled thy ſelfe, thou ſhalt bleſſe the Lord thy God, for the good land which he hath given thee. 2. After the loſſe of outward wealth. Iob 1. 21. And Iob ſaid, Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked ſhall I returne again: the Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken away, bleſſed be the name of the Lord for evermore. 3. For deliverance out of ſervitude. Exod. 18. 10. Iethro ſaid, Bleſſed be the Lord, who hath delivered you out of the hands of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh, who alſo hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians. 4. For children. Gen. 29. 35. Shee conceived againe, and bare a ſonne, ſaying, now I will praiſe the Lord, therefore ſhee called his name Iudah. 5. For victory. 2 Sam. 22. 1. And David ſpake the words of this ſong unto the Lord, what time the Lord had delivered him out of the hands of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saul, and ſaid, The Lord is my rocke, and my fortreſſe, &c. 6. For good ſucceſſe in domeſticall affaires, Abrahams ſervant. Gen. 24. 48. Bleſſed the Lord of his maſter Abraham.

CHAP. XXIII.

Of the fourth Commandement.

THE fourth Commandement concerneth the Sabbath, namely, that holy time conſecrated to the worſhip and glorifying of God. The words are theſe:

Remember the Sabbath day to keepe it holy: ſixe dayes ſhalt thou labour, and doe all thy worke: but the ſeventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God, in it thou ſhalt do no manner of worke; thou, nor thy ſonne, nor thy daughter, thy man-ſervant, nor thy maid, nor thy beaſt, nor thy ſtranger that is within thy gates. For in ſixe daies the Lord made the heaven and the earth, the ſea, and all that in them is, and reſted the ſeventh day: therefore the Lord bleſſed the ſeventh day, and hallowed it.

The Reſolution.

Remember] This clauſe doth inſinuate, that in times paſt there was great neglect in the obſervation of the Sabbath: and would that all degrees and conditions of men ſhould prepare themſelves to ſanctifie the ſame: eſpecially thoſe that be governours of families, incorporations and cities, to whom this commandement is directed.

To keepe it holy, or, to ſanctifie it] To ſanctifie, is to ſever a thing from common uſe, and to conſecrate the ſame to the ſervice of God. Here are deſcribed the two parts of this commandement: the firſt whereof, is reſt from labour: the ſecond, ſanctification of that reſt.

Sixe daies] Theſe words containe a cloſe anſwer to this objection. It is much to ceaſe from our callings one whole day. The anſwer (together with a firſt reaſon to inforce the ſanctification of the Sabbath) is in theſe words, which is taken from the greater to the leſſe: If I permit thee to follow thy calling, ſixe whole dayes, thou maieſt well, and muſt leave one onely to ſerve mee.

But the firſt is true. Therefore the ſecond.

The firſt propoſition is wanting: the ſecond, or aſſumption of theſe words, Sixe dayes, &c. The concluſion is the commandement it ſelfe.

Here may wee ſee, that God hath given us free liberty to worke all the ſixe dayes. The which freedome no man can annihilate. Nevertheleſſe, upon extraordinary occaſions, the Church of God is permitted to ſeparate one day or more of the fixe, as neede is, either to fasting, or for a solemne day of reioycing for some benefit receiued, Ioel 2.15.

The seauenth day] The second reason of this commandement is taken from the end thereof.

If the Sabbath were consecrated to God and his seruice; wee must that day abstaine from our labours.

But it was consecrated to God and his seruice:

The assumption is in these words, (the seauenth day, &c.) where we must note, that God alone hath this priuiledge, to haue a Sabbath consecrated unto him: and therefore all holy daies dedicated to whatsoeuer either Angell or Saint, are unlawfull: howsoeuer the Church of Rome haue imposed the obseruation of them upon many people.

In it thou shalt doe] This is the conclusion of the second reason, illustrated by a distribution from the causes. Thou, thy son, thy daughter, thy seruant, thy cattell, thy stranger, shall cease that day from your labours.

Any worke] That is, any ordinary worke of your callings, and such as may bee done the day before, or left well vndone till the day after. Yet for all this, wee are not forbidden to performe such works euen on this day, as are both holy, and of present necessity.

Such are those workes, which doe upon that day preserue and maintaine the seruice and glory of God, as I. A Sabbath dayes journey. Acts 1.12. Which is neere to Hierusalem, containing a Sabbath dayes journey. II. The killing and dressing of sacrificed beasts in the time of the Law. Matth.12.5. Haue yee not read in the law, how that on the Sabbath daies the Priests in the Temple breake the Sabbath, and are blamelesse? III. Iourneyes unto the Prophets, and places appointed unto the worship of God. 2 King. 4.23. Hee said, why wilt thou goe unto him this day? it is neither new Moone nor Sabbath day. Psal. 84.7. They goe from strength, to strength, till every one appeare before God in Zion.

Such also are the works of mercy, whereby the safety of life or goods is procured: as that which Paul did. Act.20.9. As Paul was long preaching, Eutychus ouercome with sleep, fell downe from the third loft, and was taken up dead: But Paul went down and laid himselfe upon him, & imbraced him saying, Trouble not your selues: for his life is in him. v.12. And they brought the boy aliue, and they were not a little comforted. II. To helpe a beast out of a pit. Luk.14.5. Which of you shall haue an oxe, or an asse falne into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the Sabbath day? III. Prouision of meate and drinke. Math.12.1. Iesus went through the corne on the Sabbath day, and his Disciples were an hungred, and began to pluck the eares of corne, and to eate. In prouision wee must take heed that our cookes, and household seruants breake not the Sabbath. The reason of this is framed from the lesse to the greater, out of that place, 2 Sam.23.15. David longed, and said. Oh that one would giue me to drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem, which is by the gate. vers. 16. Then the three mighties brake into the host of the Philistims, & drew water out of the well of Bethlehem that was by the gate, and tooke and brought it to David, who would not drinke thereof, but powred it for an offering unto the Lord. v.17. And said, O Lord, be it far from me that I should do this: is not this the blood of the men that went in jeopardy of their liues? therefore would he not drinke

The reason standeth thus, If David would not haue his seruants adventure their corporall liues for his prouision, nor drinke the water when they had prouided it, much lesse ought wee for our meates to adventure the soules of our seruants. IV. Watering of cattell. Luk. 13.15. The Lord answered and said, thou Hypocrite, wil not any of you on the Sabbath daies loose his oxe or asse out of the stable, & bring him to the water? Vpon the like present and holy necessitie, Physitians, upon the Sabbath day, may take a journey to visit the diseased. Mariners their voyage, Shepheards may tend their flocke, and Midwives may helpe women with childe. Mark.2.27. The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath.

Within thy gates] This word gate, signifieth by a figure jurisdiction and authority. Matth. 16.18. The gates of hell shall not ouercome it. Let this be a looking glasse, wherein all inholders, and entertainers of strangers may looke into themselues, and behold what is their dutie.

For in fixe daies] The third reason of this commandement is from the like example.

That which I did, thou also must doe.

But I rested the seuenth day, and hallowed it.

Therefore thou must doe the like.

God sanctified the Sabbath, when hee did consecrate it to his seruice; men sanctifie it, when they doe worship God in it. In this place we are to consider the Sabbath, how farre forth it is ceremoniall, and how farre forth Morall.

The Sabbath is ceremoniall, in respect of the strict obseruation thereof, which was a type of the internall sanctification of the people of God and that is, as it were, a continuall resting from the worke of sinne. Exod.31.13. Speake thou also unto the children of Israel, and say, Notwithstanding keepe ye my Sabbath: for it is a signe betweene me & you in your generations, that yee may know that I the Lord doe sanctifie you. The same is recorded, Ezech.20.12.

It signified also that blessed rest of the faithfull, in the Kingdome of heaven. Isai. 66 23. From moneth to moneth, and from Sabbath to Sabbath, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord. Heb.4.8 9.10. If Iesus had giuen them a rest, &c.

The Sabbath is likewise ceremoniall, in that it was obserued the seuenth day after the creation of the world, and was then solemnized with such ceremonies. Num.28.9. But on the Sabbath day ye shall offer two lambs of a yeer old, without spot, and two tenth deales of fine flowre for a meate offering, mingled with oyle, and the drinke offering thereof, v. 10. This is the burnt offering of every Sabbath, beside the continuall burnt offering and drinke offering thereof.

But now in the light of the Gospel, and the Churches professing the same, the ceremony of the Sabbath is ceased. Col. 2. 16. Let no man condemne you in meat and drinke, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new Moone, or of the Sabbath. v. 17. Which are but shadowes of things to come, but the body is Christ. The observation of the Sabbath was translated by the Apostles from the seventh day, to the day following. Act. 20. 7. The first day of the weeke, the Disciples being come together to breake bread, Paul preached to them. 1 Cor. 16. 1, 2. Concerning the gathering for the Saints, as I have ordained in the Churches of Galatia, so doe ye also; every first day of the weeke, let every one of you put aside by himselfe, and lay up as God hath prospered him, that then there be no gatherings when I come. This day, by reason that our Saviour did upon it rise againe, is called the Lords day. Revel. 1. 10. I was ravished in the spirit on the Lords day.

The observation of the Sabbath thus constituted by the Apostles, was nevertheless neglected of those Churches, which succeeded them, but after was revived and established by Christian Emperours, as a day most apt to celebrate the memory of the creation of the world, and to the serious meditation of the redemption of mankinde, Leo and Anton. Edict. of Holy dayes.

The observation of the Sabbath, is morall, in as much as it is a certen seventh day, which preserveth and conserveth the ministery of the word, and the solemne worship of God, especially in the assemblies of the Church. And in this respect we are upon this day, as well enjoyned a rest from our vocations, as the Iewes were. Esa. 58. 13. If thou turne away thy foot from the Sabbath from doing thy will on mine holy day: and call my Sabbath a delight, to consecrate it, as glorious to the Lord, and shalt honour him, not doing thine owne wayes, &c.

Finally, it is morall, in that it freeth servants and cattell from their labours, which on other dayes doe service to their Owners.

Keepe holy the Sabbath day. This we doe, if we cease from the workes of sinne, and of our ordinary calling; performing those spirituall workes which wee are commanded in the second and third commandements.

I. To arise earely in the morning, that so we may prepare our selves to the better sanctifying of the Sabbath ensuing. This preparation consisteth in private prayers, and taking account of our severall sinnes. Mark. 1. 35. In the morning very early before day, Iesus arose and went into a solitary place, and there prayed. The day following was the Sabbath, when he preached in the Synagogues. 39. Exod. 32. 5, 6. Aaron proclaimed, saying, To morrow shall be the holy day of the Lord: so they rose up the next day early in the morning. Ecclesiastes 4. ver. last. Take heed to thy feet when thou entrest into the house of God.

II. To be present at publike assemblies, at ordinary houres, there to heare reverently and attentively the word preached and read, to receive the Sacraments, and publikely with the congregation, call upon and celebrate the name of the Lord. 1 Tim. 2. 1, 2, 3. Act. 20. 7. 2 King. 4 22, 23. Act. 13. 14, 15. When they departed from Perga, they came to Antiochia, a Citie of Pisidia, and went into the Synagogue on the Sabbath day, and sate downe. And after the Lecture of the law and Prophets, the Rulers of the Synagogue sent unto them, saying, Yee men and brethren, if yee have any word of exhortation for the people, say on.

III. When publike meetings are dissolved, to spend the rest of the Sabbath in the meditation of Gods Word, and his creatures, Psalm. 92. from the beginning to the ending. Act. 17. 11. These were also more noble men then they which were at Thessalonica, which received the word with all readinesse, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so. We must also exercise then the works of charitie, as to visite the sicke, give almes to the needy, admonish such as fall, reconcile such as are at jarre and discord among themselves, &c. Neh. 8. 12. Then all the people went to eate and to drink, and to send away part, & to make great ioy.

The negative part.

Pollute not the Sabbath of the Lord.

This is a grievous sinne. Math. 24. 20. Pray that your flight be not in winter, nor on the Sabbath day. Lam. 1. 7. The adversaries saw her, and did mocke at her Sabbaths, Levit. 19. 30. Ye shall keepe my Sabbaths, and reverence my Sanctuary, I am the Lord. In this part are these things forbidden.

I. The works of our calling, wherein if we doe ought, it must be altogether in regard of charity, and not in regard of our owne private commoditie.

II. Vnnecessary journeyes. Exod. 16. 29. Tarry every man in his place, let no man goe out of his place the seventh day. By this reason, the master of the family must that day remaine at home, to sanctifie the Sabbath with his household.

III. Faires upon the Sabbath day. Nehem. 13. 19. When the gates of Ierusalem began to be darke before the Sabbath, I commanded to shut the gates, and charged that they should not be opened till after the Sabbath, and some of my servants set I at the gate, that there should no burthen be brought in on the Sabbath day: reade vers. 15, 16, 17, 18.

IV. All kinde of husbandry, as plowing, sowing, reaping, mowing, bringing home harvest, harveſt, and other the like. Exod. 34. 21. In the ſeventh day ſhalt thou reſt, both in earing time, and in the harveſt ſhalt thou reſt.

V. To uſe jeſts, ſports, banqueting, or any other thing whatſoever, which is a meanes to hinder or withdraw the mind from that ſerious attention, which ought to bee in Gods ſervice: for if the workes of our calling muſt not be exerciſed, much leſſe theſe, whereby the minde is as well diſtracted from Gods ſervice, as by the greateſt labour.

VI. An externall obſervation of the Sabbath, without the inward power of godlineſſe. Iſa. 1. 14, 15. My ſoule hateth your new Moones, and your appointed feaſts, they are a burthen unto me, I am weary to beare them: and when you ſhall ſtretch forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you, and though you make many prayers, I will not heare: for your hands are full of blood, 2 Tim. 3. 5. Which have a ſhew of godlines but deny the force thereof: ſuch therefore avoyde.

VII. The manifeſt prophanation of the Sabbath, in pampering the belly, ſurfetting, adultery, and other like prophaneneſſe; which is nothing elſe, but to celebrate a Sabbath to the divell, and not to God.

CHAP. XXIV.

Of the fifth Commandement.

HItherto wee have ſpoken of the Commandements of the firſt Table: now followeth the ſecond Table, which concerneth the love of our neighbour. Rom. 13. 9. Thou ſhalt not commit adultery, thou ſhalt not kill, thou ſhalt not ſteale, thou ſhalt not beare falſe witneſſe, thou ſhalt not covet: and if there be any other Commandement, it is briefely comprehended in this ſaying, namely, thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelfe.

Our neighbour is every one, which is of our owne fleſh. Iſai. 58. 7. When thou ſeeſt the naked, cover him, and hide not thy ſelfe from thine owne fleſh.

The maner of loving, is ſo to love our neighbour as our ſelves, to wit, truly and ſincerely; when as contrarily, the true manner of loving God, is to love God without meaſure.

The ſecond Table containeth ſixe commandements: whereof the firſt, and in the order of the ten Commandements, the fift, concerneth the perſervation of the dignity and excellency of our Neighbour.

The words are theſe:

Honour thy father, and thy mother, that they may prolong thy dayes in the Land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

The Reſolution.

Honour] This Word, by a figure, ſignifieth all that duty, whereby our neighbours dignity is preſerved, but eſpecially our Superiours. This dignity proceedeth of this, that every man beareth in him ſome part of the Image of God, if we reſpect the outward order and decency, which is obſerved in the Church and common-wealth. In the Magiſtrate there is a certaine image of the power and glory of God. Dan. 2. 37. O King, thou art a King of kings, for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdome, power, and ſtrength, and glory. Hence it is, that Magiſtrates are called Gods. Pſal. 82. 1. In an old man is the ſimilitude of the eternity of God: in a father, the likeneſſe of his fatherhood. Matth. 23. 9. And call no man your Father upon the earth: for there is but one, your Father which is in heaven. In the man is the Image of Gods providence and authority. 1 Cor. 11. 7. For a man ought not to cover his head, becauſe he is the image of the glory of God: but the woman is the glory of her husband. Finally, in a learned man, is the likeneſſe of the knowledge and Wiſedome of God. Now therefore that perſon, in whom even the leaſt title of the image of God appeareth, is to be honoured and reverenced.

Thy father] By a figure, we muſt here underſtand all thoſe that are our ſuperiours: as, Parents, and ſuch like of our kindred or alliance, which are to us in ſtead of parents: Magiſtrates, Miniſters, our Elders, and thoſe that doe excell us in any gifts whatſoever. The Kings of Gerar were called Abimelech, my father the King. Gen. 20. 2. Gen. 45. 8. God hath made me a father unto Pharaoh, and Lord over all his houſe. 1 Cor. 4. 15. For though ye have ten thouſand inſtructers in Chriſt, yet have ye not many Fathers: for in Chriſt Ieſus I have begotten you. 2 King. 5. 13. But his ſervants came, and ſpake unto him, and ſaid, Father, if the Prophet had commanded thee a greater thing, wouldeſt thou not have done it? 2 King. 2. 12. And Eliſha ſaw it, and he cryed, My father, my father, the chariot of Iſrael, and the horſemen thereof.

And thy mother] This is added, leſt wee ſhould deſpiſe our mothers, becauſe of their infirmities. Prov. 23. 22. Obey thy father which hath begotten thee, and deſpiſe not thy mother when ſhe is old.

Heere we are put in mind to performe due honour to our ſtepmothers, and fathers in law, as if they were our proper and naturall parents, Ruth 3. 1. and 5. Afterward Naomi her mother in law ſaid unto her, My daughter, ſhall not I ſeeke reſt for thee, that thou mayeſt proſper? And ſhe anſwered her, All that thou biddeſt me, I will doe. Exod. 18. 18. But Moſes father in law ſaid unto him, The thing which thou doeſt is not well. ver. 17. Heare now my voyce, I will give thee counſell, and God ſhall be with thee, verſ. 14. So Moſes obeyed the voyce of his father in law, and did all that he had ſaid. Mich. 7. 6. For the ſonne revileth the father, the daughter riſeth up againſt her mother, the daughter in law, againſt her mother in law.

That they may prolong] Parents are ſaid to prolong the lives of their children, becauſe they are Gods inſtruments, whereby their childrens lives are prolonged: for oftentimes the name of the action is attributed to the inſtru-inſtrument, wherewith the action is wrought, Luk.16.9. Make you friends with the riches of iniquity, that when yee ſhall want, they may receive you into everlaſting habitations. 1 Tim.4. 16. For in doing ſo, thou ſhalt both ſave thy ſelfe and them that heare thee.

But parents doe prolong the lives of their children in commanding them to walke in the wayes of the Lord, by exerciſing juſtice and judgement. Gen. 18.19. For being become godly, they have the promiſe both of this life, and the life to come. 1 *Tim.*4.8.

Further, they effect the ſame thing by their prayers made in the behalfe of their children. Hereby it plainely appeareth, that the uſuall cuſtome of children ſaluting their parents, to aske them their bleſſings, is no light or vaine thing.

Moreover, in theſe words, the reaſon to moove us to the obedience of this commandement, is drawne from the end: which reaſon is alſo a promiſe, yea a ſpeciall promiſe, Eph. 6.2. Honour thy father and thy mother, which is the firſt commandement with promiſe. I ſay, ſpecially becauſe the promiſe of the ſecond Commandement is generall, and belongeth to all the reſt of the Commandements.

And God promiſeth long life not abſolutely, but ſo farre as it is a bleſſing. Eph. 6.3. That it may bee well with thee, and that thou mayeſt live long on earth. For wee muſt thinke that long life is not alwaya bleſſing, but that ſometime it is better to dye then to live. Iſai. 57.1. The righteous periſheth, and no man conſidereth it in heart: and merciſull men are taken away, and no man underſtandeth that the righteous is taken away from the evill to come.

But if at any time the Lord giveth a ſhort life to obedient children, he rewardeth them againe with eternall life in heaven, and ſo the promiſe faileth not, but changeth for the better.

The affirmative part.

Preſerve the dignity of thy neighbour:

Vnder this part is commanded:

Firſt, reverence towards all our Superiors: the actions whereof are; Reverently to riſe up before them when they paſſe by us. Levit. 19. 32. Riſe up before the hoare head, and honour the perſon of the old man, and dread thy God: I am the Lord. To meete them when they come towards us. Gen.18.2. And he lifted up his eyes, and looked: and loe, three men ſtood by him, and when he ſaw them, he ran to meete them from the tent doore. 1 King.2.19. When Bathſheba came to ſpeake to King Salomon, the King roſe to meete her, and bowed himſelfe unto her. To bow the knee, Mark.10.17. And when he was gone out of the way, there came one running and kneeled to him, Gen.18.2. He ranne to meete them, and bowed himſelfe to the ground. To ſtand by them when they ſit downe. *Gen.*18.18. And he tooke butter and milke, and the calfe that he had prepared, and ſet before them, and ſtood himſelfe by them under the tree, and they did eate. Exod. 18.13. Now on the morrow, when Moſes ſate to judge the people, the people ſtood about Moſes from morning unto even. To give them the chiefe ſeate, 1 *Kin.*2.19. And he ſate downe on his throne, and he cauſed a ſeate to bee ſet for the Kings mother, and ſhee ſate downe at his right hand. Luk.14.7,8,9. He ſpake alſo a parable unto the gueſts, when he marked how they choſe out the chiefe roomes, and ſaid unto them, when thou ſhalt be bidden of any man to a wedding ſet not thy ſelfe downe in the chiefeſt place, leſt a more honourable man then thou be bidden of him, and he that had both him and thee, come and ſay to thee, Give this man roome, and thou then begin with ſhame to take the loweſt roome. *Gen.*43.33. So they ſate before him, the eldeſt according to his age, and the yongeſt according to his yonth, and the men marvailed among themſelves. To let our ſuperiours ſpeake before us, Iob 32.6,7.17. To keepe ſilence in Courts and judgement-places, untill we be bidden to ſpeake, Act.24.10. Then Paul after that the Governour had beckened unto him that he ſhould ſpeake, anſwered. To give them ſuch their right and juſt titles, as declare our reverence when we ſpeake unto them, 1 Pet. 3.6. As Sarah obeyed Abraham, and called him Lord: whoſe daughters ye are, whiles ye do well. Mark.10.67. Good maſter, what ſhall I doe, that I may poſſeſſe eternall life? 20. Then he anſwered, and ſaid unto him, Maſter, all theſe things have I obſerved from my youth. 1 Sam.1.14,15. And Eli ſaid unto her, How long wilt thou be drunke? Put away thy drunkennеſſe from thee: then Hannah anſwered and ſaid, Nay my Lord, but I am a woman troubled in ſpirit: I have drunke neither wine nor ſtrong drinke.

Secondly, towards thoſe that be our ſuperiours in authority: and firſt, obedience to their Commandements. Rom.13.1. Let every ſoule be ſubject to the higher powers.

Wee are to bee admoniſhed to obedience: becauſe every higher power is the ordinance of God, and the obedience which wee performe thereto, God accepteth it as though it were done to himſelfe and to Chriſt. Rom, 13.2. Whoſoever therefore, reſiſteth the power, reſiſteth the ordinance of God, and they that reſiſt, ſhall receive to themſelves judgement. Col. 3.23. And whatſoever yee doe, doe it heartily, as unto the Lord, and not unto men. 24. Knowing that of the Lord yee ſhall receive the reward of the inheritance: for yee ſerve the Lord Chriſt. Obedience is to bee performed to our ſuperiours with diligence and faithfulneſſe. Gen.24.2. Abraham ſaid unto his eldeſt ſervant of his houſe, which had the rule over all that he had: Put now thy hand under my thigh, and I will make thee ſweare by the Lord God of heaven, and God of the earth, that thou ſhalt not take a wife unto my ſonne of the daughters of the Canaanites, amongſt whom I dwell. 10. So the ſervant tooke tenne Camels of his maſters, and departed. 12. And hee ſaid, O Lord God of my maſter Abraham, I beſeech thee ſend mee good ſpeede this day, and ſhew mercy unto my maſter Abraham. 33. Afterward the meate was ſet before him, but hee ſaid, I will not eate, untill I have ſaid my meſſage: And Laban ſaid, Speake on, 56. But he ſaid, Hinder me not, ſeeing the Lord hath proſpered my journey: ſend me away that I may goe to my maſter. Gen. 31. 38. This twenty yeares have I beene with thee, thine Ewes and thy Goates have not caſt their young, and the Rams of thy flocke have I not eaten. 39. Whatſoever was torne of beaſts, I brought it not unto thee, but made it good my ſelfe: of mine hand didſt thou require it, were it ſtolne by day, or ſtolne by night. 40. I was in the day conſumed with heate, and with froſt in the night, and my ſleepe departed from mine eyes.

Furthermore, we muſt yeeld obedience to our ſuperiors: yea, although they bee cruell and wicked, but not in wickednesſe, 1 Pet. 2. 18. Servants be ſubject to your maſters with all feare, not onely to the good and courteous, but alſo to the froward. Act. 4. 19 Whether it be right in the ſight of God, to obey you rather then God, judge yee.

Subjection in ſuffering the puniſhments inflicted by our Superiors, Gen. 16. 6. Then Abraham ſaid to Sarai, Behold thy maide is in thine hand, doe with her as pleaſeth thee: then Sarai dealt roughly with her: wherefore ſhe fled from her. 9. Then the Angell of the Lord ſaid unto her, Returne unto thy dame, and humble thy ſelfe under her hands.

And although the puniſhment ſhould bee unjuſt, yet muſt we ſuffer it, untill we can get ſome lawfull remedy for the ſame. 1 Pet. 2. 19. For it is thank-worthy, if a man for conſcience toward God endure griefe, ſuffering wrongfully. 20. For what praiſe is it, if when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye take it patiently? but and if when ye doe well yee ſuffer wrong, and take it patiently, this is acceptable to God.

III. Thankefulneſſe: I. in our prayers. 1 Tim. 2. 1, 2. I exhort you therefore, that firſt of all, ſupplications, prayers, interceſſions, and giving of thankes be made for all men, for Kings, and for all that bee in authority, that wee may leade a quiet and peaceable life, in all godlineſſe and honeſty. II. In outward maintenance. 1 Tim. 5. 17. Elders that rule well, are worthy of double honour. Gen. 45. 9. Haſte you and goe to my Father, and tell him, Thus ſaith thy ſonne Ioſeph, God hath made mee Lord over all Egypt, come downe to me, tarry not. 10. And thou ſhalt dwell in the land of Goſhen. 11. Alſo I will nouriſh thee there, for yet remaine five yeares of famine, leſt thou periſh through poverty, thou and thy houſhold, and all that thou haſt.

Thirdly, towards thoſe that excell us in gifts: our duty is to acknowledge the ſame gifts, and ſpeake of them to their praiſe. 2 Cor. 8. 22, 23.

Fourthly, toward all our equals: to thinke reverently of them. Phil. 2. 3. Let nothing be done through contention or vaine-glory, but in meekeneſſe of minde, let every man eſteeme other better then himſelfe.

In giving honour, to goe one before another, and not in receiving it. Rom. 12. 10. Submit your ſelves one to another in the feare of God. To ſalute one another with holy ſignes, whereby may appeare the love which we have one to another in Chriſt. 1 Pet. 5. 14. Greete one another with the kiſſe of love. Rom. 16. 16. Salute one another with an holy kiſſe. Exod. 18. 7. And Moſes went out to meete his father in law, and did obeyſance, and kiſſed him. Ruth 2. 4. And behold, Boaz came from Bethlehem, and ſaid unto the Reapers, the Lord be with you. And they anſwered, the Lord bleſſe thee.

Fifthly, the duties of all Superiors towards their inferiours: I. Saving their place and dignity, to carry themſelves as brethren. Deut. 17. 20. That his heart bee not liſted up above his brethren, and he turne not from the commandement, to the right hand or to the left. Iob 31. 13. If I did contemne the judgement of my ſervant, and of my maide. 2 King. 5. 13. And his ſervants came and ſpake unto him, and ſaid. 14. Then he went downe, and waſhed himſelfe ſeven times in Iordan, &c. II. To ſhine before their inferiours by an enſample of a blameleſſe life. Titus 2. 2. That the elder men be ſober, honeſt, diſcreete: ſound in faith, in love, and in patience. 3. The elder women likewiſe, that they be in ſuch behaviour, as becommeth holineſſe, not falſe accuſers, not given to much wine, but teachers of honeſt things. 1 Pet. 5. 3. Not as though yee were Lords, over Gods heritage, but that yee may be enſamples to the flocke. Phil. 4. 9. III. To ſhew forth gravity joyned with dignity, by their countenance, geſture, deedes and words: for hereby they muſt grace the Image of God which they beare before their inferiors. Tit. 2. verſ. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. Iob 29. 8. The young men ſaw me, and hid themſelves, the aged aroſe and ſtood up.

Sixthly, towards inferiors in obedience, that is, towards their ſubjects. 1. To rule them in the Lord, that they doe not offend. 1 Pet. 2. 13. Submit your ſelves unto all manner ordinance of man for the Lords ſake, whether it bee unto Kings as unto ſuperiors. 14 or unto governors, as unto them that are ſent of the King for the puniſhment of evill doers, and for the praiſe of them that doe well. Deut. 17. 19. And it ſhall be with him (namely the booke of the Law) and he ſhall reade therein all the dayes of his life, that he may learne to feare the Lord his God, and to keepe all the words of this law, and theſe ordinances to doe them. Col. 4. 1. Ye maſters doe unto your ſervants that which is juſt and equall: knowing that ye alſo have a maſter in heaven. 2. To provide ſuch things as ſhall be to the good of their ſubjects, whether they belong to the body or to the ſoule, Rom. 13. 4. For he is the miniſter of God for thy wealth. Iſai. 49. 23. And Kings ſhall be thy nurſing Fathers, and Queenes ſhall be thy nurſes. Pſalm. 123. 1. Lord remember David with all his troubles. 2. Who ſware unto the Lord, and vowed unto the mighty God of Iacob, ſaying. 3. I will not enter into the Tabernacle of mine houſe, nar come upon my pallet or bed. 4. nor ſuffer mine eyes to ſleepe, nor mine eye-lids to ſlumber. 5. untill I find out a place for the Lord, an habitation for the mighty God of Iacob. 3. To puniſh their faults, the lighter by rebuking, the greater by correction, that is, by inflicting reall or bodily puniſhment.

There is an holy manner of puniſhing the guilty, whereunto is required: I. After diligent and wiſe examination is had, to be aſſured of the crime committed. II. To ſhew forth of Gods Word, the offence of the ſinne: that the conſcience of the offendor may bee touched. III. It is convenient to deferre or omit the puniſhment, if thereby any hope of amendment may appeare. Eccleſ.7.23. Give not thy heart alſo to all the words that men ſpeake, leſt thou doe heare thy ſervant curſing thee, 24. For oftentimes alſo thine heart knoweth, that thou likewiſe haſt curſed others. 1 Sam. 10.27. But the wicked men ſaid, How ſhall he ſave us? ſo they deſpiſed him, and brought him no preſents; but he held his tongue. IV. To inflict deſerved puniſhment, not in his owne name, but in Gods name, adding the ſame holily and reverently. Ioſh.7.19. Then Ioſhua ſaid unto Achan, My ſonne, I beſeech thee, give glory to the Lord God of Iſrael, and make confeſſion unto him, and ſhew me now what thou haſt done, hide it not from me. 20. And Achan anſwered unto Ioſhua, and ſaid, Indeed I have ſinned againſt the Lord God of Iſrael, and thus have I done. 25. And Ioſhua, ſaid, In as much as thou haſt troubled us, the Lord ſhall trouble thee this day: and all Iſrael threw ſtones at him, and burned them with fire, and ſtoned them with ſtones. V. and laſtly, When thou puniſheſt, ayme at this one onely thing, that the evill may be purged and amended, and that the offendor by ſorrowing for his ſinne, may unfainedly repent for the ſame. *Prov.*20.30. The blewneſſe of the wound ſerveth to purge evill, and the ſtripes within the bowels of the belly.

Seventhly and laſtly, there is a certaine duty of a man to be performed toward himſelfe, which is, that a man ſhould preſerve and maintaine with modeſty, the dignity, and worthineſſe, which is inherent in his owne perſon, Phil. 4. 8. Furthermore, brethren, whatſoever things are true, whatſoever things are honeſt, whatſoever things are juſt, whatſoever things are pure, whatſoever things pertaine to love, whatſoever things are of good report, if there be any vertue, or if there be any praiſe, thinke on theſe things.

The negative part.

Diminiſh not the excellency, or dignity which is in the perſon of thy neighbour.

Hither are referred theſe ſinnes:

Firſt, againſt our Superiors: I. Vnreverent behaviour and contempt of them. The ſinnes hereof, are; deriding our ſuperiours. Gen.9.22. And when Ham the father of Canaan ſaw the nakedneſſe of his father, he told his two brethren without. Prov. 30. 17. The eye that mocketh his father, and deſpiſeth the inſtruction of his mother, let the ravens of the valley picke it out and the yong Eagles eate it. To ſpeake evill of, or revile our ſuperiors. Exod.21.17. And he that curſeth his father or his mother, ſhall dye the death.

II. Diſobedience, whereby we contemne their juſt commandements, Rom.1.30. Diſobedient to Parents. 2 *Tim.*3.2. The ſinnes hereof, are; To make contracts of marriage, without the counſell and conſent of the parents. Gen.6.2. Then the ſonnes of God ſaw the daughters of men that they were faire, and they tooke them wives of all that they liked. Gen.28.8,9. And Eſau ſeeing that the daughters of Canaan diſpleaſed Iſaac his father, then went Eſau to Iſhmael, and tooke unto the wives which he had, Mahalath the daughter of Iſhmael, Abrahams ſonne, the ſiſter of Nabajoh, to be his wife. The eye-ſervice of ſervants, Col.3.22. Servants be obedient to them that are your maſters according to the fleſh, in all things, not with eye ſervice as men pleaſers, but in ſingleneſſe of heart, fearing God. Eph.6.6. Not with ſervice to the eye, as men pleaſers. Anſwering againe, when they are reprehended. Tit.2 6. Let ſervants be ſubject to their Maſters; and pleaſe them in all things, not anſwering againe. Deceitfulneſſe and waſting their Maſters goods. Tit. 2. 10. Neither pickers, but that they ſhew all good faithfulneſſe. To flye from the power of their ſuperior. Gen.16.6. Then Sarai dealt roughly with her, wherfore ſhe fled from her. To reſiſt the lawfull authority of their ſuperiors, 1 *Pet.*1.20. To obey them in things unlawfull. Act. 4.19. To extoll themſelves above their betters: this is the ſinne of Antichriſt, 2 *Theſ.*2.3,4. Which (man of ſinne) exalteth himſelfe againſt all that is called God. Laſtly, the freedome of the Papiſts whereby they free children from the government of their parents: and ſubjects from the authority of their princes: ſo as they make it lawfull for them to plot and procure their death. 1 Sam.26.8,9. Then ſaid Abiſhai to David, God hath cloſed thine enemy into thine hand this day: now therefore I pray thee, let me ſmite him once with a ſpeare to the earth, and I will not ſmite him againe: and David ſaid to Abiſhai, Deſtroy him not: for who can lay his hand on the Lords annointed, and be guiltleſſe.

III. Ingratitude, and want of a loving affection towards parents, Matth.15.5,6. But yee ſay, whoſoever ſhall ſay to father or mother, By the gift that is offered by me, thou maiſt have profit, though he honour not his father or mother, ſhall be free. 1 Tim.5.4.

Secondly, we offend againſt our equals in preferring our ſelves before them, in talking or in ſitting downe, Matth.20.20. Then came unto him the mother of Zebedeus children, with her ſonnes, worſhipping him, and deſiring a certaine thing of him. 21. And hee ſaid, What wouldeſt thou? And ſhee ſaid to him, Grant, that theſe my two ſonnes may ſit, the one at the right hand, and the other at the left hand, in thy kingdome. 24. and when the other ten heard this, they diſdained at the two brethren.

Thirdly, toward our inferiours. I. Through negligence in governing them, and providing for their good estate. Hag. 1.4. Is it time for your selves to dwell in your sieled houses, and this house to lye waste? Dan.3.28. This condemneth those mothers, which put forth their children to be nursed, having both sufficient strength, and store of milke themselves to nurse them. 1 Tim.5.10. If she have nourished her children. II. By too much Gentlenesse and lenity in correcting them. 1 King. 1.5. Then Adoniah the sonne of Haggith exalted himselfe, saying, I will be King. 6. And his father would not displease him from his childhood, to say, why hast thou done so? 1 Sam. 2.22. So Eli was very old, and heard all that his sonnes did unto all Israel, and how they lay with the women that assembled at the doore of the Tabernacle of the congregation. 23. And he said unto them: Why doe ye such things? for of all this people I heare evill reports of you. 24. Doe no more, my sonnes for it is no good report that I heare, namely, that ye make the Lords people to trespasse. 25. Notwithstanding they obeyed not the voyce of their father, because the Lord would slay them. III. By overmuch cruelty and threatnings. Eph.6. 4. And ye fathers provoke not your children to wrath. 9. And ye masters doe the same things unto them, putting away threatnings.

Fourthly and lastly, a man offendeth against himselfe, when through his naughty behaviour, hee doth obscure and almost extinguish those gifts which God hath given him. *Matth.*25.26. Or contrarily, when he is proud and too wise in his owne conceit, Rom.12.3. For I say, through the grace that is given unto mee, to every one that is among you, that no man presume to understand, above that which is meete to understand.

CHAP. XXV.

Concerning the sixt Commandement.

THe sixth Commandement concerneth the preservation of our neighbours life.

The words are these:

Thou shalt not kill.

The Resolution.

Kill] The part is here set for the whole, by a Synecdoche: for killing signifieth any kinde of endamaging the person of our neighbour.

The equity of this Commandement appeareth by this, that man is created after the likenesse of God, Gen. 9. 6. He that sheddeth mans blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God hath he made man. Againe, all men are the same flesh. Isai.58. 7. When thou seest the naked cover him, and hide not thy face from thine owne flesh.

Neither ought we to bee ignorant of this also, that it is unlawfull for any private person, not called to that duty, to kill another; but a publike Officer may, that is, if hee bee warranted by a calling; so did Moses, Exod. 2. 12. And he looked round about, and when he saw no man, he slue the Ægyptian, and hid him in the sand. Act.7.25. For he supposed his brethren would have understood, that God by his hand should give them deliverance. And Phinehas, Numb.25.8. And hee followed the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust them both through (to wit, the man of Israel and the woman) through her belly: so that the plague ceased from the children of Israel. 11. Phinehas the sonne of Eleazer, hath turned mine anger away from the children of Israel, while he was zealous for my sake among them: therefore I have not consumed the children of Israel in my jealousie. And Elijah. 1 King.18.40. And Elijah said unto them, take the Prophets of Baal, let not a man of them escape: and they tooke them, and Elijah brought them to the brooke Kishon, and slue them there. And soldiers in battels waged upon just causes, 2 Chro.20.15. Feare ye not, neither bee afraid of this great multitude: for the battell is not yours, but Gods.

The negative part.

Thou shalt neither hurt, nor hinder, either thine owne, or thy neighbours life.

The sinnes then that are referred to this part are such, as are committed against our neighbour, or our selves.

Against our neighbour, are these following: I. In heart, as, 1. Hatred against him, 1 Ioh.3.15. Who so hateth his brother, is a manslayer. 2. Vnadvised anger. Mat.5.22. I say unto you, whosoever is angry with his brother unadvisedly, is in danger of judgement. 3. Envy, Rom. 1.29. Full of envy, murther, contention. 4. Grudges, Iam.3.14. If yee have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, rejoyce not. 5. Want of compassion and sorrow at our neighbours calamities. Amos 6. 5,6. They sing to the sound of the viol, &c. but no man is sorry for the affliction of Ioseph. 6. Frowardnesse, when we will not be reconciled to our neighbour. Rom. 1. 30. Such as can never bee appeased, unmercifull. 7. Desire of revenge, Psal. 5.6. The Lord will abhorre the bloody men and deceitfull.

II. In words: 1. Bitternesse in speaking, Prov, 12.18. There is that speaketh words, like the pricking of a sword: but the tongue of wise men is health. 2. Reproches and rayling, which is a casting of a mans sinnes in his teeth which he hath committed, or an objecting unto him some inherent infirmities. Matth. 5.22. Whosoever saith unto his brother, Raca shall be worthy to be punished by the Councel. And whosoever shall say, Foole, shall be worthy to be punished with hell-fire. 2. Sam.6.16. As the Arke of the Lord came into the citie of David, Michol Sauls daughter looked through a window, and saw King David leape and dance before the Lord, and shee despised him in her heart. 20. And Michol the daughter of Saul came out to meet David, and said, O how glorious was the king of Israel this day, which was uncovered to day in the eyes of the maidens of his servants as a foole un- covereth himselfe. 3. Contentions, when two or more strive in speech one with another, for any kinde of Superiority. 4. Brawlings in any conference. 5. Crying, which is any unseemely elevation of the voyce against ones adversary. Gal. 5.19. The works of the flesh are manifest, which are, 20. emulations, contentions, seditions. Eph. 4.31. Let all bitternesse, and anger, and wrath, crying and evill speaking bee put away from you, with all maliciousnesse. 32. Be courteous one to another. Gen. 16.12. He (viz. Ismael) shall be a wilde man, his hand shall be against every man, and every mans hand against him. 6. Complaints to every one of such as offer us injuries. Iam. 5.9 Grudge not against one another, brethren, lest ye be condemned.

III. In countenance and gesture, all such signes, as evidently decipher the malitious affections lurking in the heart. Gen. 4.5,6. His countenance fell downe: and the Lord said unto Cain, Why art thou so wroth? Matth. 27. 39. They that passed by railed on him, nodding their heads.

Hence is it, that derision is tearmed persecution. Gen. 21.9. Sarah saw the sonne of Hagar the Egyptian mocking, &c. Gal. 4.29. Hee that was borne after the flesh, persecuted him that was borne after the spirit.

IV. In deeds; 1. To fight with, or to beat our neighbour, and to maime his body. Levit. 24.19, 20. If any man cause any blemish in his neighbour: as hee hath done, so shall it be done to him, breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth. 2. To procure any way the death of our neighbour, whether it be by the sword, famine, or poyson, Gen. 4. 8. Cain rose up against his brother, and slue him. 3. To exercise tyrannous cruelty in afflicting punishments. Deut. 25.3. Forty stripes shall he cause him to have, and not past, lest if he should exceed, and beate him above that, with many strips, thy brother should appeare despised in thy sight. 2 Cor. 11.24. Of the Iewes I received five times forty stripes save one. 4. To use any of Gods creatures hardly. Prov. 12.10. A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast, but the mercies of the wicked are cruell. Deut. 22.6. If thou finde a birds nest in the way, in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be yong, or egges, and the damme sitting upon the young, or upon the egges, thou shalt not take the damme with the yong, but shalt in any wise let the damme goe, and take the young to thee, that thou maist prosper and prolong thy daies. 5. To take occasion by our neighbours infirmities, to use him discourteously, and to make him our laughing stocke, or taunting recreation, Levit. 19.14. Thou shalt not curse the deafe, nor put a stumbling blocke before the blind. 2 King. 2.23. Little children came out of the Citie, and mocked him, and said unto him, Come up thou bald head, come up thou bald head. 6. To injure the impotent, feeble, poore, strangers, fatherlesse or widdowes. Exod. 22.21,22. Thou shalt not doe injury to a stranger, neither oppresse him: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt. Ye shall not trouble any

A widow, or fatherlesse child. 25. Thou shalt not be an usurer unto the poore. Wee then injure these: 1. If we pay not the labourer his hire. Deut. 24.14. Thou shalt not oppresse an hired servant that is needy and poore, neither of thy brethren, nor of the stranger that is within thy gates. 15. Thou shalt give him his hire for his day: neither shall the Sunne goe downe upon it: for he is poore, and therewith sustaineth his life: lest he cry against thee to the Lord, and it be sinne unto thee. 2. If thou restore not the pledge of the poore. Exod. 22.26, 27. If thou take thy neighbours raiment to pledge, thou shalt restore it unto him before the Sunne goe downe: for that is his garment onely, and his covering for his skinne.
B 3. If wee withdraw corne from the poore. Prov. 11.26. He that withdraweth the corne, the people will curse him: but blessing shall be upon the head of him that selleth corne.

Againe, this law is as well transgressed by not killing, when the law chargeth to kill, and by pardoning the punishment due unto murther, as by killing when wee should not. Numb 35.16. If one smite another with an instrument of yron, that hee dye, he is a murtherer, and the murderer shall dye the death. 33. The land cannot bee clensed of the blood that is shed therein, but by the blood of him that shed it.

By this place also are combates of two men hand to hand, for deciding of controversies, utterly unlawfull. 1. because they are not
C equall meanes ordained of God to determine controversies. 2. In that it falleth out in such combates that he is conquerour before man, who indeed is guilty before God.

This also condemneth Popish Sanctuaries, and places of priviledge: as Churches, and the like, wherein murderers shelter and shroud themselves from the danger of the law. For God expressely commandeth, Exod. 21.14. That such an one shall be taken from his altar, that he may dye. And Ioab, 1 King. 2.34. touching the homes of the altar, was slaine in the temple.

Hitherto in like sort belong such things as concerne the soule of our neighbour. 1. To be a scandal or offence to the soule of our neigh-
D bour, either in life or doctrine, Mat. 18.7. Woe be to the world because of offences: it is necessary that offences should come: but woe bee to them by whom they doe come.

2. To minister occasions of strife and discord: The which we then do: 1. When we cannot bee brought to remit somewhat of our owne right. 2. When we returne snappish and crooked answers. 3. When we interpret every thing amisse, and take them in the worst part. 1 Sam. 25.25. Nabal is his name, & folly is with him. 2 Sam. 10.3. And the Princes of the children of Ammon said to Hanun their Lord: Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters to thee? hath not David rather sent his servants unto thee, to search the city, to spie it out, and to overthrow it? wherefore Hanun tooke Davids servants and shaved ved of the halfe of their beards, and cut off their garments in the middle, even to their buttockes, and sent them away.

3. The ministers sin against their neighbours is this, not to preach the Word of God to their charge, that they thereby might be instructed in the wayes of life. Where there is no vision the people decay: but he that keepes the law is blessed. Prov. 29. 18. Their watchmen are all blind, they have no knowledge, they are all dumbe dogs, they cannot barke: they lye and sleepe, and delight in sleeping. Isa. 56. 10. And these greedy dogs can never have enough, 11. & these shepherds they cannot understand: for they all looke to their owne way, every one for his advantage, and for his owne purpose. When I shall say to the wicked, Thou shalt surely dye, and thou givest Ezech. 3. 18. him not warning, the same wicked man shall dye in his iniquity, but his blood will I require at thy hands. And not onely not to preach at all, but to preach negligently, is utterly condemned. Cursed be he that doth the worke of the Lord negligently. Because thou art luke warme, and neither hot nor cold: it will come to passe, that I spew Iere. 48. 10. Rev. 3. 16. thee out of my mouth. This reproveth non-residency of ministers, which is an ordinary absence of the minister from his charge: namely, from that particular congregation committed unto him. I have set watchmen upon thy Isai 62. 6. walls, O Ierusalem, which all the day and all the night continually shall not cease: ye that are mindfull of the Lord keepe not silence, and give him no rest, till he repaire, and till hee set up Ierusalem the praise of the world. Take heed therefore unto your selves, and to all the flocke whereof the holy Act. 20. 28. &c. Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God, which hee hath purchased with his owne blood. For I know this, that after my departing, shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flocke. Moreover, of your selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things to draw Disciples after them. Therefore watch and remember, that by the space of 3. yeares, I ceased not to warne every one night and day with teares. Feede the 1 Pet. 5. 2, 3. flock of God, which depends upon you, caring for it, not by constraint, but willingly: not for filthy lucre but of a ready mind, not as though ye were Lords over Gods heritage, but that ye may be ensamples to the flock. The Councel of Antio. the 17. Can. Ezek. 34. 4. & 33. If any Bishop by imposition of hands inducted into a charge, and appointed to governe a people, doe neglect to take upon him that office, and delayeth to goe to the congregation allotted unto him: such a one shall be prohibited from the Lords table, till he be enforced to attend upon that charge, or at the least somwhat be determined by a complete assembly of the ministers of that province. The Councell of Sardis, the 14. Can. We remember that our brethren in a former assembly decreed, that if any lay-man remaining three Sabbaths or Lords dayes, that is, 3. weeks in a city, did not in the same city frequent the Church assemblies, he should be excommunicated: If then such things are not allowable in lay-men, much lesse in ministers, for whom it is neither lawfull, nor convenient, without urgēt necessity, to be absent from his parish church

A longer thē the time above mentiōed. To this decree there was not one non placet, but every one said, It likes us well. The 8. councell held at Constan. Can. 24. decreed that ministers ought not to have their substitutes, or vicars, but in their owne persons, with feare and cheerefulnes performe all such duties, as are required of them in the service of God. The Canon law doth conclude the same things, Can. Si quis vult. Dist. 36. Debent indesinenter, &c. The Bishop (saith the Canon) ought to be continually resident in Gods tabernacle, that they may learne somwhat of God, and the people of thē, whilst they read often, & meditate upon Gods Word. Againe, in the Canons intituled, Pontifices, & Si quis in clero. Episcopos, qui dominici gregis suscipiunt curam, &c. B The Bishops which take upon them to feed Gods flock, ought not to depart from their duty, lest they lose that excellent talent which God hath bestowed upon thē, but rather strive with that one talent to get 3. more talents. And in the 80. Can. of those which are termed the Canons of the Apostles, there is expresse mandate, that such, whether Bishop or Senior, who attendeth not upon their office in the Church, shal forthwith be removed frō that place, The Chalcedon Councell, Can. 10. Let no man be ordained minister of two churches, in two several Cities, but let him remaine in that unto which he was first called. And if for vaine-glory he shall afterward goe to a greater congregation, let him immediately be recalled to his first charge, and in that only exercise his ministery. But if one bee called to another charge, let him simply give over C *the former, and have no interest in the same, &c. There are not withstanding the former testimonies, some cases, wherein it is permitted to the Minister, that he may be absent: if by his absence the congregation be not endammaged. I. Sicknes: the Councel of Mentz. 25. Can. If a Bishop be not at home, or be sicke, or upon some exigent cannot be present at his parish, let him procure one who upon Sabbaths and festivall dayes, will preach unto his charge. And Aug. testifies epist. 138. that he was absent on the like occasion. II. Allowance of the Church, to be absent for a time upon some necessary and publike cōmodity for the same, Col. 1. 9. Epaphras is their minister, but cap. 4. 12. he being absent, salueth them, And Ambrose though he were Bishop of Millain, yet went he twise Ambassadour into France, to make agreement betwixt Maximus and Valentinian. (*) III. If by reason of persecution he be enforced to flie, and see no hope to procure the safety of his people. This made Cyprian to be absent from Carthage, as he testifieth in his Epistles. Thus much concerning sins against our neighbour. Now follow such sins as a man committeth against his owne person, as when a man doth hurt, kill, and endanger himselfe. If any man will follow me, let him denie himselfe, take up his crosse and follow me, Matt. 4. 6. He said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thy selfe down headlong: for it is written, He shall give his Angels charge over thee, and with their hands they shall lift thee up, lest at. &c. 7. Iesus Mat. 16. 24.

* For this thing looke the decrees of Damasus and the Councell of Trent. sect. 9. Can. 8.

* Amb. 5. & 17. Epist. to Valentinian the Emperour.

ſaid unto him: It is written againe, Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God. Therefore for a man to bee his owne executioner, though to eſcape a moſt ſhamefull evill, is utterly unlawfull and ungodly. The affirmative part.

Thou ſhalt preſerve the life of thy neighbour.

Hitherto may we referre theſe duties.

I. Such as appertaine to the perſon of our neighbour, and concerne, firſt his well-fare both of body and mind; as to rejoyce with them that rejoyce. Then hee anſwered and ſaid unto him, all theſe things I have obſerved from my youth. And Ieſus behold him and loved him. II. His miſeries, to be grieved with him for them. Mourne with thoſe that mourne. And I ſaid, My leanneſſe, my leanneſſe, woe is me, the tranſgreſſors have offended, yea the tranſgreſſors have grievouſly offended. Mine eyes guſh out with water, becauſe men obſerve not thy law. Againe, we muſt helpe him as much as in us lyeth. I was an eye to the blind, and a foote to the lame. 2 Cor. 8. 3. To their power, yea, beyond their power, they were willing. And that we doe, we muſt doe ſpeedily. Prov. 3. 28. Say not to thy neighbour, goe and come againe to morrow, and I will give thee, if thou now have it. Levit. 19. 17. Thou ſhalt plainely rebuke thy neighbor, &c.

III. Concerning ſuch injuries, as he offereth unto thee: 1. Thou ſhalt not be angry againſt him, upon a ſmall occaſion. Num. 12. 3. Moſes was a meeke man above all that lived upon the earth. The diſcretion of a man defers his anger, and his glory is to paſſe by an offence. 2. Thou muſt be ſlow to wrath, and never be angry, but for a moſt juſt cauſe. Mar. 3. 5. Then hee looke round about on them angerly, mourning alſo for the hardneſſe of their hearts. He that is ſlow to wrath, is of great wiſedome: but he that is of an haſty mind exalteth folly. 3. Thine anger muſt be but for a while. Be angry and ſinne not, let not the Sunne goe downe upon thy wrath. 4. Forgive freely an injury, and revenge it not. Be ye courteous one to another, and tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Chriſts ſake forgave you.

IV. His wants and infirmities: 1. Avoyde occaſions whereby they may be ſtirred and laid open. Gen. 13. 8. Then ſaid Abraham to Lot, Let there bee no ſtrife I pray thee betweene thee and me, neither between thy heard-men and mine: for we are brethren. 9. Is not the whole land before thee? Depart, I pray thee, from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, I will take the right: or if thou goe to the right hand, I will take the left. And tarry with him a while untill thy brothers fiercenеſſe be aſſwaged. And till thy brothers wrath turne away from thee, and hee forget the things which thou haſt done to him. 2. Depart ſometimes from thine own right. What thinkeſt thou Simon? of whom do the kings of the earth take tribute, or poll mony? of their children, or of ſtrangers? Peter ſaid unto him, of ſtrangers. Then ſaid Ieſus unto him, Then are the children free. Nevertheleſſe, leſt we ſhould offend them, goe to the Sea, and caſt in an angle, and take the firſt fiſh that comes up, and when thou haſt opened his mouth, thou ſhalt find a piece of 20. pence: that take and give it unto them for me and thee. 3. To appeaſe anger kindled; which is done. I. By overcomming evill with goodneſſe. Be not overcome of evill, but overcome evill with goodneſſe. II. By following after peace. Decline from evill, and doe good: ſeeke peace, and follow after it. III. By courteous anſwers: A ſoft anſwer putteth away wrath: but grievous words ſtirre up anger. Eli ſaid unto her, How long wilt thou be drunken? put away thy drunkenneſſe from thee. Then Hannah anſwered, and ſaid, Nay my Lord, but I am a woman troubled in ſpirit: I have drunke neither wine nor ſtrong drinke, but have powred out my ſoule before the Lord. It may be that he therfore departed for a ſeaſon, that thou ſhouldeſt receive him for ever. IV. By overpaſſing ſome wants and infirmities in mens words & deeds. It is a mans honour to paſſe by infirmities. V. By covering them with ſilence. Above all things have fervent love among ſt you, for love covereth a multitude of ſins. He that covereth tranſgreſſion ſeeketh love: but he that repeates a matter, ſeparates the prince. VI. By taking every thing (if it be poſſible) in the beſt part, Love thinketh none evill. This ſhewes the lawfulnes of truces, covenants, and other agreements concerning peace, being made to avoid injuries, maintain ancient bounds, procure ſecurity in trafficke, poſſeſſions, & journies, ſet penſions, commons for cattell, liberties of hunting, fiſhing, or fouling, and getting fewell, or other neceſſaries for publike commodities, if there be no unlawful conditions annexed unto the ſame. And we may make this covenant not onely with Chriſtians, but for the maintenance of peace, with infidels alſo. For that which is godly to be performed, is no leſſe godly to be promiſed. But it is a note of true godlineſſe, to be as much as may be, at peace with all men: Therefore to promiſe peace by covenant is very godly. We may ſee the experience of this in the lives of holy men. At that ſame time Abimelech and Pichol his chiefe captaine, ſpake unto Abraham, ſaying, God is with thee in all that thou doeſt. Now therfore ſweare unto me here by God, that thou wilt not hurt me, nor my children, nor my childrens children: thou ſhalt, &c. Then Abraham ſaid, I will ſweare. Then Abraham tooke ſheepe and beeves, and gave them unto Abimelech: and they two made a covenant. Now therefore come and let us make a covenant, I and thou, which may be a witneſſe betweene me and thee. Then Laban ſaid to Iacob, Behold this heape, and behold the pillar, which I have ſet up betweene me and thee. The God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, and the God of their Father be judge betweene us: but Iacob ſware by the feare of his father Iſaac.

II. Concerning his body, we are to regard it alive and dead. Being alive, we ought if need be: I. To miniſter unto it food and rayment. Depart from mee yee curſed into everlaſting fire, which is prepared for the divell and his angels. For I was an hungred, and yee gave mee no

When a man is dead, wee ought to commit the dead corps to the grave, as may appeare by these arguments. I. The instinct of Nature it selfe. II. The examples of the Patriarkes, and other holy personages. Abraham buried Sarah, Gen. 23. 19. Iacob is buried by his sonnes, Gen. 50. 12. Steven by religious and devout men, Acts 8. 2. III. The Lords owne approbation of buriall, in that he numbreth it amongst his benefits. For the want thereof is a curse, Ier. 22. 19. He (viz. Iehoiakim) shall be buried as an Asse is buried, even drawne and cast forth without the gates of Ierusalem. Therefore rather then Moses should bee unburied, The Lord himselfe did bury him, Deut. 34. 5, 6. Moses the servant of the Lord died in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord. And he buried him in a valley, in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor, but no man knoweth of his Sepulchre unto this day. IV. There is no dead carkasse so lothsome as mans, the which both argueth the necessitie of buriall, and how ugly we are in the sight of God, by reason of sinne. V. The body must rise againe out of the earth, that it may be made a perpetuall mansion-house for the soule to dwell in. VI. The bodies of the faithfull are the temples of the holy Ghost, and therefore must rise againe to glory. VII. Buriall is a testimony of the love and reverence we beare to the deceased.

A funerall ought to be solemnized after an honest and civill manner: namely, agreeable to the nature and credit as well of those which remaine alive, as them which are dead. Concerning the living, they must see that I. their mourning be moderate, and such, as may well expresse their affection and love to the partie departed. Ioh. 11. 34. He said, where have you laid him? they answered, Lord come and see. 35. Then Iesus wept. And (vers. 36.) the Iewes said, Behold how he loved him. II. They must avoid superstition, and not surmise that funerall Ceremonies are availeable to the dead. Such are the rites of the Church of Rome; as to be buried in a Church, especially under the Altar, & in a Fryers coule. III. They ought to take heed of superfluous pompe and solemnities. For of all ostentations of pride, that is most foolish, to be boasting of a loathsome and deformed corps. Esa. 22. 15, 16. Thus saith the Lord God of hosts, Go get thee to that treasurer, to Shebnah the Steward of the house, and say, What hast thou to doe here? and whom hast thou here? that thou shouldest here hew thee out a Sepulchre; as hee that heweth out his Sepulchre in a high place, or that graveth an habitation for himselfe in a rocke.

To this commandement belongeth these duties: I. Before the vintage or harvest, we ought A to permit any man, for the repressing of hunger to gather grapes, or plucke off the eares of corne. Deut. 23. 24, 25. When thou commest into thy neighbours vineyard, then thou mayest eate grapes at thy pleasure, as much as thou wilt: but thou shalt put none into thy vessell. When thou commest into thy neighbours corne, thou mayest pluck the eares with thine hand, but thou shalt not move a sickle to thy neighbours corne. Math. 12. 1. Iesus went on the Sabbath day thorow the corne, and his Disciples were an hungred, and began to pluck the eares of corne, and to eate, &c. II. In the vintage, and time of harvest, we ought neither to leave the trees naked of grapes, nor rake up after the reaping, eares of corne: but to leave the after-gatherings for the poore. Levit. 23. 22. B When you reape the harvest of your land, thou shalt not rid cleane the corners of thy field when thou reapest: neither shalt thou make after gatherings of thy harvest; but shalt leave thē unto the poore, & to the stranger: I am the Lord your God. Ruth. 2. 8. Goe to none other field to gather, neither goe from hence, but abide here by my maidens. 9. So she gleaned in the field until evening.

III. Concerning the soule of our neighbour: I. We must seeke all meanes to win him to the profession of Christian religion. 1 Cor. 10. 33. I please all men in all things, not seeking mine owne profit, but the profit of many, that they might be saved. Heb. 10. 24. Let us consider one another, to provoke unto love, and to good works. II. We must live amongst men without offence. 1 Cor. 10. 32. Give no offence, neither to C the Iewes, nor to the Grecians, nor to the Church of God. 1 Cor. 8. 13. If meat offend my brother, I will eate no flesh while the world standeth, that I may not offend my brother. III. The light of our good life, must be as a lanterne to direct the waies of our neighbours. Acts 24. 14. This I confesse unto thee, that after the way (which they call heresie) so worship I the God of my Fathers, beleeving all things which are written in the Law and the Prophets. 15. And have hope towards God, that the resurrection of the dead, which they themselves looke for also, shall be both of just and unjust. 16. And herein I endevour my self to have alway a cleare conscience toward God, & towards men. IV. If our neighbour offend, we are to admonish him. 1 Thess. 5. 14. We desire you brethren, admonish them that are unruly: comfort the D feeble minded: beare with the weak, be patient towards all men. V. If our neighbour run the waies of Gods cōmandement (as David speaketh) we ought to encourage him in the same.

IV. We may referre such things unto this commandement, as appertaine to the peculiar preservation of every severall mans life. 1. Recreation, which is an exercise joyned with the feare of God, conversant in things indifferent, for the preservation of bodily strength, & confirmation of the minde in holines. Eccles. 2. 2. I said of laughter, thou art mad; and of ioy, what is this that thou doest? Esa. 5. 12. The harpe, viall, timbrell, and pipe, and wine, are in their feasts, but they regard not the worke of the Lord, neither consider the works of his hands, 1 Corinth. 10.9. Neither be ye idolaters, as were some of them, as it is written: The people sate down to eate & drink, and rose up to play. Luk. 6.25. Woe be to you that laugh: for yee shall waile and weepe, Deuteron. 12.7. There yee shall eate before the Lord your God, and yee shall rejoyce in all that you put your hands unto, both yee and your houshelds, because the Lord thy God hath blessed thee. To this end hath the Word of God permitted shooting. 2 Sam. 1.18. Hee bad them teach the children of Iudah to shoote, as it is written in the booke of Iasher. And musicall consort. Nehem. 7.67. Besides their servants and maides which were seven thousand, three hundred, and seven and thirty: they had two hundred and five and forty singing men, and singing women. And putting forth of riddles. Iud. 14.12. Sampson said unto them, I will now put forth a riddle unto you, and if you can declare it me within seven dayes of the feast, & find it out, I will give you thirty sheetes, and thirty change of garments. 13. And they answered him, Put forth thy riddle, that we may heare it. 14. And he said unto them, Out of the eater came meate, and out of the strong came sweetnesse: and they could not in three daies expound the riddle. And hunting of wilde beasts. Cant. 2.15. Take us the Foxes, the little foxes which destroy the vines: for our vines have small grapes. Lastly, the searching out, or the contemplation of the workes of God. 1 King. 4.33. And hee spake of trees from the Cedar tree that is in Lsbanon, even unto the hyssope that springeth out of the wall: he spake also of beasts, and of foules, and of creeping things, and of fishes. 2. Physicke, the use whereof is holy, if before the receipt of it, a man crave remission of his sinnes, and repose his confidence onely upon God, not upon the meanes. Matthew 9.2. And loe, they brought unto him a man sicke of the palsie, lying on a bed. And Iesus seeing their faith, said unto the sicke of the palsie, Sonne, bee of good comfort, thy sinnes are forgiven thee. 6. Then he said to the sicke of the palsie, Arise, take up thy bed and walke to thine house. Ioh. 5.5. A certaine man was there which had beene diseased eight and thirtie yeares. 8. Iesus said unto him, Take up thy bed and walk. 14. After that Iesus found him in the Temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: sinne no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee. 2. Chron. 16.12. And Asa in the nine and thirtie yeare of his raigne, was diseased in his feete, and his disease was extreame: yet he sought not to the Lord in his disease, but to the Physitians. 3. Avoyding of an injury, offered by some private person: this, if it be against an unruly and unstayed adversary, and the defence be faultlesse, is very lawfull, and is so farre from private revenge, that it is to be accounted a just defence. The defence is then faultlesse, when a man doth so assault his adversary, as that he neither purposeth his owne revenge, or his enemies hurt, but onely his alone safety from that imminent danger.

A doubt. Whether may a man flye in the plague time? Answ. Such as be hindered by their calling may not; as Magistrates, and Pastors, having charge of soules: yet free men, not bound by calling, may. Reason. I. A man may provide for his owne safety, if it bee not to the hinderance of another. II. A man may flie warres, famine, flouds, fire, and other such dangers: therefore the plague. III. There is lesse danger of sicknesse, the more the multitude of people is diminished. Obiect. I. To flye is a token of distrust. Answ. This diffidence is no fault of the fact, but of the person. II. It is offensive. Ans. The offence is taken, not given. III: To flye, is to forsake our neighbour against the rule of charitie. Answ. It is not, if kinsfolke and Magistrates be present. IV. Men are to visit the sicke by Gods appointment. Ans. Lepers were excepted among the Iewes: and so likewise they in these dayes which are infected with a disease, answerable to the Leprosie, namely, if it be dangerously contagious.

CHAP. XXVI.

Of the seventh Commandement.

THE seventh Commandement sheweth how that we should preserve the chastity of our selves, and of our neighbour.

The words are these:

Thou shalt not commit adultery.

The Resolution.

Adultery] To commit adultery, signifieth as much, as to doe any thing, what way soever, whereby the chastity of our selves, or our neighbours may be stained. Matth. 5.28.

The negative part.

Thou shalt no way either hurt, or hinder thy neighbours chastity.

In this place are prohibited:

I. The lust of the heart, or the evill concupiscence of the flesh. Matth. 5.28. I say unto you, whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, he hath already committed adultery with her in his heart. Coloss. 3.5. Mortifie your members which are on earth: fornication, uncleannesse, the inordinate affection, evill concupiscence.

II. Burning in the flesh, which is an inward fervency of lust, whereby the godly motions of the heart are hindered, overwhelmed, and as it were, with contrary fire burnt up, 1 Cor. 7.9. If they cannot abstaine, let them marry, for it is better to marry then to burne.

III. Strange pleasures about generation, prohibited in the Word of God: the which are many.

I. With beasts. Levit. 18.23. Thou shalt not lye with any beast to be defiled therewith: neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lye downe thereto: for it is an abomination.

II. With the divell, as witches doe by their owne confession. For why should not a spirit as well have society with a witch, as to eate meate?

III. With one of the same sexe. Levit. 18.22. Thou shalt not lye with the male, as one lyeth with

with a woman: for it is abomination. This is a sin which they commit, whom God hath given over into a reprobate sense, Rom.1.26. For this cause God gave them up to vile affections: for even their women did change their naturall use, into that which is against nature. 27. And the men left the naturall use of the woman, and burned in their lusts one toward another, and man with man wrought filthinesse. It was the sinne of Sodome, *Gen.*19. where it was so common, that to this day it is tearmed Sodomy.

IV. With such as bee within the degrees of consanguinity, or affinity, prohibited in the Word of God. Levit.18.6. None shall come neere to any of the kindred of his flesh, to uncover her shame, I am the Lord.

V. With unmarried persons. This sinne is tearmed fornication. Deut.28.28. If any man finde a mayde that is not betrothed, and take her and lye with her, and they be found. 29. Then the man that lay with her, shall give unto the maydes father fifty shekels of silver, and she shall bee his wife, because he hath humbled her: he cannot put her away all his life. 1 *Cor.*10.8. Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed fornication, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand.

VI. With those, whereof one is married, or at the least betrothed. This sinne is called adultery: and God hath inflicted by his Word the same punishment upon them, which commit this sinne, after they be betrothed, as hee doth upon such as are already married. Deut. 21.22. If a man be found lying with a woman married to a man, then shall they dye even both twaine: to wit, the man that lay with the wife, and the wife: so shalt thou put away evill from Israel. 23. If a mayde be betrothed to a husband, and a man find her in the Towne, and lye with her, 24. Then shall ye bring them both out unto the gates of the same City, and shall stone them to death with stones. This is a marveilous great sin, as may appeare in that it is the punishment of Idolatry. Rom.1.23. They turned the glory of the uncorruptible God, to the similitude of the image of a corruptible man, &c. 24. Wherefore God gave them up unto their hearts lusts, unto uncleanesse. Yea this sin is more hainous then theft. Prov.6.30. Men doe not despise a thiefe, when hee stealeth to satisfie his soule, when hee is hungry. 32. But hee that committeth adultery with a woman, is destitute of understanding, he that doth it, destroyeth his owne soule. Againe, the adulterer breaketh the covenant of marriage, which is Gods covenant. Prov.2.17. Which forsaketh the guide of her youth, and forgetteth the covenant of her God. Adulterers dishonest their owne bodies. 1 Cor.6.18. Flee fornication, every sin that a man doth, is without the body: but he that committeth fornication, sinneth against his owne body. And bereave their neighbours of a great and unrecoverable benefit: namely, of chastity. As for the children which are begotten in this sort, they are shut out from that preheminence, which they otherwise might obtaine in the congregation. Deut.23.2. A bastard shall not enter into the Congregation of the Lord: even to his tenth generation shall he not enter into the Congregation of the Lord. He maketh his family a stewes, as appeareth in David, whose adultery was punished by Absolons lying with his fathers concubines. 2 Sam.16. 21. Achitophel said to Absolom, Goe to thy fathers concubines, which he hath left to keepe the house. Iob 31.9. If mine heart have beene deceived by a woman, or if I have laid waite at the doore of my neighbour: let my wife grinde unto another man: and let other men bowe downe upon her. Mans posterity feeleth the smart of this sinne. Iob 31.12. This (adultery) is a fire that shall devoure to destruction, and which shall roote out all mine increase. To conclude, though this sinne be committed never so closely, yet God will reveale it. Num.5. from the 12. verse to the 23. And it usually hath one of these two, as companions: namely, dulnesse of heart; or a marveilous horrour of conscience. Hos. 4. 11. Whoredome, and wine, take away their heart.

As for the Patriarkes Polygamy, or marrying of many wives, albeit it cannot be defended, yet it may be excused: either because it served to the enlarging of the number of mankind, when there were but few, or at the least, to the propagation of the Church of God.

VII. With man and wife. They abuse their liberty; if they know each other so long as the woman is in her flowers. Ezechiel 22. 10. In thee have they discovered their Fathers shame: in thee have they vexed her that was polluted in her flowers, Levit.18.10. Thou shalt not goe unto a woman to uncover her shame, as long as she is put apart for her disease. Ezech.18. 6. If a man hath not lyne with a menstrous woman. Or using marriage bed intemperately. Ambros. lib. de Philos. which Augustine citing, lib.2. contra Iulian. saith, That he committeth adultery with his wife, who in the use of wedlocke hath neither regard of seemelinesse nor honesty. Jerome in his first Booke, against Iovinian saith: A wise man ought to love his wife in judgement, not in affection. Hee will not give the bridle unto head-strong pleasure, nor headily company with his wife. Nothing (saith hee) is more shameless, then to love a wife as though shee were a strumpet.

VIII. Nocturnall pollutions, which arise of immoderate diet, or unchaste cogitations, going before in the day, Deut.23.10. Onans sinne (*Gen.*38.8.) was not much unlike these.

IX. Effeminate wantonnesse, whereby occasions are sought to stir up lust, *Gal.*5.19 The works of the flesh are manifest, which are adultery, fornication, uncleannes, wantonnes. Occasions of lust, are, 1. eyes full of adultery, 2 Pet.2.14. Having eyes full of adultery, and that cannot cease to sinne. 2. Idlenesse, 2 Sam. 11.2. When it was evening tide, David arose out of his bed, and walked upon the roofe of the Kings Pallace: and from the roofe hee saw a woman washing her selfe, and the woman was very beautifull to looke upon. 3. And David ſent, and inquired what woman it was: and one ſaid, Is not this Bathſheba the daughter of Eliham, wife to Vriah the Hittite? Then David ſent meſſengers, and tooke her away: and ſhe came unto him, and he lay with her. 3. Riotous and laſcivious attire. 1 Tim. 2. 9. The women ſhall array themſelves in comely apparell, with ſhamefaſtneſſe and modeſty, not with broidered haire, or gold, or pearles, or coſtly apparell, but (as becommeth women that profeſſe the feare of God) with good workes. Iſa. 3. 16. Becauſe the daughters of Zion are hauty, and walke with ſtretched-out neckes, and with wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they goe, and making a tinckling with their feete. 17. Therefore ſhall the Lord make the heads of the daughters of Zion bald, and the Lord ſhal diſcover their ſecret parts. 18. In that day ſhall the Lord take away the ornament of the ſlippers, and the caules, & the roūd tyers. 19 The ſweet bals, and the bracelets, and the bonnets. 20. The tyers of the head, and the ſloppes, and head-bands, and the tablets, and the earings. 21. The rings and the muſſlers. 22. The coſtly apparell and the vailes and the wimples, and the criſping pins. 23. And the glaſſes, and the fine linnen, and the hoods and the lannes. And no marvaile if the Prophet bee ſo ſharpe againſt exceſſive and wanton apparrell: for this is. I. a laviſh and prodigall waſting of the benefits of God, which might well bee imployed upon better uſes. II. It is a teſtimony, and as it were the cognizance or enſigne of pride, whereby a man would have himſelfe in greater reputation then another. III. It is a note of great idleneſſe and ſlothfulneſſe. For commonly ſuch as beſtow much time in tricking, and trimming themſelves up: doe quite neglect other buſineſſes, and of al things cannot away with pains. IV. It argueth levity, in deviſing every day ſome new faſhion, or imitating that which others deviſe. V. It maketh a confuſion of ſuch degrees and callings as God hath ordained, when as men of inferiour degree and calling, cannot be by their attire, diſcerned from men of higher eſtate. 4. Fulneſſe of bread and meate, which provoke luſt. Ezech. 16. 49. This was the iniquity of thy ſiſter Sodome, pride, fulneſſe of bread, and idlenes was in her, and in her daughters. Luk. 16. 16. There was a certaine rich man which was cloathed in purple and fine linnen, and fared well and delicately every day. Rom. 13. 13. Walke honeſtly, as in the day time, not in gluttony and drunkenneſſe, neither in chambering and wantonneſſe. 5. Corrupt, diſhoneſt, and unſeemely talke. 1 Cor. 15. 33. Erre not, evill talke corrupteth good manners. Such are vaine love-ſongs, ballads, enterludes, and amorous bookes. This is the thing we are carefully to ſhun in the reading of Poets, yet ſo, as mariners doe in navigation, who forſake not the ſea, but decline and flye from the rockes. 6. Laſcivious repreſentations of love matters, in Playes and Comedies. Eph. 5. 3, 4. Fornication and all uncleannes, let it not once bee named among you, as it becom-

A meth Saints, neither filthineſſe, nor fooliſh talking, neither jeſting, which are things not comely. 7. Vndecent and unſeemely pictures, 1 The. 5. 22. Abſtaine from all appearance of evill. 8. Laſcivious dauncing of man and woman together. Mar. 6. 22. The daughter of the ſame Herodias came in and dauncd, and pleaſed Herod, &c. 9. Company with effeminate perſons, Prov. 7. 25. Let not thine heart decline to her wayes: wander thou not in her paths.

V. To appoint ſome light or ſheete-puniſhment for adultery, ſuch as that Romiſh Synagogue doth. For it is nothing elſe, but to open a gappe for other lewd perſons to runne headlong into the like impiety.

B The affirmative part.

Thou ſhalt preſerve the chaſtity of thy neighbour.

Chaſtity is the purity of ſoule and body, as much as belongeth to generation. The mind is chaſte, when it is free, or at the leaſt, freed from fleſhly concupiſcence. The body is chaſte, when it putteth not in execution the concupiſcences of the fleſh. 1 Theſ. 4. 3. This is the will of God, even your ſanctification, and that ye ſhould abſtaine from fornication. 4. That every one of you ſhould know how to poſſeſſe his veſſell in holineſſe and honour. 5. And not in the luſt of concupiſcence, even as the Gentiles, which know not God. 1 Cor. 7. 34. The unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that ſhee may be holy both in body and ſpirit.

C There are two ſpeciall vertues which preſerve Chaſtity, Modeſty, and Sobriety. Modeſty is a vertue, which keepeth in each worke an holy decorum, or comelineſſe: and it is ſeene, I. in the countenance and eyes, namely, when they neither expreſſe, nor excite the concupiſcence of the heart. Iob 31. 1. I made a covenant with mine eye, why then ſhould I thinke on a mayde? Gen. 24. 64. Rebekah lift up her eyes and when ſhe ſaw Iſaac, ſhee lighted downe from the Camell. 65. So ſhe tooke a veile, and covered her face. Prov. 7. 13. She caught him, and kiſſed him, and with an impudent face ſaid unto him, &c. II. In words. When a mans talke is decent, in ſpeaking of ſuch things, as by reaſon of our ſinne are become ſhamefull, Gen. 4. 1. Then Adam knew Hevah his wife: who, &c. Pſal. 51. 1. A Pſalme of David, when the Prophet Nathan came unto him, after he had gone into Bathſheba. Iſai. 7. 20. In that day ſhall the Lord ſhave with a razer that is hired, even by them beyond the river, by the King of Aſſur, the head, & the haire of the feete, and it ſhall conſume the beard. Iudg. 3. 24. When he was gone out, his ſervants came: who ſeeing that the doores of the parler were ſhut, they ſaid, Surely he covereth his feete, (that is, he doth his eaſement) in his ſummer chamber. Againe, a mans talke muſt be little and ſubmiſſe. Mat. 12. 19. Behold my ſervant whom I have choſen he ſhall not ſtrive, nor cry, neither ſhall any man heare his voyce in the ſtreets. Prov. 10. 19. In many words there cannot want iniquity: but he that refraineth his lips, is wise. And it is a note of a trumpet to bee a giglot, and loud tongued, Prov. 7 11. Shee is babbling and loud. III. In apparell we must observe an holy comelinesse, Tit. 2.3. The elder women must be of such behaviour, as becommeth holinesse. Holy comelinesse, is that which expresseth to the eie the sincerity, that is, the godlinesse, temperance, and gravitie either of man or woman. This decency will more plainely appeare, if we consider the ends of apparell, which are in number five. 1. Necessitie, to the end that our bodies may be defended against the extremitie of parching heat, and pinching cold. 2. Honestie, that that deformitie of our naked bodies might be covered, which immediately followed the transgression of our parents. 3. Commodity whereby men, as their calling, worke, and trade of life is different, so doe they apparrell themselves: and hence it is, that some apparell is more decent for certaine estates of men, then other. 4. Frugalitie, when a mans attire is proportionable to his abilitie and calling. 5. Distinction of persons, as of sexe, ages, offices, time and actions. For a man hath his set attire, a woman hers, a young man is apparrelled on this fashion, an old man on that. And therefore it is unseemely for a man to put on a womans apparell or a woman the mans, Deut. 22. 5. The woman shall not weare that which pertaineth to the man, neither shall a man put on womans rayment: for all that doe so, are an abomination to the Lord thy God.

To set downe precisely out of Gods word, what apparell is decent, is very hard: wherefore in this cause, the judgement & practise of modest, grave, and sincere men, in every particular estate, is most to be followed, and men must rather keep too much within the bounds of measure, then to step one foot without the precincts. IV. In purging the excrements of nature, care must be had, that they must be cast forth into some separate and close place, and there also covered, Deut. 23. 12. Thou shalt have a place without the hoste, whither thou shalt resort, 13. And thou shalt have a paddle among thy weapons, and when thou wouldest sit downe without, thou shalt dig therewith, and returning, thou shalt cover thine excrements. 14. For the Lord thy God walketh in the middest of the camp to deliver thee: therefore thine hoste shall be holy, that he see no filthy thing in thee, and turne away from thee, 1 Sam. 24 4. And he came to the sheepcotes by the way, where there was a Cave, and Saul went in to cover his feet.

Sobriety is a vertue which concerneth the usage of our diet in holinesse. For the better observation thereof, these rules may serve: I. The chiefest at the banket, let him consecrate the meates to God, by saying grace, 1 Sam. 9. 13. The people will not eat, till he (that is, Samuel) come because he will blesse the sacrifice: and then eat they that be bidden to the feast. Mark. 6. 39. He commanded them to make them all sit downe by companies upon the grasse, &c. 41. And A he tooke the five loaves and two fishes, and looked up to heaven, and gave thanks; Act. 27. 35. When he had thus said, he (that is, Paul) gave thanks in the presence of them all, and when he had broken bread, he began to eat. II. It is lawfull to furnish a table with store of dishes, not onely for necessity, but also for the good entertainment of a friend, and for delight, Luk. 5. 29. Levi made him (that is, Iesus) a great feast in his owne house, where there was a great company of publicans, and of others that sate at table with him, Ps. 104. 15. He giveth wine that maketh glad the heart of a man, and oile to make the face shine, and bread that strengtheneth mans heart, Iohn 12. 2. There they made him a supper, and Martha served, but Lazarus was one of them that sate at table with him. 3. Then took Mary a pound of ointment of Spikenard very costly, and anointed Iesus B feet. III. Choose the lower roome at a banquet: but rather then be troublesome, sit as the master of the feast assigneth thee, Luk. 14. 4. He spake a parable to the guests, when he marked how they chose out the chiefe rooms, and said, 8. When thou shalt be bidden of any man to a wedding, set not thy selfe downe in the chiefest place, lest a more honourable man then thou be bidden of him. 9. And him that bade both him and thee, come and say, Give this man roome, 10. But goe and sit down in the lowest room, that when he that bade thee, commeth, he may say unto thee, Friend, sit up higher, Prov. 25. 6. Stand not in the place C of great men, &c. IV. Man must eate at due times, not at unseasonable houres, Eccles. 10. 16 Woe be to thee, O land, when thy princes eate in the morning. 17. Blessed art thou, O land, when thy Princes eate in time. V. Man must eate and drinke moderately, so that the body may receive strength thereby, and the soule be more fresh and lively, to performe the actions of godlinesse, Luk. 21. 34. Take heed to your selves, lest at any time your hearts be oppressed with surfeting and drunkennesse, Prov. 23. 29. To whom is woe? &c. Even to them that tarry long at wine, to them that goe and seeke mixt wine. 30. Looke not thou upon the wine when it is red, and when it sheweth his colour in the cup, and goeth downe pleasantly, &c. Prov. 25. 16. If thou hast found D honey, eate that is sufficient for thee, lest thou bee over full and vomit, Pro. 31. 4. It is not for kings to drink wine, nor for Princes strong drink, 5. Lest he drinke and forget the decree, and change the judgement of all the children of affliction. VI. We must then especially regard these things, when we eate at great mens tables, Prov. 23. 1. When thou sittest to eate with a ruler, consider diligently what is before thee, 2. Put the knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to thy appetite. 3. Be not desirous of his dainty meates: for it is a deceiveable meate. VII. Godly mirth at meate is tolerable, Act. 2. 46. They did eate their meat together with gladnesse and singlenesse of heart. VIII. Table talke (according as occasion of talke is offered) must be such as may edifie. Such was Christs talke at the Pharises table, Luke 14. from the 1 verse, to the 16 verse. IX. See that after after the banquet ended, the broken meate be not loſt, but reſerved, Ioh. 6. 12. When they were ſatisfied, he ſaid unto his Diſciples, Gather up the broke meat which remaineth, that nothing be loſt. X. At a feaſt leave ſomewhat. Ruth. 2. 14. She did eate and was ſufficed, and left thereof.

Chaſtitie is double: one of ſingle life, another in wedlocke. They that are ſingle, muſt, I. with great care keepe their affections and bodies in holineſſe. Pſal. 119. 9. How ſhall a young man purge his wayes? by directing the ſame after thy word. 1. Ioh. 2. 13. I write unto you fathers, becauſe ye have known him that is frō the beginning. I write unto you yong men, becauſe yee have overcome that wicked one. 14: I write unto you babes, becauſe ye have knowne the father. Eccles. 12. 1. Remember thy creatour in the dayes of thy youth, whiles the evill dayes come not, nor the yeares approch, wherein thou ſhalt ſay, I have no pleaſure in them. II. They muſt faſt often. 1. Cor. 9. 27. I beate downe my body, and bring it into ſubjection, leaſt by any meanes, after I have preached to others, I my ſelfe ſhould bee reproved. III. They muſt take heed they burne not in luſt: for, 1. Cor. 7. 9. It is better to marry then tō burne.

Chaſtitie in wedlocke, is when the holy and pure uſe of wedlocke is obſerved. Heb. 13. 4. Marriage is honourable among all, and the bed undefiled, but whoremongers and adulterers God will judge. To preſerve purity in wedlock, theſe cautions are profitable: I. contracts muſt be in the Lord, and with the faithfull onely. Malac. 2. 11. Iudah hath tranſgreſſed, and an abomination is committed in Iſrael, and in Hieruſalem: for Iudah hath defiled the holineſſe of the Lord which he loved, and hath married the daughter of a ſtrange god. 1. Cor. 7. 39. If her husband be dead ſhe is at liberty to marry with whom ſhe will, onely in the Lord. II. Both parties muſt ſeparate themſelves in the time of a womans diſeaſe, and at appointed faſts. Ezech. 18. 6. 1 Cor. 7. 5. Defraud not one another, except it be with conſent for a time, that ye may give your ſelves to faſting and prayer, and againe come together, that Satan tempt you not for your incontinencie. III. Wedlocke muſt be uſed rather to ſuppreſſe, then to ſatisfie that corrupt concupiſcence of the fleſh, and eſpecially to enlarge the Church of God, which is done by an holy ſeed: Rom. 13. 14. Put on the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and take not care for the fleſh to ſatisfie the luſts thereof. IV. It muſt be uſed with prayer and thankeſgiving, 1. Tim. 4. 3, 4.

CHAP. XXVII.

Of the eighth Commandement.

THis Commandement concerneth the preſervation of our neighbours goods. The words are theſe:

Thou ſhalt not ſteale.

The Reſolution.

Steale To ſteale, is properly to convey any thing cloſely from another, Gen. 31. 20. Iacob A ſtole away the heart of Laban the Aramite. In this place it ſignifies generally, to wiſh that which is another mans, to get it by fraud, and any way to impaire his wealth.

The negative part.

Thou ſhalt neither be wanting to preſerve, nor a meanes to hinder or hurt thy neighbours goods.

In this place theſe ſinnes are forbidden: I. Inordinate living, whether it be in no ſet calling: or idlely, wherein by neglecting their duties, ſuch perſons miſpend their time, goods, and revenewes. 2. Theſſ. 3. 11. We heare that there are ſome among you that walke inordinately, and work not at all, but are buſie-bodies. Gen. 3. 19. In the ſweat of thy browes ſhalt thou eat thy bread, till thou returne to the earth, 1. Tim. 5. 8. B If there be any that provideth not for his owne, eſpecially for them of his houſhold, he denieth the faith, and is worſe then an Infidel.

II. Vnjuſt dealing, which is either in heart, or deede. Vnjuſt dealing in heart, is named covetouſneſſe. Math. 15. 19. Out of the heart come evill thoughts, murthers, adulteries, fornications, theſts, &c. Covetouſnes is idolatry. Eph. 5. 5. Wee know that no covetous perſon, which is an idolatour, ſhal enter into the kingdome of Chriſt and of God. Yea, it is the very roote of all evill, not begetting, but nourſhing all kind of ſinne. 1 Tim. 6. 10. The love of money is the roote of all evill, which while ſome luſted after, they erred from the faith, and pierced themſelves through with many ſorrowes.

C Vnjuſt dealing in deede, is in bargaining, or out of bargaining. Vnjuſt dealing in bargaining, hath many branches, 1 Theſſ. 4. 6. Let no man oppreſſe, or deceive his neighbour in a bargaine: for God is the avenger of ſuch things.

I. To ſell, or bargaine for that which is not ſaleable. Of this kind. I. is the gift of the holy Ghoſt, which cannot be bought with money. Act. 8. 18. When Simon ſaw, that through laying on of the Apoſtles hands, the holy Ghoſt was given, he offered them money, 16. Saying, give mee alſo this power, that on whomſoever I lay the hands, he may receive the holy Ghoſt. 20. Then Peter ſaid unto him, Thy mony periſh with thee, becauſe thou thinkeſt that the gift of God may bee obtained with money. II. Church-goods are not ſaleable. D Therefore it is not to bee allowed, for men to ſell or alienate them from the Church. Prov. 20. 25. It is deſtruction for a man to devoure that which is ſanctified, and after the vowes to enquire. Mal. 3. 8. Church-goods are the poſſeſſion of the Lord. III. Whatſoever is unprofitable either to the Church or Common-weale, muſt not be ſold.

II. All coloured forgery and deceit in bargaining: as, I. uſing forged cavillation: Luke 19. 8. Zacheus ſtood forth, & ſaid unto the Lord, Behold, Lord, the halfe of my goods I give to the poore: and if I have taken ought from any man by forged cavillation, I reſtore it four-fold. II. When men ſell that, which is counterfeit, for good: as copper for gold, and mingle any waies bad with good, making ſhew onely of the good.

Amos 8.4, 5, 6. Heare this yee that ſwallow up the poore, ſaying, when will the new moneth bee gone, &c. that we may ſel the refuſe of the wheat.

III. When men falſifie their meaſures and weights. Deut. 25. 13. Thou ſhalt not have in thy bagge two manner of weights, a great and a ſmall. 14. But thou ſhalt have a right and a juſt weight: a perfect meaſure ſhalt thou have. Levit. 19. 35. Yee ſhall not doe unjuſtly in judgement, in line, in weight, or in meaſure. 36. Yee ſhall have juſt ballances, true weights, a true Epha, and a true Hin. Amos 8.4. Heare this, yee that ſay, When will the Sabath bee gone, that we may ſell corne, and make the Epha ſmall, and the ſhekel great, and falſifie the weights by deceit?

III. When the buyer concealeth the goodneſſe of the thing, or the ſeller the faults of it, and blind-foldeth the truth with counterfeit ſpeeches. Math. 7. 12. Whatſoever yee would that men ſhould doe unto you, even ſo doe to them: for this is the Law and the Prophets. Prou. 20. 14. It is naught, it is naught, ſaith the buyer, but when hee is gone apart, he boaſteth.

IV. When in buying and ſelling the people are oppreſſed. And this is done, 1. when the juſt price of things is raiſed. For in bargaining, it is not lawfull to purſe one penny, without the giving of a penny worth. 2. Sale upon a ſet day, which is, when day is given, that the price may be inhanced. For what is this, I pray you, but to ſell time, and to take more of our neighbour, then right? 3. To ingroſſe, which is to buy up all of one commoditie into thine owne hands, that when no other hath any of the ſame, thou maiſt ſell it at thine owne price. 4. To become bankerupt, that thou maieſt bee enriched by the dammages, and goods of other men. 5. Not to reſtore that, which was lent to one, pledged to one, or found by him, Eze. 18.7. Neither hath oppreſſed any, but hath reſtored the pledge to his debter: he that hath ſpoiled none by violence, &c. 6. To delay any kind of reſtitution from one day to another. Prov. 3.28. Say not to thy neighbour, Depart, and come againe to morrow I will pay you, when thou mayeſt doe it then. Pſal. 37.21. The wicked man borroweth, and payeth not againe, but the righteous is merciſull and lendeth. 7. To practiſe uſurie. Pſal. 15. 5. Which hath not put his money to uſury. Exod. 22. 25. If thou lendeſt money to my people, to the poore man which dwelleth with thee, be not to him as an uſurer, lay not uſury upon him.

Vſury is a gaine exacted by covenant, above the principall onely in lieu, and recompenſe of the lending of it. Vſury being conſidered as it is thus deſcribed, is quite contrarie to Gods word, and may very fitly bee tearmed by ting lucre. Exod. 22. 14. If any man hath borrowed any thing of another, whatſoever is hurt or dyeth, if the owner of the thing be not preſent, let him bee recompenced. 15. If hee bee preſent, recompence him not: if he be hired for a price, it is ſold for the ſame price. Ezech. 18.8. He hath not given uſurie, neither hath taken increaſe. 2. Cor. 8.13. Neither is it that other men ſhould bee eaſed and you grieved. 14. But upon like condition at this time, your abundance ſupplieth their lacke, that alſo their abundance may bee for your lacke: that there may bee equality.

And this uſury, poſitive lawes doe not only reſtraine, but not allow.

Queſt. Is it not lawfull to take at ſome time above the principall?

Anſw. Yes ſurely, with theſe conditions: I. If a man take heed that he exact nothing, but that which his debter can get by good and lawfull meanes. II. Hee may not take more then the gaine, nay not all the gaine, nor that part of the gaine which drinks up the living of him that uſeth the money. III. Hee muſt ſometimes bee ſo farre from taking gaine, that hee muſt not require the principall, if his debter be by inevitable and juſt caſualties brought behind, and it bee alſo plaine that hee could not make, no not by great diligence, any commoditie of the money borrowed.

The reaſons why a man may take ſometimes aboue the principall, are, 1. That which the debter may give, having himſelfe an honeſt gaine beſides, and no man any waies endammaged, that the creditor may ſafely receive.

2. It is convenient, that he which hath money lent him, and gaineth by it, ſhould ſhew all poſſible gratitude to him, by whoſe goods he is enriched.

3. It is often for the benefit of the creditor, to have the goods in his owne hands which he lent.

Object. Money is not fruitfull, therefore it is unlawfull to receive more then we lent out.

Anſw. Albeit money in it ſelfe be not fruitfull, yet it is made very fruitfull by the borrowers good uſe, as ground which is not fruitfull except it be tilled.

Laſt of all, when man detaineth the labourers wages, Iames 5.4. Behold, the hire of the labourers (which have reaped your fields, which is of you kept backe by fraud) cryeth, and the cryes of them which have reaped, are entred into the eares of the Lord of hoſts.

Vnjuſt dealing out of bargaining, is likewiſe manifold: I. To pronounce falſe ſentence or judgement for a reward, either profered, or promiſed, Iſai. 1. 23. The Princes are rebellious, and companions of theeves: every one loveth gifts, and followeth after rewards: they judge not the fatherleſſe, neither doth the widowes cauſe come before them. This is the Lawyers and Iudges ſinne. II. To feede, or clothe ſtout and luſty rogues or beggers. 2 Theſ. 3.10. When we were with you, we enjoyned you this, that if any would not labour, the ſame ſhould not eate. What then thinke you, muſt thoſe licenſed rogues and beggers by authority, I meane, all idle Monks and Abby-lubbers have; Socrates in the Tripartite hiſtory, ſaith plainely, that that Monke which laboureth not with his hands, is no better then a theefe. III. Gaming for money & gaine. For thou mayeſt not inrich thy ſelfe by impoveriſhing thy brother. This gaming is worſe farre then Vſury, and in a ſhort while will more inrich a man. IV. To get money by unlawfull Arts: ſuch are Magique, Iudiciall Aſtrology, Stage-playes, and ſuch like. Eph. 4.28. Let him that hath ſtolne, ſteale no more, but rather let him labor, working with his owne hands the thing that is good, that he may give unto him that hath need. Deut. 18.11. Eph. 5.3. 1 Theſ. 5.22. Abſtaine from all appearance of evill. V. To filch or pilfer the leaſt pinne or point from another, though it were for the greateſt good. Mark. 10.19. Thou ſhalt not ſteale, thou ſhalt not hurt any man. Rom. 3.8. And (as we are blamed, and as ſome affirme that we ſay) why doe wee not evill, that good may come thereof? whoſe damnation is juſt. VI. To remoove ancient bounds. Prov. 22. 28. Thou ſhalt not remoove the ancient bounds which thy Fathers have made. Hoſ. 5. 10. The Princes of Iudah are like them which remoove the bounds. VII. To ſteale other mens ſervants, or children, to commit ſacriledge, or robbery. 1 Tim. 1. 10. To Whoremongers, Buggerers, and Men-ſtealers. Ioſh. 7. v. 19. Achans theft, 1 Cor. 6.10. Neither Theeves, nor covetous perſons, nor Robbers, &c. ſhall inherite the Kingdome of God. For Robberies, theſe ſorts of men eſpecially are famous: Theeves by the high wayes, Pyrates upon the Seas, Souldiers not content with their pay, and whoſoever they be, that by maine force take that which is none of their owne. Luk. 3.14. The Souldiers asked him, ſaying, what ſhall we doe? he ſaid, doe violence to no man, neither accuſe any man falſely, and be content with your wages. VIII. To conſpire with a Thiefe, whether by giving advice how he may compaſſe his enterpriſe, or by concealing his fact, that he be not puniſhed. Prov. 29.24. He that is partaker with a Thiefe, hateth himſelfe, and he that heareth curſing, and diſcovereth it not. The puniſhment of theft may at the diſcretion of the Iudge be ſometimes aggravated, as he ſeeth the quality of the offence to be. Therefore theeves ſometimes are puniſhed with death.

Now if any man object, that the Iudiciall Law of God, doth only require the reſtitution thereof fourefold for ſuch an offence: I anſwer, that the civill Magiſtrate, when he ſeeth ſome one, or many offences to increaſe, hee may by his authority encreaſe the civill puniſhment due to that ſinne. Now it is manifeſt, that the ſinne of theft is farre more grievous in our Commonweale, then it was among the Iewes. For firſt, the inhabitants of this Commõweale are generally, by many degrees, poorer then the Iewes were: therefore to ſteale a thing, but of ſome ſmall value, from one in this Countrey, doth more endammage him, then a thing of great value would have done the Iewes.

Againe, the people of this Countrey are of a more ſtirring, and fierce diſpoſition: the which maketh Theeves to bee more outragious, with their Robberies joyning Violence, and the diſturbance of the publike tranquillity of the Countrey: whereof more regard ought to be had, then of one private mans life.

The affirmative part.

To this are required theſe that follow:

I. A certaine Calling: wherein every man, according to that gift which God hath given him, muſt beſtow himſelfe honeſtly, to his owne and neighbours good. 1 Cor. 7. 24. Let every man wherein hee was called, therein abide with God. Eph. 4. 28. 1 Pet. 4. 10. According as every man hath received a gift, ſo let him adminiſter to another, that yee may be good diſpenſers of the manifold graces of God. Gal. 5. 13. In love ſerve one another.

II. The true uſe of Riches, and all the goods a man hath to which belong two Vertues, Contentation, and Thriftineſſe.

Contentation is a Vertue, whereby a man is well pleaſed with that eſtate, wherein he is placed. 1 Tim. 6. 6. Godlineſſe is great gaine, with a contented mind. 7. For we brought nothing into the world, neither ſhall we carry any thing out of the world: but, having food and rayment, let us be content, Phil. 4. 11. I have learned in whatſoever ſtate I am, therewith to be content. 12. I can be abaſed, and I can abound; every where in all things I am inſtructed, both to be full, and to bee hungry; and to abound, and to have want. Mat. 6. 11. Give us this day our dayly bread. Heb. 13. 5. Let your converſation be without covetouſnes, and bee content with the things which you have: for he ſaith, I will not forſake thee, nor leave thee.

Thriftineſſe, or frugality, is a Vertue, whereby a man carefully keepeth his goods which he hath gotten, and imployeth them to ſuch uſes, as are both neceſſary and profitable. Prov. 5. 15. Drinke the water of thy Ceſterne, and of the Rivers, out of the midſt of thine owne well. 16. Let thy Fountaines flow forth, and the Rivers of Waters in the ſtreets. 17. Let them bee thine owne, yea, thine onely, and not the ſtrangers with thee. Prov. 21. 5. The thoughts of the diligent doe ſurely bring abundance. 17. He that loveth paſtime, ſhall be a poore man, and he that loveth wine and oyle, ſhall not be rich. Prov. 12. 27. The deceitfull man roſteth not that which he hath taken in hunting: but the riches of the diligent are pretious. Iohn 6. 12.

III. To ſpeake the truth from the heart, and to uſe an harmleſſe ſimplicity in all affaires. Pſal. 15. 2. He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteouſneſſe, he that ſpeaketh the truth in his heart. Gen. 23. 15. Ephron ſaid to Abraham, The land is worth foure hundred ſhekels of ſilver, what is that betweene me and thee? bury therefore thy dead. 18. So Abraham harkened to Ephron, and Abraham weighed to Ephron the ſilver, which he had named in the audience of the Hittites, even foure hundreth ſhekels of currant money among Marchants, &c.

IV. Iuſt dealing. 1 Theſ. 4. 6. Of this there are many kinds.

I. In buying and ſelling, in letting and hiring of Farmes, Tenements, Lands: in Marchandize, dize, and all manner of commodities, men must racke nothing, but keepe a just price. A just price is then observed, when as the things prized, and the price given for them, are made equall, as neere as may be. For the observation of this equality, these foure rules are to be considered: for by them all bargaines must be ordered. I. There must be a proportion and equalitie in all contracts: the which will then be, when as the seller doth not value the thing, onely according to his owne paines, and cost bestowed upon it: but also seeth what profit it may be to the buyer, and in what need he standeth of it, Levit. 25. 14. When thou sellest ought to thy neighbour, or buyest ought at his hands, ye shall not oppresse one another. 15. But according to the number of the yeares after the Iubile, thou shalt buy of thy neighbour. Also according to the number of yeeres of thy revenewes, he shall sell unto thee. 16. According to the number of yeeres thou shalt increase the price thereof: and according to the fewnesse of yeeres thou shalt abate the price of it, for the number of fruits he doth sel unto thee. II. They must be squared according to the law of nature, the sum whereof Christ propoundeth in these words, Mat. 7. 12. Whatsoever ye would that men should doe unto you, do the same unto them. III. The bond of nature must be kept, which bindeth him that receiveth a benefit, and maketh a lawfull gaine of another mans goods, that he being once enriched, shall make proportionable and naturall recompence, even above the principall. IV. Men must communicate and make use of their goods, with that caveat which Paul giveth, 2 Cor. 8. 13. not so to bestow them, as that others may bee eased, and they grieved: or contrariwise.

II. Men must make sale of such things, as are in their kinde substantiall, and fit for use.

III. They must use just weights and measures, Deut. 25. 13. Thou shalt not have in thy bag two manner of weights, a great and a small: but thou shalt have a right and just weight, a perfect and just measure shalt thou have, Ez. 45. 10. Ye shall have just ballances, a true Ephah, and a true Bath, Mic. 6. 11. Shal I justifie the wicked ballances, and the bag of deceitfull weights?

IV. Hee that hireth any thing, must not onely pay the appointed hire, but make that which he hired good, if ought but good come unto it, by his default, Exo. 22. 14, 15. If a man borrow any thing of his neighbour, and it be hurt, he shall surely make it good, &c.

V. The pledge or pawne ought to be redeemed, and if it be of important necessity, as that which preserveth the life of our neighbour, it must be restored to him incontinently. Ex. 22, 26. If thou take thy neighbours raiment to pledge, thou shalt restore it againe before the Sunne goe downe: for that is his covering onely, Deut. 24. 6. No man shall take the neather or upper Milstone to pledge, for this gage is his living. Neither may a man in a pledge be his owne carver, but hee must take such an one as is offered, Deu. 24. 10 When thou shalt aske againe of thy neighbour any thing lent, thou shalt not go into his house to fetch his pledge. 11. But thou shalt stand without, and the man that borrowed it of thee, shall bring the pledge out of the doores unto thee. 12. Furthermore, if it be a poore body, thou shalt not sleep with his pledge. 13. But shalt restore, &c.

VI. To become surety onely for men that are honest, and very well known: and that warily, with much deliberation. Prov. 11. 15. He shalbe sore vexed that is surety for a strãger. And he that hateth suretiship is sure. Prov. 17. 18. A man destitute of understanding toucheth the hand and becommeth surety for his neighbour, Pro. 22. 26. But if it be so that a man hath entangled himselfe by suretiship, the best way is to crave his creditours favour, by his own humble suit, and the instant request of his friends. Pro. 6. 1. My son if thou be surety for thy neighbor, & hast striken hands with the stranger: 2 Thou art snared with the words of thine own mouth. 3. Do this now, my son, and deliver my selfe, seeing thou art come into the hand of thy neighbor; go, and humble thy selfe, and sollicite thy friends. 4. Give no sleepe to thine eies, nor slumber to thine eye-lids. 5. Deliver thy self, as a Doe from the hands of the hunter, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

VII. All just covenants and promises, though they be to our hinderance, must bee performed. For a promise doth binde, if it bee lawfull, so far forth as he will, unto whom we make the promise. Psa. 15. 4. Which sweareth to his hurt & changeth not, Pro. 25. 14. A man that boasteth and keepeth not promise, is like clouds and wind without raine. Iudg. 1. 24. The spies saw a man come out of the city, and they said unto him, Shew us we pray thee, the way into the citie, and we will shew thee mercy. 25. And when he had shewed them the way into the city, they smote the city with the edge of the sword, but they let the man and all his houshold depart. Therefore if after promise made, he either see that he shall be endamaged thereby, or hindred in the performance of his promise, he may crave a release, and if it be granted, accept of it.

VIII. To lend that we doe, freely, Luk. 6. 35 Lend, looking for nothing againe, and your reward shall be great. And when we borrow, wee must be carefull to make restitution, even if need be, with the sale of our owne goods. 2 King. 4. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. Here the wife of the sonne of the Prophets selleth her oyle which God sent by the hand of Elisha, to pay her creditour.

IX. To restore that which is committed to our custody without delay. Matth. 21. 41. Hee will destroy the euill husbandmen, and let out his vineyard to others, which shall deliver him the fruits in their season. Prov. 3. 28. But if such a thing be lost, not by our default, we are not urged to repay it. Exod. 22. 7. If a man deliver his neighbour money, or stuffe to keep, and if it be stollen out of his house, if the thiefe be found, he shall pay thee double. 8. If the thiefe be not found, then the master of the house shall be brought before the Iudges to sweare, whether he have put his hand to his neighbours good or no.

X. That

X. That which a man findeth, is to be kept in his owne hand, if the true owner cannot be heard of; but if he be, he must restore it, Deut. 22.1. Thou shalt not see thy brothers oxe, nor his sheepe goe astray, and withdraw thy selfe from them, but shalt bring them againe unto thy brother. 2. If he be not neare unto thee, or thou know him not, thou shalt bring it unto thine house, and it shall remaine with thee untill thy brother seeke after it, then shalt thou deliver it to him againe. 3. So shalt thou doe with all lost things.

XI. To get our owne, we may, if we cannot doe otherwise, sue our neighbour in law. But we must follow our suites in all holy manner, and with these caveats. I. In all suites, we must not doe any thing, that may prejudice the profession of Christian religion. Therefore all suiters in law offend, when they trust more in man, then in God, and make their religion a jest to worldlings; partly by striving about things of small importance, and partly by not admitting any conditions of reconciliation, 1 Cor. 6.1. Dare any of you having businesse against another, be adjudged under the unjust, and not under the Saints? II. Law must be the last remedy, as a desperate medicine is the last remedie the Physitian useth: Wee must assay all meanes possible, before wee use this, especially to a brother, 1 Cor. 6.7. There is utterly a fault among you, because ye goe to law one with another: why rather suffer ye not wrong? why rather sustaine ye not harme? III. In all suites of law, we must be mindfull of the law of charity, and not so much endevour to maintaine our owne right, as to recall our brother, which erreth, into the right way.

CHAP. XXVIII.

THe ninth Commandement concerneth the preservation of our neighbours good name.

The words are these:

Thou shalt not beare false witnesse against thy neighbour.

The Resolution.

Thou shalt not beare ] That is, answer when thou art asked before a Iudge, Deut. 19. 17. Then both the men which strive together, shall stand before the Lord, even before the Priests and Iudges which shall be in those dayes. 18. And the Iudges shall make a diligent inquisition, and if the witnesse be found false, and hath given false witnesse against his brother.

Witnesse ] By a figure, signifieth every word, whereby the credit and estimation of our neighbour is either impaired or diminished.

The negative part.

Thou shalt not diminish nor hurt the good name and estimation of thy neighbour.

Here is forbidden:

I. Envie, disdaine of others, desire of a mans own glory, 1 Tim. 6.4. He is puft up, and knoweth nothing, but doteth about questions, and strife of words, whereof commeth envie, strife, railings, 1 Pet. 2.1, Wherefore laying aside all maliciousnesse, and envie, and all guile, and evill speaking, Mat. 12. 15. But when the chiefe Priests and Scribes saw the marvailes that hee did, and the children crying in the Temple, and saying, Hosanna the sonne of David, they disdained.

II. Evill suspitions. 1 Tim. 6.4. 1 Sam. 17.28 And Eliab his eldest brother heard when he spake unto the men, and Eliab was angry with David, and said, Why camest thou downe hither? and with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the wilderneſſe? I know thy pride and the malice of thine heart, Act. 28.4. Now when the Barbarians saw the worme hang on his hand, they said among themselves, This man surely is a murderer, whom though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance hath not suffered him to live. Here are condemned, hard censures and sinister judgements against our neighbour, Mat. 7.1. Judge not, that ye be not judged. 2. For with what judgement ye judge: ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you againe. These judgements which Christ forbiddeth, are private and reprochfull or slanderous judgments: namely, when either a good or an indifferent action is interpreted to the worse part: or when a light offence is made hainous through evill will, without all desire either to amend or to cover the same, Act. 2.13. And others mocked and said, they are full of new Wine. 14. But Peter standing with the eleven, lift up his voyce, and said unto them, Ye men of Iudea, and all ye that inhabite Ierusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken unto my words: 15. For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, since it is but the third houre of the day, 1 Sam. 1.13. For Hannah spake in her heart, her lips did moove onely, but her voyce was not heard, therfore Eli thought she had been drunken. But we must know, that there are three kindes of judgments, which are not forbidden by this commandement of Christ. The first is the ministery of the Gospel, which judgeth and reproveth sin. The second, is the judgement of the Magistrate. The third, is the judgement of a friend admonishing us: as when he saith, Abstaine from the company of such a man, for I know him to be a drunkard, &c.

III. A relation of the bare words, onely, and not of the sence and meaning of our neighbour, Mat. 26.59. Now the chiefe of the Priests, and the elders, and all the whole Councell, sought false witnesses against Iesus, to put him to death. 60. But they found none, and though many false witnesses came, yet found they none: But at the last came two false witnesses, 61. And said, This man said, I can destroy the Temple of God, and build it in three dayes. Indeed, Christ said some such thing in words as appeareth, Ioh. 2.19. Iesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three daies I will raise it up againe.

IV. A lie, whereby every falshood with purpose to deceive, is signified, whether in words, or in deeds, or concealing the truth, or any other way whatſoever; be it for never ſo great a good to our neighbour.

any

V. To pronounce unjuſt ſentence in judgement; to reſt in one witneſſe; to accuſe another wrongfully; to betray a mans cauſe by colluſion. 1 Kin. 21. 12. They proclaimed a faſt, and ſet Naboth among the cheefe of the people, 13. And there came two wicked men, and ſate before him, and the wicked men witneſſed againſt Naboth in the preſence of the people, ſaying, Naboth did blaſpheme God & the king: then they caried him away out of the city, and ſtoned him with ſtones, that he died. Deut. 17. 6. At the mouth of two or three witneſſes ſhall he that is worthy of death, die: but at the mouth of one witneſſe he ſhall not die.

VI. Openly to raiſe forged and hurtfull tales and reports of our neighbour, or privily to deviſe the ſame. Rom. 1. 29. Whiſperers, 30. Backbiters, haters of God, proud, boaſters, inventers of evill things. Lev. 19. 16. Thou ſhalt not walke about with tales among thy people, thou ſhalt not ſtand againſt the blood of thy neighbour: I am the Lord, 1 Tim. 5. 13. And likewiſe alſo being idle, they learne to goe about from houſe to houſe: yea, they are not onely idle, but alſo pratlers, and buſie bodies, ſpeaking things which are not comely. To ſpread abroad flying tales, or to faine and adde any thing unto them, Pro. 26. 20. Without wood the fire is quenched, and without a tale-bearer ſtrife ceaſeth. 21. As a coal maketh burning coals and wood a fire, ſo the contentious man is apt to kindle ſtrife. 22. The words of a tale-bearer are as flatterings, & they go down into the bowels of the belly. 2 Cor. 10. 20. For I feare leſt when I come, I ſhall not find you ſuch as I would, and leſt there be ſtrife, envying, wrath, contentions, backbitings, whiſperings, ſwellings, and diſcord among you. To receive or beleeve thoſe tales which wee heare of others. Exod. 23. 1. Thou ſhalt not receive a falſe tale, neither ſhalt thou put thine hand with the wicked, to be a falſe witneſſe. 1 Sam. 24. 10. And David ſaid to Saul, Wherefore giveſt thou an eare to mens words, that ſay, behold, David ſeeketh evill againſt thee?

VII. To accuſe our neighbour for that which is certain and true, through hatred and with intent to hurt him. 1 Sam. 22. 9. Then anſwered Doeg the Edomite (who was appointed over the ſervants of Saul) and ſaid, I ſaw the ſon of Iſhai when he came to Nob, to Abimelech the ſon of Ahitub. 10. Who asked counſell of the Lord for him, and gave him victuals, and he gave him alſo the ſword of Goliah the Philiſtim. Of this deed David thus ſpeaketh. Pſal. 52. 1. Why boaſteſt thou thy ſelfe in thy wickedneſſe, O man of power? the loving kindneſſe of the Lord endureth for ever. 2. Thy tongue imagineth miſchiefe, and is like a ſharp raſor, that cutteth deceitfully. 3. Thou doſt love evill more then good: and lies, more then to ſpeak the truth. 4. Thou loveſt all words that may deſtroy, O deceitfull tongue.

VIII. To open or declare our neighbours ſecrets to any man, eſpecially, if he did it of infirmity. Mat. 18. 15. Moreover, if thy brother treſpaſſe againſt thee, go and tell him his fault betweene thee and him alone: if he heare thee, thou haſt won thy brother. Pro. 11. 13. He that goeth about as a ſlanderer diſcovereth a ſecret: but hee that is of a faithfull heart, conceaſeth a matter.

IX. All babling talke and bitter words. Ephe. 5. 3. But fornication & all uncleannes, let it not be once named among you. 4. Neither filthines: neither fooliſh talking, neither jeſting, which are not comely, but rather giving of thanks. Ioh. 9. 34. They anſwered & ſaid unto him, thou art altogether borne in ſins, and doeſt thou teach us? ſo they caſt him out. This jeſting, or, as it is now tearmed, wit, which Ariſtot. the Philoſopher maketh a vertue, is by Paul the Apoſtle accounted a vice: and that not without cauſe. I. Such quips as ſting others, though they be a great pleaſure for ſome to heare, yet are they very offenſive to ſuch as are ſo girded. II. It is very hard to make Chriſtian both godlineſſe and gravity to agree with ſuch behaviour.

Object. But ſalt and tart ſpeeches are uſuall in the Scriptures, 1 Kin. 18. 27. Eliah mocked the prieſts of Baal, Eſa. 14. 9.

Anſ. Such ſpeeches are not ſpoken to pleaſe others, but are ſharpely denounced againſt Gods enemies to his glory.

X. Flattery, whereby we praiſe our neighbor above that we know in him. Pro. 27. 6. The wounds of a lover are faithfull, but the kiſſes of an enemy are to be ſhunned. 14. He that praiſeth his friend with a loud voyce, riſing early in the morning, it ſhall be counted to him as a curſe. Act. 12 22. And the people gave a ſhout ſaying, The voice of God, and not of man. This is a grievous ſin in the miniſters of the word. 1 Theſ. 2. 5. Neither did we ever uſe flattering words, as ye know, nor coloured covetouſnes, God is record. Ier. 6. 13. For from the leaſt of them, even unto the greateſt of them, every one is given unto covetouſnes, & from the Prophet, even unto the Prieſt, they all deale falſly. 14. They have healed alſo the hurt of the daughter of my people with ſweet words, ſaying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace. Rom. 16. 18 For they that are ſuch, ſerve not the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, but their owne bellies, & with faire ſpeech and flattering, deceive the hearts of the ſimple.

XI. Fooliſh and over-confident boaſting. Pro. 27. 1. Boaſt not thy ſelfe of to morrow, for thou knoweſt not what a day may bring forth: 2. Let another praiſe thee, and not thine own mouth, a ſtranger, and not thine owne lips.

XII. To accuſe, or witneſſe againſt one falſly. 1 Kin. 21. 13. Naboth blaſphemed God and the King.

The affirmative part.

Preſerve the good name of thy neighbor. Eccle. 7. 3. A good name is better then a good ointment, Here is commanded.

I. A rejoycing for the credit and good eſtimation of thy neighbour. Gal. 5. 22. But the fruit of the ſpirit, is love, joy, peace, gentleneſſe. Rom. 1. 8. Firſt, I thanke my God through Ieſus Chriſt, for you all, becauſe your faith is publiſhed throughout the whole world.

II. Willingly to acknowledge that good-neſſe we ſee in any man whatſoever, and onely to ſpeake of the ſame. Tit. 3. 2. That they ſpeake evill of no man, that they be no fighters, but ſoft, ſhewing all meekenes to all men. Moreover, wee muſt withall deſire, receive, and beleeve reports of our neighbors good. Act. 16. 1. Then came he to Derbe & Lyſtra, & behold, a certain diſciple was there, named Timotheus, a womans ſon which was a Ieweſſe, and beleeved, but his father was a Grecian. 2. Of whom the brethren which were at Lyſtra and Iconium, reported wel. 3. Therefore Paul would that he ſhould goe forth with him, and tooke and circumciſed him. Notwithſtanding this muſt be ſo performed of us, that in no wiſe we prove and allow of the vices and faults of men. 2 Chr. 25. 2. And he did uprightly in the eies of the Lord, but not with a perfect hart, & 27. 2. And he did uprightly in the ſight of the Lord, according to all that his father Vzziah did, ſave that he entred into the temple of the Lord, & the people did yet corrupt their waies.

III. To interpret a doubtfull evill to the better part. 1 Cor. 13. 5. Love thinketh not evill: 7. It beleeveth all things, it hopeth all things, &c. 37. 31. And they took Ioſephs coat, & killed a kid of the goats, & dipped the coat in the blood. 32 So they ſent the parti-colored coat, & they brought it to their father, & ſaid, this have we found, ſee now whether it be thy ſons coat or no. 33. Thē he knew it, and ſaid, It is my ſons coat, a wicked beaſt hath devoured him: Ioſeph is ſurely torne in pieces.

And here obſerve the religion of that Ioſeph, which was betrothed to Mary, who when he ſaw that Mary was with child, was readier to conclude, that before her betrothing ſhe was with child by committing fornication, than after by committing adultery. Mat. 1. 19. But for all this, men muſt not be too too credulous, or light of beleefe. Ioh. 2. 24. But Ieſus did not commit himſelfe unto them, becauſe he knew them all.

IV. Not to beleeve an evill report, running abroad among the common people, by the whiſpering of tale-bearers, as it were by conduit pipes. Pſa. 15. 3. He that ſlandereth not with his tongue, nor doth evill to his neighbour, nor receiveth a falſe report againſt his neighbour. Ier. 40. 14. And they ſaid unto him, Knoweſt thou not, that Baal is the king of the Ammonites, hath ſent Iſhmael, the ſonne of Nethaniah, to ſlay thee? but Gedaliah the ſon of Ahikam, beleeved him not. 16. But Gedaliah the ſon of Ahikam, ſaid unto Iochanan the ſon of Kareah, thou ſhalt not doe this thing, for thou ſpeakeſt falſly of Iſhmael. But we ought alſo to be angry at ſuch whiſperings. Pro. 25. 23. As the North wind driveth away the raine, ſo doth an angry countenance the ſlandering tongue.

V. To keep ſecret the offence of our neighbour, except it muſt of neceſſity bee revealed. Prov. 10. 12. Hatred ſtirred up contention: but love covereth all treſpaſſes. Mat. 1. 19. Then Ioſeph her husband being a juſt man, and not willing to make her a publike example, was minded to put her away ſecretly.

A man would ſuppoſe, that by this meanes, we ſhould be partakers of other mens ſinnes. But we muſt know, that we ought to conceale our neighbours imperfections, leſt he ſhould be provoked to offence: yet in the meane ſeaſon, hee muſt bee admoniſhed, that hee may amend. Gal. 6. 1. Iam. 5. 19 Brethren if any of you have erred from the truth, and ſome man hath converted him, 20. Let him know, that hee which hath converted the ſinner from going aſtray out of his way, ſhall ſave a ſoule from death, and ſhall hide a multitude of ſinnes.

But if the ſinne which is concealed, cannot thereby be taken away, then muſt we in love and charity, declare the ſame to thoſe, which may remove and amend the ſame. Gen. 37. 2. When Ioſeph was ſeventeen yeares old, he kept ſheep with his brethren, & the child was with the ſons of Bilhah, & with the ſons of Ziphah, his fathers wives; and Ioſeph told unto their father, their evill ſayings. 1 Cor. 1. 11. For it hath bin declared unto me, my brethren, of you, by them that are of the houſe of Cloe, that there are contentions among you. Mat. 18. 16. But if he heare thee not, take with thee one or two, that by the mouth of two or three witneſſes, &c.

VI. To get a good name of eſtimation among men, and to keepe the ſame when wee have gotten it, Phil. 4. 8. Furthermore brethren, whatſoever things are true, whatſoever things are honeſt, whatſoever things are juſt, whatſoever things are pure, whatſoever things are of good report, if there be any vertue, if there be any praiſe, think on theſe things. A good name is gotten. 1. If we, ſeeking the kingdome of God before all things, do repent us of all our ſins, and with an earneſt deſire, embrace and follow after righteouſnes, Pro. 10. 7. The memoriall of the juſt ſhall be bleſſed, but the name of the wicked ſhall rot. Mar. 14. 9. Verily I ſay unto you, whereſoever this Goſpel ſhall be preached throughout the whole world, this alſo, that ſhe hath done, ſhall be ſpoken of in remembrance of her. 2. We muſt have a care both to judge, and ſpeak well of others, Mat. 7. 2. With what judgement wee judge, ye ſhall be judged, Eccl. 7. 23. Give not thine heart alſo to all the words that men ſpeake, leſt thou do heare thy ſervant curſing thee. 24. For oftentimes alſo thine heart knoweth that thou likewiſe haſt curſed others. 3. We muſt abſtaine from all kind of wickednеſſe: for one only vice or ſin doth obſcure and darken a mans good name, Eccl. 10 1. Dead flies cauſe to ſtink, & putrifie the oyntment of the Apothecary, ſo doth a litle folly him that is in eſtimation for wiſedome, and for glory, 4. We muſt in all things earneſtly ſeeke for the glory of God onely, and not our own. Mat. 6. 5. And when thou praieſt, be not as the hypocrits, for they love to ſtand & pray in the Synagogues, & in the corners of the ſtreets, becauſe they would be ſeene of men: verily, I ſay unto you, they have their reward. 6. But when thou prayeſt, enter into thy chamber, and when thou haſt ſhut thy doore, pray unto thy Father which is in ſecret, and thy Father which ſeeth in ſecret, ſhall reward thee openly.

But

But if when we seeke the glory of God, honest and godly men doe praise and testifie well of us, we must not despise this their testimony and commendation: and although they never praise us, nor testifie of us at all, yet must wee take it in good part, 2 Cor. 1. 12. For our rejoycing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicitie and godly pureneſſe, and not in fleshly wisedome, but by the grace of God we have had our conversation in the world, and most of all to you wards. And c. 10, 13. But we will not rejoyce of things which are not within our measure, but according to the measure of the line, whereof God hath distributed to us a measure, to attaine euen unto you. Psal. 16. 5. The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance, and of my cup: thou shalt maintaine my lot. 6. The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places: yea, I have a faire heritage. 1. Cor. 1. 31. He that rejoyceth, let him rejoyce in the Lord.

CHAP. XXIX.

Of the tenth Commandement.

THe tenth Commandement concerneth concupiscences against our neighbour.

The words are these:

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbours house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbours wife, nor his servant, nor his maid, nor his oxe, nor his asse, nor any thing that thy neighbour hath.

The Resolution.

Covet.] The cogitation or motion of the heart, is of three sorts: the first is some glancing or sudden thought, suggested to the mind by Satan, which suddenly vanisheth away, and is not received of the minde: This is no sinne. For it was in Christ when he was tempted by the divell, Matth. 4. 1. 3. The second is a more permanent thought or motion, the which as it were, tickleth and inveigleth the mind with some inward joy. The third, is a cogitation, drawing from the wil and affections, full assent to sin. We are to understand this commandement of the second sort of motions onely; for the third kind which have consent of will, belong to the five former Commandements.

Now then to covet is to thinke inwardly, & also to desire any thing, whereby our neighbour may be hindred, albeit there ensue no assent of the will, to commit that evill. For the very Philosophers condemne covetousneſſe, of the heart; and Civilians disallow a purpose only to do evill, if it be conjoyned with a manifest deliberation. And as for the concupiscence in this place forbidden, wee may well thinke it is more close and secret; because Sr. Paul, a Doctor of the Law, was altogether ignorant of it, Rom 7. 7. I had not knowne lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not lust. Againe, if that concupiscence immediately going before the consent, were not prohibited in this place, there must be a great confusion in the Decalogue. For the seaventh Commandement forbiddeth some kinde of coveting of our neighbours wife.

House] The Commandement is illustrated by an argument drawne from the distribution of the objects of concupiscence; whence it is apparent, that onely evill concupiscence is condemned in this place. Col. 3. 5. For there is a good concupiscence or desire: as of meat and drinke, and that of the spirit. Gal. 5. 17. The spirit lusteth against the flesh.

The negative part.

Thou shalt not covet that which is thy neighbours.

Here are prohibited,

I. Concupiscence it selfe, namely, originall corruption, in as much as it is hurtfull to our neighbour, Iam 1. 14.

II. Each corrupt and sudden cogitation and passion of the heart, springing out of the bitter roote of concupiscence. Gal. 5. 17. The flesh lusteth against the spirit. Luk. 10. 27 Thou shalt love the Lord, with all thy soule. To this place appertaineth Satans suggestion, if after the first offer it be entertained and received in the closet of the heart.

III. The least congitation and motion, the which, though it procure not consent, delights and tickles the heart. ibid. Of this kind are these fooliſh wiſhes: I would such an house were mine, such a living, such a thing &c. And hitherto may we referre all unchaste dreames arising from the force of concupiscence.

The affirmative part.

Covet that onely which is availeable to thy neighbours good.

Here are commanded:

I. A pure heart toward our neighbour. 1. Tim. 1. 5. The end of the Commandement is love out of a pure heart, a good conscience, and faith unfained.

II. Holy cogitations, and motions of the spirit. Paul prayeth, 1 Thess. 5. 23 That the Thessalonians may be holy, not onely in body and soule, but also in spirit; Eph. 4. 23.

III. A conflict against the evill affections and lusts of the flesh. Rom. 7. 22. I rejoyce in the law of God in regard of the inward man 23. But I see another law of my members, rebelling against the law of my mind, and making mee captive to the law of sin, which is in my members. 24. Miserable man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of death? 2 Cor. 12. 7, 8, 9.

CHAP. XXX.

Of the use of the Law.

THe use of the Law in unregenerate persons, is threefold.

The first, is to lay open sinne, and make it knowne, Rom. 3. 20. By the workes of the Law shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law comes the knowledge of sinne.

The second use, is accidentarily to effect and augment sinne, by reason of the flesh, the which causeth man to decline from that which is commanded, and ever to incline to that which is prohibited. Rom. 7. 8. Sin tooke occasion by the commandement, and wrought in me all manner of concupiſcence: for without the Law ſinne is dead. 9. For I once was alive without the Law, but when the commandement came, ſin revived, 10. But I died, and that commandement which was ordained unto life, was found to be unto me unto death.

The third uſe, is to denounce eternall damnation for the leaſt diſobedience, without offering any hope of pardon. This ſentence the law pronounceth againſt offenders, and by it, partly by threatning, partly by terrifying, it raigneth and ruleth over man. Rom. 3. 19. We know that whatſoever the law ſaith, it ſaith to them which are under the law, that every mouth may be ſtopt, and all the world be culpable before God. Gal. 3. 10. As many as are of the workes of the law, are under the curſe, for it is written, Curſed is every one that continueth not in all that is written in the booke of the law to do them, 2 Cor. 3. 7. If the miniſtration of death written with letters, and engraven in ſtones, was glorious: 8 How ſhall not the miniſtration of the ſpirit be more glorious? For if the miniſtration, &c.

The end why it raigned in man, is to urge ſinners to flie unto Chriſt. Gal. 3. 22. The Scripture hath concluded all under ſinne, that the promiſe by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt ſhould be given to them that beleeve. 24. Wherefore the law was our ſchoole-maſter to Chriſt, Heb. 12. 18, 19, 20.

The continuance of this power of the law is perpetuall, unleſſe a ſinner repent: and the very firſt act of repentance ſo freeth him, that he ſhall no more be under the law, but under grace. 2 Sam. 12. 13. Then ſaid David to Nathan, I have ſinned againſt the Lord: wherefore Nathan ſaid to David, the Lord alſo hath forgiven thy ſin, & thou ſhalt not die. Rom. 6. 14. Sin ſhall not have dominion over you: for yee are not under the law, but under grace.

If therefore, thou deſireſt ſeriouſly eternall life: firſt, take a narrow examination of thy ſelfe, and the courſe of thy life, by the ſquare of Gods law: then ſet before thine eyes the curſe that is due unto ſinne, that thus bewailing thy miſery, and deſpairing utterly of thine owne power, to attaine everlaſting happineſſe, thou mayeſt renounce thy ſelfe, and be provoked to ſeeke and ſue unto Chriſt Ieſus.

The uſe of the law in ſuch as are regenerate, is farre otherwiſe: for it guideth them to new obedience in the whole courſe of their life, which obedience is acceptable to God by Chriſt. Rom. 3. 31. Doe we therefore through faith make the law of none effect? God forbid: nay we rather eſtabliſh the law. Pſal. 119. 24. Thy teſtimonies are my delight, they are my counſellers. v. 105. Thy word is a lanthorne unto my feet, and a light unto my pathes.

CHAP. XXXI.

Of the Covenant of Grace.

HItherto concerning the covenant of workes, and of the Law, now followeth the Covenant of grace.

The Covenant of Grace, is that whereby God freely promiſing Chriſt and his benefits, exacts againe of man, that he would by faith receive Chriſt, and repent of his ſins. Hoſ. 2. 18 In that day will I make a covenant for them, &c. 19. And I will marry thee unto me for ever: yea, I will marry thee unto me in righteouſneſſe, and in judgement, and in mercy, and in compaſſion. 20. I will marry thee unto me in faithfulneſſe, and thou ſhalt know the Lord. Ezech. 36. 25. I will powre cleane water upon you, and ye ſhall be cleane: yea, from all your filthineſſe, and from all your idols will I cleanſe you. 26. And I will give you a new heart, and a new ſpirit will I put within you. 27. And cauſe you to walke in my ſtatutes. Mal. 3. 1. The Lord, whom ye ſeeke, ſhall ſpeedily come to his Temple: even the meſſenger of the covenant whom ye deſire: behold, he ſhall come, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts.

This covenant is alſo named a Teſtament: for it hath partly the nature and properties of a teſtament or will. Firſt, it is confirmed by the death of the teſtator. Heb 9. 16. Where a teſtament is, there muſt be the death of him that made the teſtament. 17. For the teſtament is confirmed when men are dead: for it is yet of no force ſo long as he that made it, is alive. Secondly, in this covenant we doe not ſo much offer, or promiſe any great matter to God, as in a manner onely receive: even as the laſt will and teſtament of a man, is not for the teſtators, but for the heires commodity.

The Covenant, albeit it be one in ſubſtance, yet is it diſtinguiſhed into the old and new teſtament.

The old teſtament or covenant is that which in types and ſhadowes prefigured Chriſt to come, and to be exhibited.

The new teſtament declareth Chriſt already come in the fleſh, and is apparantly ſhewed in the Goſpell.

The Goſpell is that part of Gods word which containes a moſt worthy and welcome meſſage: namely, that mankind is fully redeemed by the blood of Ieſus Chriſt, the onely begotten Sonne of God, manifeſted in fleſh; ſo that now for all ſuch as repent and beleeve in Chriſt Ieſus, there is prepared a full remiſſion of all their ſinnes, together with ſalvation and life everlaſting. Ioh. 3. 14. As Moſes lifted up the ſerpent in the wilderneſſe: ſo muſt the Sonne of man be lifted up. v. 15. That whoſo beleeveth in him ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life Act. 10. 43. To him alſo give all the Prophets witneſſe, that through his name, all that beleeve in him, ſhall receive remiſſion of ſinnes.

The end and uſe of the Goſpell is, firſt to manifeſt that righteouſneſſe in Chriſt, whereby the whole law is fully ſatisfied, and ſalvation attained. Secondly, it is the inſtrument, and, as it were, the conduit pipe of the holy Ghoſt, to faſhion and derive faith into the ſoule: by which faith, they which beleeve, doe, as with an hand, apprehend Chriſts righteouſnes, Rom. 1. 16. I am not aſhamed of the Goſpel of Chriſt, for it is the power of God to ſalvation to as many as beleeve, to the Iew firſt, and then to the Grecian. 17. For the iuſtice of God is reuealed by it, from faith to faith. Ioh. 6. 63. It is the ſpirit which quickneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing: the words which I ſpeake are ſpirit and life. 1 Cor. 1. 21. It pleaſed God by the fooliſhneſſe of preaching, to ſaue ſuch as beleeue.

The Goſpel preached is, in the flouriſhing eſtate of Chriſts Church, the ordinary meanes to beget faith: but in the ruinous eſtate of the ſame, when as by apoſtaſie, the foundations thereof are ſhaken, and the cleere light of the word is darkned, then this word read or repeated, yea the very ſound thereof being but once heard, is by the aſſiſtance of Gods ſpirit, extraordinarily effectuall, to them whom God will haue called out of that great darkneſſe into his exceeding light. Rom. 10. 14. How ſhall they call on him, in whom they haue not beleeued? and how ſhall they beleeue in him, of whom they haue not heard? and how ſhall they heare without a preacher? Act. 11. 19. And they which were ſcattered abroad, becauſe of the affliction that aroſe about Steuen, walked throughout till they came to Phenice, and Cyprus, & Antiochia, preaching the word to no man, but to the Iewes only. 20. Now ſome of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which when they were come into Antiochia, ſpake vnto the Grecians and preached the Lord Ieſus. 21. And the hand of the Lord was with them, ſo that a great number beleeued, and turned vnto the Lord. Ioh. 4. 28. The woman then left her water pot, and went her way into the city, & ſaid to the men 29. Come, & ſee a man which hath told mee all things that euer I did: Is not he the Chriſt? then they went out of the city, & came vnto him. 39. Now many of the Samaritans beleeued in him, for the ſaying of the woman which teſtified, He hath told me all things that euer I did. 41. And many moe beleeued, becauſe of his owne word. 42. And they ſaid vnto the woman, now we beleeue, not becauſe of thy ſaying: for we haue heard him our ſelues, and know that this is indeed the Chriſt the Sauiour of the world. Rom. 10. 18. I demand, haue they not heard? no doubt their ſound went out through all the earth, and their words into the ends of the world. Thus we may ſee, how many of our fore-fathers, and anceſtours in the midſt of Popery obtained eternall life. Rev. 12. 17. The dragon was wroth with the woman, and went and made warre with the remnant of her ſeed, which kept the commandements of God, and haue the teſtimony of Ieſus Chriſt. Rom. 11. 4 What ſaith the diuine Oracles? I haue reſerued to mee ſeuen thouſand men, which neuer bowed knee to Baal.

CHAP. XXXII.
Of the Sacraments.

THus much of the preaching of the word: now followeth the appendants to the ſame: namely, the Sacraments.

A Sacrament is that, whereby Chriſt and his ſaving graces, are by certaine externall rites, ſignified, exhibited, and ſealed to a Chriſtian man. Rom. 4. 11. He received the ſigne of circumciſion, as the ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of the faith which he had, when he was vncircumciſed. Gen. 17. 11. Ye ſhall circumciſe the fore-skin of your fleſh, and it ſhall be a ſigne of the couenant betweene mee and you.

God alone is the author of a Sacrament, for the ſigne cannot confirme any thing at all, but by the conſent and promiſe of him, at whoſe hands the benefit promiſed muſt be received. Therefore God it is alone, which appointeth ſignes of grace, in whoſe alone power it is to beſtow grace.

And God did make a Sacrament, by the ſacramentall word, as Auguſt. witneſſeth, ſaying: Let the word come to the element, and there is made a Sacrament. The ſacramentall word, is the word of inſtitution, the which God after a ſeverall manner, hath ſet downe in each Sacrament. Of this word there are two parts: the commandement, and the promiſe. The commandement is, by which Chriſt appointeth the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and the receiving of the ſame. As in Baptiſme, Goe into all the world, baptizing them in the name, &c. Math. 28. 19. In the Lords Supper, Take, eate, drinke, doe ye this. Mat. 26. 26. The promiſe is the other part of the inſtitution, wherby God ordained elements, that they might be inſtruments and ſeales of his grace. As in Baptiſme, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the holy Ghoſt. In the Supper, This is my body given for you: and, This is my blood of the new Teſtament. Therefore this word in the adminiſtration of the Sacrament ought to be pronounced diſtinctly and aloud, yea, and as occaſion ſerveth, explained alſo; to the end, that all they to whom the commandement and promiſe appertaineth, may know and underſtand the ſame. And hence it is very plaine, that the Miniſters impietie, doth not make a nullity of the Sacrament, neither doth it any whit hinder a worthy receiver: no more then the piety of a good Miniſter can profit an unworthy receiver: becauſe all the efficacie in worthineſſe thereof, dependeth onely upon Gods inſtitution, ſo be it that be obſerved.

The parts of a Sacrament are, the ſigne, and the thing of a Sacrament.

The ſigne, is either the matter ſenſible, or the action converſant about the ſame.

The matter ſenſible, is uſually called the ſigne.

The mutation of the ſigne, is not naturall: by changing the ſubſtance of the thing; but reſpective, that is, only in regard of the uſe. For it is ſevered from a common to an holy uſe: Therefore there is not any ſuch either force or efficacy of making us holy, inherent or tyed unto the external ſignes, as there is naturally in baths to purifie corrupt diſeaſes: but all ſuch efficacy is wholly appropriate to the holy ſpirit; yet ſo, as it is an inſeparable companion of true faith and repentance, and to ſuch as turne unto the Lord, is, together with the ſigne, exhibited. Whence it commeth to paſſe, that by Gods ordinance, a certaine ſignification of grace, and feeling thereof agreeth to the ſigne.

The thing of the Sacrament, is either Chriſt and his graces which concerne our ſalvation, or the action converſant about Chriſt.

I ſay, firſt Chriſt, and then his grace, becauſe no man receiveth grace from Chriſt, unleſſe he be made truly partaker of his very body and blood; even as no man can by right reape any fruit of the ground, whereof firſt he hath no juſt title and intereſt.

The action about Chriſt is ſpirituall, and is either the action of God, or of faith.

The action of God, is either the offering, or the application of Chriſt and his graces to the faithfull.

The action of faith, is the conſideration, deſire, apprehenſion, and receiving of Chriſt, in the lawfull uſe of the Sacrament.

Thus much of the parts of the Sacrament: now followeth the union of the parts.

This ſacramentall union. I. Is not naturall according to place: for there is no mutation of the ſigne into the thing ſigned, neither is the thing ſigned, either included in, or faſtned upon the ſigne. But II. It is reſpective, becauſe there is a certaine agreement and proportion of the externall things with the internall, and of the actions of one with the actions of the other: whereby it commeth to paſſe, that the ſignes, as it were certaine viſible words incurring into the externall ſenſes, doe by a certain proportionable reſemblance draw a Chriſtian minde to the conſideration of the things ſignified, and to be applyed.

This mutuall, and, as I may ſay, ſacramentall relation, is the cauſe of ſo many figurative ſpeeches and Metonymies which are uſed: as when one thing in the Sacrament is put for another. As,

I. The ſigne is uſed for the thing ſignified, Ioh. 6. 51. I am the living bread, which came downe from heaven: if any eate this bread, he ſhall live for ever, & the bread which I will give, is my fleſh, which I will give for the life of the world. 1 Cor. 5. 7. Chriſt our Paſſeover is ſacrificed for us 1 Cor. 10. 17. We that are many, are one bread, & one body, becauſe we are all partakers of one bread

II. The name of the thing ſignified, is given to the ſigne: as, The bread is Chriſts body, the cup is Chriſts blood. 1 Cor. 11. 24. Mat. 26. 28. Te ſhall eate it (namely the Lambe) in haſte, for it is the Lords Paſſeover, Exod. 12. 11.

III. The effect of the thing ſignified, is given to the ſigne, as circumciſion is a covenant, Gen. 17. 10. Act. 7. 8. The cup is the new Teſtament in Chriſts blood. Luke 22 20. Baptiſme is the waſhing of the new birth. Tit. 3. 5.

IV. That which properly belongeth to the ſigne is attributed to the thing ſignified. Deut. 10. 16. Circumciſe the foreskin of your hearts. Ioh. 6. 53. Vnleſſe ye eate the fleſh of the Sonne of man, and drinke his blood, ye ſhall have no life in you.

The end why a Sacrament was ordained, A is, 1. for the better confirmation of our faith: for by it, as by certaine pledges given, God of his great mercy, doth as it were, binde himſelfe unto us. Now a Sacrament doth confirme our faith, not by any inherent or proper power it hath in it ſelfe, as hath a ſoveraigne medicine received by a patient; the which, whether a man ſleepe or wake, confirmeth his ſtrength: but rather by reaſoning, and uſing the ſignes; when the holy Ghoſt ſhall frame in our hearts ſuch a concluſion as this:

All ſuch as are converted, rightly uſing the Sacraments, ſhall receive Chriſt and his graces.

But I am converted, and either now doe, or before have rightly uſed the Sacraments?

Therefore, I ſhall receive Chriſt and his graces. B

II. That it may bee a badge and note of that profeſſion, by which the true Church of God is diſtinguiſhed from other congregations. III. That it might be a meanes to preſerve and ſpread abroad the doctrine of the Goſpel. IV. It ſerveth to binde the faithfull, that they doe continue both loyall and gratefull to their Lord God. V. It is the bond of mutuall amitie betwixt the faithfull.

How a Sacrament is neceſſary to ſalvation. The covenant of grace is abſolutely neceſſary to ſalvation: for of neceſſitie a man muſt be within the covenant, and receive Chriſt Ieſus the very ſubſtance thereof; or periſh eternally: but a Sacrament is not abſolutely neceſſary, but only as it is a prop and ſtay for faith to leane upon. For it cannot entitle us into the inheritance of the ſonnes of God, as the covenant doth; but onely by reaſon of faith going before, it doth ſeale that which before was beſtowed upon us. As we ſee in humane contracts, the bond ariſeth from the mutuall conſent of the parties; but the inſtrument or bill, & the ſetting to of the ſeale, they do not make but rather confirme the bond mutually before made: the which mutuall conſent remaining firme, the contract ſtandeth ſtill in force, though the inſtrument or ſeale be wanting. C

Therefore the want of a Sacrament doth not condemne, but the contempt is that which will condemne a man. The want of a Sacrament is, when we are juſtly hindred from the receiving of the ſame: as when one is prevented by death, or liveth in ſuch a place where he cannot receive the Sacrament. And as for the neglect of a Sacrament, albeit, it be a very grievous ſinne, yet it is ſuch an one, as for which hee that is heartily penitent for the ſame, may well hope for pardon. D

The holy uſe of a Sacrament is, when ſuch as are truly converted, do uſe thoſe rites which God hath preſcribed unto the true ends of the Sacrament. Therefore 1. the reprobate, though God offer the whole Sacrament unto them, yet they receive the ſignes alone without the things ſignified by the ſignes: becauſe the ſigne without the right uſe thereof, is not a Sacrament to the receiver of it. So Paul ſaith, Rom. 2. 25. Circumciſion verily is profitable if thou keep

The Sacramentall relation, which is in the Lords Supper, is on this manner.

Place this Table betweene fol. 74 and 75.

the law: but if thou be a transgressour of the law, thy circumcision is made uncircumcision. And August. hath this saying, If thou receive it carnally, yet ceaseth it not to be spirituall, though to thee it be not so. II. The elect, as yet not converted to the Lord, doe receive in like manner the bare signes without the thing signified; yet so as that Sacrament shall in them afterward have his good effect. For the Sacrament received before a mans conversion, is afterward to the penitent both ratified, and becommeth profitable: and that use of the Sacrament which before was utterly unlawfull, doth then become very lawfull. III. The elect already converted, doe to their salvation receive, both the signe and the thing signified together; yet so, as that for their unworthy receiving thereof, the which commeth to passe by reason of their manifold infirmities, and relapses into sinne, they are subject unto temporall punishments.

The difference betwixt a Sacrament and a Sacrifice, is: in a Sacrament God bestoweth his graces upon us; but in a sacrifice we returne unto God faith and obedience.

There are many differences betwixt the Sacraments of the Old Testament, and these of the new. I. They were many; these but few. II. They pointed at Christ to come; these shew that he is come. III. They were appropriate unto the posterity of Abraham; but these are common to the whole Church culled out of the Iewes and Gentiles.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Of Baptisme.

THere are two Sacraments. 1 Cor. 10. 1. I would not have you ignorant, that all our Fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea. 2. And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud, and in the sea. 3. And did all eate the same spirituall meate. 4. And dranke all the same spirituall drinke: (for they dranke of the spirituall rocke that followed them, which rocke was Christ.) Tertul. 4. booke contra Marcion. Aug. de Symbol. ad Catechum. 4. booke 6. cap.

The first Sacrament is that, whereby Christians are initiated, and admitted into the Church of God: and this is Baptisme.

The second Sacrament, whereby they are perpetually preserved and nourished in the same Church, is the Lords Supper.

Baptisme, is a Sacrament, by which such as are within the covenant, are washed with water, in the name of the Father, the Son, and the holy Ghost, that being thus engraffed into Christ, they may have perpetuall fellowship with him. Mat. 28. 19. Goe, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son, & the holy Ghost. Mar. 16. 16. He that beleeveth & is baptized, shall be saved: he that beleeveth not shall be condemned. 1 Cor. 1. 13. Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? either were ye baptized into the name of Paul? 14. I thanke God, I baptized none of you but Crispus and Gaius. 15. Lest any should say, I had baptized into mine owne name. Within the covenant are all the seed of Abraham, or the seede of the faithfull. These are either of riper yeares, or infants.

Those of riper yeares, are all such as adjoyning themselves to the visible Church, doe both testifie their repentance of their sins, and hold the foundations of religion, taught in the same Church, Matth. 3. 6. And they were baptized of him in Iordan, confessing their sins. Act. 8. 36. As they went they came to a water, then the Eunuch said, See, here is water, what hindereth me to be baptized? 37. Then Philip said, If thou beleeve with all thine heart, thou mayest: he said, I beleeve that Iesus Christ is the Sonne of God. 38. And they went downe into the water, both Philip and the Eunuch, and hee baptized him. Exod. 12. 48. If a stranger dwell with thee, and will observe the Passeover of the Lord, let him circumcise all the males that belong unto him, and then let him come and observe it, and then he shall bee as one that is borne in the land: for none uncircumcised person shall eate thereof.

Infants within the Covenant, are such as have one at the least of their parents faithfull: 1 Cor. 6. 14. The unbeleeving husband is sanctified by the wife & the unbeleeving wife is sanctified by the husband, else were your children uncleane, but now they are holy. Rom. 11. 16. If the first fruits be holy, so is the whole lump: & if the root be holy, so are the branches. Ge. 17. 7. I wil establish my covenant betweene me & thee, & thy seed after thee, in their generatiō for an everlasting covenāt, to be God unto thee, & thy seed after thee. 13. He that is borne in thine house, and he that is bought with mony, must needs be circumcised: so my covenāt shal be in your flesh for an everlasting covenāt. Act. 16. 31. They said, beleeve in the Lord Iesus, and thou shalt be saved, and thy whole household.

Quest. How are the children of faithfull parents in the covenant?

Ans. Holy parents are two waves to bee considered. First, as they were the sons of the first Adam, and so are as yet partly carnall: in this estate they in like sort doe beget their sonnes the children of wrath. For the father begetteth a son, not as he is a good man, but simply as a man; and therefore being impure, he musts needs beget that which is impure. Secondly, we must consider the parents as they are the sonnes of God, engrafted into the second Adam: In this estate though they cannot derive faith unto their posterity, (for the sonnes of God are not made such by naturall generation, but by the Adoption of God the Father, yet may they beleeve both for themselves and others, according to the tenour of the covenant of grace: as Adam did sin both for himselfe and others: and as Parents in bargaines doe covenant both for themselves and their heires after them. Hence it is that Paul saith, 1 Cor 7. 14. that the parents are like unto the first fruits which sanctifie the whole lumpe. So then, the faith of the Parents maketh those their children to be accounted in the covenant, which by reaſon of their age doe not yet actually beleeve.

To bee baptized into the name of the Father, &c. is by the receit of the outward ſigne of waſhing, to be made one of Gods family, which is his Church, and to be partaker of the priviledges thereof. Gen 48. 16. The Angell which hath delivered me from all evill, bleſſe the children, and let my name be named upon them, and the name of my father, Abraham and Iſaac, that they may grow as fiſh into multitude, in the midſt of the earth. Iſa. 4. 1. In that day ſhall ſeven women take hold of one man, ſaying, We will eate our owne bread, and we will weare our owne garments: onely let us be called by thy name, and take away our reproach. By this it is manifeſt, that in this waſhing of Baptiſme, there is propunded and ſealed a marveilous ſolemne covenant and contract: firſt of God with the baptized; that God the Father vouchſafeth to receive him into favour, the Sonne to redeeme him, the holy Ghoſt to purifie and regenerate him: ſecondly, of the baptized with God; who promiſeth to acknowledge, invocate, and worſhip none other God, but the true Iehovah, which is the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt.

The externall and viſible matter of Baptiſme, is water: for the Miniſter may not baptize with any other liquor, but onely with naturall water.

This was the judgement of the Primitive Church. For when as a certaine miniſter, for want of water, tooke ſand, and baptized one with that: the party thus beſanded, was further baptized, the former being eſteemed of none effect. Niceph. hiſtor. 3. booke, 33. chapter.

The externall forme of baptiſme is the Miniſters waſhing of the baptized, according to the preſcript rule of Gods Word.

The ancient cuſtome of baptizing, was to dippe, and, as it were, to dive all the body of the baptized in the water, as may appeare in Paul. Rom. 6. and the Councels of Laodicea, and Neocæſarea: but now, eſpecially in cold countries, the Church uſeth onely to ſprinkle the baptized, by reaſon of childrens weakeneſſe; for very few of ripe yeares are now adayes baptized, Wee neede not much to marveile at this alteration, ſeeing charity and neceſſity may diſpence with ceremonies, and mitigate in equity the ſharpeneſſe of them.

The Sacramentall union of the parts of baptiſme, is on this ſort.

The element of water whereby the uncleanneſſe of the body is purified, by a moſt convenient proportion ſhadoweth out the blood of Chriſt, and by the figure Synecdoche, taking the part for the whole, Chriſt. 1 Ioh. 1. 7. And the blood of Ieſus Chriſt cleanſeth us from all ſin.

The action of the Miniſter, is his waſhing of the party baptized with the element of water. This ſealeth and confirmeth a double action of God. I. the ingraffing or incorporating of the party baptized into Chriſt. Gal. 3. 27. As many as are baptized into Chriſt, have put on Chriſt. 1 Cor. 12. 13. By one ſpirit we are all baptized into one body. II. Our ſpirituall regeneration. Tit. 3. 5. Not by the workes of righteouſneſſe, which we had done, but according to his mercy hee ſaved us, by the waſhing of the new birth, and the renewing of the holy Ghoſt.

Of waſhing, there be three parts. The putting into the water: the continuance in the water: and the comming out of the water.

The putting into, or the ſprinkling of water, doth ratifie. I. the ſhedding of the blood of Chriſt for the remiſſion of all our ſins, and the imputation of his righteouſneſſe. Act. 22. 16. Ariſe and be baptized, and waſh away thy ſins in calling on the name of the Lord. 1 Cor. 6. 11. And ſuch were ſome of you, but ye are waſhed, but ye are ſanctified, but ye are juſtified in the name of the Lord Ieſus, & by the ſpirit of our God. II. The mortification of ſin by the power of Chriſts death. Rom. 6. 3. Know ye not, that all we which have beene baptized into Ieſus Chriſt, have beene baptized into his death. 6. 7. Know this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of ſin might be deſtroyed, that henceforth we ſhould not ſerve ſinne: for he that is dead is freed from ſinne.

The continuance in the water, noteth the buriall of ſinne; namely, a continuall increaſe of mortification by the power both of Chriſt his death and buriall. Rom. 6. 4. We are buried then with him by baptiſme into his death.

The comming out of the water, doth confirme our ſpirituall vivification to newneſſe of life in all holineſſe and juſtice, the which we attain unto by the power of Chriſts reſurrectiō. Rom. 6. 4. Like as Chriſt was raiſed up from the dead by the glory of the Father: ſo we alſo ſhould walke in newnes of life. 5. for if we be graffed with him to the ſimilitude of his death, even ſo ſhall we be to the ſimilitude of his reſurrection.

The action of the party to be baptized, is twofold.

The firſt, is to offer himſelfe to be baptized before the Miniſter, and that in the preſence of the congregation. This ſignifieth that hee doth conſecrate himſelfe unto the Lord, and that he utterly renounceth the fleſh, the world and the devill. 1 Pet. 3. 21. To the which alſo the figure which now ſaveth us, even baptiſme agreeth, (not the putting away of the filth of the fleſh, but in that a good conſcience maketh requeſt unto God) by the reſurrection of Ieſus Chriſt.

The ſecond, is to receive the externall waſhing by water: this ſignifieth, that the party baptized doth receive the internall waſhing, which is by the blood of Chriſt, or at the leaſt, that it is offered unto him.

Rebaptizing is at no hand to bee admitted: for as in naturall generation man is once onely born; ſo is it in ſpirituall regeneration. Therfore they that are baptized of a Miniſter, which is an heretike, not yet degraded from that calling, (if the externall forme of adminiſtration bee obſerved) muſt not be baptized againe of the Church of God; eſpecially, if after bap tiſme they have beene made partakers of the Lords Supper: onely they ought to be inſtructed in the true faith. Euſeb. Eccleſiaſt. lib.7. cap.8. ſaith, There was with us an ancient profeſſour of the faith, yea, before I was created Biſhop, nay, before my predeceſſour Heracles: who when he was preſent at the Baptiſme of ſome, and heard what queſtions they were asked, and what anſwer they returned, forthwith came weeping unto me, and humbling himſelfe before me, confeſſed that he was baptized by an heretike: yea in regard of that adminiſtration which he ſaw in our Church, he accounted that no baptiſme, in that the confeſſion there uſed, was fraught with blaſphemies. This alſo he added that he was for this offence ſo ſore grieved, that he durſt not ſo much as liſt up his eyes to heaven: wherefore he moſt earneſtly beſought me, that he might be cleanſed and purified with the baptiſme of our Church, and ſo receive the grace of the H. Ghoſt. The which notwithſtanding, I durſt not preſume to adminiſter, but ſaid, it was ſufficient for him that he had bin ſo long a profeſſour amongſt us, and that at the receit of the Lords Supper, hee anſwered, Amen, theſe things I told him were of force enough to purge him. And therefore I adviſed him, to reſt himſelfe in his former faith and conſcience already ſufficiently purified, eſpeciall in that he ſo long was partaker with us in the Sacraments. Auguſt. l. 3. cap.2. contra Petil. literas.

The right uſe of baptiſme is this. When inwardly in thine heart thou ſenſibly feeleſt, that through the heat of concupiſcence, thou art mooved to commit ſome ſinne, then begin to have ſome holy meditation of that ſolemne vow, which thou didſt make to God in baptiſme.

Againe, if through infirmity, thou falleſt once or often into ſome ſinne, ſtill have recourſe unto baptiſme, that there thou mayeſt receive courage to thy ſoule. For although baptiſme be but once onely adminiſtred, yet that once teſtifieth that all thy ſinnes paſt, preſent, and to come, are waſhed away. 1 Pet. 3.21. *Eph.*5.25, 26, 27. Therefore baptiſme may bee truely termed the Sacrament of repentance, and as it were, a board to ſwimme upon, when a man ſhall feare the ſhip-wracke of his ſoule. Marke 1.4 1 *Tim.*1.19. *Rom.*6. *verſ.*4.6.

Laſt of all, ſee thou never reſt, till ſuch time as thou have a feeling of that renewing power ſignified in baptiſme: namely, the power of Chriſts death mortifying ſinne, and the vertue of his reſurrection, in the renovation of the ſpirit.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Of the Lords Supper.

THe Lords Supper is a Sacrament, wherewith in the ſignes of bread and wine, ſuch as are engraffed into Chriſt, are in him daily, in a ſpirituall manner, nouriſhed to eternall life, 1 *Cor.*11,23,24,25. *Rom.*6.5.

The proportion of the parts of the Lords Supper, is on this wiſe.

The elements of bread and wine, are ſignes and ſeales of the body and blood of Chriſt.

The action of the Miniſter, is a note of Gods action.

The Miniſters action is foure-fold.

The firſt, is his taking the bread and wine in his owne hands: this doth ſeale the action of God the Father, by which he from all eternitie, did ſeparate and elect his Sonne, to performe the dutie of a Mediatour betwixt God and man, Ioh.6. 27. For him hath the Father ſealed.

The ſecond, is his bleſſing of it, whereby he, by the recitall of the promiſes, and prayers conceived to that end, doth actually ſeparate the bread and wine received, from their common unto an holy uſe. This doth ſeale that action of God, by which he did in the fulnes of time, ſend Chriſt to performe the office of a Mediator, unto the which he was fore-ordained.

The third, is the breaking of the bread, and pouring out of the wine; this doth ſeale the paſſion of Chriſt, by which he verily upon the croſſe was both in ſoule and body, bruiſed for our tranſgreſſions.

The fourth, is his diſtributing of the bread and wine into the hands of the communicants. This ſealeth the action of God, offering Chriſt unto all, yea, to the hypocrites: but giving him indeed unto the faithfull, for the daily increaſe of their faith, and repentance.

The action of the receiver, is double.

The firſt, is his taking the bread and wine in his hand. This ſealeth a ſpirituall action of the receiver, namely, his apprehenſion of Chriſt by the hand of faith. *Ioh.*1.12.

The ſecond, is his eating of the bread, and drinking of the wine, to the nouriſhment of his body. This ſealeth the application of Chriſt by faith, that the feeling of his true union and communion with Chriſt may daily be increaſed, 1 Cor.10.16. The cup of bleſſing which wee bleſſe, is it not the communion of the blood of Chriſt? the bread which we breake, is it not the communion of the body of Chriſt?

The doctrine of tranſubſtantiation, which teacheth, that the bread is turned into the very body of Chriſt, and the wine into his blood, is a very fable: the reaſons why, are theſe. I. In the firſt inſtitution of the Supper, which was before Chriſt his paſſion, the body of Chriſt was then eaten as already crucified: Now, how the body of Chriſt crucified ſhould after a corporall manner be eaten, he himſelfe being not as yet crucified, it is impoſſible to imagine. II. The bread after the conſecration, is diſtributed into parts: but the whole body of Chriſt is received of every ſingular communicant. III. The bread is the communion of Chriſts body: therefore not his very body. IV. By this meanes the body of Chriſt ſhould not onely be made of the ſubſtance of the Virgin Mary, but alſo of the bakers bread. V. Let the bread and wine be kept for a time, and the bread will mould, and the wine turne to vineger after the consecration; by which we may conclude, that there did remaine the substance of bread and wine. VI. This opinion quite overthroweth the Sacramentall union, namely, the proportion which is betwixt the signe and the thing signified.

The like may be said of the Lutherans consubstantiation, whereby they beare men in hand that there is a coexistence, by which the body of Christ, is either in, or with, or under the bread. Against this, these reasons may suffice: I. The whole action of the Supper is done in remembrance of Christ: now what need that, if the body of Christ were really present? II. Act. 3.21. Whom the heavens must containe, untill the time that all things must be restored. III. This is an essentiall property of every magnitude, and therefore of the body of Christ, to be in one place, and circumscribed or compassed of one place. IV. If that Christs body were eaten corporally, then should the wicked as well as the faithfull be partakers of the flesh of Christ: but to eate his flesh, is to beleeve in him, and to have eternall life. V. It were very absurd to thinke, that Christ sitting amongst his Disciples, did with his owne hands take his own body, and give it wholly to each of his Disciples. Such as will in an holy sort prepare themselves to celebrate the Lords Supper, must have;

First, a knowledge of God, and mans fall, and of the promised restauration into the covenant, by Christ, 1 Cor. 11.26. So often as yee shall eate this bread, and drinke of this Cup, yee shew the death of the Lord till he come. 29. And discerne his body.

Secondly, true faith in Christ: for every man receiveth so much, as he beleeveth he receiveth. Heb 4.2. For unto us was the Gospel preached, as also unto them: but the word that they heard, profited not them, because it was not mixed with faith in those that heard it. Furthermore, true repentance of their sins. Isa. 66 3. He that killeth a bullocke, is as if he slue a man: he that sacrificeth a sheepe, as if he cut off a dogges necke: he that offereth an oblation, as if he offered swines blood: he that remembreth incense, as if he blessed an idol: yea, they have chosen their owne wayes, and their soule delighteth in their abominations. Psal. 26. 6. I will wash mine hands in innocency, O Lord, and so come before thine altar.

Thirdly, renued faith and repentance for daily and new sins committed upon infirmity: because every new sinne requireth a new act, both of repentance and faith: and this renovation must bee seene by our reconciliation of our selves to our neighbours, for injuries and wrongs. Mat. 5.22. If thou bring thy gift to the altar, & there remembrest thy brother hath ought against thee. 24. Leave thy gift before the altar, and go first be reconciled to thy brother, then come and offer thy gift. If thou canst come furnished with these things, abstaine not from the Lords table, by reason of thy many infirmities.

If being thus prepared, thou feelest that thou hast a corrupt and rebellious heart, know this: that then thou art well disposed to the Lords Table, when thou art lively touched with a sense of thy crooked disposition. Lu. 4. 18. The sprit of the Lord is upon me, because hee hath anointed me, that I should preach the Gospel to the poore: he hath sent me, that I shold heale the broken hearted, that I shold preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, that I should set at liberty them that are bruised. Mat. 15. 24. He answered and said, I am not sent, but to the lost sheepe of the house of Israel. The Lords Supper is a medicine to the diseased and languishing soule: and therefore men must as well seeke to purifie and heale their hearts in it, as to bring pure and sound hearts unto it.

If thou feele in thy selfe some great defect and want of faith, pray unto God earnestly, that he will vouchsafe to increase it. Mark. 9. 24. The father of the child crying with teares, said; Lord, I beleeve, helpe mine unbeleefe.

If thou canst not doe this thy selfe, use the ayde of the faithfull, which may by their faith carry thee, as men did the sicke of the palsie upon their shoulders, and laide him before Christ. Mark. 2.3.

If thou come not furnished on this manner to the Lords Table, thou shalt bee adjudged guilty of the body and blood of Christ: as he is guilty of high treason, who doth counterfeit or clip the Princes coine. 1 Cor. 11.27. He that eateth this bread, and drinketh this cup unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of Christ.

But such as feele not themselves penitent, they neither can come to the Lords Table without repentance, lest they eate and drinke their owne damnation, neither must they deferre repentance, by which they may come, lest they procure to themselves finall destruction.

CHAP. XXXV.

Of the degrees of executing Gods decree of Election.

WEE have hitherto declared the outward meanes, whereby Gods decree of election is executed. Now follow the degrees of executing the same.

The degrees are in number two. The love of God, and the declaration of his love. Eph. 1.6. To the praise of the glory of his grace, wherwith he hath made us accepted in his beloved. 9. And hath opened unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in him.

Gods love is that, whereby God doth freely love all such as are chosen in Christ Iesus, though in themselves altogether corrupt. 1. Ioh. 4.19. We love him because he loved us first, Rom. 5.8. God setteth out his love towards us, seeing that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. 10. For if when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Sonne, much more we being reconciled shall be saved by his life.

The declaration of Gods love is two-fold. The first, towards infants elected to salvation;

the ſecond, towards men of riper yeares.

The declaration of Gods love towards Infants, is on this manner:

Infants already elected, albeit they in the wombe of their mother before they were borne, or preſently after, depart this life, they I ſay, being after a ſecret and unſpeakable manner by Gods ſpirit engraffed into Chriſt, obtaine eternall ſalvation, 1 *Cor.*12.13. By one ſpirit we are all baptized into one body, whether Iewes, or Grecians, bond, or free, and have beene all made to drinke into one ſpirit. Luk.1.35. The Angell anſwered, and ſaid unto her. The holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the power of the moſt High ſhall over-ſhadow thee: therefore alſo that holy thing which ſhall be borne of thee, ſhall be called the Sonne of God. 41. And it came to paſſe, as Elizabeth heard the ſalutation of Mary, the babe ſprang in her belly, and Elizabeth was filled with the holy Ghoſt. 64. And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue looſed, and he ſpake and praiſed God. 80. And the child grew, and waxed ſtrong in ſpirit. Ier.1.5. Before I formed thee in the wombe, I knew thee, and before thou cameſt out of the wombe, I ſanctified thee.

I call the manner of Infants ſalvation ſecret and unſpeakable, becauſe. I. they want actuall faith to receive Chriſt: for actuall faith neceſſarily preſuppoſeth a knowledge of Gods free promiſe, the which he that beleeveth, doth apply unto himſelfe: but this, infants cannot any wayes poſſibly performe. And ſurely, if infants ſhould have faith actually, they generally either loſe it when they come to mens eſtate, or at leaſt ſhew no ſignes thereof, neither of which could be true, if before they had received actuall faith. Nay, we ſee that in thoſe of riper yeares, there are not ſo much as the ſhadowes or ſparkes of faith to be ſeene, before they be called by the preaching of the Goſpel. II. Infants are ſaid to be regenerated onely in regard of their internall qualities and inclinations, not in regard of any motions, or actions of the mind, will, or affections. And therefore they want thoſe terrours of conſcience, which come before repentance, as occaſions thereof, in ſuch as are of riper yeares of diſcretion. Againe, they are not troubled with that conflict & combate betwixt the fleſh and the ſpirit, wherewith thoſe faithfull ones that are of more yeeres are marveilouſly exerciſed.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Concerning the firſt degree of the declaration of Gods love.

THe declaration of Gods love, in thoſe of yeares of diſcretion, hath eſpecially foure degrees. *Rom.*8.30. 1 *Cor.*1.30.

The firſt degree, is an effectuall calling, whereby a ſinner being ſevered from the world, is entertained into Gods family. Eph. 2.17. And came, and preached peace unto you, which were afarre off, and to them that were neere. 19. Now therefore yee are no more ſtrangers and ſtrainers, but citizens with the Saints, and of the houſhold of God.

A Of this there be 2. parts. The firſt is election, which is a ſeparation of a ſinner from the curſed eſtate of all mankind. Ioh.15.19. If ye were of the world, the world would love his owne: but becauſe ye are not of the world, but I have choſen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

The ſecond, is the reciprocall donation or free gift of God the Father, whereby he beſtoweth the ſinnefull man to bee ſaved upon Chriſt, and Chriſt againe actually and moſt effectually upon that ſinfull man: ſo that he may boldly ſay this thing, namely; Chriſt, both God and man, is mine, and I for my benefit and uſe enjoy the ſame. The like wee ſee in wedlocke: The husband ſaith, this woman is my wife, whom her parents have given unto me, B ſo that, ſhe being fully mine, I may both have her, and governe her: againe, the woman may ſay, this man is mine husband, who hath beſtowed himſelfe upon me, and doth cheriſh me as his wife. Rom.8.32. He ſpared not his owne Son, but gave him for us. Iſa.9.6. Vnto us a child is borne, & unto us a ſon is given. Ioh.17.2. Thou haſt given him power upon all fleſh, that he ſhould give eternall life to all them whom thou haſt given him. 6. I have declared thy name to the men which thou gaveſt me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me, and they kept thy word. 7. Now they know that all things whatſoever thou haſt give me, are of thee. Ioh,10.29. My father, which gave them me, is greater then all, & none is able to take them out of my fathers hands.

C Hence commeth that admirable union, or conjunction, which is the ingraffing of ſuch as are to be ſaved, into Chriſt, and their growing up together with him: ſo that after a peculiar manner, Chriſt is made the head, and every repentant ſinner, a member of his myſticall body. Ioh.17.20. I pray not for theſe alone, but for them alſo which ſhall beleeve in me, through their word. 21. That they all may be one as thou, O father, art in me, and I in thee. even that they may be alſo one in us. Eph.5.30. We are members of his body, of his fleſh, and of his bones. Ioh.15.1. I am that true vine, and my father is the husbandman. 2. Every branch that beareth not fruit in me, he taketh away: and every one that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more D fruit. Eph.2.20. Built upon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles, whoſe corner ſtone is Ieſus Chriſt. 21. In whom all the building coupled together, groweth unto an holy Temple in the Lord 22. In whom ye are alſo built together, to be the habitation of God by the ſpirit.

This, albeit it be a moſt neere and reall union, yet we muſt not thinke, that it is, by touching, mixture, or, as it were, by ſoldring of one ſoule with another, neither by a bare agreement of the ſoules among themſelves: but by the communion and operation of the ſame ſpirit, which being by nature infinite, is of ſufficient ability to conjoyne thoſe things together, which are of themſelves farre diſtant from each other: the like we ſee in the ſoule of man, which conjoyneth the head with the foote. Eph.2.22. 2 Pet.1.4. Wherby most great and pretious promises are given unto us, that by them yee should be partakers of the godly nature, in that yee flye the corruption, which is in the world through lust. Phil.2.1. If there be any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the spirit, &c.

The things united. In this vnion not our soule alone is united with Christs soule, or our flesh with his flesh: but the whole person of every faithful man, is verily cõjoined with the whole person of our Saviour Christ God and Man.

The manner of this vnion is this. A faithfull man first of all and immediately is united to the flesh, or humane nature of Christ, and afterward by reason of the humanity, to the Word it selfe, or divine nature. For salvation and life dependeth on that fulnesse of the godhead which is in Christ, yet it is not communicated unto us, but in the flesh, and by the flesh of Christ. Ioh.6.53. Except ye eate the flesh, and drinke the blood of the Sonne of man, ye have no life in you. 56. He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.

The bond of this union. This union is made by the spirit of God applying Christ unto us: and on our parts by faith receiving Christ Iesus offered unto us. And for this cause it is termed a spirituall union.

Christ, because hee is the head of the faithfull, is to be considered as a publike man sustaining the person of all the elect. Hence is it that the faithfull are said to bee crucified with Christ, and with him to dye, and to be buried. Rom.6.4,5,6. to be quickned. Eph.2.5. to bee raised up and placed in heaven. v.6. Col.3.1. the which is not onely in regard of the hope of the faithfull, but because they are accepted of God certainely to have done all these things in Christ; even as in Adams first sinne all his posterity afterward was tainted of sinne.

A member of Christ is diversly distinguished: and it is so either before men, or God.

Before men they are the members of Christ, who outwardly professing the faith, are charitably reputed by the Church as true members. But such deceiving at length, both themselves and the Church, may be reprobates: and therefore in Gods presence they are no more true members, then are the noxious humors in mans body, or a woodden leg or other joynt cunningly fastened to another part of the body.

Againe, members before God, are such, as either are decreed to be so, or actually are so already.

Such as are decreed to be so, are they, who being elect frõ all eternity, are either as yet not born, or not called. *Ioh.*10.16. Other sheepe have I, which are not of this fold: them also must I bring Actuall members of Christ, are either living or dying members.

An actuall living member of Christ is every one elected, which beeing engraffed by faith, and the Spirit into Christ, doth feele and shew forth the power of Christ in him.

An actuall dying or decaying member, is every one truely engraffed into Christ, who hath no feeling of the power and efficacy of the quickening spirit in him. He is like unto a benummed leg without sense, which indeed is a part of mans body, and yet receiveth no nourishment: such are those faithlesse ones, who for a time doe faint and are overcome under the heavy burden of tentations, and their sinnes: such are also those excommunicate persons, who in regard of their engraffing are true members, howsoever in regard of the externall communion with the Church, and efficacy of the spirit, they are not members, till such time, as they being touched with repentance, doe begin as it were, to live againe.

God executeth this effectuall calling by certaine meanes.

The first, is the saving hearing of the Word of [a] God, which is, when the said Word outwardly is preached, to such an one as is both dead in his sinnes, and doth not so much as dreame of his salvation. [b] And first of all, the Law shewing a man his sin, & the punishment thereof, which is eternall death: afterward the Gospel, shewing salvation by Christ Iesus, to such as beleeve. [c] And inwardly the eyes of the mind are enlightened, [d] the heart and eares opened, that he may see, heare, and understand the preaching of the Word of God. [a] Ezech. 16.6. When I passed by thee, I saw thee polluted in thine owne blood, and said unto thee, when thou wast in thy blood, thou shalt live. Isai.55.1. Hoe, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, & ye that have no silver, come buy, and eate: come I say, and buy wine and milke without silver, and without money. Ioh.1.12. As many as received him, to thẽ he gave this priviledge, that they should become the sons of God: namely, to them which beleeved in his name. [b] Rom.7.7. I knew not sin, but by the Law: for I had not knowne lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not lust. [c] 1 Ioh.2.27. But the annointing which ye received of him, dwelleth in you: and yee need not that any man teach you: but as the same annointing teacheth you of all things, and is true, and is not lying, and as it is taught you, ye shall abide in him. [d] Act.16.14. A certaine woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the City of the Thyatirians, a worshipper of God, heard us, whose heart God opened, that shee attended to the things that Paul spake. Psa.40.6. Thou art not delighted with sacrifice and burnt offerings, but mine eares hast thou opened. Ioh.6.44. No man can come unto me, except the Father which hath sent me, draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day. Isa.54.6. The Lord hath called thee, being as a woman forsaken, and as a yong wife, when thou wast refused, saith the Lord.

The second, is the mollifying of the heart, the which must be bruised in peeces, that it may be fit to receive Gods saving grace offered unto it. Ezech.11.19. I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within their bowels: and I will take the stony heart out of their bodies, and I will give them an heart of flesh.

There

There are for the bruiſing of this ſtony heart, foure principall hammers. The firſt, is the knowledge of the Law of God. The ſecond, is the knowledge of ſin, both originall and actuall, and what puniſhment is due unto them. The third, is compunction, or pricking of the heart, namely, a ſenſe and feeling of the wrath of God for the ſame ſinnes. The fourth, is an holy deſperation of a mans owne power, in the obtaining of eternall life. Act. 2.37. When they heard theſe things, they were pricked in heart, and ſaid unto Peter, and the reſt of the Apoſtles, Men and brethren, what ſhall we doe? 38. Peter ſaid unto them, Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Ieſus for the remiſſion of ſins, and ye ſhall receive the gift of the holy Ghoſt. Lu. 15.17. Then he came to himſelfe, and ſaid, How many hired ſervants at my fathers have bread enough, and I die for hunger? 18. I will riſe and go to my father, and ſay unto him, Father, I have ſinned againſt heaven, and before thee. 19 And am no more worthy to be called thy ſon: make me as one of thy hired ſervants, &c. Mat. 15.24. Hee anſwered, and ſaid, I am not ſent, but to the loſt ſheepe of Iſrael. The third, is faith, which is a miraculous and ſupernaturall faculty of the heart, apprehending Chriſt Ieſus being applyed by the operation of the holy Ghoſt, and receiving him to it ſelfe. Ioh. 1. 12. 6. 35. Ieſus ſaid unto them, I am the bread of life, hee that commeth unto me ſhall never hunger: and he that beleeveth in me ſhall never thirſt. Rom 9 30. What ſhall wee ſay then? the Gentiles which follow not righteouſneſſe, have attained unto righteouſneſſe, even the righteouſneſſe which is of faith.

Chriſt is received, when every ſeverall perſon doth particularly apply unto himſelfe Chriſt with his merits, by an inward perſwaſion of the heart, which commeth none other way, but by the effectuall certificate of the holy Ghoſt concerning the mercy of God in Chriſt Ieſus. 1 Cor. 2. 12. We have received, not the ſpirit of the world, but the ſpirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are given to us of God. Zach. 12.10. I will poure the ſpirit of grace and of compaſſion upon the houſe of David, and upon the inhabitants of Ieruſalem, and they ſhall looke unto mee, whom they have wounded. Rom. 8.16. His ſpirit beareth witneſſe to our ſpirit, that we are the ſonnes of God. Eph. 1.13. In whom alſo ye have truſt, after that yee heard the Word of truth, even the Goſpell of your ſalvation, wherein alſo after that ye beleeved, yee were ſealed with the holy ſpirit of promiſe. 2 Cor. 1.22. In the worke of faith, there are five degrees, or motions of the heart, linked and united together, and are worthy the conſideration of every Chriſtian.

The firſt, is knowledge of the Goſpel, by the illumination of Gods ſpirit. Iſa. 53.11. By his knowledge ſhall my ſervant juſtifie many. Ioh. 17.3. This is life eternall, that they know thee to bee the onely very God, and whom thou haſt ſent Ieſus Chriſt.

To this in ſuch as are truely humbled, is annexed a ſerious meditation of the promiſes in the Goſpell, ſtirred up by the ſenſible feeling of their owne beggery.

And after the foreſaid knowledge in all ſuch as are inlightned, commeth a generall faith, wherby they ſubſcribe to the truth of the Goſpel, Heb. 4.2. Vnto us was the Goſpel preached, as alſo unto them: but the word that they heard profited not them, becauſe it was not mixed with faith in thoſe that heard it. 1 Tim. 1.19. Having faith and a good conſcience, which ſome have put away, and as concerning the faith, have made ſhipwrack, 1 Tim. 2.4. Who will that all men ſhould be ſaved, and come unto the knowledge of the truth.

This knowledge, if it be more full and perfect, is called in Greeke πληροφορία τῆς συνέσεως, that is, the full aſſurance of underſtanding, Col. 2.2. That their hearts might be comforted, and they knit together in love, and in all riches of the full aſſurance of underſtanding, to know the myſtery of God, even the Father, and of Chriſt. Rom. 14. 14. I know, and am perſwaded through the Lord Ieſus, that there is nothing uncleane of it ſelfe. Luk. 1.1. For as much as many have taken in hand, to ſet forth the ſtory of thoſe things, whereof we are fully perſwaded. 1 Theſ. 1.5. Our Goſpell was unto you not in word only, but alſo in power, and in the holy Ghoſt, and in much aſſurance.

The ſecond, is hope of pardon, whereby a ſinner, albeit he yet feeleth not that his ſinnes are certainely pardoned, yet he beleeveth that they are pardonable. Luk. 15.18. I will goe unto my Father, and ſay: Father, I have ſinned againſt heaven and againſt thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy ſonne, make mee as one of thy hired ſervants.

The third, is an hungring and thirſting after that grace which is offered to him in Chriſt Ieſus, as a man hungreth and thirſteth after meate and drinke, Ioh. 6.35. & 7.37. Reve. 21. 6. And he ſaid unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, I will give to him that is athirſt of the well of the water of life freely, Matth. 5. 6. Bleſſed are they which hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe, for they ſhall bee ſatisfied.

The fourth, is the approching to the throne of Grace, that there flying from the terrour of the Law, he may take hold of Chriſt, and find favour with God. Heb. 4.16. Let us therefore go boldly to the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

This approching hath two parts. The firſt, is an humble confeſſion of our ſinnes before God particularly, if they be knowne ſins: and generall, if unknowne: this done, the Lord forthwith remitteth all our ſinnes, Pſal. 32.5. I thought I will confeſſe againſt my ſelfe my wickedneſſe unto the Lord, and thou forgaveſt the puniſhment of my ſin. Selah. 2 Sam. 12.13. David ſaid to Nathan, I have ſinned againſt the Lord: wherfore Nathan ſaid to David, The Lord hath taken away thy ſinne, thou ſhalt not dye, Luk. 15.19.

The ſecond, is the craving pardon of ſome ſins, with unſpeakeable ſighes, and in perſeverance. Luk.15.21. Act.8.22. Repent of this wickedneſſe, and pray God, that if it be poſſible, the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee. Rom.8.26. The ſpirit helpeth our infirmities: for wee know not what to pray as wee ought: but the ſpirit it ſelfe maketh requeſt for us, with ſighes which cannot be expreſſed. Hoſ.14.2,3. O Iſrael, return unto the Lord thy God, for thou haſt falne by thine iniquity. Take unto you words, and turne to the Lord, and ſay to him, Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciouſly.

The fifth ariſing of the former, is an eſpeciall perſwaſion imprinted in the heart by the holy Ghoſt, whereby every faithfull man doth particularly apply unto himſelfe thoſe promiſes which are made in the Goſpel. Mat.9.2. They brought unto him a man ſicke of the palſie, lying on a bed: and when Ieſus ſaw their faith, he ſaid unto the ſicke of the palſie, Sonne, be of good comfort, thy ſinnes are forgiven thee, Matth.15. 28. O woman, great is thy faith, be it unto thee as thou deſireſt. Gal 2.20. I live, yet not I now, but Chriſt lives in mee: and that I now live in the fleſh, I live by the faith of the Sonne of God, who hath loved me, and given himſelfe for me.

This perſwaſion is, and ought to be in every one, even before he have any experience of Gods mercies. Matth.15.22. A woman a Cananite came out of the ſame coaſts, and cryed, ſaying unto him, Have mercy on me, O Lord, the ſonne of David, my daughter is miſerably vexed with a divell, &c. 23,24,25,26,27. Ioh.20.29. Ieſus ſaid unto him, Thomas, becauſe thou haſt ſeen me, thou beleeveſt: bleſſed are they which have not ſeene, & have beleeved. Heb.11.1. Faith is the ground of things hoped for, and the evidence of things which are not ſeene. In Philoſophy we firſt ſee a thing true by experience, & afterward give our aſſent unto it: as in naturall Philoſophy; I am perſwaded that ſuch a water is hot, becauſe when I put mine hand into it, I perceive by experience an hot quality. But in the practiſe of faith it is quite contrary. For firſt, we muſt conſent to the Word of God, reſiſting all doubt and diffidence, & afterward will experience and feeling of comfort follow. 2 Chr.20 20 Put your truſt in the Lord your God, and ye ſhall be aſſured: beleeve his Prophets, and ye ſhall proſper. They therfore do very ill, who are ſtill in a doubt of their ſalvation, becauſe as yet, they feele not in themſelves, eſpeciall motions of Gods ſpirit.

Thus much concerning the way which God uſeth in the begetting of Faith. There are beſide this, two notable degrees of faith. The one is, the loweſt, and as I may ſpeake, the poſitive degree, the other is the higheſt, or ſuperlative.

The loweſt degree of faith, is called ὀλιγοπιστία, a little or weake faith, like a graine of muſtard-ſeed, or ſmoaking flaxe, which can neither give out heat nor flame, but onely ſmoke. Matth.8.25. His Diſciples awaked him, ſaying, Save us Maſter, we periſh. 26. And he ſaid unto them, Why are ye fearefull, O ye of little faith? Mat. 17.20. If ye have faith as much as a grain of muſtard-ſeed, ye ſhall ſay unto this mountaine, Remoove hence to yonder place, and it ſhall remoove. Iſai.42.3. The ſmoking flaxe ſhall he not quench.

Faith is then ſaid to bee weake and feeble, when as, of thoſe five degrees above mentioned, either the firſt, which is knowledge, or the fift, wch is application of the promiſes, is very feeble, the reſt remaining ſtrong. Rom.14.2. One beleevs that he may eat al things, & another which is weak, eats hearbs. 3. Let not him that eateth, deſpiſe him that eateth not: and let not him which eateth not, judge him which eateth: for God hath received him. The Apoſtles although they beleeved, that Chriſt was the Sonne of the living God; yet they were ignorant of his death and reſurrection. Mat.16.16. Ioh.6.69. Matth. 17.22. Luk 9.45. They underſtood not that word: for it was hid frō them that they could not perceive it. Act.1.6. They aſked him ſaying, Lord, wilt thou reſtore at this time the Kingdome to Iſrael?

For the better knowledge of this kinde of faith, we muſt obſerve theſe two rules:

I. A ſerious deſire to beleeve, and an endeavour to obtaine Gods favour, is the ſeede of faith Mat.5.6. Bleſſed are they which hunger and thirſt after righteouſnes: for they ſhall be ſatisfied. Rev.21.6. I wil give to him that is a thirſt, of the well of the water of life freely. Pſ.145.19 He will fulfill the deſire of them that feare him: hee alſo will heare their cry, and will ſave them. For in ſuch as begin to beleeve, and to be renued, the mind will not lye idle, but being moved by the holy Ghoſt, ſtrive with doubtfulneſſe and diſtruſt, and endeavour to put their aſſent to the ſweet promiſe made in the Goſpel, and firmely to apply the ſame to themſelves, and in the ſenſe of their weakneſſe, deſire aſſiſtance from above; and thus faith is beſtowed.

II. God doth not deſpiſe the leaſt ſparke of faith, if ſo be, it, by little and little, doe encreaſe, and men uſe the meanes to encreaſe the ſame Luk.17.5. The Apoſtles ſaid unto the Lord Encreaſe our faith. 6. And the Lord ſaid, If ye had faith as much as a graine of Muſtard-ſeed, and ſhould ſay unto this Mulberry tree, Plucke thy ſelfe up by the rootes, and plant thy ſelfe in the Sea, it ſhould even obey you: Man muſt therfore ſtirre up his faith by meditation of Gods Word, ſerious prayers, and other exerciſes belonging unto faith.

The higheſt decree of faith, is πληροφορία, a full aſſurance, which is not onely a certaine and true, but alſo a full perſwaſion of the heart, whereby a Chriſtian muth more firmely taking hold on Chriſt Ieſus, maketh full and reſolute account that God loveth him, and that he will give to him by name, Chriſt and all his graces pertaining to eternall life. Rom.4.20. Neither did hee doubt of the promiſe of God through unbeleefe, but was ſtrengthned in the faith, and gave glory to God. 21. Being fully aſſured, that he which had promiſed, was able alſo to doe it. Rom.8.38. I am perſwaded, that neither life, nor death &c. can ſeparate us from the love of God which is in Chriſt Ieſus. 1 Sam.17.36. Thy ſervant ſlue both the Lyon & the Bear: therfore this uncircumciſed Philiſtine ſhall be as one of them, seeing he hath rayled on the hoſt of the living God. Pſal. 23.6. Doubtleſſe, kindneſſe and mercy ſhall follow mee all the daies of my life. Conferred with verſ. 1,2,3,4.

Man commeth to this high degree, after the ſence, obſervation, and long experience of Gods favour and love.

Queſt. Whether is juſtifying faith commanded in the law?

Anſw. It is commanded in the law of faith, namely, the Goſpel, but not in the law of works, that is, in the morall law. Rom. 3. 27. The reaſons are theſe: I. That which the law revealeth not, that it commandeth not: but the law is ſo farre from revealing juſtifying faith, that it never knew it. II. Adam had fully, before his fall, written in his heart the morall law: yet had he not juſtifying faith, which apprehended Chriſt.

Object. I. Incredulitie is condemned by the law.

Anſw. That incredulitie which is towards God, is condemned in the law; but that incredulitie which is againſt the Meſſiah Chriſt Ieſus, is condemned by the Goſpel. For as by the Goſpel, not by the law, incredulitie in the Sonne as a Mediatour, appeareth to be a ſinne: ſo likewiſe not by the law is incredulitie in the Meſſiah condemned, but by the Goſpel, which commandeth us to heare him and to beleeve in him. Matth. 17.5. 1 Ioh. 3. 23. Thus it is plaine that this ſinne, not to beleeve in Chriſt, is expreſſely and diſtinctly made manifeſt, and condemned by the Goſpel. And albeit the knowledge of ſinne be by the law, yet not every thing which doth reproove and declare ſome ſinne, is the law of works, or belongeth thereto.

Object. II. But ceremonies belong to the decalogue.

Anſw. Ceremonies may be as examples referred to the decalogue, but indeed they are appendants to the Goſpel.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Concerning the ſecond degree of the declaration of Gods love.

THe ſecond degree, is Iuſtification, wherby ſuch as beleeve, are accounted juſt before God, through the obedience of Chriſt Ieſus. 2 Cor. 5. 21. He hath made him to be ſin for us, which knew no ſinne: that wee ſhould bee made the righteouſneſſe of God in him. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Rom. 5. 19. As by one mans diſobedience many were made ſinners, ſo by the obedience of one (that is, Ieſus Chriſt) ſhall many alſo be made righteous.

Queſt. Whether did Chriſt performe full obedience to the Law, for us men alone, or for himſelfe alſo?

Anſw. I. Not for himſelfe, as ſome not rightly would haue him: for the fleſh of Chriſt beeing hypoſtatically united to the Word, and ſo in it ſelfe fully ſanctified, was even from the firſt moment of conception, moſt worthy to be bleſſed with eternall life. Therefore by all that obedience which hee performed after his conception, Chriſt merited nothing for himſelfe. II. For us, namely, for the faithfull, he fulfilled all the righteouſneſſe of the law, and hence it is, that he is called the end of the law unto righteouſneſſe, to every one that beleeveth, Rom. 10.4.

Here may be objected. I. Chriſt as he is man, is bound to performe obedience to the law for himſelfe.

Anſw. He is not bound by nature, but of his own accord for he was not a meere man, but God and man. And albeit Chriſt did never ſuffer nor fulfill the law, but in that fleſh which he tooke upon him; yet by reaſon of the hypoſtaticall union, this his paſſion and obedience hath reſpect unto the whole perſon, conſidered as God and man, and therfore his obedience was not due on his part, and ſo was without merit to himſelfe: yea, in that the fleſh of Chriſt is united to the perſon of the Word, and ſo exalted in dignitie and ſanctitie, above all Angels, it may ſeeme to be exempted from this naturall obligation of performing the law.

II. Object. If then Chriſt performed the law for us, we are no more bounden to the obſervance of the ſame: as we do not undergo eternall puniſhments for our ſins, the wch Chriſt in his perſon did beare upon the croſſe.

Anſw. If we keepe the ſame reſpect of performing obedience to the law, the conſequence is very true, otherwiſe it is not ſo: for Chriſt performed obedience to the law for us, as it is the ſatisfaction of the law: but the faithfull, they are bounden to obedience, not as it is ſatisfactory, but as it is a document of faith, and a teſtimony of their gratitude towards God, or a means to edifie their neighbours: even as Chriſt ſuffering eternall puniſhments for our ſinnes, we alſo ſuffer puniſhments, as they are either trials, or chaſtiſements unto us.

III. Object. The law and juſtice of God doth not together exact both, namely, obedience, and puniſhment.

Anſw. In mans perfect eſtate, the juſtice of God requireth onely obedience: but in his eſtate corrupted, he requires both obedience, and puniſhment. Puniſhment, as the law is violated: Obedience, that legall juſtice may be performed. Gal. 3. 10. It is therefore plaine, that not only Chriſts paſſion, but alſo his legall obedience, is our righteouſneſſe before God.

Iuſtification hath two parts: Remiſſion of ſins, and imputation of Chriſts righteouſnes.

Remiſſion of ſinnes, is that part of juſtification, whereby he that beleeveth, is freed from the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne, by the paſſion of Chriſt. Col. 1. 21, 22. You hath he now reconciled in the body of his fleſh through death, to make you holy and unblameable, and without fault in his ſight. 1 Pet. 2. 24. Who in his owne fleſh, bare our ſinnes in his body, on the tree, that we being delivered from ſinne, ſhould live in righteouſneſſe, by whoſe ſtripes ye are healed.

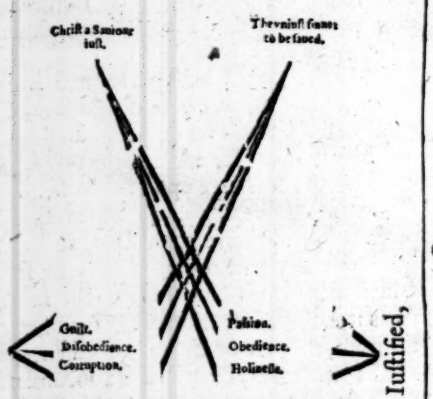
Imputation of righteouſneſſe, is the other part of juſtification, whereby ſuch as beleeve, having the guilt of their ſinnes covered, are accounted juſt in the ſight of God, through Chriſts righteouſneſſe. 2 Cor. 5. 21. Pſal. 32. 1. Bleſſed is he, whoſe wickednesſe is forgiven, and whoſe ſinne is covered. Rom. 4. the whole chapter; where the Apoſtle repeats imputation eleven times. Phil. 3. 8, 9. I have counted all things loſſe, and doe judge them to bee dung, that I might win Chriſt, and might be found in him, that is, not having mine owne righteouſnes which is by the law, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt, even the righteouſneſſe which is of faith.

The forme of juſtification, is, as it were, a kinde of tranſlation of the beleevers ſinnes unto Chriſt, and againe Chriſts righteouſneſſe unto the beleever, by a reciprocall or mutuall imputation. As is apparent in this picture following.



This obedience of Chriſt, is called the Righteouſneſſe of God, and of Chriſt. Of God, I. not becauſe it is in God, but of God: for it taketh all the power and merit it hath from the Deitie of the Sonne: whence it is that Ieremy ſaith, Iehovah our Righteouſneſſe, II. God doth onely accept of it for us, becauſe that alone makes us boldly to approach unto Gods throne of grace, that wee may have pardon for our ſinnes, and be received to eternall life. It is alſo called the Righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, becauſe being out of us, it is in the humanitie of Chriſt, as in a ſubject.

Object. I. No man is made juſt by any other mans juſtice.

Anſw. This juſtice is both anothers, and ours alſo. Anothers, becauſe it is in Chriſt as in a ſubject: ours, becauſe by meanes of the fore-named union, Chriſt, with all his benefits, is made ours.

Object. II. The ancient Fathers never dreamed of this imputative juſtice, and it may ſeeme to be of no greater continuance then fiftie yeeres.

Anſw. This is both falſe, and impious to affirme. Auguſt. 3 Tract. upon Iohn, ſaith, All ſuch as are juſtified by Chriſt, are juſt not in themſelves, but in him. Bernard in his Sermon (ad milites templi, cap. 11.) Mors in Chriſti morte fugatur, & Chriſti juſtitia nobis imputatur: that is, Death in Chriſt his death is put to flight, and the juſtice of Chriſt is imputed unto us. And in his 62. ſermon upon the Canticles: Where is there any reſt (ſaith he) but in the wounds of our Saviour? I will for ever ſing, but what? mine owne juſtice? nay, O Lord, I will remember thy juſtice alone: for that is alſo my juſtice. For thou waſt made of God unto mee juſtice. But ſhould I feare, whether that one juſtice would ſuffice two? nay, it is not a ſhort cloake that is not able to cover a couple. Thy juſtice is juſtice for evermore, and will both cover thee and mee: it is largely large and eternall juſtice: and in mee it covereth the multitude of my ſinnes, &c. Auguſt. lib. de ſpiritu & litera, cap. 9. & 26. We muſt underſtand this ſaying ſo. The doers of the Law ſhall be juſtified, that we may know, that there are no doers of the Law but ſuch as are juſtified; ſo that they are not firſt doers of the law, and then juſtified, but firſt juſtified, and then doers of the law. So it is ſaid, they ſhall be juſtified, as if it ſhould be ſaid, they ſhall be reputed juſt and accounted juſt.

Iuſtification hath annexed unto it Adoption, whereby all ſuch as are predeſtinate to be adopted, receive power, to be actually accounted the ſonnes of God by Chriſt. Eph. 1. 5. Who hath predeſtinate us to bee adopted through Ieſus Chriſt, unto himſelfe, according to the good pleaſure of his will.

By meanes of adoption, God hath beſtowed many notable priviledges upon his Children. I. They are the Lords heires apparant. Rom. 8. 17. If we be children, we be alſo heires, even the heires of God.

II. They are fellow heires with Chriſt, yea kings. Rom. 8. 17. Rev. 1. 6. And made us Kings and Prieſts, even to God his Father.

III. All their afflictions: yea even their wants, and offences, are turned to trials or fatherly chaſtiſements, inflicted upon them for their good. Rom. 8. 28. We know that all things worke together for the beſt, unto them that love God. 36. It is written, for thy ſake are we killed all the day long: wee are counted as ſheepe for the ſlaughter. 37. Neverthelesſe, in all theſe things, we are more then conquerours through him that loved us. Pſ. 89. 32. I will viſit their tranſgreſſion with the rod, & their iniquity with ſtroks. 33. Yet my loving kindnes will I not take from him. 2 Cor. 12. 7. There was given unto me a prick in the fleſh the meſſenger of Satan to buffet mee, becauſe I ſhould not be exalted out of meaſure. 2 Sam. 7. 14. I will be unto him a father, and hee ſhall be to me a ſon: and if he ſin, I will chaſten him with the rod of men, and with the plagues of the children of men.

IV. They have dominion over all creatures, yet ſo, as that in this life they have only right to the thing; but after this life they ſhall have right in the ſame. 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. Whether it be Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, whether they be things preſent, or things to come, even all are yours. Heb. 2. 7. Thou madeſt him little inferiour to the Angels; Thou crowneſt him him with glory and honor, and haſt ſet him above the workes of thine hands. 8. Thou haſt put all things in ſubjection under his feete.

Laſt of all, they have the Angels as miniſtring ſpirits attending upon them for their good. Heb.1.14. Are they not all miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth to miniſter for their ſakes which ſhall be heires of ſalvation? Pſal.34.7. The Angel of the Lord pitcheth round about them that feare him, and delivereth them.

Whence it is apparent, that the faithfull alone have the true uſe of the Lords good, I. Becauſe their perſons are in Chriſt acceptable unto him, in whom alſo they have reſtitution made unto them of thoſe goods which they loſt in Adam, that they may with a good conſcience uſe them. II. They uſe them with thankſgiving to their ends appointed by God.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

Concerning the third degree of the declaration of Gods love.

THe third degree, is Sanctification, whereby ſuch as beleeve, being delivered from the tyranny of ſinne, are by little and little renued in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, 1 Ioh.3.9. Whoſoever is borne of God, ſinneth not: for his ſeed remaineth in him; neither can he ſinne, becauſe he is borne of God. Rom 8.1. There is no condemnation to thoſe which are in Chriſt Ieſus, which walk not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirit.

Sanctification hath two parts: Mortification, and Vivification.

The mortification of ſinne, is the firſt part of ſanctification, whereby the power of ſinne is abated, and crucified in the faithfull. Rom. 6.2. How ſhall we that are dead to ſinne, live yet therein? 3. Know ye not, that all we which have beene baptized into Ieſus Chriſt, have beene baptized into his death? 5. We are buried then with him by baptiſme into his death, that like as Chriſt was raiſed up from the dead, by the glory of the Father, ſo wee alſo ſhould walke in newneſſe of life. Eccle.5.6.7.11,12,13. Gal.5.24. They which are Chriſts have crucified the fleſh, with the affections and luſts thereof.

The meanes of mortification, is the death and buriall of Chriſt, from which proceedeth ſuch vertue, as at the firſt giving ſinne his deadly wound, it doth bereave it of power to rage and reigne in man, and cauſeth it to dye and conſume, as it were in a grave.

The vertue of Chriſts death, is a certaine power, iſſuing from his Deity into his humanity when hee dyed, whereby hee did in the ſame humanity vanquiſh our ſinne imputed unto him, being our ſurety, as well in regard of the puniſhment, as of the guilt thereof, that in like ſort by the ſame power hee might aboliſh the corruption of ſinne in his members.

Vivification, is the ſecond part of ſanctification: whereby inherent holineſſe being begun, is ſtill augmented and enlarged. Firſt, we receive the firſt fruits of the ſpirit, then a continuall increaſe of them. Eph 4.23. Be renewed in the ſpirit of your mind. 24. And put on the new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſſe, and true holineſſe. Eph.2.1. And you hath hee quickned that were dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes. Gal.2.20. Thus I live, yet not I now, but Chriſt in me: and in that I now live in the fleſh, I live by the faith of the Sonne of God, who hath loved me, and given himſelfe for me. Rom.8.23. We which have the firſt fruits of the ſpirit, even wee do ſigh in our ſelves, waiting for the adoption, even the redemption of our bodies. 1 Cor.15.45. The firſt man Adam was made a living ſoule, and the ſecond Adam was made a quickning ſpirit.

The meanes of Vivification, is a vertue derived from Chriſts reſurrection, to thoſe that are quickned, which maketh them to riſe up to newneſſe of life. Phil.3.10. That I may know him, and the vertue of his reſurrection.

The power of Chriſts reſurrection is that, whereby he firſt did, in his owne fleſh, as conqueror over death and ſin, begin to live with God, and to be exalted above every name: and then in his members, ſinne being dead and buried, he cauſeth in them an endeavour and purpoſe to live according to the Will of God.

The efficient cauſe of them both, is the holy Ghoſt, who doth by his divine power convey himſelfe into the beleevers hearts, and in them, by applying the power of Chriſt his death, and reſurrection, createth holineſſe. Iob 33.24,25. Rom.8.9. Now ye are not in the fleſh, but in the ſpirit, becauſe the Spirit of God dwelleth in you: but if any man have not the ſpirit of Chriſt, the ſame is not his. 11. But if the ſpirit of him that raiſed up Ieſus from the dead dwell in you, hee that raiſed up Chriſt from the dead, ſhall alſo quicken your mortall bodies, becauſe that his ſpirit dwelleth in you.

Furthermore, this inherent holineſſe is to be diſtinguiſhed into two parts, according to the ſeverall faculties of the body and ſoule of man. 1 Theſ.5.23. The very God of peace ſanctifie you throughout: and I pray God, that your whole ſpirit, ſoule, and body may bee kept blameleſſe, unto the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

I. The holineſſe or renuing of the minde, which is the illumination therof, to the knowledge of the Will of God. Col.1.9. We ceaſe not to pray for you, and to deſire that yee might be fully filled with knowledge of his will, in all wiſedome, and ſpirituall underſtanding, 1 Cor. 12.8. To one is given by the ſpirit the ſpeech of wiſedome, to another the ſpeech of knowledge, by the ſame ſpirit.

Illumination, is either ſpirituall underſtanding, or ſpirituall wiſedome.

Spirituall underſtanding, is an illumination of the minde, whereby it acknowledgeth the knowne truth of the Word of God.

Spirituall wiſdome, is an illumination of the minde, whereby the ſame truth, is applyed to the good ordering of particular both things and actions: as person, place, and time require.

These two have the effects, which follow.

I. To discerne between good and evill. Heb. 5.14. Strong meate belongeth to them that are of age, which through long custome have their wits exercised to discerne both good and evill. Phil.1. 10. That ye may discerne things that differ one from another.

II. To discerne of spirits. 1 Ioh.4.1. Dearely beloved, beleeve not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God, 1 The.5.21. Try all things, and keepe that which is good. Act.17.11. These were more noble men then they which were at Thessalonica, which received the Word with all readinesse, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether these things were so.

III. To meditate upon the word and workes of God. Psal.1.1. But his delight is in the Law of God, and in that Law doth he exercise himselfe day and night. Psal.119.15. I will meditate in thy precepts, and consider thy wayes. Psal. 107. the whole Psalme.

IV. To discerne and acknowledge mans owne inward blindnesse. Psal. 119 33. Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes, and I will keepe it unto the end. 18. Open mine eyes that I may see the wonders of thy Law.

II. The sanctity of the memory, is an ability to keepe a good thing, when it is offered to the mind, and as need serveth, to remember it. Psa.119.11. I have hid thy promise in mine heart, that I might not sinne against thee. Psa.16. 7. I will praise the Lord who hath given me counsell: my reines also teach me in the nights, Luk.2. 51. His mother kept all these things in her heart.

III. The sanctity of conscience is a grace of God, whereby a mans conscience excuseth him for all his sins, after they are forgiven him in Christ, as also of his upright walking in the whole course of his life. 1 Tim.1.19. Having faith and a good conscience, which some having put away, &c. 1 Cor.4.4. I know nothing by my selfe: yet am I not therby justified. Act.23.1. Paul said, I have in all good conscience, served God untill this day. Act.24. 16. I endeavor my selfe to have alwayes a cleere conscience toward God and toward men, Psa.26.1,2,3. Iudge me O Lord, for I have walked in mine innocency, my trust hath beene also in the Lord: therefore shall I not slide. Proove me, O Lord, and try me, examine my reins and mine heart. For thy loving kindnesse is before mine eyes, therefore have I walked in thy truth.

Hence, in all godly men ariseth the inward peace of God, and the outward alacrity in the countenance. Phil.4.7. The peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall preserve your hearts and minds in Iesus Christ, Pro.28.1. The wicked flee, when none pursueth: but the righteous are bold as a Lyon.

IV. Sanctity of will, whereby man beginneth to will that which is good, and to refuse the contrary. Therefore in this estate, the will is partly freed from bondage, partly in bondage to sin. Phil.2. 13. It is God which worketh in you, both the will and the deed, even of his owne pleasure, Rom.7.18. I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me, but I find no meanes to performe that which is good, &c. v.19. 20,21,22.

V. Sanctity of affections, is the right moving of them, 1 Thes.5.23. Rom.7.24.

Affections of most speciall note, are these:

I. Hope, whereby men with sighing, looke for the accomplishment of their redemption, Rom.8.23.

This hope, when it is once strong and lively, hath also her πληροφορια, that is, full assurance, as faith hath. Heb 6.11. And we desire that every one of you shew the same diligence, to the full assurance of hope unto the end. 1 Pet.1.3. Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Iesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us againe unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Iesus Christ from the dead.

II. Feare of offending God, because of his mercy. 1 Pet.1.17. If ye call him Father, which without respect of person, judgeth according to every mans worke, passe the time of your dwelling here in feare. Psal.130.4. There is mercy with thee, that thou mayest be feared.

III. A base account of all worldly things, in respect of Christ Iesus. Phil.3. 7. But the things that were advantage to mee, I accounted losse for Christs sake. 8. Yea doubtlesse, I thinke all things but losse for the excellent knowledge sake of Christ Iesus my Lord, for whom I have counted all things, and doe judge them to be dung, that I might winne Christ.

IV. The love of God in Christ, which is like unto death and as a fire that cannot bee quenched. Cant.8. 6. Love is strong as death, jealousie is cruell as the grave, the coales thereof are fiery coales, and a vehement flame.

V. A fervent zeale to Gods glory, Rom.9. 3. I would wish my selfe to bee separate from Christ, for my brethren, that are my kinsmen, according to the flesh.

VI. Anguish of mind for our owne sinnes and others also. Psal.119. 136. Mine eyes gush out with teares, because men keepe not thy law. 2 Pet.2. 7. And delivered just Lot, being vexed with the uncleanely conversation of the wicked. 8. For hee being righteous, and dwelling among them, in seeing, and hearing, vexed his righteous soule from day to day, with their unlawfull deeds.

VII. Exceeding great joy in the holy Ghost. Rom.14.17. The kingdome of God is not meate and drinke, but righteousnesse, and peace, and joy in the holy Ghost.

VIII. Sanctity of body, whereby it is a fit instrument for the soule to accomplish that which is good. Rom.6.19. As yee have given your members servants to uncleannesse, and to iniquity, to commit iniquity; so now give your members servants unto righteousnesse in holinesse.

CHAP. XXXIX.

Of Repentance and the fruits thereof.

FRom Sanctification, Repentance is derived, because no man can earnestly repent, pent, except he denying himselfe, doe hate sin, even from his heart, and imbrace righteousnes. This no man either will, or can performe, but such an one, as is in the sight of God regenerated and justified, and indued with true faith. Therfore albeit in such as are converted, repentance doth first manifest it selfe, yet regarding the order of nature, it followeth both faith and sanctification. Hence also it is evident, that this repentance, (legall contrition being some occasion, and as it were, a preparation to true conversion,) is wholly begotten by the preaching of the Gospell.

Repentance is, when a sinner turneth to the Lord, Act. 26.20. He shewed first unto them of Damascus, and at Ierusalem, and through all the coasts of Iudea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turne to God, and do works worthy amendment of life, 1 Ioh. 3.3. Every man that hath this hope in him, purgeth himselfe, as he is pure.

This is performed, when as any one by the instinct of the holy Ghost, doth purpose, will, desire, and indevour to relinquish his former sinnes, and to become a new man, Ps. 119.112. I have applyed my heart to fulfill thy statutes alalway, even unto the end, 1 Ioh. 3.3. Act. 11.23. Who when he was come, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.

The fruit of repentance, is a Christian conversation, wherein are brought foorth fruits worthy amendment of life, Mat. 3.8. Bring ye forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance.

A Christian conversation, is such a course of life, whereby we following Christs example, doe by him, performe new obedience to God, Mat. 11.29. Take my yoke on you, and learn of me, that I am meeke and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your soules, 1 Pet. 4.1. For as much as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arme your selves likewise with the same minde, which is, that he which hath suffered in the flesh, hath ceased from sinne, 1 Pet. 2.21. For hereunto are ye called, for Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an ensample that we should follow his steps, 1 Pet. 3.10.13. If any man long after life and to see good dayes, let him refraine his tongue from evill, and, his lips that they speake no guile. Let him eschew evill, and doe good: let him seeke peace, and follow after it.

There are two parts of new obedience: the denial of our selves, & the profession of Christ Mat. 16.24. If any man will follow mee, let him forsake himselfe, take up his crosse, and follow me.

The deniall of out selves, consisteth partly in Christian warrefare, partly in the patient bearing of the crosse.

CHAP. XL.

Of Christian Warrefare.

CHristian Warfare, is concerning the right way of fighting the spirituall battell.

The parts thereof, are the preparation to battel, and the combate it selfe.

To the preparation, wee must use the complete armour of God, Eph. 6.13. For this cause take unto you the whole armour of God, that yee may be able to resist in the evill day, and having finished all things, stand fast.

The parts hereof, are especially sixe. I. Truth. II. Iustice. III. Evangelicall obedience. IV. Faith. V. The word of God. VI. Continuall and fervent prayer with watching. Eph. 6.14. Stand therefore, and our loynes girded about with verity, and having on the breastplate of righteousnesse. 15. And your feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace. 16. Above all, take the shield of faith, wherewith ye may quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. 17. And take the helmet of salvation, & the sword of the spirit, wch is the word of God. 18. And pray alwaies with all manner of prayer and supplication in the spirit, & watch thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all Saints. 1 Pet. 5.8. Be sober, and watch: for your adversary the devill, as a roaring lyon walketh about seeking whō he may devoure.

The combate, is a mutuall conflict of them that fight spiritually.

The warriours, are the tempter, and the Christiā souldier, Eph. 6.12. For we wrestle not against flesh & blood, but against principalities, against powers, and against the worldly governors, the princes of the darkenesse of this world, against spiritual wickednesses, which are in high places.

The tempter, is the Prince, or his helpers. The Prince is Satan and his angels, which are spirituall wickednesses, in high things. His helpers are the flesh and the world.

The conflict of all these, is temptation, whereby man is provoked to commit such wickednesse, as is hurtfull to the salvation of his soule, 2 Pet. 2.11. Dearely beloved, I beseech you, as strangers and pilgrims abstaine from fleshly lusts, which fight against the soule.

In the souldier, two things are to be considered: his resisting, and his fall.

Resistance is an action, whereby the souldier doth withstand temptation, through grace working inwardly in him. 1 Ioh. 2.14. I write unto you babes, because you have knowne the Father: I have writtē to you fathers, because ye have knawn him that is frō the beginning: I have written to you yong men, because ye are strong, & the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked, 1. Pet. 5,8. Eph. 6.16. Psal. 19.13. Thou shalt walke upon the lyon and aspe: the yong lyon and the dragon shalt thou tread under feet.

To confirme this, these preservatives which follow are very necessary.

I. When thou art tempted to sinne, doe not onely abstaine from it, but earnestly love and follow after the contrary, Iohn. 8.44.

II. Never yeeld or consent to Satans words, whether he speak the truth, accuse fasly, or flatter dissemblingly. Ioh. 8.44. Ye are of your father the devill, and the lusts of your father ye will do: he hath been a murtherer from the beginning, & abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him: when he speaketh a lie, then speaketh he of his his owne: for he is a lyar, and the father thereof. Mar.1.24. And cryed with a loud voyce, and ſaid, what have I to doe with thee, Ieſus, the ſon of the moſt high God, And Ieſus ſaid, Hold thy peace and come out of him, Act.16.17. Shee followed Paul and us, and cryed, ſaying, Theſe men are the ſervants of the moſt high God, which ſhew unto us the way of ſalvation, &c. Aug.ſerm.241.

III. One temptation is to be looked for after another, and then eſpecially, when our enemy, as though he had made truce with us, is at reſt: for the divell never maketh an end of his malice, 1 Pet.5.8.

The fall is, whereby the ſouldier through infirmitie fainteth, being ſubdued by the power of the enemie, Gal.6.1. Brethren, if a man be fallen by occaſion into any fault, yee which are ſpirituall, reſtore ſuch an one with the ſpirit of meekeneſſe, conſidering thy ſelfe, leſt thou alſo bee tempted.

To this appertaineth the ſpirituall remedy. A remedy, is a thing having aptneſſe to reſtore him wch is fallen, to his former eſtate, Gal.6.1

And heere two things muſt alwayes bee thought on.

I. If there be a willing minde, every one is accepted for that grace which he hath, not for that which he hath not, 2 Cor.8.12. For if there be firſt a willing minde, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.

II. In all theſe things, whoſoever will leade a godly life in Chriſt, the power of God is to bee made perfect through their infirmitie, 2 Cor. 12.9. And he ſaid unto me, My grace is ſufficient for thee, for my power is made perfect through weakeneſſe: very glad therefore will I rejoyce rather in mine infirmities, that the power of God may dwell in me. 10. Therefore I take pleaſure in infirmities, in reproaches, in neceſſities, in perſecutions, in anguiſh for Chriſts ſake, for when I am weake, then am I ſtrong.

CHAP. XLI.

Of the firſt aſſault.

ASſaults are three-fold.

The firſt, is about the Chriſtian mans effectuall calling. The temptation, is the enterpriſe of the divell to blindfold mans mind, and to harden his heart, leaſt the word of God ſhould worke in him to ſalvation, Matt.13.4. And as he ſowed, ſome fell by the way ſide, and the fowles came and devoured them up. 5. And ſome fell upon ſtony ground, where they had not ſo much earth, and anone they ſprang up, becauſe they had no depth of earth. 6. And when the Sunne roſe up, they were parched, and for lacke of rooting, withered away. 7. And ſome fell among thornes, and the thornes ſprang up and choaked them. 19. Whenſoever a man heareth the word of the kingdome, & underſtandeth it not, the evill one commeth, and catcheth away that which is ſowne in his heart: and this is he which hath received the ſeed by the way ſide.

A reſiſtance in thoſe that are to be called, is wrought by the Spirit of God, that cauſeth men to lend their eares to heare, and doth ingraffe the word in their harts, that the immortall ſeed of regeneration may ſpring in them. Pſal. 40. 6. Ioh.6.44. Act.16.14. Iam. 1. 21. Wherefore lay apart all filthineſſe, and ſuperfluity of maliciouſneſſe, and receive with meekneſs, the word that is graffed in you, which is able to ſave your ſouls, 1 Pet.1.22. Seeing your ſoules are purified in obeying the truth through the ſpirit: to love brotherly, without faining, love one another with a pure heart fervently 1 Ioh.3.9. Whoſoever is borne of God ſinneth not: for his ſeed remaineth in him, neither can he ſin, becauſe he is borne of God. A reſiſtance in thoſe that are called, is when in a ſincere heart they doe joyne the word which they have heard with faith, Luk. 8.15. But that which fel in good ground, are they which with an honeſt and good heart, heare the word and keepe it, and bring forth fruit with patience. Heb 4.2.

Here are certaine preſervatives to be noted.

I. Premeditation of the power and uſe of the word, Eccleſ.4.17. Take heed to thy feete, when thou entreſt into the houſe of the Lord, and be more neere to heare, then to give the ſacrifice of fooles: for they know not that they doe evill. Chap.5.1. Be not raſh with thy mouth, nor let thine heart be haſty to utter a thing before God: for God is in the heaven, and thou art on the earth, therefore let thy words be few.

II. Diligent attention of the mind. Act.16.14

III. An hungring deſire of the heart, Ioh.7. 37. Now in the laſt and great day of the feaſt, Ieſus ſtood and cryed, ſaying, If any man thirſt, let him come to me and drinke.

IV. Integritie of life, Pſal.26.6.

V. The caſting away of evill affections. Iam. 1.22. And bee yee doers of the word, and not hearers onely, deceiving your owne ſoules.

VI. The inward conſent and agreement of the heart with the word preached, Act.2.37.

VII. An hiding of the word in the heart, leſt we ſhould ſin, Pſa.119.11. I have hid thy word in my heart, that I might not ſin againſt thee.

VIII. A trembling at the preſence of God in the aſſembly of the Church, Eſa. 66.2. For all theſe things hath mine hand made, and all theſe things have been, ſaith the Lord, and to him will I looke, even to him that is poore, and of a contrite ſpirit, and trembleth at my words. Act.10.33. Then ſent I for thee immediately, and thou haſt well done to come. Now therefore are we all here preſent before God, to heare all things that are commanded thee of God.

The fall is either a coldneſſe in receiving the word, and a neglect thereof, or elſe a falling into errours.

The remedie for this, is ſubjection, which muſt be made to the judgment and cenſure of the brethren and miniſters, Rev.3. 15. I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot, Gal. 6.2. 1 Tim.1.20. Of whom is Hymenaeus and Alexander, whom I have delivered unto Satan, that they might learne not to blaſpheme.

CHAP. XLII.

Of the second Assault.

THe second assault is, concerning faith.

The temptation, is an illusion which the divell casteth into the hearts of godly men: as when he saith, Thou art not of the elect: thou art not justified: thou hast no faith: thou must certainely bee condemned for thy sinnes, Matth. 4. 3. Then came to him the tempter, and said, If thou be the Sonne of God: command that these stones be made bread.

The occasions which he taketh of these illusions, are;

I. Adversity: as dangers, losses, persecutions, grievous offences, &c. Psa. 73. 12. Loe these are the wicked, yet prosper they alway, and increase in riches. 13. Certainly, I have cleansed mine heart in vaine, and washed mine hands in innocency. Iob. 13. 23. How many are mine iniquities and sins? shew me my rebellion and my sinne. 24. Wherefore hidest thou thy face, and takest mee for thine enemy? 25. Wilt thou breake a leafe driven to and fro, and wilt thou pursue the dry stubble?

II. The remembrance of sinnes past. Iob 13. 26. For thou writest bitter things against mee, and makest mee to possesse the iniquities of my youth.

III. A feeling of death even already at hand.

The resistance is made by a true faith applying Christ with all his merits particularly after this manner. I assuredly beleeve that I shal not be condemned, but that I am elected, and justified in Christ, & am out of all doubt, that all my sinnes are pardoned, Esay 53. 11. He shall see the travell of his soule, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justifie many; for he shall beare their iniquities. Rom. 8. 38. For I am perswaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come. 39. Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Iesus our Lord.

The preservative, is, in temptation, not to behold faith, but the object of faith which is Christ. Phil. 3. 12. Not as though I had already attained unto it, either were already perfect: but I follow if that I may comprehend that, for whose sake also I am comprehended of Christ Iesus. 13. One thing I doe, forget that which is behind, and indeavour my selfe to that which is before. 14. And follow hard toward the marke, for the price of the high calling of God in Christ Iesus, Ioh. 3. 14. And as Moses lift up the serpent in the wildernesse, so must the Sonne of man be lift up, that he that beleeveth in him, &c.

The falling, is doubtfulnesse, and distrust of our election, and of Gods mercy. Psal. 77. 6. I called to remembrance my song in the night: I communed with my owne heart, and my spirit searched diligently. 7. Will the Lord absent himselfe for ever? and will he shew no more favour? 8. Is his mercy cleane gone for ever? doth his promise faile for evermore? So David of himselfe saith, Psal. 22. 1. My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me, and art so farre from my health, and from the words of my roaring?

The remedie is double.

First, the operation of the holy Spirit stirring up faith, & increasing the same, Phi, 1. 6. I am perswaded of this same thing, that he that hath begun this good work in you, will performe it untill the day of Iesus Christ. Luk. 17. 5. And the Apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith.

The second, is an holy meditation, which is manifold.

I. That it is the commandement of God, that we should beleeve in Christ, 1 Ioh. 3. 23. This is then his commandement, that we beleeve in the name of his Sonne Iesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave commandement.

II. That the Evangelicall promises are indefinite, and doe exclude no man, unlesse peradventure any man do exclude himselfe, Esa. 55. 1. Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and ye that have no silver, come, buy, and eate; come, I say, buy wine and milk without silver & without mony. Mat. 11. 28. Come unto me, all ye that are weary and laden, and I will ease you, Ioh. 3. 15. That whosoever beleeveth in him should not perish but have eternall life. Also the Sacraments of Baptisme and the Lords Supper, do to every one severally apply indefinite promises, and therefore are very effectuall to enforce particular assurance or plerophorie of forgivenesse of sinnes.

III. That doubtfulnesse and despaire are most grievous sinnes.

IV. That contrary to hope, men must under hope beleeve with Abraham, Rom. 4. 18. Which Abraham above hope, beleeved under hope, that he should be the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken to him, So shall thy seed be.

V. That the mercy of God, and the merit of Christs obedience, beeing both God and man, are infinite, Esa. 54. 10. For the mountains shall remoove, and the hils shall fall downe, but my mercy shall not depart from thee, neither shall my covenant of peace fall away, saith the Lord, that hath compassion on thee. Psa. 103. 11. For as high as the heaven is above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that feare him. 1 Ioh. 2. 1. My babes, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not: and if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father Iesus Christ, the just. 2. And he is the reconciliation for our sins: and not for ours onely, but also for the sins of the whole world, Psal. 130. 7. Let Israel waite on the Lord, for with the Lord is mercy, and with him is great redemption.

VI. That God measureth the obedience due unto him, rather by the affection and desire to obey, then by the act and performance of it. Rom. 8. 5. For they that are after the flesh, savor the things of the flesh, but they that are after the spirit, the things of the spirit. 7. Because the wisdome of the flesh is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God neither indeed can be. Rom. 7. 20. Now if I doe that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but the sin that dwelleth in mee. 21. I find then by the law, that when I would doe good, evil is present with me. 22. For I delight in law of God, concerning the inner man. Mal. 3. 13. I will spare them, as a man spareth his sonne that reverenceth him.

VII. When one sinne is forgiven, all the rest are remitted also; for remission being given once without any prescription of time, is given for ever. Rom. 11. 29. For the gifts and calling of GOD, are without repentance, Act. 10. 43. To him also give all the Prophets witnesse, that through his name all that beleeve in him, shall receive remission of sinnes.

VIII. That grace and faith are not taken away by falles of infirmitie, but thereby are declared and made manifest, Rom. 5. 20. Moreover, the law entred thereupon, that the offence should abound: nevertheless, where sinne abounded, there grace abounded much more. 2 Cor. 17. 7. And lest I should be exalted out of measure, &c. there was given unto mee a pricke in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet mee. 8. For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from mee. 9. He said, My grace is sufficient for thee.

IX. That all the works of God are by contrary meanes. 2 Cor. 12. 9. My power is made perfect through weakenesse.

CHAP. XLIII.

Of the third assault.

THE third Assault, is concerning Sanctification.

The tentation, is a provoking to sinne, according to the disposition of every man, and as occasion shall offer it selfe. 1 Chro. 21. 1. And Satan stood up against Israel, and provoked David to number Israel. John 13. 2. And when supper was done, and the divell had now put into the heart of Iudas Iscariot, Simons sonne to betray him.

In this tentation, the divell doth wonderfully diminish and extenuate those sinnes, which men are about to commit, partly by objecting closely the mercy of God, and partly by covering or hiding the punishment which is due for the sinne.

Then there are helps to further the divell in this temptation.

First, the flesh, which lusteth against the spirit, sometimes by begetting evill motions and affections, and sometimes by overwhelming and oppressing the good intents and motions. Gal. 5. 17. For the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary one to another, so that yee cannot doe the same things that you would. 19. Moreover the works of the flesh are manifest, which are adultery, fornication, uncleanesse, wantonnesse. 20. Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, debate, emulations, wrath, contentions, seditions, heresies. 21. Envy, murthers, drunkennesse, gluttony, and such like, whereof I tell you now, as I also have told you before, that they which doe such things, shall not inherit the kingdome of God. Iam. 1. 14. But every man is tempted, when he is drawne away by his owne concupiscence, and is intised.

Secondly, the world, which bringeth men A to disobedience, through pleasure, profit, honour, and evill examples. Eph. 2. 3. Among whom we also had our conversation in time past, in the lust of our flesh, in fulfilling the will of the flesh, and of the minde, and were by nature the children of wrath, as well as others, 1 Ioh. 2. 16. For all that is in the world, as the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of this world.

Resistance is made by the desire of the spirit, which worketh good motions and affections in the faithfull, and driveth forth the evill. Gal. 5. 22. But the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentlenesse, goodnes, faith. 23. Meekenesse, temperancy: against such there is no law, 24. For they that are Christs, have crucified the flesh, and the affections and the lusts thereof. 26. Let us not be desirous of vaine-glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

The preservatives are these, whereby men are strengthened in resisting.

I. To account no sinne, light or small. Gal. 5. 9. A little leaven doth leaven the whole lump. Rom. 6. 23. For the wages of sinne is death, but the gift of God is eternall life, through Iesus Christ our Lord.

II. To avoid all occasions of sinne. To these rather agreeth the proverbe used of the plague: longè, tardè, citò: that is, aloofe, slowly, quickely. 1 Thess. 5. 22. Abstaine from all appearance of evill. Iude v. 23. And other save with feare, pulling them out of the fire, and hate even the garment spotted by the flesh.

III. To accustome thy selfe to subdue the lesser sinnes, that at the last, thou maiest overcome the greater, Rom. 13. 4.

IV. To apply thy selfe to thy appointed calling, and alway to be busily occupied about something in the same.

V. To oppose the law, the judgements of God, the last judgment, the glorious presence of God, and such like, against the rebellion and loosenesse of the flesh. Prov. 28. 14. Blessed is the man that feareth alway: but hee that hardeneth his heart shall fall into evill. Gen. 39. 9. There is no man greater in his house then I: neither hath he kept any thing from me, but onely thee because thou art his wife, how then can I doe this great wickednesse, and so sinne against God?

Here certaine preservatives take place.

Against unjust anger, or private desire of revenge. Here meditate. I. That injuries happen unto us by the Lords appointment, for our good. 2 Sam. 16. 10. II. God of his great goodnes forgiveth us far more sins, then it is possible for us to forgive men. III. It is the duty of Christian love to forgive others. IV. We must not desire to destroy them, whom Christ hath redeemed with his precious blood. V. We our selves are in danger of the wrath of God, if we suffer our wrath to burne against our brother. Forgive (saith he) and it shall be forgiven, Matth. 6. 14. VI. We know not the circumstances of the facts, what the minde was, and purpose of them against whom we swell.

Bridles,

Bridles, or externall remedies, there are: I. In this we ſhall imitate the clemencie of the Lord, who for a very great ſeaſon doth often tolerate the wicked, Learn of me, for I am humble and meeke, Mat. 11.29. II. There muſt be a panſing and time of delay, betwixt our anger and the execution of the ſame. Athenodorus counſelled Auguſtus, that hee beeing angrie, ſhould repeate all the lettters of the Alphabet, or A, B, C. before he did either ſpeake or doe any thing againſt another. III. To depart out of thoſe places where thoſe are, with whom we are angry. IV. To avoid contention, both in word and deed, Doe nothing through contention, Phil. 2.3.

Remedies againſt thoſe bad deſires of riches, and honour. I. God doth even in famine quicken and revive them which feare him. Pſal. 33 18, 19. The eye of the Lord is upon them that feare him, to deliver their ſoules from death, and to preſerve them from famine. II. Godlineſſe is great gaine, ¶ if the minde of man can be therewith content, 1 Tim. 6.6. III. We doe waite and look for the reſurrection of the body, and eternall life: therefore wee ſhould not take ſuch carking care for this preſent mortall life. IV. We are ſervants in our fathers houſe, therefore look what is convenient for us, that wil he lovingly beſtow upon us. V. The palpable blindneſſe of an ambitious minde deſireth to be ſet aloft, that he may have the greater downefall; and he feareth to be humbled, leſt he ſhould not be exalted. VI. Adam when he would needes bee checkmate with God, did bring both himſelfe and his poſterity headlong to deſtruction. VII. He is a very ambitious rob-God, which deſireth to take that commendation to himſelfe, which is appropriate onely to the Lord.

Preſervatives againſt the deſires of the fleſh. I. He that will be Chriſts Diſciple, muſt every day take up his croſſe, Luke 9.23. II. They which are according to the ſpirit, ſavour of ſuch things as are according to the ſpirit, Rom. 8.5. III. They that walke after the fleſh ſhall die, Rom. 8.13. IV. We ought to behave our ſelves as citizens of the kingdome of heaven. Phil. 3.20. V. We are the temple of God. 1 Cor. 3.16. Our members they are the members of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 6.15. And wee have dwelling within us the ſpirit of Chriſt, which we ſhould not grieve, Eph. 4.30. Concerning this, looke more in the explication of the ſeventh Commandement.

In this tentation the fall is, when a man being overtaken, falleth into ſome offence, Gal. 6.1.

Here Satan doth wonderfully aggravate the offence committed, and doth accuſe and terrifie the offendor with the judgements of God, Mat. 27.3. Then when Iudas which betrayed him, ſaw that he was condemned, hee repented himſelfe, and brought againe the thirty peeces of ſilver, to the chiefe Prieſts and Elders. 4. Saying, I have ſinned, betraying the innocent blood: but they ſaid, What is that to us? ſee thou to it. 5. And when he had caſt downe the ſilver pieces in the Temple, he departed, and hanged himſelfe.

The remedie, is a renued repentance, the beginning wherof is ſorrow in regard of God for the ſame ſin: the fruits whereof are eſpecially ſeven, 2 Cor. 7.9. Now I rejoyce not that ye were ſorry, but that ye ſorrowed to repentance: for yee ſorrowed godly ſo that in nothing ye were hurt by us. 10. For godly ſorrow cauſeth repentance unto ſalvation, not to be repented of: but worldly ſorrow cauſeth death. 11. For behold, this thing that ye have been godly ſorrie, what great care it hath wrought in you: yea, what clearing of your ſelves: yea, what indignation: yea, what feare: yea, how great deſire: yea, what zeale: yea, what puniſhment: in all things ye have ſhewed your ſelves, that ye are pure in this matter.

I. An endeavour and purpoſe to doe well, according to the rule of Gods word.

II. An Apologie, that is a confeſſion of the ſin before God, with an earneſt entreaty of pardon for the offence, Pſal. 32.5. Then I acknowledged my ſin unto thee, neither hid I mine iniquitie: for I thought, I will confeſſe againſt my ſelfe my wickedneſſe unto the Lord, and thou forgaveſt the puniſhment of my ſinne, 2 Sam. 12.13. Then David ſaid unto Nathan, I have ſinned againſt the Lord: and Nathan ſaid to David, The Lord alſo hath put away thy ſin, thou ſhalt not dy.

III. Indignation againſt a mans ſelfe, for his offence.

IV. A feare, not ſo much for the puniſhment, as for offending the Lord, Pſal. 130. 3. If thou ſtraightly marke ſt iniquities, O Lord, who ſhall ſtand?

V. A deſire to be fully renued, and to bee delivered from ſinne.

VI. A fervent zeale to love God, and to imbrace and keepe all his commandements.

VII. Revenge, whereby the fleſh may be tamed and ſubdued, leaſt at any time afterward ſuch offences be committed.

CHAP. XLIV.

Of the patient bearing of the Croſſe.

THe patient bearing of the croſſe, teacheth how Chriſtians ſhould undergoe the burden.

The croſſe, is a certain meaſure of afflictions appointed by God, to every one of the faithfull, Mat. 16.24. If any man will follow me, let him forſake himſelfe, take up his croſſe, & follow mee, Col. 1.24. Now rejoyce I in my ſuffrings for you, and fulfill the reſt of the afflictions of Chriſt in my fleſh, for his bodies ſake, which is the Church.

We ought to take up this croſſe willingly, even with both hands, when it ſhall pleaſe God to lay it upon us. And after we have taken it up, we muſt beare it with patience and perſeverance, Col. 1.11. Strengthened with all might, through his glorious power, unto all patience and long ſuffering with joyfulneſſe, Luk. 21. 19. Poſſeſſe your ſoules with patience. The preſervatives of patience are: I. Strength by the holy Ghoſt, Phil. 4.13. I am able to doe all things through the helpe of Chriſt, which ſtrengtheneth me, Phil. 1. 29. It is given to you for Chriſt, that not onely yee ſhould beleeve in him, but alſo ſuffer for his ſake. II. An holy meditation, which is manifold.

I. That the afflictions of the faithfull come not by chance, but by the counſell and providence of God, which diſpoſeth all things in a moſt excellent ſort, Gen. 45. 4, 5. It was God that ſent Ioſeph into Egypt, 2 Sam. 16. 10. The Lord biddeth Shemei curſe David, Pſal. 119. 71 It was good for me that I was afflicted, that I might learne thy ſtatutes. Hence it is evident, that afflictions to the godly are inevitable, Act. 14. 22. By many afflictions you muſt enter into the kingdome of God, Mat. 7. 14. The gate is ſtrait, and the way narrow that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it, Ioh. 16. 33. In the world ye ſhall have troubles.

II. That albeit afflictions are grievous, yet are they good and profitable: for they are helpes, whereby men being humbled for their ſinnes before God, obtaine peace and holineſſe of life, 2 Cor. 1. 9. We received ſentence of death in our ſelves, becauſe we ſhould not truſt in our ſelves, but in God, which raiſeth the dead, Eſa. 26 16. Lord in trouble have they viſited thee, they powred out a prayer, when thy chaſtening was upon them, Hoſ. 5. 15. I will go, and returne to my place, till they acknowledge their fault, and ſeeke me: in their affliction they will ſeeke me diligently Pſal. 78. 34. When he ſlew them, they ſought him, and they returned, and they ſought God early Ier. 31. 18. I have heard Ephraim lamenting thus Thou haſt corrected me, and I was chaſtiſed as an untamed calfe: convert thou me, and I ſhall be converted. Heb. 12. 11. No chaſtiſement for the preſent ſeemeth joyous, but grievous: but afterward it bringeth the quiet fruit of righteouſneſſe unto them, which are thereby exerciſed. Pſal. 30. 5. Weeping may abide at evening; but joy cõmeth in the morning, Ioh. 15. 2. Every branch that beareth fruit, hee purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit, 1 Pet. 1. 6. Wherein ye rejoyce, though now for a ſeaſon (if need require) yee are in heavineſſe through many tentations, 2 Cor. 1. 4. The God of all comfort, which comforteth us in all our tribulations, that we may be able to cõfort them which are in any affliction, by the cõfort wherewith we our ſelves are comforted of God, Rom. 5. 3. We boaſt in afflictions, knowing that affliction bringeth patience, Heb. 2. 10. He did conſecrate the Prince of their ſalvation through afflictions. We permit Chirurgians, that they ſhould both bind us lying diſeaſed in our beds, and ſeare us with hot irons, yea, lance & ſearch our members with razors: and laſtly, we ſend them away uſually with friendly & kind ſpeeches, & often with a golden fee for their thus handling us. Shal we then ſuffer ſo many things of a Chirurgian to cure a bodily diſeaſe, and wil we not give God leave to cure by affliction the moſt feſtred diſeaſes of our ſoules?

By this alſo may we gather; that the afflictions of the godly are ſignes of their adoption, Heb. 12. 6. Whom the Lord loveth, he chaſteneth, and he ſcourgeth every ſonne whom he receiveth. 7. If ye endure chaſtiſement, God offereth himſelfe unto you, as unto ſonnes.

And that they are to them the Kings high way to heaven, Iam. 1. 1. 2. Bleſſed is the man that endureth tentation: for when he is tried, hee ſhall receive the crowne of life, which the Lord hath promiſed to them that love him, 2 Cor. 4. 17. For our light affliction which is but for a moment, cauſeth unto us a farre more excellent and an eternall weight of glory.

III. That God hath promiſed favour, mitigation of puniſhment, his preſence, and deliverance, Phil. 1. 29. 1 Cor. 10. 13. God is faithfull, who will not ſuffer you to be tempted above meaſure, but with tentation will give deliverance, 2. Sam. 7. 14. Pſal 50. 15. Call upon me in the day of trouble, and I will deliver thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie me. Pſal. 121. 4. He that keepeth Iſrael will neither ſlumber nor ſleepe, Eſa. 43. 2. When thou paſſeſt through the waters, I will be with thee, and through the floods that they do not overflow thee: when thou walkeſt through the very fire, thou ſhalt not be burnt, neither ſhall the flame kindle upon thee. 3. For I am the Lord thy God, the holy one of Iſrael, thy Saviour.

IV. That in all troubles of the faithfull, Chriſt is a companion, 1 Pet. 4. 13. Rejoyce that yee are partakers of the afflictions of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 4. 10. Every where we beare about in our body the dying of Chriſt, that the life of Ieſus might alſo be made manifeſt in our bodies. Col. 1.

V. That the Angels are ready to defend ſuch as feare God. Pſal. 34. 7. 2 King. 6. 16. Feare not, there are more with us then againſt us

CHAP. XLV.

Of the calling upon God.

THus muſt concerning the deniall of our ſelves, now followeth the profeſſion of Chriſt: which reſpecteth either Chriſt himſelfe, or his members; namely, the faithfull, Mat. 25. 40. Verely I ſay unto you, in as much as ye did it to one of the leaſt of my brethren, yee did it unto mee. That profeſſion which directly concerneth Chaiſt, is either continuall; or onely in the time of danger.

Continuall, is the calling upon the name of God, and ought ever to be performed of us, in the name of Chriſt Ieſus our Mediatour, 1. Cor. 1. 2. To the Church of God which is at Corinthus, to them that are ſanctified in Chriſt Ieſus, Saints by calling, with all that call on the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt in every place, both their Lord and ours, Act. 9. 14. He hath authority frõ the high Prieſt, to bind all that call upon thy name, Col. 3. 17. Whatſoever ye ſhall do in word or in deed, do it in the name of the Lord Ieſus, giving thanks to God, and the Father by him.

The calling upon Gods name, is by prayer, or thankſgiving, Phil. 4. 6. In all things let your requeſts be ſhewed unto God, in prayer and ſupplication, with giving of thanks.

Prayer hath two parts: Petition, and Aſſent, Mark. 11. 24. I ſay unto you, whatſoever ye deſire

when ye pray, beleeve that yee shall have it, and it shall be done unto you.

Petition, is the first part of prayer, whereby we, according to the rule of Gods word, aske his helpe, for the obtaining of such necessaries as we want, 1 Ioh. 5. 14. This is the assurance that we have in him, that if we aske any thing according to his will, he heareth us.

In every petition wee must expresse two things: I. A sense of our wants. II. A desire of the grace of God to supply those wants. 1. Sam. 1. 10. She was troubled in her minde, and prayed unto the Lord, and wept sore, Dan. 9. 4. And I prayed to the Lord my God, and made my confession, saying. 5. We have sinned & have committed iniquity, &c. 16. O Lord according to thy righteousnesse, I beseech thee, let thine anger and thy wrath be turned from the city Hierusalem, &c. to the 20 verse, Psal. 130. 1. Out of the deep I called to thee, O Lord, 1 Sam. 1. 15. Then Hannah answered and said, Nay my Lord, but I am a woman troubled in spirit: I have drunke neither wine nor strong drinke, but have poured out my soule before the Lord, &c. to the 17. verse, Psal. 143. 6. I stretch forth mine hands unto thee, my soule desireth after thee, as the thirsty land.

Assent, is the second part of prayer, whereby we beleeve, and professe it before God, that he, in his due time, will grant unto us those our requests; which we before have made unto his majesty, 1 Ioh. 5. 14, 15. This is the assurance that we have in him, that if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us. And if we know that he heareth us, whatsoever we aske we know that we have the petitions that we have desired of him, Mat. 6. 13. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evill. For thine is the kingdome, thine is the power, and thine is the glory, for ever and ever, Amen.

As for the faithfull, howsoever they in their prayers, bewray many infirmities: yet no doubt they have a notable sense of Gods favour, especially, when they pray zealously, and often unto the Lord, Iam. 5. 16. Pray one for another, that ye may be healed, for the praier of a righteous man availeth much if it be fervent, Lu. 1. 13. The Angel said unto him, Feare not Zacharias: for thy prayer is heard, Iona. 4. 1. It displeased Ionah exceedingly, and he was angry. 2. And Ionah prayed unto the Lord, and said, I pray thee, O Lord, was not this my saying, when I was yet in my country? therefore I prevented it to flie into Tarshish: for I knew that thou art a gracious God, and merciful; slow to anger, and of great kindnesse, and repentest thee of the evill, Rom. 8. 26. Gen. 19. 18. Lot said unto them, Doe not so, I pray you my lords, &c. Psal. 6. 1. O Lord, rebuke me not in thine anger, &c. verse 2, 3, 4, 5. Psal. 8. 9. Psal. 20. 5. Psal. 35. 9 18. 27. Psal. 16. 7.

Thankesgiving, is a calling upon Gods name, whereby we with joy and gladnesse of heart, doe praise God for his benefits either received, or promised. Psal. 45. 1. Mine heart will utter forth a good matter, I will intreat in my words of the King: my tongue is as the penne of a swift writer, Eph. 5. 20. Giving thanks always for all things unto God even the Father, in the name of our Lord Iesus Christ, Psal 36. 8. 9. How excellent is thy mercy, O God? therefore the children of men trust under the shadow of thy wings. They shall be satisfied with the fatnesse of thine house, and thou shalt give them drinke out of the rivers of thy pleasures, Col. 3. 16, 17.

CHAP. XLVI.

Of Christian Apologie, and Martyrdome.

THe profession of Christ in dangers, is either in word, or deed.

Profession in word, is Christian Apologie, or the confession of Christ, Rom. 10. 10 With the heart, man beleeveth unto righteousnesse: and with the mouth man confesseth to salvation, Psal 22. 22. I will declare thy name unto my brethren: in the midst of the congregation will I praise thee

Christian Apologie, is the profession of Christ in word, when as wee are ready with feare and meekenesse, to confesse the truth of Christian religion, so often as need requireth; and the glory of God is endangered, even before unbeleevers, especially if they be not past all hope of repentance. 1 Pet. 3. 15. Sanctifie the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready alwayes to give an answere to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you: 16. And that with meekenesse and reverence, having a good conscience, that when they speake evill of you as of evill doers, they may be ashamed, which blame your good conversation in Christ, Act. 7. the whole chapter. Steven there maketh an Apologie for himselfe, Mat. 7. 6. Give not that which is holy to dogs, nor cast your pearles before swine, lest they treade them under your feet, and turning againe all to rent you.

Profession, which is indeed, is called Martyrdome. Martyrdome is a part of Christian profession, when as a Christian man doth for the doctrine of faith, for justice, and for the salvation of his brethren, under-goe the punishment of death, imposed upon him by the adversaries of Christ Iesus, Mar. 6. 18. 27, 28. Iohn told Herod, It is not lawfull for thee to have thy brothers wife. And immediately the King sent the hangman, and gave him charge that his head should be brought: so he went and beheaded him in the prison. 2 Cor. 12 15. I will most gladly bestow, and be bestowed for your soules, though the more I love you, the lesse I am loved.

Notwithstanding, it is lawfull for Christians to flie in persecution if they find themselves not sufficiently resolved and strengthened by Gods Spirit to stand, Mat. 10. 23. When they persecute you in one city, flie into another. Verily I say unto you, ye shal not have finished all the cities of Israel, till the Son of man come, Ioh. 10. 39. Againe, they studied to apprehend him, but he escaped out of their hands, Act. 9. 30. When the brethren knew it, they brought him to Cesarea, & sent him forth to Tarsus, 1 Ki. 18. 13. Was it not told my Lord what I did, when Iesabel slue the Prophets of the Lord, how I hid an hundred men of the Lords Prophets, by fifties in a cave, and fed them with bread & water? Act. 20. 22. Now behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Ierusalem, and know not what things shall come unto me there.

CHAP. XLVII.

Of Edification, and Almes among the Faithfull.

THat profession of Christ, which concerneth his members, namely, the Saints and faithfull ones, is either Edification, or Almes.

Edification is every particular duty towards our brethren, whereby they are furthered either to grow up in Christ, or else are more surely united to him, Rom. 14. 19. Let us follow those things which concerne peace, and wherwith one may edifie another.

To edification, these things which follow appertaine:

I. To give good example, Matth. 5. 16. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorifie your Father which is in heaven, 1 Pet. 2. 12. Have your conversation honest among the Gentiles, that they which speake evill of you as of evill doers, may by your good workes which they shall see, glorifie God in the day of visitation.

II. To exhort, Heb. 3. 13. Exhort one another daily, while it is called to day, lest any of you bee hardened through the deceitfulnes of sin, Rom. 1. 12. That I might be stirred up together with you, through our mutuall faith, both yours and mine.

III. To comfort, 1 Thess. 5. 14. Comfort the feeble minded, beare with the weake, be patient towards all men, Iam. 5. 16. Acknowledge your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. 20. He that converteth a sinner from going astray out of his way, shall save a soule from death, and shall hide a multitude of sinnes, 1 Thess. 4. 18. Comfort your selves one another with these words.

IV. To admonish, Rom. 15, 14. I my selfe am perswaded of you, brethren, that ye also are full of goodnes, & filled with all knowledge: and are able to admonish one another, 1 Thess. 5. 14. We desire you brethren, admonish them that are unruly.

They shall observe an holy manner of admonition, who in the spirit of meeknesse, and as it were, guilty of the like infirmitie themselves, do admonish forthwith all their brethren of such faults, as they certainly know by them, and that out of Gods word, Gal. 6. 1. Brethren, if any man by occasion be fallen into any fault, ye, which are spirituall, restore such an one in the spirit of meeknes, considering thy selfe, lest thou also be tempted, Matt. 7. 5. Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beame out of thine own eie, and then shalt thou see to take the mote out of thy brothers eie, 2 Tim. 4. 2. Preach the word: be instant in season, and out of season: improve, rebuke, exhort, with all long suffering and doctrine, Mat. 18. 15. If thy brother trespasse against thee, goe and tell him his faults between thee and him alone: if he heare thee, thou hast won thy brother, Rom. 15. 14. 2 Tim. 4. 2. Levit. 19. 17. Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart, but thou shalt plainly rebuke thy neighbour, and suffer him not to sinne.

Reliefe peculiar to the godly among themselves, is a dutie, whereby the rich doe out of their plenty supply the wants of the poore, both according to their ability, and sometimes beyond their ability, 2 Cor. 8. 3. To their power (I beare record) yea, beyond their power they were willing, Act. 2. 44, 45. All that beleeved were in one place, and had all things common: and they sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every one had need.

CHAP. XLVIII.

Of the fourth degree of the declaration of Gods love: and of the estate of the Elect after this life.

THe fourth degree of the declaration of Gods love, is Glorification, Rom. 8. 30. Glorification, is the perfect transforming of the Saints into the image of the Son of God, Phil. 3. 21. Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himselfe, 1 Cor. 15. 44. It is sowne a naturall body, and it is raised a spirituall body: there is a naturall body, and there is a spirituall body. 45. As it is also written, The first man Adam was made a living soule: the last Adam was made a quickning spirit. 49. And as we have borne the image of the earthly, so shall wee beare the image of the heavenly, Psal. 17. 15. I will behold thy face in righteousnesse, and when I awake, I shall be satisfied with thine image.

The beginning of Glorification is in death, but it is not accomplished and made perfect before the last day of judgement.

The death of the Elect, is but a sleepe in Christ [a] whereby the body and soule is severed. The body, [b] that after corruption it may rise to greater glory: The soule, that it [c] being fully sanctified, may [d] immediately, after departure from the body, be transported into the kingdome of heaven, [a] 1 Cor. 15. 17. If Christ be not raised, they which are asleepe in Christ, are perished, Act. 7. 60. When he had thus spoken, hee slept, [b] 1 Cor. 15. 36. O foole, that which thou sowest is not quickned, except it die, [c] Rev. 21. 27 There shall enter into it none uncleane thing, neither whatsoever worketh abominations or lies: but they which are written in the Lambs book of life, Rom. 7. 25. I my selfe in my mind serve the law of God, but in my flesh the law of sinne, [d] Luk. 23. 32. Hee said to Iesus, Lord remember me when thou commest into thy kingdome. 34. Then Iesus said to him, This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise, Rev. 14. 13. Then I heard a voyce from heaven, saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead, which hereafter die in the Lord, Even so saith the Spirit: for they rest from their labours, and their workes follow them.

Against the feare of death, note these preservatives:

I. Death, it freeth the godly from the tyrany of Satan, ſinne, the world, the fleſh, and eternall damnation, yea, from infinite both perils and loſſes, and doth place us both ſafe and happy, under the ſhadow, as it were, of Chriſts wings.

II. Chriſt by his death, hath ſanctified unto us both death and the grave.

III. Chriſt is both in life and death, gaine to the godly. Phil. 1. 21.

IV. Thoſe conſolations which the ſpirit of Chriſt doth ſuggeſt to the ſoules of the faithfull, doe by many degrees ſurmount the dolours of death.

V. The deſire of that moſt bright and glorious beholding of God, and the preſence of thoſe Saints which are departed before us.

VI. In ſtead of our bodies, wee ſhall bee clothed with glory, 2 Cor. 5. 1.

VII. The ſting of death, namely ſinne, is then ſo taken away, as that that Serpent can no more hurt us, 1 Cor. 15. 55. O death, where is thy ſting! O grave, where is thy victory! Hebr. 2. 15. That he might deliver all them, which for feare of death, were all their life-time ſubject to bondage.

VIII. We ſhould not ſo much thinke of our death, as to take an exact account of our life. For that man cannot die ill, who hath lived well: and he ſeldome dieth well, that hath lived badly.

IX. The angels they ſtand at our elbowes, that ſo ſoone as a Saint departeth, they may with all ſpeed, immediately tranſport his ſoule into heaven.

Soules being once in heaven, remaine there till the laſt day of judgment, where they partly magnifie the name of God, and partly doe waite, and pray for the conſummation of the kingdome of glory*, and full felicity in body and ſoule, Revel. 3. 8. And when he had taken the book, the foure beaſts, and the foure and twenty elders fell downe before the Lambe, having every one harpes, and golden viols full of odours, which are the prayers of the Saints. 9. And they ſung a new ſong, ſaying, Thou art worthy to take the booke, and to open the ſeales thereof, becauſe thou waſt killed, and haſt redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kinred, and tongue, and people and nation, Revel. 14. 2. I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harpes. 3. And they ſung as it were, a new ſong before the thron, Revel. 6. 10. And they cryed with a loud voyce, ſaying, How long, Lord holy and true; doeſt not thou judge, and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

CHAP. XLIX.

Of the eſtate of the Elect at the laſt day of judgement.

THe laſt day of judgement ſhall be on this manner:

I. Immediately before the comming of Chriſt, [a] the powers of heaven ſhall be ſhaken: the Sunne and Moone ſhall be darkened, and the Starres ſhall ſeeme to fall from heaven: [b] at which ſight the Elect then living ſhall rejoyce, but the reprobate ſhall ſhake every joynt of them, [a] Mat. 24. 29, Immediately after the tribulation of thoſe dayes ſhall the Sunne bee darkened, and the Moone ſhall not give her light, the Starres ſhall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven ſhall be ſhaken: 30. And then ſhall appeare the ſigne of the Sonne of man in heaven: and then ſhall all the kinreds of the earth mourn, and they ſhall ſee the Sonne of man come in the cloudes of heaven, with power and great glory. [b] Luke 21. 26. Mens hearts ſhall faile them for feare, and for looking after thoſe things which ſhall come on the world. 28. And when theſe things begin to come to paſſe, then looke up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth neere, 2 Tim. 4. 8. Henceforth is laid up for me a Crowne of righteouſneſſe, which the Lord, the righteous judge ſhall give me at that day; and not to me onely, but unto them that love his appearing.

II. Then the heavens, being all ſet on fire, ſhall with a noiſe like to that of chariot-wheels, ſuddenly paſſe away, and the elements, with the earth, and all therein ſhall be diſſolved with fire, 2 Pet. 3. 12. Looking for, and haſting unto the comming of the day of God, by which the heavens being ſet on fire, ſhall be diſſolved, and the Elements ſhall melt with heat. 13. But we looke for new heavens, and a new earth, according to his promiſe, wherein dwelleth all righteouſneſſe.

At the ſame time, when as all theſe things ſhall come to paſſe, [a] the ſound of the laſt Trumpet ſhall be heard, ſounded by the Archangel [b] and Chriſt ſhall come ſuddenly in the clouds, with power, and glory, and a great traine of angels, [a] Mat. 24. 31. And he ſhal ſend his Angels with a great ſound of a trumpet, 1 Theſ. 4. 16. The Lord himſelfe ſhal deſcend from heaven with a ſhout, even with the voyce of the Archangel, and with the Trumpet of God: and the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt, [b] Matth. 24. 30. 1 Theſſ. 4. 17. Then ſhall we which live and remain, be caught up with them alſo in the clouds to meet the Lord in the ayre, and ſo ſhall we ever be with the Lord.

III. Now at the ſound of the Trumpet, the Elect which were dead, ſhall riſe with thoſe very bodies which were turned to duſt, and one part rent from another, ſhall by the omnipotent power of God, bee reſtored, and the ſoules of them ſhall deſcend from heaven, and bee brought againe into thoſe bodies. As for [a] them which then ſhall be alive, they ſhall be changed in the twinckling of an eye, and this Mutation ſhall be in ſtead of death. And at that time, the bodies ſhall receive their full redemption; [b] and all the bodies of the Elect ſhall be made like the glorious bodie of Chriſt Ieſus, and therefore ſhall be ſpirituall, immortall, glorious, and free from all infirmitie, [a] 1 Cor. 15. 51, 52. Wee ſhall not all ſleepe, but we ſhal be changed, in a moment, in the twinckling of an eye, at the laſt Trumpet. 43. [b] It is ſown in diſhonor, it is raiſed in honor: it is ſown in weakneſſe, it is raiſed in power. 44. It is ſowne a naturall body, it is raiſed a ſpirituall bodie.

IV. Laſt of all, when they are all convented before the tribunall ſeat of Chriſt, he will forthwith place the elect, ſevered from the reprobate, and taken up into the ayre, at his right hand, and to them being written in the booke of life, will he pronounce this ſentence: Come ye bleſſed of my Father, poſſeſſe the kingdome prepared for you from the foundations of the world, Mat. 25. 33. He ſhall ſet the ſheepe on his right hand, and the goats on the left, 1 Theſſ. 4. 17. Rev. 20. 15. Whoſoever was not found written in the booke of life, was caſt into the lake of fire.

CHAP. L.

Of the eſtate of the Elect after judgement.

THe laſt judgement being once finiſhed, the elect ſhall enjoy immediately bleſſednesſe in the kingdome of heaven.

Bleſſednesſe is that, whereby God himſelfe is all into all his elect, 1 Cor. 15. 28. When all things ſhall be ſubdued to him, then ſhall the Son alſo himſelfe be ſubject unto him, that did ſubdue all things under him, that God may be all in all. And it is the reward of good workes, not becauſe workes can merit, but by reaſon of Gods favour, who thus accepteth workes, and that in reſpect of the merit of Chriſts righteouſneſſe imputed to the elect, Rom. 6. 23. The wages of ſin is death, but eternall life is the gift of God through Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, 2 Tim. 4. 8. Rev. 22. 12. Behold, I come ſhortly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his worke ſhall be.

Bleſſednesſe hath two parts: Eternal life, and perfect glory.

Eternall life is that fellowſhip with God, [a] whereby God himſelfe is, through the Lamb Chriſt, life unto the elect. For in the Kingdome of heaven, the elect ſhall not need meat, drink, ſleepe, aire, heat, cold, phyſicke, apparell, or the light of the Sunne and Moone, [b] but in place of all theſe, ſhall they have in them Gods Spirit, by which immediately they ſhall be quickned for ever, [a] Iohn 14. 23. If any man love me, he will keepe my word, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and dwell with him, 1 Ioh. 4. 15. Whoſoever confeſſeth that Ieſus Chriſt is the Sonne of God, God dwels in him, and he in God, Rev. 21. 3. And I heard a voyce, ſaying, Behold, the Tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them: and they ſhall be his people, and God himſelfe ſhall be their God with them. 23. And that Citie hath no need of Sunne or Moone to ſhine in it: for the glory of God did light it, and the Lambe is the light of it, Rev. 22. 2. In the middeſt of the ſtreet of it, and of either ſide of the river, was the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and gave fruit every moneth: and the leaves of the tree ſerved to heale the nations with. 5. And there ſhall be no night there, and they need no candle, nor the light of the Sunne, for the Lord giveth them light, and they ſhall raigne for evermore, [b] 1 Cor. 15. 4. Rom. chapt. 8. verſe 11. If the ſpirit of him that raiſed up Ieſus from the dead, dwell in you; he that raiſed up Chriſt from the dead, ſhall alſo quicken your mortall bodies, becauſe that his ſpirit dwelleth in you.

Perfect glory, is that wonderfull excellency of the Elect, whereby they ſhall be in a farre better eſtate then any heart can wiſh. This glory conſiſteth in three points. I. In that they ſhall ſtill behold the face of God, which is his glory and majeſtie, Re. 22. And they ſhal ſee his face, and his name ſhall be in their foreheads, Pſa. 17. 15. I will behold thy face in righteouſnes, and when I awake I ſhalbe ſatisfied with thine image. II. In that they ſhall be moſt like to Chriſt, namely, juſt, holy, incorruptible, glorious, honourable, excellent, beautifull, ſtrong, mighty, and nimble, 1 Ioh. 3. 2. Dearely beloved, now are we the ſonnes of God, but yet it doth not appeare what we ſhall be: and we know that when he ſhall appeare, we ſhall be like him, for we ſhall ſee him as he is, Phil. 3 21. Who ſhall change our vile body, that it may be faſhioned like to his glorious body, according to the working whereby hee is able even to ſubdue all things to himſelfe. III. They ſhall inherit the kingdome of heaven, yea, the new heavens and the new earth ſhall bee their inheritance, 1 Pet. 1. 4. God hath begotten you to an inheritance immortall and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reſerved in heaven for you, Mat. 25. 34. Then ſhall the King ſay to them on the right hand, Come ye bleſſed of my Father, poſſeſſe that kingdome prepared for you before the foundations of the world were laid, Rev. 5. 10. Thou haſt made us unto our God Kings and Prieſts, and we ſhall raigne on the earth, Rev. 21. 7. He that overcommeth ſhall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he ſhall be my ſonne.

The fruit that commeth from both theſe parts of bleſſednesſe, is of two ſorts: Eternall joy, and the perfect ſervice of God, Pſa. 16. 11. Thou wilt ſhew me the path of life, in thy preſence is the fulneſſe of joy: and at thy right hand there are pleaſures for evermore, Pſal. 36. 8. They ſhall be ſatisfied with the fatneſſe of thine houſe, and thou ſhalt give them drinke out of the river of thy pleaſures. 9. For with thee is the well of life, and in thy light ſhall we ſee light.

The parts of Gods ſervice, are praiſe, and Thankſgiving, Revel. 21. 13. And I heard a great voyce out of heaven, ſaying, Behold, the Tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them: and they ſhall be his people, and God himſelfe ſhall be their God with them. Cap. 5. 12 Saying with a loud voyce, Worthy is the Lambe that was killed, to receive power, and riches, and wiſdome, and ſtrength, and honour, and glory, and praiſe, &c. 13. Cap. 11. 17 The foure and twenty Elders which ſate before God on their ſeats, fell upon their faces and worſhipped God, ſaying, Wee give thee thankes, Lord God almighty, Which art and Which waſt, and Which art to come: for thou haſt received thy great might, and haſt obtained thy kingdome.

The manner of performing this ſervice, is to worſhip God by himſelfe immediately. In heaven there ſhall neither bee temple, ceremonie, nor Sacrament, but all theſe wants ſhall God himſelfe ſupply together with the Lambe, that is, Chriſt, Revel. 21. 22. I ſaw no Temple therein, for the Lord God Almighty, and the Lambe, are the Temple of it.

CHAP. LI.

CONCERNING THE ORDER of the cauſes of Salvation, according to the doctrine of the Church of Rome.

THere are two things requiſite to obtaine ſalvation: Predeſtination, and the Execution thereof.

Predeſtination, is a fore-ordaining of the reaſonable creature to grace in this life, and glory in the life to come. Sebaſtian. Cattaneus. Enchir. tract. 1. cap. laſt.

This, in regard of the firſt effects thereof, which are vocation, election, and ordination to eternall life, hath the cauſe of it in God, namely, his will: but in regard of the laſt effect, which is the execution of ſuch an ordinance, and the obtaining of eternall life, it hath the cauſe of it in man; becauſe according to the common opinion, Gods predeſtination is by reaſon of workes fore-ſeene in men, that is, God doth therefore predeſtinate or reject ſome man, becauſe he fore-ſeeth that he will well or badly uſe his grace. But for the more evident declaration of this, theſe ſeven concluſions muſt be ſet downe.

I. That Predeſtination, and Reprobation of God doe not conſtraine or enforce any neceſſitie upon the will of man.

II. God hath predeſtinated all men, that is, he hath appointed and diſpoſed all men ſo, as they might obtaine eternall ſalvation.

III. Man is neither by neceſſitie nor chance ſaved or condemned but voluntarily.

IV. God hath predeſtinated ſome, other hath he rejected.

V. Thoſe whom God hath predeſtinated by his abſolute predeſtination, which cannot be loſt, ſhall infallibly die in grace: but they which are predeſtinate, by that predeſtination which being according to preſent juſtice, may be loſt by ſome mortall ſinne which followes, are not infallibly ſaved, but oftentimes ſuch are condemned, and loſe their crownes & glory. Hence ariſeth that poſition of theirs, that he which is juſtified may be a Reprobate, and periſh eternally. Torrenſis, Aug. Confeſſ. 2. booke 4. chap. 20. Sect. Therefore predeſtination is not certaine, ſeeing it may be loſt.

VI. God alone doth know the certain and ſet number of them which are predeſtinate.

VII. There is one ſet number of them which are predeſtinate, or rejected, and that can neither be increaſed nor diminiſhed.

The execution of predeſtination, is either in infants, or thoſe of yeares of diſcretion.

Concerning Infants, the merit of Chriſt is applied unto them by baptiſme rightly adminiſtred: ſo that whatſoever in originall corruption may truly and properly be accounted for ſinne, is not onely, as I may ſay, not pared away, or not imputed, but utterly taken away. For there is nothing that God can hate in ſuch as are renued. Concil. Trid. 5. ſect. 5. Can.

Nevertheleſſe we muſt confeſſe, that there remaineth yet in ſuch as are baptized, concupiſcence, or the relikes of ſin. The which ſeeing it is left in men to wraſtle withall, it hath no power to hurt but ſuch as yeeld unto it.

The execution of Predeſtination in ſuch as are of riper yeeres, hath ſixe degrees.

The firſt, is Vocation, whereby men, not for their owne merits, but by Gods preventing grace through Chriſt, are called to turne themſelves unto God.

The ſecond, is a Preparation to righteouſneſſe, wherby men, through the inherent power of Free-will, do apply themſelves to juſtification, after that the ſame power is ſtirred up by the holy Ghoſt. For Free-will is onely ſomewhat diminiſhed, and not extinguiſhed: and therefore ſo ſoone as the holy Ghoſt toucheth and enlighteneth the heart, it worketh together with the ſame ſpirit, freely aſſenting unto the ſame. This Preparation hath ſeven degrees. Biel. 4. booke 13. diſt. 2. queſt.

The firſt is faith, which is a knowledge and an aſſent, whereby men agree that thoſe things are true which are delivered concerning God and his will, revealed in the word of God.

This is the foundation of juſtification, & prepareth the heart: becauſe it ſtirs up free-will, that it may affect the heart with thoſe motions by which it is prepared to juſtification.

I. The act of faith, is to apprehend the ugline ſſe of ſinne, and the wages thereof.

II. After this, followeth a feare of Gods anger, and of hell fire.

III. Then begin men to diſlike, and in ſome ſort to deteſt ſinne.

And herein ſtands the diſpoſition of Congruity, not immediately, nor ſufficient, but far removed.

IV. At the length, faith turneth it ſelfe to the contemplation of Gods mercies, and beleeveth that God is ready to forgive ſinnes, by the infuſion of charity into thoſe, which are before ſufficiently prepared and diſpoſed.

V. Out of this contemplation proceedeth the act of hope, whereby they begin to deſire God, as the chiefeſt good.

VI. Out of this act of hope ariſeth love, whereby God is loved above all things, by the ſtrength of nature.

VII. After this love, followeth a new diſlike, and a deteſtation of ſinne, not ſo much in regard of feare of the puniſhment in hell fire, as in regard of the offence to God, who is finally loved more then all other things.

VIII. After all theſe, followes a purpoſe of amendment of life: and here comes in the meaſure of congruity, that is, ſufficient: or elſe the immediate, ſufficient, and laſt diſpoſition before the infuſion of grace.

The third degree of Predeſtination, is the firſt juſtification, whereby men of unjuſt, are made juſt, not onely through the remiſſion of their ſinnes, but alſo by a ſanctification of the inward man, by his voluntary receiving of grace and gifts.

The efficient cauſe of this juſtification, is the mercy of God, and the meritorious paſſion of our Saviour Chriſt, whereby he purchaſed juſtification for men. The inſtrumentall cauſe, is baptiſme. The formall cauſe, is not that juſtice which was inherent in Chsiſt, but which hee infuſeth into man: and that is eſpecially hope, and charity.

The fourth degree, is the ſecond juſtification, whereby men are of juſt, made more juſt: the cauſe hereof is faith, joined with good works.

It is poſſible for ſuch as are renued, to keep the commandements: and therefore it is falſe, that a juſt man committeth ſo much as a veniall ſinne in his beſt actions, much leſſe, that he deſerveth eternall death for the ſame.

The fifth degree, is the reparation of a ſinner by the Sacrament of Pennance. The which is, as it were, the ſecond boord after a ſhipwracke. The cauſe why this reparation is neceſſary, is, becauſe men loſe the grace of juſtification by every mortall ſinne.

The laſt degree, is the fruit of juſtification, namely, the glory of eternall life, the which workes done in grace, doe ex condigno, condignely merit, or by ſufficient worthineſſe.

Condigne merit, is when as the reward is after ſuch ſort due, as that if it bee not given, injuſtice will be committed: This by the rigour of juſtice is due.

Two conditions are requiſite to make a merit, I. That a reward ſhould by ſome compact or bargaine be due: And this condition is in works, in regard of God. For God in the ſcriptures hath promiſed a reward to ſuch as work well. II. That beſides this compact whereby the debtor is bound, there ſheuld be alſo ſome worthineſſe in the worke, or ſome proportion of the worke to the reward.

The worthines or dignity of the worke, dependeth. I. On Chriſt, becauſe Chriſt did not only merit that his own proper actions ſhould be meritorious, but the actions alſo of his members. II. On the holy Ghoſt. For the holy Ghoſt doth conſpire, excite, and move men to doe. III. On an habituall grace, which is a certaine participation of the divine eſſence.

Thus much concerning the degrees of executing Predeſtination. Now followes the applying of Predeſtination particularly to the perſons of men.

No man, ſo long as he liveth in this mortall life, ought ſo much to preſume on the ſecret myſtery of Gods predeſtination, as to determine undoubtedly that hee is in the number of them whom God hath ordained to eternall happineſſe. For no man without eſpeciall revelation can know, whom God hath choſen to be his heires. Sect. 6. c. 12.

The ſumme all theſe, is this: God by a certaine grace given freely, or rather a grace preventing, or comming before, the which is tearmed an eſpeciall aide, doth moove a man, that he may diſpoſe himſelfe unto his juſtifying grace, namely, that he may beleeve, feare, repent, love, and propound to himſelfe newneſſe of life, &c.

Furthermore, if a ſinner doe by his free will yeeld his aſſent unto this divine motion, and doth conſequently and accordingly rightly diſpoſe himſelfe, God doth incontinently forgive him his ſinnes, and withall doth infuſe into him juſtifying grace, by which hee may doe good workes, and ſo by them merit eternall life. Bellarm.

Errours of the Papiſts in their diſtributing of the cauſes of ſalvation.

And this is the doctrine of the Church of Rome; ſurely a very blaſphemous doctrine, and no better to be accounted of, then as a gallowes ſet up for the torture and maſſacre of mens conſciences. And that this may the more manifeſtly appeare to be ſo, I will ſet downe the moſt principall errours of Popiſh doctrine in this caſe.

The I. errour.

Predeſtination is onely of the Elect, the Reprobates they are onely fore-knowne.

The Confutation.

The name of Predeſtination, by a figure called Synecdoche, the whole for the part, is taken indeed ſometimes in the good part, and ſpoken of the Elect and faithfull called, as Rom. 8. 30. Whom he predeſtinated, them alſo he called, and whom he called, them alſo hee juſtified, and whom he juſtified, them alſo he glorified. So are the Epheſians ſaid to be predeſtinate into the adoption of the ſons of God, Eph. 1. 5. Yet may this word Predeſtination, nevertheleſſe generally be extended unto the decree of God, whether it be that of predeſtination to eternall life, or the other unto eternall death. The reaſons. I. Act. 4. 27, 28. They gathered themſelves together againſt thine holy Son Ieſus to doe whatſoever thine hand and thy counſell had determined (or fore-ordained, or predeſtinated, προώρισεν) before to be done. II. Auguſt. de Bono perſev. Chap. 17. he calleth Predeſtination the diſpoſition of future workes: and in his 15. booke of the City of God, chap. 1. he divideth all mankind into two Cities: whereof one is predeſtinate to reigne with God eternally, the other predeſtinate to undergoe eternall puniſhment with the divell. And in his Manuel to Laurentius, chap. 100. he ſaith, That God hath juſtly predeſtinated wicked men unto puniſhment, and mercifully predeſtinated the good unto grace. Thomas of Aquine 1. part. queſt. 23. artic. 4. It mattereth not in regard of the name of predeſtination, whether a man be ſaid to be predeſtinate to life eternall or not

Furthermore, for a man to ſay that the Reprobates are fore-knowne, and not predeſtinate; is very injurious: becauſe Gods foreknowledge, may in nothing which is to be, be ſevered from his will and eternall decree. For that, which being hereafter to bee, is foreknowne of God, that aſſuredly will come to paſſe, and ſhall be, and that either by the will of God, or without his will: if with his will, then no doubt, he both decreed and preordained the ſame: if without or againſt his will, how is God then omnipotent? And ſurely evill it ſelfe, albeit God wils it not in his approving or allowing will: yet willeth he the free, and willing permiſſion therof. Auguſt. in his Manuel or Enchiridon to Laurentius, cha. 110. hath an excellent ſaying to this purpoſe. Although (ſaith he) that thoſe things which are evill, in that they are evill, cannot be good, yet that there are not onely good, but alſo evill things, it is very good: to the intent that after a marveilous & unſpeakable manner, that thing may not bee beſides, or without his will, which alſo is done againſt his will, becauſe it ſhould not be done, unleſſe he ſuffred it, neither doth he ſuffer it againſt his wil, but willingly.

The II. Errour.

That Predeſtination is mutable. For, (according to the common opinion of the Papiſts) whoſoever is predeſtinate, he is contingently predeſtinate as wel on Gods part, as on mans: whence it followeth, that he which is predeſtinated, that is appointed to ſalvation, may be condemned: & he which is foreknown that is, appointed to damnation, may be ſaved.

The Confutation.

The contrary to this their doctrine is moſt true. Namely, that the decree of God concerning every mans eternall both ſalvation and damnation, is from all eternity ſet downe, and immutable. The reaſons: I. Teſtimonies of Scripture. Rom. 11. 26. The gifts and calling of God they are ἀμεταμέλητα, ſuch as are without repentance. Matth. 24. 22. There ſhall ariſe falſe Chriſts, and falſe Prophets: and ſhall doe great ſignes and miracles, ſo that [if it were poſſible] they ſhould deceive even the elect. Rom. 8. 33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods choſen? it is God that juſtifieth, who ſhall condemne. 2 Tim. 2. 19. The foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, and hath this ſeale, The Lord knoweth who are his. II. Election and reprobation are in God, not in men: now there can be nothing in God which is not immutable. Mal. 3 6. I Iehovah am not changed, Iſai. 64. 10. My counſell ſhall ſtand, and I will do whatſoever I will. III. If this Popiſh concluſion ſhould bee granted, then would it follow of neceſſity, that the foreknowledge of God muſt be made voide, his power weakned, and his will changed; each of which is impious once to dreame of. For he which changeth his counſell, or his will, doth therefore change it, either becauſe he at the length ſeeth that he might have taken better adviſe. or elſe in that he ſeeth that hee could not bring his former purpoſe about as he would: Either of which are farre from our Lord God. IV. If we reſolve that the counſell of God is any wayes mutable, it wil by this come to paſſe, that every man muſt bee uncertaine whether he be predeſtinate to life or not: whereby that notable ſtay and onely ground of our full aſſurance to be ſaved, is utterly ſhaken and overturned. Wherefore let this truth bee maintained of us, namely, that both the election and reprobation of God ſtand immutable, ſo that neither the elect can become reprobates, nor the reprobates elect; and conſequently neither theſe be ſaved, nor they condemned.

Againſt this doctrine, the popiſh ſort except. If you ſpeake in a compound ſenſe or meaning (in ſenſu compoſito) it is very true, that the predeſtinate cannot be damned, nor ſuch as are foreknowne be ſaved: but if in a ſenſe divided (in ſenſu diviſo) it is not ſo. This diſtinction is plaine by this example. White colour in a compound meaning cannot be blacke, becauſe blackneſſe is repugnant and contrary to whiteneſſe: But in a divided ſenſe, white colour now may afterwards be made blacke. In like ſort, one predeſtinated to ſalvation may, by reaſon of the free-will he hath, ſinne, and ſo be damned. Anſw. Theſe are ſilly ſhifts, and meere ſophiſmes, becauſe ſuch as are predeſtinated to the end, namely, ſalvation, are neceſſarily predeſtinated to the meanes of ſalvation, the which they cannot but uſe, and by them come to the end it ſelfe.

The III. Errour.

All men are predeſtinate, that is, diſpoſed and ordained of God, ſo as they might attaine eternall life. Sebaſt. Cattenius in his Enchirid. chap. of Predeſt.

The Confutation.

This is manifestly false. For, I. infants who so soone as they are borne, depart this life, seeing for want of time they cannot in this life use the meanes of salvation, albeit they may have life eternall, yet obtaine they it not by using the meanes unto the same. II. That which the Lord indeed actually doth, the very same hath he determined to doe. For hee doth nothing neither unadvisedly, or unwillingly: but he actually forsaketh a very great part of mankind, the which being shut up under contumacy, he doth leave to it selfe. Act. 14.16. who in times past suffered all the Gentiles to walke in their owne wayes. Hence also is it, that Eph.2.12. all the Gentiles are said to bee ἄθεοι, without God in the world. Therefore God decreed to forsake some men in this life, and consequently he ordained not all men to the obtaining of eternall life. Nay if God once but would in his secret will, that all men should be saved, it were unpossible for any to perish: because Gods willing, is his doing of it: and if he that was ordained to salvation perish, then must God now needs have left off to will that, which he would from all eternity, or else begin to will that, which before he would not; the which cannot bee said of God, without blasphemy. III. Paul, 2 The.2.10. saith, that there be certaine men, ἀπολλυμενοι, which perish, and them he distinguisheth from the elect. v. 13. Rom.9.21,22. Hath not the potter power, &c. where there is not onely mention made of vessels of glory, and mercy, but also of certaine, made, and fashioned in Gods eternall counsell, as vessels of wrath. Now looke whom God hath made to wrath and destruction, them he never disposed to obtaine eternall life.

The IV. Errour.

Predestination, in regard of the last effects thereof, hath his cause in man, that is, in mans freewill, and workes: for they whom God had foreseene, that they would receive grace offered in Christ, and leade their life according to the Law, them he predestinated, not of workes, but of his mercy; yet so, as that he had respect unto workes, or to deale with them according to their workes: or (as others say) to ordaine them by their workes foreseene. As for example: God did from all eternity foresee and foreknow that Peter should be saved, and Iudas condemned; because he from the same eternity did foresee and foreknow, that Peter would accept of the grace offered unto him, and after use the same aright: and he did also foresee that Iudas should receive the grace offered, yet notwithstanding by reason of his perverse will, use the same perversly.

The Confutation.

This their forged device of fore-seene workes, I. Paul doth shew to bee plainely counterfeit, when as he saith that the Ephesians were elected in Christ before the foundations of the world were laid, Eph.1.3. and that not because he did foresee that they would be holy, but that they might be holy and unblameable before God with love. And c.2. v.10. he saith, they were created to good workes in Christ, that they might walke therein. In which places, good workes they are made effects of predestination; but the effect foreseene cannot bee the cause of his cause: for that every cause, in the order both of nature and knowledge, doth goe before his effect. II. Tit.3.5. Not of workes which we have done, but according to his mercy did God elect and save us. III. God in electing us, did not regard any thing out of himselfe, but in himselfe did he elect us, Eph.1.4. and 9. Therefore did hee not regard future workes. IV. Some of the Popish schoolemen confesse, that Predestination, doth put nothing in the party predestinated, in respect of him, for which God did predestinate him. Tho.1. prima. quæst.13. art.2. V. Election is onely of Gods mercy. Rom.9.16. VI. God saw no grace in man, but that which he himselfe must bestow upon him: whence it is apparent, that in election the beginning thereof proceedeth from grace. VII. Seeing there is nothing either above God, or greater then God, it must needs bee impious to assigne any cause of his will, either out of, or above his majesty: and therefore that his fore-knowledge of faith and workes should bee accounted the impulsive cause of his decree, concerning mans salvation, we doe rightly deny.

The V. Errour.

By Baptisme rightly administred, not onely the guiltinesse, but also the corruption of originall sinne, is so washed away, as that it is not afterward properly accounted a sinne.

The Confutation.

We contrarily doe thus distinguish of sin. Sinne, in regard of the guiltinesse of Gods wrath, and also in regard of the punishment, together by one act is taken away in baptisme: but in regard of that errour and corruption of nature, it is not at the first quite taken away, but successively; and by little and little it is extinguished: even as our renovation wrought by the holy Ghost, is by little and little begun and increased in us. Reasons I. Paul would not so greatly bewaile his originall sinne, if after Baptisme it ceased any more to be sinne, I see, saith he, another law in my members, rebelling against the law of my mind, and leading me captive unto the law of sin which is in my members. O miserable man! who shall deliver me from this body of death? Rom.7.23.24. II. Originall sin, is called a sinne out of measure sinfull, Rom.7.13. And, Heb.12.1. a sinne that hangeth fast on, or, easily compasseth us about. III. Concupiscence is the roote of all actuall sinne: and therefore even after Baptisme it must properly bee a sin. IV. Vnlesse that concupiscence were a sinne, where would or could bee that vehement and hot combate betweene the flesh and the spirit? Gal.5.17.

The VI. Errour.

The Confutation.

Wee deny that Baptiſme is of abſolute neceſſity to ſalvation. Reaſons I. Sacraments doe not conferre grace, but rather confirme grace when God hath conferred the ſame. The children of faithfull parents are borne holy, not by naturall generation, but by the grace of God, and are not firſt made holy by baptiſme: and as for ſuch as are of yeeres of diſcretion before they be baptized, they cannot bee baptized unleſſe they beleeve. Now all ſuch as beleeve, are both juſtified, and reconciled to God: and therefore albeit they without their owne default, are deprived of the Sacraments, it is unpoſſible for them to periſh. II. God did preciſely appoint circumciſion to bee on the eighth day, not on the firſt, or the ſecond: now there is no doubt, but that many infants, before the eighth day, were prevented of circumciſion by death, all which for a man peremptorily to ſet downe as condemned, were very abſurd. III. If circumciſion were of ſuch abſolute great neceſſity, why was it for the ſpace of fourty yeares in the deſart intermitted? and that onely becauſe the Iſraelites being often in journey, ſuch as were circumciſed were by it in jeopardy of death: no doubt Moſes and Aaron would never have omitted this Sacrament ſo long, if it had beene abſolutely neceſſary to ſalvation. IV. This doctrine of the abſolute neceſſity of Baptiſme, was unknowne to the ancient Fathers. For the primitive Church did tolerate very Godly men (though wee allow not their fact) that they ſhould defer their baptiſme many yeares, yea often to the time of their death. Hence was it, that Conſtantine the great was not baptized till a little before his death: and Valentinian by reaſon of his delay, was not at all baptized: whom notwithſtanding Ambroſe pronounceth to be in heaven. And Bernard in his 77. epiſt. diſputeth, that not every deprivation of baptiſme, but the contempt or palpable negligence is damnable.

The VII. Errour.

Man after the fall of Adam hath free-will as well to doe that which is good, as that which is evill; although it be in a divers manner, that is, he hath free will to doe evill ſimply, and without any externall ayde; but to doe well, none at all, but by the grace of God preventing, or guiding us: the which grace notwithſtanding every man hath, and to the which grace it is in our free-will either to conſent and together worke with the ſame, or not. And therefore the power of free-will to doe that which is good and acceptable to God, is onely attenuated and weakned before converſion, not quite taken away, and therefore man can of himſelfe worke a preparation to juſtification.

The Confutation.

Man not regenerated, hath free-will to doe onely that which is evill, none to doe good. Hee being not already converted cannot ſo much as will to have faith, and be converted. Reaſons. I. Man is not ſaid to be weake or ſicke, but dead in ſinnes. Eph. 2. 1. Col 1 13. As he therefore that is corporally dead cannot ſtirre up himſelfe, that hee may performe the works of the living, no not then when others helpe him, ſo he that is ſpiritually dead, cannot moove himſelfe to live unto God. II. He is the ſervant of Satan, and bondſlave of ſin Eph. 2. 2. Rom. 6. 13. Now we know, that a ſervant ſtandeth at the becke and pleaſure of another, and can doe nothing elſe. III. That which no man can by himſelfe know and beleeve, the ſame hee cannot will: but no man can know and beleeve thoſe things that appertaine to the kingdome of God. 1 Cor. 2. 14. The naturall man perceiveth not the things of the ſpirit of God. 2 Cor. 3, 5. We are not ſufficient of our ſelves, to thinke any thing as of our ſelves. Therefore no man can will by himſelfe, thoſe things that appertaine to Gods kingdome. IV. That which is a deadly enemy to goodneſſe, and is directly repugnant thereunto, the ſame deſireth not that which is good; but the will is an enemy, and directly repugnant unto goodnes. Rom 8. 7. The wiſedome of the fleſh is hatred againſt God: for it is not ſubject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.

Object. I. The Word is neere unto thee in thine heart, and in thy mouth, that thou mayeſt doe the ſame. Deut. 30. 14. Anſ. It is not eaſie to performe the law legally, but Evangellically. Now this is done, when as any man doth fulfill the law by a Mediatour, and from him receiving the Spirit of God, doth endeavour to performe new obedience.

Object. II. God giveth many precepts by which wee are commanded to repent, beleeve, obey God, &c. Therefore to doe theſe, we have free-will. Anſ. Such places doe admoniſh us, not of our ſtrength, but of our duty and infirmity: neither doe they ſhew what men can doe, but what men ſhould doe. II. They are inſtruments of the holy Ghoſt, whereby hee doth renue and convert ſuch as ſhall be ſaved. They object againe. God in commanding theſe, doth not require things impoſſible. Anſw. He doth not indeed to men in their innocency, but now to all ſuch as fell in Adam hee doth, and that by their owne default, not Gods.

Object. III. Phil. 2. 12. Worke out your ſalvation with feare and trembling. Anſ. Paul ſpeaketh of ſuch as are already converted, which have their will in part freed.

Object. IV. If the will be a meere patient, it is conſtrained to doe that which is good. Anſ. The will both in it ſelfe, and of it ſelfe, is a meere patient in her firſt converſion unto God; but if it be conſidered as it is mooved by the Spirit of God, it is an agent. For, being mooved, it moveth It is not therefore compelled, but of a nilling will, is made a willing will.

The VIII. Errour.

The holy Ghoſt doth not give grace to will, but onely doth unlooſe the will which before was chained, and alſo doth excite the ſame: ſo that the will by her owne power, doth diſpoſe her ſelfe to juſtification.

The Confutation.

It is apparently falſe. To will thoſe things which concerne the Kingdome of God, as faith, converſion, and new obedience, is the meere gift of Gods ſpirit. Mat.11.27. No man knoweth the Father but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveale him. Luk.8.10. To you it is given to know the myſteries of the Kingdome of God. Phil.2.13. It is God which worketh in you to will and to doe. 1 Cor.12.3. No man can ſay that Ieſus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghoſt. Briefly, he who according to God is to bee created in righteouſnes and holineſſe, Eph.4.24. cannot any wayes diſpoſe himſelfe to juſtification, or new creation. For it is impoſſible that a thing not created, ſhould diſpoſe it ſelfe to his creation.

The IX. Errour.

That preparation to grace, which is cauſed by the power of free-will, may by the merit of congruity deſerve juſtification.

The Confutation.

Theſe things ſmell of more then Satanicall arrogancy. For what man, but ſuch an one, as were not in his right mind, would beleeve, that hee, unto whom ſo many millions of condemnations are due, could once merit the leaſt dramme of grace? The prodigall ſonne was not received into favour by reaſon of his deſerts, but by favour. Luk.15.21. His ſonne ſaid unto him, I have ſinned againſt heaven, and againſt thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy ſonne.

The X. Errour.

The faith of the godly, or that which juſtifieth, is that whereby a man doth in generall beleeve the promiſed bleſſednesſe of God, and by which alſo he giveth his aſſent to other myſteries revealed of God concerning the ſame.

The Confutation.

Faith is not onely a generall knowledge, and aſſent to the hiſtory of the Goſpel, but further alſo a certaine power, both apprehending and ſeverally applying the promiſes of God in Chriſt, whereby a man doth aſſuredly ſet downe that his ſinnes are forgiven him, and that he is reconciled unto God. Reaſons I. A particular aſſurance of the favour of God, is of the nature of faith. Eph.3.10. By whom we have boldneſſe, and entrance with confidence, by faith in him. Rom.4.20. Neither did he doubt of the promiſe of God through unbeliefe, but was ſtrengthned in the faith, and gave glory unto God, 21. Being fully aſſured that he which had promiſed, was alſo able to doe it. Heb.10.22. Let us draw neere with a true heart in aſſurance of faith. II. Particular doubting is reprehended. Mat. 14.31. O thou of little faith, why didſt thou doubt? Luk 12.29. Hang ye not in ſuſpence. III. That which a man prayeth for to God, that muſt he aſſuredly beleeve to receive. Mark.11.24. But the faithfull in their prayers make requeſt for adoption, juſtification, and life eternall: and therefore they muſt certainely beleeve that they ſhall receive theſe benefits. IV. Rom.5. 1. We being therefore juſtified, have peace with God. But there can bee no peace, where there is not a particular aſſurance of Gods favour. V. That which the Spirit of God doth teſtifie particularly, that muſt alſo be beleeved particularly: But the Spirit of God doth give a particular teſtimony of the adoption of the faithfull, Rom.8.16. Gal.4.6. This therefore is in like ſort to be beleeved.

Whereas they ſay, that no man hath a particular aſſurance, but by ſpeciall revelation, as was that which Abraham and Paul had; is falſe. For the faith of theſe two is ſet downe in Scripture, as an example which we ſhould all follow. For this cauſe Abraham is called the Father of the faithfull, Rom.8.11. and Paul teſtifieth the very ſame of himſelfe, 1 Tim.1. 16. For this cauſe (ſaith he) was I received to mercy, that Ieſus Chriſt ſhould firſt ſhew on mee all long ſuffering, unto the example of them, which ſhall in time to come beleeve in him unto eternall life. Againe, whereas they ſay, that we have a morall aſſurance, but not the aſſurance of faith, it is a popiſh device. For, Rom.8.16. The ſpirit of adoption (συμμαρτυρεῖ) together beareth witneſſe to our ſpirits. Where we ſee two witneſſes of our adoption, our owne ſpirit, and the Spirit of God. Our ſpirit doth teſtifie morally of our adoption, by ſanctification, and the fruits thereof: and therefore alſo the Spirit of God witneſſeth after another manner, namely, by the certainty of faith, declaring and applying the promiſes of God.

Obj. I. We are commanded to worke out our ſalvation with feare and trembling. Anſ. This feare is not in regard of Gods mercy forgiving our ſinnes, but in reſpect of us, and our nature, which is ever prone to ſlide away, and ſtart from God.

Object. II. In reſpect of Gods mercy, wee muſt hope for ſalvation: but in reſpect of our unworthineſſe, we muſt doubt. Anſw. I. We may not lawfully doubt of Gods mercy, and becauſe doubtfulneſſe is not of the nature of faith, but rather a naturall corruption. II. If we conſider our owne unworthineſſe, it is out of all doubt, we muſt be out of all hope, and deſpaire of our ſalvation.

Object. III. There be many ſins unknowne unto us, and ſo alſo uncertaine whether they be pardoned unto us. Anſ. He that certainely and truely knoweth that but one ſinne is pardoned him, he hath before God all his ſins remitted, whether they be knowne or unknown.

Object. IV. No man dare ſweare, or dye in the defence of this propoſition: I am the child of God, or in Gods favour, and juſtified. Anſ. They which have an unfained faith, will, if they be lawfully called, not onely teſtifie their adoption by an oath, but ſeale it alſo by their blood.

Object. V. A man may have this faith which the Proteſtants talke of, and lye in a mortall ſinne, and have alſo a purpoſe to perſevere in a mortall ſinne. Anſ. It is farre otherwiſe: for Act.15.9. True faith purifieth the heart.

Theſe

The Sophiſters doe further affirme, that this faith, which to them is nothing but a knowledge and illumination of the mind, concerning the truth of Gods Word, is the roote and foundation of juſtification. The which, if it be true, why ſhould not the divell be juſt? for he hath both a knowledge of Gods Word, and thereunto by beleeving doth give his aſſent; who notwithſtanding hee have ſuch a faith, yet can he not be called one of the faithfull.

Here they except and ſay: The divels faith is voyde of charity, which is the forme of faith. But this is a doting ſurmiſe of their owne braine. For charity is the effect of faith, 1 Tim. 1.5. But the effect cannot informe the cauſe.

The XI. Errour.

Mans love of God, doth in order and time go before his juſtification and reconciliation with God.

The Confutation.

Nay contrarily, unleſſe we be firſt perſwaded of Gods love towards us, we never love him. For we love him, becauſe he loved us firſt. 1 Iohn 4.19. Againe, it is impoſſible, that Gods enemy ſhould love him: but he which is not as yet juſtified, or reconciled to God, he is Gods enemy, Rom. 5.9,10. Neither is any man before the act of juſtification, made of Gods enemy his friend.

The XII. Errour.

Infuſed or inherent juſtice, is the formall cauſe of juſtification, whereby men are juſtified in the ſight of God formally.

The Confutation:

We doe contrarily hold, that the materiall cauſe of mans juſtification; is the obedience of Chriſt in ſuffering and fulfilling the law for us: but as for the formall cauſe, that muſt needs be imputation, the which is an action of God the Father, accepting the obedience of Chriſt for us, as it were our owne. Reaſons I. Looke by what wee are abſolved from all our ſinnes, and by which we are accepted to eternall life, by that alone are we juſtified: but by Chriſts perfect obedience imputed unto us, we are abſolved from all our ſinnes, and through it we are accepted of God, to eternall life, the which wee cannot attaine unto by inherent holineſſe. Therefore by Chriſts perfect obedience imputed unto us, we are alone juſtified. This will appeare to be true, in the exerciſes of invocation on Gods name, and alſo of repentance. For in tentation, and conflicts with ſinne and Satan, faith doth not reaſon thus: Now I have charity and inherent grace, and for theſe God will accept of me: But faith doth more rightly behold the Sonne of God, as he was made a ſacrifice for us, and ſitteth at the right hand of his Father, there making interceſſion for us: to him, I ſay, doth faith flye, and is aſſured, that for this his Sonne, God will forgive us all our ſins and will alſo bee reconciled unto us, yea, and account us juſt in his ſight, not by any quality inherent in us, but rather by the merit of Ieſus Chriſt. Rom. 5.19. II. As Chriſt is made a ſinner, ſo by proportion ſuch as beleeve are made juſt. But Chriſt was by imputation only made and accounted a ſinner for us. 2 Cor. 5.21. For he became ſurety for us, and a ſacrifice for our ſinnes, upon which all both the guiltineſſe of Gods wrath, and puniſhment for us was to be laid. Hence it is, that he is ſaid to become (κατάρα) a curſe for us: therefore we againe are made juſt onely by imputation. III. The contrary to condemnation is remiſſion of ſins; and juſtification is the oppoſite of condemnation. Rom. 8.33: It is God that juſtifieth, who ſhall condemne? Therefore juſtification is the remiſſion of ſins. Now remiſſion of ſins dependeth onely upon this imputation of Chriſts merits. IV. Albeit infuſed and inherent juſtice may have his due place, his praiſe, and alſo deſerts, yet as it is the worke of the holy Ghoſt, it is not in this life complete, & by reaſon of the fleſh whereto it is united, it is both imperfect, and infected with the dregs of ſin. Iſa. 64.6. Therefore before Gods judgement ſeat it cannot claime this prerogative, to abſolve any from the ſentence of condemnation.

Obiect. I. This imputation is nothing elſe but a vaine conceit. Anſ. I. Yes, it is a relation or divine ordinance, whereby one relative is applyed to his correlative, or as the Logicians ſay, is as the foundation to the Terminus. II. As the imputation of our ſinnes unto Chriſt, was indeed ſomething, ſo the imputation of Chriſts juſtice unto us, muſt not bee thought a bare conceit. III. Againe, the Church of Rome doth her ſelfe maintaine imputative juſtice, namely, when as by Eccleſiaſticall authority ſhe doth apply the merits and ſatisfactions of certaine perſons, unto other members of that Church. When it is apparant, that even the Popes indulgences they are imputative.

Obiect. II. Imputative juſtice is not everlaſting: but that juſtice which the Meſſias brings is everlaſting. Anſ. Although after this life there is no pardon of ſinnes to be looked for, yet that which is given us in this life, ſhall to our ſalvation continue in the life to come.

Obiect. III. If juſtification bee by imputation, he may before God be juſt, who indeed is a very wicked man. Anſ. Not ſo, any wayes: for he that is once by imputation juſtified, he is alſo at that ſame inſtant ſanctified.

The XIII. Errour.

There is alſo a ſecond juſtification, and that is obtained by workes.

The Confutation.

That popiſh device of a ſecond juſtification, is a Satanicall deluſion. For, I. the Word of God doth acknowledge no more but one juſtification at all, and that abſolute and complete of it ſelfe. There is but one juſtice, but one ſatisfaction of God being offended: therefore there cannot be a manifold juſtification. II. If by reaſon of the increaſe of inherent juſtice, juſtification ſhould be diſtinguiſhed into ſeverall kinds or parts, we might as well make an hundreth kinds, or parts of juſtification, as

two. III. That which by order of nature doth follow after full juſtification before God, cannot be ſaid to juſtifie. But good works doe by order of nature follow mans juſtification, and his abſolution, from ſinnes: becauſe no worke can pleaſe God except the perſon it ſelfe, that worketh the ſame, doe before pleaſe him: but no mans perſon can pleaſe God, but ſuch an one as being reconciled to God, by the merits of Chriſt, hath peace with him. IV. Such workes as are not agreeable to the rule of Legall juſtice; they before the tribunall Seate of God, cannot juſtifie, but rather both in, and of themſelves are ſubject to Gods eternall curſe. For this is the ſentence of the Law, Deut.27. 26. Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the booke of the law to doe them. Now the workes even of the regenerate, are not ſquared according to the rule of Legall juſtice: wherefore David being, as it were ſtricken, with the conſideration of this, durſt not once oppoſe, no not his beſt workes to the judgement of God, that by them hee might plead pardon of his ſins; whence it is that he cryeth out and ſaith, Pſal.143.2. Enter not into judgement with thy ſervant, O Lord, for then no fleſh living ſhall be juſtified in thy ſight. The like doth Iob 9. 3. If hee (namely, ſuch an one as ſaith he is juſt) contend with God, he cannot anſwer him one of a thouſand. And Dan 9.18. We doe not preſent our ſupplications before thee for our owne righteouſneſſe, but for thy great tender mercies. V. Iuſtification by workes, let them bee whatſoever they can be, doth quite overturne the foundation of our faith. Gal.5.2. If ye be circumciſed, Chriſt will profit you nothing, and v.4. Ye are aboliſhed from Chriſt, whoſoever are juſtified by the Law: ye are falne from grace. In this place the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of them, not which did openly reſiſt Chriſt, and the Goſpel; but of ſuch, as did with the merit of Chriſt, mingle together the works of the law; as though ſome part of our ſalvation conſiſted in them. Exception, This place doth onely exclude ſuch morall workes of the fleſh, as doe goe before faith; or the workes of the law of Moſes. Anſ. This is untrue. For even of Abraham being already regenerated, and of thoſe his workes which were done when he was juſtified, Paul ſpeaketh thus, Rom.4.5. To him, not which worketh, but which beleeveth, is faith imputed. Thoſe workes which God hath prepared that the regenerate ſhould walke in them, are morall workes, and workes of grace; but theſe are excluded from juſtification, and working mans ſalvation, Eph.2.10. And Paul being regenerate ſaith thus of himſelfe, 1 Cor.4. 4. I am not guilty unto my ſelfe of any thing, yet am I not thereby juſtified. VI. The cauſe of the cauſe, is the cauſe of the thing cauſed; but grace without works, is the cauſe of mans predeſtination; the which is the cauſe of his juſtification: and therefore grace without works ſhall much more be ſaid to be the cauſe of juſtification.

Object. I. Levit.18.5. He that keepeth my ſtatutes ſhall live in them. Anſw. This ſaying is a legall ſentence: and therefore ſheweth not what men can doe, but what they ſhould doe.

Ob. II. Pſa.119.1. Bleſſed are thoſe that walk in the law of the Lord. Anſ. Man is not here ſaid to bee bleſſed, becauſe hee walketh uprightly, but becauſe the perſon of ſuch a walker is by the merits of Chriſt, juſtified before God.

Object. III. Judge me according to my righteouſneſſe. Pſal.7. 8. And the fact of Phineas was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe. Anſ. Theſe places are not meant of that righteouſneſſe of the perſon, by which it is righteous before God; but of the righteouſneſſe of ſome particular cauſe, or worke. For whereas David was accuſed of this crime, that he did affect Sauls Kingdome, he in this point doth in the words above mentioned, teſtifie his innocency before God.

Object. IV. Mat.25.v.34,35, &c. We are judged according to our workes; therefore alſo by them juſtified. Anſ. The reaſon is not like: becauſe the laſt judgement is not the juſtifying of a man, but a declaration of that juſtification which we had before obtained. Therefore the laſt judgement muſt bee pronounced and taken, not from the cauſe of juſtification, but from the effects and ſignes thereof.

Object. V. Luk.16.9. Make you friends of unrighteous Mammon, &c. that they may receive you into eternall habitations. Anſ. This they doe, not as authors of ſalvation, but as witneſſes of the ſame.

Object. VI. Dan.4.24. Redeeme thy ſins by righteouſneſſe, and thine iniquity by mercy towards the poore. Anſ. It is rather, breake off thy ſinnes, then redeeme, for ſo is the originall: now men breake off their ſinnes, by ceaſing from them, not ſatisfying for them.

Object. VII. Evill workes condemne: therefore good workes juſtifie. Anſw. It followeth not; becauſe good workes are not perfectly good, as evill workes are perfectly evill.

Object. VIII. We are ſaved by hope. Rom. 8.24. Anſ. We muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt juſtification, and ſalvation: ſalvation is the end: juſtification, is one degree to come to the end: but there is more required to the end then to a degree ſubordinate to the end: therefore we are ſaved by hope and faith, but juſtified by faith alone.

Object. IX. Affliction cauſeth eternall glory, 2 Cor.4.17. Anſ. This it doth not, as by it own merit, effecting the ſame, but rather as a path and way manifeſting and declaring the ſame.

Object. X. Iam.2.21. Abraham was juſtified by workes. Anſ. Not as any cauſe of juſtification, but as a manifeſtation thereof.

Object. XI. Rev.22.11. He that is juſt, let him be more juſt. Anſ. This place muſt be underſtood of juſtification before men, namely of ſanctification, or an holy life: not of juſtification in the ſight of God.

Object. XII. We are juſtified by faith, therfore by a worke. Answ. We are justified by faith, not as it is a vertue and a worke, but as it is an instrument apprehending the justice of Christ, whereby we are justified. And in this respect, faith is said by the figure called Metonymia, to be imputed unto us unto righteousnesse.

by

Obj. XIII. The workes of Grace are dyed in the blood of Christ. Ans. They are indeed dyed therein, but not to the end they might the better please God, to justifie man: and whereas they are so stained, as that they need dying in the blood of Christ, therefore can they not any wayes justifie sinfull man. And the person of the worker, is as well dyed in Christs blood, as is his worke, yet he cannot say that his person doth therefore justifie himselfe.

And as I have now prooved, that this doctrine of the Papists is very erronious; so I also avouch that it is most ridiculous. Because for a man to say that inherent righteousnesse is augmented by good works, namely, the fruits of righteousnesse, is as if a man should say, that the vine is made more fruitful by bearing grapes, or that the internall light of the Sunne is augmented by the externall emission of the beames. Luthers saying is farre more true, Good works do not make a good man, but a good man doth make works good.

The XIV. Errour.

The Confutation.

I. The word of God doth manifestly declare that it is farre otherwise. Ioh.6.37. All that the Father giveth me, shall come unto mee: and him that commeth unto me, I cast not away, Mat.16.18. Thou art Peter, and upon this rock will I build my Church: so that the gates of hell shall not prevaile against it, 1 Ioh.2.19. They went out from us, but they were not of us: for if they had bin of us, they would have cõtinued with us, Rom.5.1. Being therefore justified, wee have peace with God. Now how could this be true, if he that was before justified, could any way quite fall from grace, and so perish? II. The elect after their very grievous fallings from God, forthwith repented them of their sinnes, as we may see in the example of David, Peter, &c. the which argueth that they had not quite fallen from grace, and lost the Spirit of God. III. If grace be once utterly lost, then the ingraffing of that party into Christ is quite abolished: therefore for such as repent, there must needs succeed a second new ingraffing into Christ: and then it will also follow, that they must of necessity be baptized anew, which is absurd to thinke.

But for all this, we deny not, but grace may in part, and for a time be lost, to the end that the faithfull may thereby acknowledge, and know their weaknesse, and for it be humbled; but that there is any totall, or finall falling from grace, we utterly deny

It is possible to fulfill the Law in this life.

The Confutation.

The Law is Evangelically fulfilled by beleeving in Christ; but not legally, by doing the workes thereof. Reason. They which are carnall cannot possibly fulfill the law of God: but the most regenerate, so long as they live in this life, are carnall in part. Rom.7.14. I am, saith Paul of himselfe, carnall, and sold under sinne. Pro.20.9. Who can say, Mine heart is pure, I am pure from sin? Eccl.7.22. There is none so just upon earth, which doth good, and sins not, Ps.130.3. If thou Lord, observe what is done amisse, Lord who shall abide it? We are daily taught to pray unto God Matt.6.12. Forgive us our sins. Exception. Indeed if the justice of the faithfull bee absolutely considered, it is imperfect, but as God doth exact it of our frailty, it is perfect. Ans. This is but the fancie of some doting Iesuite. For this sentence of the law is simple, eternall, and immooveable. Gal.3.10. Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things, which are written in this book, to do them. Neither may we imagine, that God will not therefore exact the full accomplishing of the law, because we are fraile. For wee are creatures and debters: now we know, that the debt doth not decrease, by reason of the debters poverty.

Object. The faithfull are said to be perfect in this life. Ans. There is a two-fold perfection; the one incomplete, the which is an endeavour or care to obey God in the observation of all his precepts; the other is tearmed complete, this is that justice which the law requireth, namely, a perfect and absolute justice, according to that measure which man performed to God in his innocency. In the first sense, the faithfull are said to be perfect, not in this latter.

Workes done in grace, doe (ex condigno) condignely merit eternall life.

The Confutation.

I. Eternall life is the free gift of God, Rom. 6.23. The wages of sinne is death, but the gift of God is eternall life through Iesus Christ. Therefore it is not obtained by the merit of works. II. The merit of condignitie is an action belonging to such a nature as is both God and man, not to a bare creature. For the Angels themselves cannot merit any thing at Gods hands: yea, and Adam also, if hee had stood in his first innocency, could have deserved nothing of God, because it is the bounden duty of the creature to performe obedience unto his Creator. The merit therefore of condignity, doth only agree unto Christ, God and man, in whom each nature doth, for the effecting of this merit, performe that which belongeth to it. For the humanity doth minister matter unto the meritorious worke, by suffering, and performing obedience: but the Deitie of Christ, whereunto the humanity is hypostatically united, doth conferre full and sufficient worthinesse unto the work. Hence is it that the Father doth speake thus of his sonne, Mat.3.17. This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased (εὐδόκησα) III. In the second commandement God doth promise eternall life to the keepers of his commandements, yet hee saith not that they shall obtaine it by desert, but that he will shew mercy to thousands of them that love him, and keep his commandements. IV. That a worke may be meritorious, first, it must have an equall proportion with legall justice, and eternall life: secondly, merit doth presuppose this also, that in God there must be a due debt towards man; for God then ought of duty, not by favour to accept of the person of man: But all our works, yea, our most holy works, cannot come neere unto legall righteousnes. For, seeing all the regenerate are partly carnall, and partly spirituall, all their good works in like sort are imperfectly good. For looke what the causes are, such must the effects needs be. Againe, good workes do presuppose a due debt in man, none in God. V. The ancient Fathers do not acknowledge this merit of condignity as currant. August. in his Manuel. cap. 22. My merit is Gods mercy. Greg. mor, 2. book, cap. 4. Grace found me void of merit at my first conversion, and the same grace hath kept me void of merit ever since. Bern. serm. 68. upon the Cant. It is sufficient to know this, that merits are not sufficient. And serm. 61. Cant. Mans justice is Gods goodnesse. And Epist. 190. That the satisfaction of one may be imputed to all, as the sinnes of all were borne by one. And as for ancient Doctors, merit was nothing else to them, but a good work acceptable to God. Aug. Epist. 105. to Sixtus. If it be grace, then is it not bestowed by reason by any merit, but upō free mercy. What merit of his own can he that is set at libertie brag of, who if he had his merits, should have been condemned? Good workes are wrought by man, but faith is wrought in man, without which no man could worke good workes. So the word merit doth signifie to doe well, to be acceptable, to please; as the old interpreter hath (for εὐαρεστῆσαι, signifying to please God,) used this Latine word promereri, to merit.

Object. I. Workes have attributed unto them reward. Ans. Reward is not so much attributed to the worke, as to the worker, and to him, not for himself; but for Christs merits apprehended by faith. Therefore not our merit, or personall merit; but Christs merit, and our reward are correlatives.

Object. II. 2 Thess. 1. 6. It is a righteous thing with God, to recompence tribulations, &c. Ans. It is righteous, not because God ought so to doe of dutie, but because he promised: now for God to stand to his word, is a part of justice.

Object. III. Christ hath merited, that works might merit. Answ. I. This taketh quite away the intercession of Christ. II. It is against the nature of legall worke, to merit (ex condigno) condignly: because both the Law of nature and creation doe binde man to performe legall works unto God. And further, all works are very imperfect, and mixed with sin. III. This doctrine concerning workes, doth obscure and darken the merit of Christ: because that the obtaining of eternall life is withdrawne from his death and obedience, and attributed unto works. For they say thus, that Christ by his passion did merit indeed for sinners justification; but a sinner once justified, doth for himselfe by his owne merits even condignly merit eternall life.

Object. IV. The workes of the regenerate, are the works of the holy Ghost, therefore perfect and pure. Answ. I. The workes of God are all perfect, but yet in their time, and by degrees: therefore sanctification which is a worke of God, must in this life remaine incomplete, and is made perfect in the world to come. II. The workes of God are pure, as they are the works of God alone, not of God and impure man: but now good workes they doe come immediately from the naturall faculties of the soule, namely, from the understanding, and the will, (in which, they being as yet, but partly regenerated, some corrupt qualities of sinne doe yet remaine) and are not immediately and simply, or wholly derived from Gods Spirit. And hence it is that they are all stained with sinne.

Man knoweth not but by speciall revelation, whether he be predestinated or not.

The Confutation.

The contrary to this, is a plaine truth. Reason. I. That which a man must certainely beleeve, that may he also certainely know without an especiall revelation: but every faithfull man must beleeve that hee is elected. It is Gods commandement that wee should beleeve in Christ, 1 Ioh. 3. 23. Now to beleeve in Christ, is not only to beleeve that we are adopted, justified, and redeemed by him; but also in him elected from eternity: whereby it is apparent, that he which beleeves not this, doth not beleeve the whole Gospel. II. That which is sealed unto us by the Spirit of God, of that we are very sure without speciall revelation: but our adoption, and so consequently our election, is sealed unto us by the Spirit of God 1 Cor. 2. 12. We have not received the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God: that we might know the things that are given to us of God. Therefore is our election certainly known to us, Eph. 1. 13. In whom also ye have trusted after that ye heard the word of truth, even the Gospell of your salvation, wherein also after that ye beleeved, ye were sealed with the holy spirit of promise.

Exception. The holy Ghost doth seale unto us our adoption morally by workes, and therefore the knowledge of our adoption is but only probable. Answ. It sealeth unto us our adoption, by begetting a speciall trust and confidence. For when as we heare Gods promises, and withall thinke upon them, then doth the holy Ghost by the same promises moove our under-

understandings and wils to imbrace them, and in mooving them, doth make us both to give our assent unto them, and in them to rest our selves; whence ariseth a speciall assurance that we are adopted, & in the favour of God, Luk. 10.20. Rejoyce rather that your names are written in heaven. But no man can be glad for that good which he is in doubt whether hee have received it or not. IV. 2 Pet. 1.10. Study to make your vocation and election sure, βεβαίαν ποιεῖσθαι: but this is not in respect of God, but ourselves.

Object. No man must by the Catholike faith beleeve any thing which God hath not revealed either in the written or unwritten word, namely tradition. But there is no such either writing or tradition as this, namely that such a particular man, suppose Peter, or Henry is predestinated of God. Therfore no man must particularly beleeve that he is saved. Ans. Albeit this particular proposition, I am elected, is not expresly set downe in the Scriptures, yet it is inclusively comprehended in them, as the Species in his Genus, as the Logicians speake: so that it may by just consequent bee gathered out of Gods word, if we reason thus: They which truely beleeve are elected, Iohn 6.35. I truely beleeve; for he which beleeveth doth know himselfe to beleeve; therefore I am elected. The first proposition is taken from the Scriptures: the second, from the beleevers conscience: and from them both, the conclusion is easily derived.

CHAP. LII.

Concerning the decree of reprobation.

THus much shall suffice for the decree of Election, now followes the decree of Reprobation.

The decree of Reprobation, is that part of predestination, whereby God, according to the most free and just purpose of his will, hath determined to reject certaine men unto eternall destruction, and miserie, and that to the praise of his justice, Rom. 9.21. Hath not the potter power over the clay, to make of the same lump one vessell to honour and another to dishonour? 1 Pet. 2.8. To them which stumble at the word being disobedient, unto which thing (εἰς ὃ καὶ) they were even ordained, Iud. v. 4. There are certaine men crept in, which were before of old, (πάλαι προγεγραμμένοι) ordained to this condemnation, 1 Thess. 5.9. God hath not appointed us unto wrath but unto salvation. In the Scriptures Cain and Abel, Ismael and Isaac, Esau and Iacob, are propounded unto us as types of mankinde, partly elected, and partly rejected.

Neither doe we here set downe any absolute decree of damnation, as though we should thinke that any were condemned by the meere and alone will of God, without any causes inherent in such as are to be condemned. For unto the decree of God it selfe, there are certaine means for the execution thereof annexed, and subordinate. And therefore though we never do, or can seperate Gods decree and the means to execute the same, yet doe wee distinguish them, and doe consider the purpose of God, sometimes by it selfe alone; and sometimes againe not by it selfe, but with middle causes subordinate thereto. And in this second respect, Christ is said to be predestinate: but in the former, namely, as the decree is considered by it selfe, he is not predestinated, but together with God the Father is a predestinatour.

Againe, the decree of God is secret. I. Because it ariseth onely from the good pleasure of God, unsearchable, and adored of the verie Angels themselves. II. Because it is not knowne, but by that which is after it, namely, by the effects thereof.

CHAP. LIII.

Concerning the execution of the decree of Reprobation.

IN the executing of this decree, there is to be considered, the foundation or beginning, and the degrees or proceeding thereof.

The foundation of executing the decree of Reprobation, is the fall of Adam, by which fall he was subject both to sinne and damnation, Rom. 11.32. For God hath shut up all in unbelief, that he might have mercie on all. 1 Pet. 2.8. Here we must note, that God hath so decreed to condemne some, as that notwithstanding, all the fault and desert of condemnation remaineth in the men onely.

Further, whom God rejecteth to condemnation, those he hateth: this hatred of God is, whereby he detesteth and abhorreth the reprobate when he is fallen into sin, for the same sin. And this hatred which God hath, to man, comes by the fall of Adam: and it is neither an antecedent, nor a cause of Gods decree, but onely a consequent, and followeth the decree.

Reprobates are either infants, or men of riperage.

In reprobate infants, the execution of Gods decree is this: Assoone as they are borne, for the guilt of originall and naturall sinne, being left in Gods secret judgment unto themselves, they dying are rejected of God for ever. Rom. 5.14 But death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them also that sinned not after the like manner of the transgression of Adam, which was the figure of him that was to come, Rom. 9.11. For ere the children were borne, and when they had neither done good nor evill, that the purpose of God might remaine according to election, not by workes, but by him that calleth.

Reprobates of riper age, are of two sorts: they that are called (namely, by an uneffectuall calling) and they that are not called.

In the reprobates which are called, the execution of the decree of reprobation hath three degrees, to wit, an acknowledgement of Gods calling, a falling away againe, and condemnation.

The acknowledgement of Gods calling, is whereby the reprobates for a time, doe subject themselves to the calling of God, which calling is wrought by the preaching of the word, Matth.22.14. For many are called, but few are choſen. And of this calling there are five other degrees.

The firſt is, an enlightning of their minds, whereby they are inſtructed of the holy Ghoſt to the underſtanding and knowledge of the word, Heb.6.4. For it is impoſſible that they which were once lightned, &c. 2 Pet.2.20. For if they after they have eſcaped from the filthines of the world, through the knowledge of the Lord, and of the Saviour Ieſus Chriſt, are yet tangled again therein and overcome, the latter end is worſe with them then the beginning.

The ſecond, is a certaine penitency, whereby the Reprobate, I. Doth acknowledge his ſinne. II. Is pricked with the feeling of Gods wrath for ſinne. III. Is grieved for the puniſhment of ſinne. IV. Doth confeſſe his ſinne. V. Acknowledgeth God to be juſt in puniſhing ſinne. VI. Deſireth to be ſaved. VII. Promiſeth repentance in his miſery or afflictions, in theſe words, I will ſin no more, Mat.27.3. Then when Iudas which betrayed him, ſaw that he was condemned, he repented himſelfe, and brought againe the thirtie pieces of ſilver, to the chiefe Prieſts and Elders, Heb.12.17. For ye know, that afterward alſo when he would have inherited the bleſſing, he was rejected: for he found no place to repentance, though hee ſought the bleſſing with teares. 1 King.21.27. Now when Ahab heard thoſe words, he rent his cloathes, and put ſackecloth upon him, and faſted, and lay in ſackcloth, and went ſoftly, Numb.23,10. Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my laſt end be like his, Pſal.78.32. For all this, they ſinned ſtill, and beleeved not his wondrous workes. 33. Therefore their daies did he conſume in vanity, and their yeares haſtily. 34. And when he ſlue them, they ſought him, and they returned, and ſought God early. 35. They remembred that God was their ſtrength, and the moſt high God their Redeemer.

The third degree, is a temporarie faith, whereby the reprobate doth confuſedly beleeve the promiſes of God, made in Chriſt. I ſay, confuſedly, becauſe he beleeveth that ſome ſhall be ſaved; but he beleeveth not, that he himſelfe particularly ſhall be ſaved, becauſe he being content with a generall faith, doth never apply the promiſes of God to himſelfe, neither doth he ſo much as conceive any purpoſe, deſire, or endeavour to apply the ſame, or any wreſtling or ſtriving againſt ſecuritie or careleſneſſe and diſtruſt. Iam,2.19, Thou beleeveſt that there is one God, thou doeſt wel: the divels alſo beleeve it and tremble. Math.13.20. And he that receiveth ſeed in the ſtony ground, is he which heareth the word, and incontinently with joy receiveth it. 21. Yet hath he no roote in himſelfe, and dureth but a ſeaſon, Ioh.2.23. Now when he was at Ieruſalem at the Paſſeover in the feaſt, many beleeved in his Name when they ſaw his miracles which he did. 24. But Ieſus did not commit himſelfe unto them, becauſe he knew them all.

The fourth, is a taſting of heavenly gifts: as of Iuſtification, and of ſanctification, and of the vertues of the world to come. This taſting is verily a ſenſe in the hearts of the Reprobates whereby they doe perceive and feele the excellency of Gods benefits, notwithſtanding they doe not enjoy the ſame. For it is one thing to taſte of dainties at a banquet, and another thing to feede and to be nouriſhed thereby, Heb.6.4,5. For it is impoſſible, that they which were once lightned, and have taſted of the heavenly gifts, and were made partakers of the holy Ghoſt, and have taſted, &c.

The fifth degre is, the outward holineſſe of life for a time, under which, is comprehended a zeale in the profeſſion of religion, a reverence and feare toward Gods miniſters, and amendment of life in many things, Mar.6.20. For Herod feared Iohn, knowing that he was a juſt man, and an holy, and reverenced him, and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly. Act.8.13. Then Simon himſelfe beleeved alſo, and was baptized, and continued with Philip, and wondered when he ſaw the ſignes and great miracles which were done, Hoſ.6.4. O Ephraim, what ſhall I doe unto thee? O Iudah, how ſhall I intreat thee? for your goodneſſe is as a mourning cloud, and as the morning dew it goeth away.

The ſecond degree of the execution of Gods counſell of reprobation, in men of riper age which are called, is a falling away againe, which for the moſt part is effected & wrought after this manner: Firſt, the reprobate is deceived by ſome ſinne. Secondly, his heart is hardened by the ſame ſinne. Thirdly, his heart being hardned, becommeth wicked and perverſe. Fourthly, then followeth his incredulitie and unbeliefe, whereby he conſenteth not to Gods word, when he hath heard and known it. Fiftly, an Apoſtaſie, or falling away from faith in Chriſt, doth immediately follow this unbeliefe, Heb.3,12,13. Take heede, brethren leſt at any time there be in any of you an evill heart, and unfaithfull, to depart away from the living God. 1 Tim.1.19.

This Apoſtaſie, is ſometimes a ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt. In the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, wee have theſe ſeverall points to bee conſidered: I. The name; it is called a ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, not becauſe it is done againſt the perſon, or deity of the holy Ghoſt, (for in this reſpect he that ſinneth againſt the holy Ghoſt, ſinneth in like ſort againſt both the Father, and the Sonne) but it is ſo called, becauſe it is done contrary to the immediate action, namely, the illumination of the holy Ghoſt. For albeit this be an action common to the whole Trinitie, yet the Father and the Sonne doe effect the ſame by the holy Ghoſt. II. The efficient cauſe of it: which is a ſet and obſtinate malice againſt God, and againſt his Chriſt. Therefore when a man doth in the time of perſecution, either for feare, or raſhly denie Chriſt, hee doth not commit this ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, as may appeare by the example of Peter who denyed Chriſt, Matth.26,73,74,75. Neither doth he which

1. To create mankinde.

2. To give a law to his creature, with condition both of life and death.

3. After the giving of the law to permit the fall.

4. To redeeme all mankinde in Chriſt; ſo that election is in this place made univerſall.

5. To call mankinde ſo redeemed in time: here is an univerſall vocation.

Predeſtination or ſpeciall election, whereby God purpoſed with himſelfe upon his meere mercie, to beſtow faith upon ſome certaine of Adams poſteritie called: and in like ſort freely, not by faith or works foreſeene, to juſtifie, and glorifie.

perſecuteth Chriſt and his Church upon ignorance fall into this ſinne. Paul perſecuted the Church of Chriſt, and yet God had mercy on him, becauſe he did it ignorantly. 1 Tim. 1. 13. Many of the Iewes crucified our Saviour Chriſt, who afterward, becauſe they committed that grievous fact upon ignorance, repenting at Peters Sermon, they did obtaine remiſſion of their ſinnes. Act. 3. 17. and 2. 37. III. The object, namely, God himſelf, and the Mediatour Chriſt Ieſus. For the malice of this ſin is directed againſt the very Majeſtie of God himſelfe, and againſt Chriſt. Heb. 10. 29. Of how much ſorer puniſhment ſuppoſe yee ſhall he be worthy, which treadeth under foot the Son of God, and counteth the blood of the Teſtament as an unholy thing, wherewith he was ſanctified, and doth deſpite the ſpirit of grace? Therefore this ſin doth directly reſpect the firſt table of the morall law, and is not ſome particular ſlipping aſide from the obſervation of thoſe commandements which are contained in this firſt Table, ſuch as are ſome doubtings concerning God, or of the truth of the Scriptures, or of Chriſt, &c. but it is a generall defection and apoſtaſie from God, and that totally. IV. The ſubject in which it is. This ſin is found in none at all, but ſuch as have bin enlightned by the holy Ghoſt, & have taſted of the good gift of God. Heb. 6. 5, 6. Neither is it in him a bare cogitation alone, but an external action, or rather ſuch a blaſphemy againſt God, as proceeds from a malicious and obſtinate heart. Matth. 12. 31. V. The Elect cannot commit this ſinne: and therefore they who feele in themſelves a ſure teſtimony of their election, neede never to deſpaire: nay, this ſin is not in every reprobate: for many of them dye before they have this illumination by Gods ſpirit. VI. This ſinne cannot be forgiven, not becauſe it is greater then that Chriſts merit can ſatisfie for it, but becauſe after a man hath once committed this ſin, it is impoſſible for him to repent. For the gift of repentance proceedeth from the holy Ghoſt, and the holy Ghoſt remaineth in us through Chriſt apprehended by faith: now no man doth apprehend Chriſt, that doth maliciouſly deſpiſe and contemne him.

VII. It is very hard to know when a man committeth this ſinne, becauſe the root thereof, namely, ſet malice, lurketh inwardly in the heart, and it is not ſo eaſily diſcerned.

Out of all this which hath beene ſpoken, we may thus define this ſinne. The ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, is a voluntary, and obſtinate deniall of, and blaſphemie againſt the Sonne of God, or that truth which was before acknowledged concerning him, and ſo conſequently, an univerſall defection from GOD and his true Church. We have an example of this ſinne, partly in the divell, who albeit he knew well enough that Ieſus was that Chriſt, yet he never ceaſed both wittingly and willingly with all his power to oppugne the ſacred Majeſtie of GOD, together with the kingdome of Ieſus Chriſt, as farre forth as he could, utterly to ſupplant the ſame; partly in the Phariſes, Matth. 12. 32. Iohn 3. 2.

After apoſtaſie followeth pollution, which is the very fulneſſe of all iniquitie, altogether contrary to ſanctification. Gen. 15. 16. And in the fourth generation they ſhall come hither again, for the wickedneſſe of the Amorites is not yet full.

The third degree, is damnation, whereby the Reprobates are delivered up to eternall puniſhment. The execution of damnation begins in death, and is finiſhed in the laſt judgement. Luke 16. 22. And it was ſo that the beggar dyed, and was carried by the Angels into Abrahams boſome: the rich man alſo died and was buried. 23. And being in hell torments, he lift up his eyes and ſaw Abraham afarre off, and Lazarus in his boſome.

The execution of this decree of reprobation in infidels which are not called, is thus: Firſt they have by nature ignorance and vanitie of minde. After that followeth hardnes of heart, whereby they become voide of all ſorrow for their ſinnes. Then comes a reprobate ſenſe, which is, when the naturall light of reaſon, and of the judgement of good and evill, is extinguiſhed. Afterward when the heart ceaſeth to ſorrow, then riſeth a committing of ſin with greedineſſe. Then commeth pollution, which is the fulneſſe of ſinne. Laſtly, a juſt reward is given to all theſe, to wit, fearefull condemnation, Eph. 4. 18. Having their cogitation darkened, and being ſtrangers from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, becauſe of the hardneſſe of their hearts. Rom. 1. 28. For as they regarded not to know God, even ſo God delivered them up to a reprobate minde, to doe thoſe things which are not convenient.

CHAP. LIV.

Concerning a new deviſed doctrine of Predeſtination, taught by ſome new and Late Divines.

CErtaine new Divines of our age, have of late erected up a new doctrine of Predeſtination, in which, fearing belike, leſt they ſhould make GOD both unjuſt and unmercifull, they doe in the diſtribution of the cauſes of ſalvation and damnation, turne them upſide downe; as may appeare by their deſcription in this Table.

But this their doctrine hath ſome foule errours and defects, the which I, according as I ſhall be able, will briefely touch.

The I. Errour.

There is a certaine univerſall or generall election, whereby God, without any either reſtraint, or exception of perſons, hath decreed to redeeme by Chriſt, and to reconcile unto himſelfe all mankind wholly falne in Adam, yea every ſingular perſon, as well the Reprobate, as the Elect.

The Confutation.

The very name of Election doth fully confute this: for none can be ſaid to be elected, if ſo be that God would have all men elected in Chriſt, for he that electeth or maketh choiſe, cannot be ſaid to take all: neither can he that accepteth of all, bee ſaid to make choiſe onely of ſome.

Object. Election is nothing elſe but dilection, or love: but this we know, that God loveth all his creatures; therefore hee electeth all his creatures.

Anſwer. I. I denie that to elect is to love, but to ordaine and appoint to love. Rom. 9. 13

II. God doth love all his creatures, yet not all equally, but every one in their place.

Furthermore, this poſition doth flatly repugne the moſt plaine places of holy Scripture. Tit. 2. 14. Who gave himſelfe for us, that hee might redeeme us from all iniquitie, & purge us to be a peculiar people unto himſelfe. Ioh. 10. v. 15, I give my life for my ſheepe. Exception. All men are the ſheepe of Chriſt. Anſw, Iohn addeth, v. 27. 28. And my ſheepe heare my voice, and I know them, and they follow mee, and I give unto them eternall life, neither ſhall they periſh, Eph. 5. 23. Chriſt is the head of the Church, and the ſame is the Saviour of his body. v. 25. Chriſt loved the Church, & gave himſelfe for it. Redemption, and remiſſion of ſinnes, is the inheritance of the Saints, and of ſuch as are made heires of the Kingdome of Chriſt. Coloſſ. 2. 12, 13, 14.

Againe, looke for whom Chriſt is an advocate, to them onely hee is a redeemer; for redemption and interceſſion, which are parts of Chriſts prieſthood, the one is as generall and large as the other, and are ſo ſurely united and faſtned together, as that one cannot bee without the other. But Chriſt is onely an advocate of the faithfull. Iohn. 17. verſ. 9, In that his ſolemne prayer, hee firſt prayeth for his owne, namely, his Diſciples, elected not onely to the Apoſtleſhip, but alſo to eternall life: and then verſe. 20. hee prayeth likewiſe for them that ſhould beleeve in him by their word. Now againſt theſe, hee oppoſeth the world, for which he prayeth not, that it may attaine eternal life. And Roman. 8. 34. Who ſhall accuſe Gods elect? Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of the Father, and maketh interceſſion for us. Furthermore, the members of Chriſts Church are called the Redeemed of the Lord, Pſal. 107. 2. Therefore this priviledge is not given to all alike.

Exception. This univerſall reconciliation, is not in reſpect of man, but of God himſelfe, who, both made it for all, and offereth it to all. Anſ. If Chriſt became once before God a reconciliation for all mens ſinnes, yea and alſo ſatisfied for them all, it muſt needs follow that before God all thoſe ſins muſt bee quite blotted out of his remembrance. For, the actuall blotting out of ſinnes, doth inſeparably depend vpon ſatisfaction for ſinnes. and ſatisfaction with God, doth neceſſarily imply the very reall and generall aboliſhment of the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne.

Obiect. I. Chriſt tooke upon him mans nature: therefore hee redeemed mans nature generally. Anſw. I. It followeth not, except wee would ſay, that Chriſt redeemed his owne humanitie, which cannot bee any waies poſſible.

II. Every woman doth partake the humane nature of every man, yet is not every man each womans husband, but hers alone, with whom by the covenant of matrimony, he is made one fleſh: and in like ſort Chriſt did by his incarnation (ſua circumſcripſit) take alſo upon him mans nature, and that common to all Adams progenie, yet is he the husband of his Church alone, by another more peculiar conjunction, namely, the bond of the ſpirit and of faith. And by it the Church is become fleſh of his fleſh, and bone of his bone. Epheſ. 5. 30. And therefore ſhe alone may juſtly claime title to the death of Chriſt, and all his merits.

Object. II. Chriſts redemption is as generall, as Adams fall was: and therefore it appertaineth to all Adams poſteritie. Anſw. Adam was a type of Chriſt, & Chriſt a counter-type correſpondent to Adam. Adam was the roote of all his ſucceſſours, or all that ſhould come of him; from the which firſt Adam, was ſinne & death derived: againe, Chriſt is alſo a roote, but of the elect onely, and ſuch as beleeve; to whom, from him proceede righteouſneſſe, and life eternall. Hee cannot be ſaid to be the roote of all, and every ſingular man, becauſe that all doe not take and receive this his righteouſnes, and life, neither are they actually by him made righteous. Rom. 11. 17. 19. Object. The benefit of Chriſts death redounded to all. Anſ, It did to all that beleeve. For as Adam deſtroyed all thoſe that were borne of him: ſo Chriſt doth juſtifie and ſave all thoſe that are borne anew by him, and none other. Object. If that Adams ſinne deſtroyed all, and Chriſts merit doth not ſave all: then is Adams ſinne more forcible to condemne, then Chriſts mercy is to ſave. Anſwer. Wee muſt not eſteeme of the mercy of Chriſt by the number of men which receive mercie (for ſo indeed, I graunt, that as Adams fall made all unjuſt, ſo the mercy of Chriſt and his redemption ſhould actually juſtifie all) but we muſt rather meaſure it by the efficacy and dignity thereof, then by the number on whom it is beſtowed. For it was a more eaſie thing to deſtroy all by ſinne, then by grace to ſave but one. Man, being but meere man, could deſtroy all: but to ſave even one, none could doe it, but ſuch an one as was both God and man.

Objection, III. Many places of Scripture there are which affirme this, that the benefit of Chriſts death doth appertaine unto all. Rom. 11. 32. God hath ſhut up all under ſin, that he might have mercie upon all, 1 Tim. 2. 4 God would have all men to bee ſaved. 2 Pet. 3. 9, God would not have any to periſh, but all to come to repentance. Anſwer. I. You muſt underſtand all that beleeve, as it is Mat. 11. 28 All that are wearie, and heavie laden. Ioh. 3. 16. All that beleeve. Gal. 3. 22. The Scripture hath concluded all under ſinne, that the promiſe by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt,

ſhould be giv̄e to them which beleeve. Act. 10.43. All which beleeve. And ſurely there is as well a generality of them that beleeve, as of the whole world. II. We may underſtand by [all] of all ſorts ſome, not every ſingular perſon of all ſorts. So, Revel. 5.9. Chriſt is ſaid to have redeemed ſome out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nations. And Gal. 3.28. There is neither Iew nor Greciã, neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, for yee are all one in Chriſt Ieſus. Matth. 4.23. Chriſt is ſaid to have healed every diſeaſe, that is, every kind of diſeaſe. And Auguſtine to this purpoſe hath a fit rule. All is often vſed for many, as Rom. 5.18, 19. Auguſtine in his Manuel to Laur. chap. 130. It is thus ſaid (ſaith Auguſtine) God would have all to be ſaved, not becauſe there was no man which he would have damned, who therefore would not doe miracles amongſt them, which would, as hee ſaith, have repented, if he had done miracles: but that by (all men) we ſhould vnderſtand all ſorts of men, howſoever diſtinguiſhed, whether Kings, private perſons, &c. And in his booke de Corrept. & gratia. cap. 14. It is ſaid, he would haue all to be ſaved, ſo as we muſt underſtand all ſuch as are predeſtinate to bee ſaved, becauſe amongſt them there are of all ſorts of men, as he ſaid to the Phariſies, You tithe every hearbe. III. Theſe two, to be willing to ſave a man, and that he ſhould come to the ſaving knowledge of the truth, are unſeparably united together. 1 Tim. 2.4. But the ſecond wee ſee doth not agree to all and every ſingular perſon: therefore the firſt cannot.

Ob. IV. In many places of Scripture Chriſt is ſaid to redeeme the world, as 1 Ioh. 2.2. Hee is a propitiatiõ for the ſins of the whole world. Anſ. This word world, ſignifieth, I. The frame of heauen & earth. II. All men both good and bad together. III. The cõpany of vnbeleevers, & malignant haters of Chriſt. IV. The congregation of the elect, diſperſed over the face of the whole earth, & to be gathered out of the ſame. In this 4. ſignificatiõ we muſt underſtand ſuch places as are above mentioned. Abrahã is called the heire of the world, that is, of many natiõs.

Rom. 4.13 Gen 17. 4, 5. Ezec 18. 23.

Obiect. V. God will not the death of a ſinner, but rather that he may repent and live. Anſ. Auguſt. in his firſt book to Simplicius, 2. queſt. anſwereth this queſtion. You muſt (ſaith he) diſtinguiſh betwixt man, as he is man, & man as he is a ſinner. For God is not delighted with the deſtructiõ of man, as he is man, but as he is a ſinner: neither wil he ſimply the death of any as he is a ſinner, or as it is the ruine & deſtruction of his creature: but in that, by the deteſtatiõ & revenge of ſin with eternal death, his glory is exceedingly advanced. God therefore will the death of a ſinner, but as it is a puniſhment, that is, as it is a meanes to declare & ſet out his divine juſtice: and therefore it is an vntruth for a man to ſay, that God would have none condemned. For whereas men are once condemned, it muſt be either with Gods will, or without it: if without it, then the will of God muſt needs ſuffer violence, the which to affirme is great impietie; if with his will, God muſt needs change his ſentence before ſet downe, but we muſt not preſume to ſay ſo.

Obiect. VI. God is the Father of all. Mal. 2.10. An. This place is meant of Gods Church, out of which al men, ſtãding in that corrupt eſtate by Adam, are the childrẽ of wrath, & of the divel. Eph. 2.2. Ioh. 8.44.

Obiect. VII. If God did elect ſome, & reject others, he muſt needs be [προσωποληπτης] a reſpecter of perſons. Anſ. I. One is ſaid then to accept, or have reſpect of perſons, when as hee by ſome circumſtances inherent in the perſon, is moved to doe this or that. Now; as for God, he did upon his meere pleaſure elect ſome, and reject others eternally, not moved or urged thereunto by any thing whatſoever out of himſelfe. II. He is debter to none, but may by good right doe with his creatures what ſeemeth good unto him in his owne eyes. III. It is one thing with God to accept of perſons, & another to make choiſe of men. This if wee ſhold not grant, it wold follow that God muſt be deemed blame-worthy, becauſe hee made not all his creatures moſt glorious Angels.

Ob. VIII. If God decreed to reject certaine men, then did he hate his creature. Anſ. God decreed to reject his creature and workemanſhip, not becauſe he hated it, but becauſe he appointed it to hatred. And it is one thing to hate, & another to appoint to hatred. And indeede God doth not actually hate any thing, but for ſin. That ſaying of Auguſt. to Simplicius is fit for this purpoſe. When God maketh the wicked, whom he doth not juſtifie, veſſels of wrath, he doth it not to hate that, which he made: for in that he made them veſſels, they have their uſe, namely, that by their paines to which they were ordained, the veſſels of honour might reape profit. God therefore doth not hate them, in that they are men, or veſſels, neither any thing that he made in them by creation, or ordinatiõ. For Gad hateth nothing which he hath made. But in as much as he made thẽ veſſels of deſtructiõ, hee doth it to inſtruct others As for their impiety, which he never made, that he hateth utterly. As therefore a judge hateth theft in a man, but he doth not hate his puniſhmẽt that he is ſent to work in the mines; For the theef doth the firſt, the judge the latter; ſo God, wheras of the cõpany of thẽ that periſh, he maketh veſſels of perdition, he doth not therefore hate that which he maketh, that is, the cõdemnation of thoſe which periſh in thir due puniſhment for ſin.

Ob. IX. The reprobates are ſaid in many places of Scripture to be redeemed by Chriſt. Anſ. Firſt, we muſt not underſtand ſuch places meant of all reprobates, but of ſuch as are for a time in the Church. II. They are ſaid to be redemed, juſtified, & ſãctified, both in their own judgments & the Churches alſo, in as much as they make an external profeſſion of the faith. But this is a judgmẽt of charity, not of certẽty. 2 Pet. 2.1.

Obiect. X. God might be thought cruell, if that hee had ordained the greateſt part of the world to deſtruction. Anſ. God could well enough have decreed, that even all men ſhould utterly have beene rejected, and yet he ſhould have been never a whit either cruel nor unjuſt.

Reaſons. I. He adjudged all and every one of thoſe foule and wicked ſpirits, which fell from him, to eternall torments. II. He decreed alſo, as is apparent by the event, that men ſhould live by the ſlaughter of beaſts; and yet God is not therefore cruell againſt them: and ſurely God is no more bound unto man, then unto the very bruite beaſts.

Exception. God appointed all to bee ſaved, with this caveat and condition, If they beleeve. Anſw. This is abſurd to affirme: for, I. by this meanes the decree of God ſhould depend upon the will of man, when as contrarily Gods decree doth limit and order all inferiour cauſes. II. It quite taketh away the certentie of Gods decree, becauſe a conditionall propoſition doth ſet downe nothing as being; or, it doth not certenly affirme any thing.

Object. If the merit of Chriſt did not extend it ſelfe as farre as the fall of Adam, then is not the head of the Serpent broken, nor Sathans kingdome aboliſhed in Chriſt. Anſw. This bruiſing of the Serpents head, is ſeene in them onely which are at enmitie with the Serpent, namely, in ſuch as truly beleeve. Gen. 3.15. compared with Rom. 16.20.

To conclude, that is not true which they ſay, namely, that this opinion of an univerſall and effectuall redemption of every ſingular man, is a notable remedy to comfort afflicted conſciences. For I appeale to the judgements of all men, whether in this manner of conſolation, be any great comfort to the cõſcience afflicted.

Chriſt dyed for all men.
Thou art a man:
Therefore Chriſt dyed for thee.

The II. Errour.

God did foreknow the fall of Adam, but he did not by his eternall decree fore-ordaine the ſame, and therefore that his fall was without the agent permiſſion of God.

The Confutation.

It is falſe. For, I. There is not the leaſt thing in nature, but it commeth to paſſe by the decree and will of God. Mat. 10.30. Wherefore ſuch as affirme, that God did onely foreknow this, or that, they doe either quite overturne the providence of GOD, or at the leaſt, imagine that it is a very idle providence. II. The fact of Herod and Pilate, in delivering Chriſt, againſt their owne conſciences, to bee crucified, may ſeeme to be as hainous as was Adams fall, and yet they are ſaid to have done that, which the hand of the Lord had fore-ordained to be done. Act. 4.28. Againe, the fall of Adam was two manner of wayes, by Gods active, or rather operative permiſſion. I. In as much as the fall was an action: for in God alone wee live, we moove, and have our being. II. In as much as that this fall was but a bare tryall of his loyaltie to God, whereby God would trie both the power and will of his creature.

The III. Errour.

God by reaſon that he did fore-ſee the diſobedience of ſome, or, that they would contemne the Goſple, did decree their deſtruction and condemnation.

The Confutation.

We utterly deny, that the foreſeeing of the contempt of grace in any, was the firſt and principall cauſe of the decree of reprobation. Reaſons. I. Paul, Rom. 1.18. doth derive the common condemnation of the Gentiles from hence, namely; that they withheld the truth in unrighteouſneſſe, that is, becauſe they did wittingly extinguiſh that light of nature, by their wicked doings, which they had of the knowledge of God, & would not obey their conſciences inwardly checking them for the ſame. II. If that faith fore-ſeene, be not the cauſe of the decree of election, it cannot bee that the want of faith fore-ſeene, ſhould be the cauſe of the decree of reprobation; but rather, as faith doth, in order of cauſes, follow after election, ſo muſt incredulitie reprobation. For there is the like reaſon or proportion of contraries. III. Many infants depart this life, both being out of the true Church, and before they have any uſe of reaſon: and againe, many there are, which albeit they live long, yet being either ideots and fooles, or borne deafe, they cannot come to the trne uſe of reaſon: in all which it is not credible, that there ſhould be ſuſpected any contempt of the Goſpel, which they could not learne. IV. Eſau was hated of God for none other cauſe, but for that it ſo pleaſed him. Rom. 9.18. V. If this opinion ſhould be true, then would it follow, that men ſhould be condemned of nothing elſe but incredulitie, the which is not ſo. Ioh. 3.36. Chriſt ſpeaking of unbeleefe, ſaith not, that for it the wrath of God came upon man, but remaineth upon him. And why ſhould we daily aske pardon for our ſinnes, if nothing but incredulitie or unbeleefe condemned us? nay, although that there were never any contempt of the Goſpel, yet that corruption of originall ſinne, were ſufficient enough to condemne men. VI. Alſo that admiration which Paul hath, Rom. 9.20. O man, who art thou, which diſputeſt with God! doth plainely ſhew that the cauſe of the decree of God in rejecting ſome, is unſearchable: & that it doth not at all depend upon any fore-ſeene contumacy towards the grace of God offered in the Goſpel. For if it were otherwiſe, wee might eaſily give a reaſon of Gods decree. Auguſt. epiſt. 105. ſaith very well. Who (ſaith hee) created the reprobates, but God? and why, but becauſe it pleaſed him? but why pleaſed it him? O man, who art thou that diſputeſt with God?

Some Divines perceiving that this is an hard ſentence, they goe about to mitigate it in this ſort. The matter, ſay they, or object of predeſtination, is a reaſonable creature, & that not ſimply or abſolutely cõſidered, but partly as it fell, partly as of it ſelfe it was ſubject to fall: and thereupon God preordaining men from everlaſting, conſidered them, not ſimply as he was to make them men, but as they were ſuch men as might fall into ſin, and againe bee redeemed by Chriſt, and after called to the light of the Goſpel. The efficient or firſt motive

cauſe, was not any foreknowne cauſe, either this or that, but the meere will of God. For he diſpoſeth all things not of, and by his knowledge, but rather according to the ſame. But theſe things, albeit they may ſeeme to bee ſubtile deviſes, yet are they not altogether true. Reaſons I. The Potter when he purpoſeth to make ſome veſſell, doth not conſider the clay, and regard in it ſome inherent quality, to make ſuch a veſſell, but he maketh it of ſuch and ſuch a forme, to this or that uſe, even of his alone free-will and pleaſure. II. Rom. 9. 21. Hath not the potter power to make of the ſame lumpe one veſſell to honour, and another to diſhonor? In which place we may not underſtand by the name lumpe, all mankind corrupted and falne, and ſo to be redeemed in Chriſt: for then Paul would not have ſaid, that God made veſſels of wrath, but rather that he did forſake them after they were made. III. This ſeemeth prepoſterous that God did firſt foreknow mankind created, falne, and redeemed in Chriſt: and that afterward he ordained them ſo foreknown to life or to death. For the end is the firſt thing in the intention of the agent: neither will a very unskilfull worke-man firſt prepare meanes by which he may be helped to doe a thing, before he hath ſet downe in his mind all the ends, both ſuch as are moſt neere, and them that are very far off. Now we know this, that mans creation, and his fall in Adam, are but means to execute Gods predeſtination, and therefore are ſubordinate unto it: but the end of Gods decree, is the manifeſtation of his glory, in ſaving ſome, and condemning others. Therefore wee may not once imagine, that God did firſt conſult of the meanes whereby he determined to execute his decree, before he deliberated of the election, and reprobation of man.

The IV. Errour.

Gods calling to the knowledge of the Goſpell, is univerſall, yea, of all men, and every ſingular perſon, without exception.

The Confutation.

This is a very unreaſonable poſition. Reaſons. I. God would not have all men called unto Chriſt, Mat. 16. Many are called, but few are choſen. He ſaith not that all, but many are called. Chriſt in his Diſciples firſt embaſſage, chargeth them that they ſhould not preach to the Gentiles of his comming: and to the Cananitiſh woman he ſaith, Math. 15. 26. It is not meet to give the childrens bread unto dogges. Matt. 13. 11. It is not given to every one to know the myſteries of the kingdome of God, Ro. 16. 25. The myſterie of the Goſpel (whether it be meant of Chriſt, or the calling of the Gentiles) was kept ſecret from the beginning of the world. II. There be many millions of men, which have not ſo much as heard of Chriſt. Act. 14. 15. God in times paſt ſuffered all the Gentiles to walke in their owne waies. III. The greateſt part of the world hath ever bin out of the covenant of grace, Eph. 2. 12. Yewere, I ſay, at that time without Chriſt, & were aliens frō the Cōmon-wealth of Iſrael, and ſtrangers from the covenants of promiſe, and had no hope, and were without God in the world: but now ye are no more ſtrangers and forreiners, but citizens with the Saints, &c. verſ. 19

Obj. They are ſaid to be [ἀπηλλοτριωμένοι] not ſimply alienated, but abalienated from God: now how could they be abalienated, except either they or their predeceſſours had bin in the covenant? Anſw. The Gentiles are not ſaid to be abalienated, from the covenant, but from the common-wealth of Iſrael: becauſe that God had then by certaine lawes, rites, and ceremonies, utterly ſevered, and diſtinguiſhed the people of the Iewes from all other nations.

Obiect. This generall calling, is not to bee underſtood ſimply of the miniſtery of the word, but of the wil of God delivered preſently after the fall in his unwritten word: and afterward in his written word: and this all men ought to know, although many, through their owne default, know it not. Anſwer. But the Scriptures were committed to the cuſtodie of the Church of God, and every one was not credited with them. Rom. 3, 2. Vnto the Iewes were of credit committed the Oracles of God. 1 Tim. 3. 15. The Church is the pillar & the groūd of truth. Pſa. 147. 19. He ſhewed his words unto Iacob, and his ſtatutes & lawes to the houſe of Iſrael. 20. He hath not dealt ſo with every nation: therefore they have not knowne his lawes, Pſa. 76. 1. The Lord is famous in Iudea, and in Iſrael is his name great.

Obiect. The covenant of Grace was made with Adam and Eve, and in them all mankinde was received both into the Church, and covenant, and alſo called to the knowledge of God. Anſw. I. This reaſon wanteth even common reaſon and ſenſe, to ſay that God giving his promiſe in the daies of Adam and Noah, did in them call all mankinde that ſhould come after. II. Adam before his fall, did indeede receive the grace both for himſelfe, and for others alſo; and in the fall, he loſt it both for himſelfe, and for all others: that after the fall, he received the promiſe for himſelfe alone, and not for the whole world; otherwiſe the firſt Adam ſhould not onely have beene a living creature, but a quickning ſpirit, the which is proper to the ſecond Adam, 1 Cor. 15. 55.

If we ſhould grant this doctrine to be true, then muſt we needs allow of theſe abſurdities in divinitie, which follow. I. That God would have, all, & each ſingular man to be ſaved: and withall he would have ſome ordained to hatred and perdition: or, That in regard of God, all men are elected, and redeemed, but in regard of the event many periſh. II. The guilt of Adams ſin muſt not be imputed to any one of his poſterity, becauſe that God, having mercie of all generally in Chriſt, did take into the covenant of reconciliation all mankinde. Now if but the guiltineſſe of Adams fall bee taken away, the puniſhment forthwith ceaſeth to be a puniſhment, and corruption it selfe is by little and little abolished in all men.

CHAP. LV.

Of the state and condition of the Reprobates when they are dead.

THE death of the reprobate, is a separation of the bodie and the soule: of the body, that for a time it may lye dead in the earth: of the soule, that it may feele the torments of hell, even untill the time of the last judgement: at which time the whole man shall be cast into the most terrible and fearefull fire of hell. 1. Pet.3.19. By the which he also went and preached unto the spirits that are in prison. Luk.8.2. 2 Pet.2.4 For if God spared not the Angels that sinned, but cast them downe into hell, and delivered them into chaines of darknesse to be kept unto damnation, &c.

The reprobates when they die, doe become without sence and astonied like unto a stone: or else they are overwhelmed with a terrible horrour of conscience, and despairing of their salvation, as it were with a gulfe of the sea overturning them. 1 Sam.25.37. Then in the morning when the wine was gone out of Nabal, his wife told him those words, and his heart died within him, and he was like a stone. 38. And about ten daies after the Lord smot Nabal that hee dyed Matth.27.5. And when hee had cast downe the silver peeces in the temple, he departed, and went and hanged himselfe.

CHAP. LVI.

Of the condemnation of the Reprobates in the last Judgement.

IN the last judgement, at the sound of the trumpet, the living being stricken with horrour and feare, shall be changed in a moment, the dead shall rise againe to condemnation: both the living and the dead shall then have immortall bodies, but without glory: and they standing upon the earth at the left hand of Christ the Iudge, shall heare the sentence of condemnation: Depart from me yee cursed into everlasting fire, which is prepared for the divell and his angels. Matth.25.41. And they shall come forth that have done good, unto the resurrection of life: but they that have done evill, unto the resurrection of condemnation. Ioh.5,29.1 Thess.4. 16. For the Lord himselfe shall descend from heaven with a shout, and with the voice of the Archangell, and with the trumpet of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first. 17. Then shall we, which live and remaine, bee caught up with them also in the cloudes, to meete the Lord in the ayre: and so shall we be ever with the Lord.

CHAP. LVII.

Of the estate of the Reprobates in hell.

AFter that the sentence of condemnation is pronounced, then followeth everlasting death: whereof this is the estate.

A I. The reprobates are separated from the presence and glory of God.

II. They are punished with eternall confusion, and most bitter reproches: because all their secret wickednesses and sinnes are revealed. 2 Thess.1.9. Which shall be punished with everlasting perdition, from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power. Math.5.8. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. 1 Ioh.2.28. And now little children abide in him, that when he shall appeare, we may be bold, and not bee ashamed before him at his comming.

III. They have fellowship with the divell and his angels, Matth.25.41.

B IV. They are wholly in body and soule tormented with an incredible horrour, and exceeding great anguish, through the sence and feeling of Gods wrath, powred out upon them for ever. Esa.66.2. And they shall goe forth, & looke upon the carkesses of men, that have transgressed against mee: for their worme shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.

Hereupon is the punishment of those that are condemned, called hell-fire, a worme, weeping and gnashing of teeth, utter darkenesse, &c. Rev.21.8. But the fearefull, and unbeleeving and the abominable, and murtherers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and Idolaters, and all lyars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death,

C Mat.13.42. And shall cast them into a furnace of fire, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. Esa.66.24.

A Corollarie.

AND this is the full execution of Gods decree of reprobation, whereby appeareth the great justice of God in punishing sinne: from whence also commeth Gods glorie, which he propoundeth to himselfe, as the last and chiefest end in all these things. Therefore let every Christian propound the same end unto himselfe. Rom.9.14. What shall wee say then? is there unrighteousnesse with God? God forbid. 15. For he said to Moses, I will have mercie on him, to whom I will shew mercie: and will have compassion on him, on whom I wil have compassion.

D 16. So then, it is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that sheweth mercie, 17. For the Scripture saith unto Pharaoh, For this same purpose have I stirred thee up, that I might shew my power in thee, & that my name might be declared throughout all the earth. 1 Cor.10.13. Whether therefore yee eate, or drinke, or whatsoever ye doe, doe all to the glory of God.

CHAP. LVIII.

Of the Application of Predestination.

THE right applying of Predestination to the persons of men, is very necessary: and it hath two parts. The first, is the judgement of particular predestination, and the second, is the use of it.

The judgement and discerning of a mans

owne predeſtination, is to bee performed by meanes of theſe rules which follow.

I. The Elect alone, and all they that are elect, not onely may be, but alſo in Gods good time, are ſure of Election in Chriſt to eternall life. 1 Cor.2.12. 2 Cor.13.5.

II. They have not this knowledge from the firſt cauſes of Election, but rather from the laſt effects thereof: and they are eſpecially two: The teſtimony of Gods ſpirit, and the works of ſanctification. 2 Pet.1.10. Rom.8.16.

III. If any doubt of this teſtimony, it will appeare unto them, whether it come from the Spirit of God, or their owne carnall preſumption: Firſt, by a full perſwaſion which they ſhall have; for the holy Ghoſt doth not barely ſay it, but perſwadeth ſuch, that they are the children of God, the which the fleſh cannot in any wiſe doe. Secondly, by the manner of perſwaſion: for the holy Ghoſt draweth not reaſons from the works, or worthines of man, but from Gods favour and love: and this kind of perſwaſion is far different from that which Satan uſeth. Thirdly, by the effects of that teſtimony. For if the perſwaſion ariſe from preſumption, it is a dead perſwaſion: but contrarily, it is moſt lively and ſtirring, if it come from the H. Ghoſt. For ſuch as are perſwaded that they are elected, and adopted children of God, they will love God, they will truſt in him, and they will cal upon him with their whole heart.

IV. If the teſtimony of Gods ſpirit be not ſo powerfull in the elect, then may they judge of their election, by that other effect of the holy Ghoſt; namely, Sanctification, like as we uſe to judge by heate that there is fire, when we cannot ſee the flame it ſelfe.

V. And of all the effects of Sanctification, theſe are moſt notable. I. To feele our wants, and in the bitterneſſe of heart to bewaile the offence of God in every ſinne. II. To ſtrive againſt the fleſh, that is, to reſiſt, and to hate the ungodly motions thereof, and with griefe to think them burthenous and troubleſome. III. To deſire earneſtly and vehemently the grace of God, and merit of Chriſt to obtaine eternall life. IV. When it is obtained, to account it a moſt precious jewell. Phil.3.8. V. To love the Miniſter of Gods Word, in that he is a miniſter; and a Chriſtian, in that he is a Chriſtian: and for that cauſe, if need require, to be ready to ſpend our blood with them. Matth.10.42. 1 Ioh.3.16. VI. To call upon God earneſtly, and with teares. VII. To deſire and love Chriſts comming and the day of judgement, that an end may bee made of the dayes of ſinne. VIII. To flye all occaſions of ſinne, and ſeriouſly to endeavour to come to newneſſe of life. IX. To preſever in theſe things to the laſt gaſpe of life. Luther hath a good ſentence for this purpoſe, He that will ſerve God, muſt, ſaith he, beleeve that which cannot be ſeen, hope for that which is deferred, and love God when he ſheweth himſelfe an enemy, and thus remaine to the end.

VI. Now, if ſo be all the effects of the ſpirit are very feeble in the godly, they muſt know this, that God tryeth them, yet ſo as they muſt not therewith be diſmayed, becauſe it is moſt ſure, that if they have faith, but as much as a graine of muſtard ſeed, and be as weake as a young infant is, it is ſufficient to engraffe them into Chriſt, & therfore they muſt not doubt of their electiō, becauſe they ſee their faith feeble & the effects of the H. Ghoſt faint within thē.

VII. Neither muſt he, that as yet hath not felt in his heart any of thoſe effects, preſently conclude that he is a Reprobate: but let him rather uſe the word of God, & the ſacraments, that he may have an inward ſenſe of the power of Chriſt, drawing him unto him, & an aſſurāce of his redemption by Chriſts death & paſſion.

VIII. No man may peremptorily ſet downe, that himſelfe, or any other is a Reprobate. For God doth oftentimes prefer thoſe which did ſeeme to be moſt of all eſtranged from his favour, to be in his kingdome above thoſe, who in mans judgement were the children of the Kingdome. Hence it is that Chriſt ſaith, Mat. 21.31. The Publicans and harlots go before you: and Matth, 20.6. Many an one is called at the eleventh houre, as appeareth by that notable example of the theefe upon the croſſe.

The uſes, which may be made of this doctrine of predeſtination, are very many. Firſt, for our inſtruction, we are taught theſe things.

I. That there is neither any juſtification by workes, nor any workes of ours that are meritorious. For election is by the free grace of God: and therefore in like ſort is juſtification. For, as I have ſaid before, the cauſe of the cauſe, is the cauſe of the thing cauſed. And for this reaſon, in the worke of ſalvation, grace doth wholly challenge al to it ſelfe. At this time there is a remnant through the election of grace. Who hath ſaved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpoſe and grace, which was given to us, through Chriſt Ieſus, before the world was: unto you it is given for Chriſt, that not onely ye ſhould beleeve in him, but alſo ſuffer for his ſake. We are juſtified freely by grace. Not by the works of righteouſneſſe which we had done, but according to his mercy he ſaved us. I will cauſe you to walke in my ſtatutes. The gift of God is eternall life. Rom.11.5. 2 Tim.1.9. Phil.1.29. Rom.3.24. Tit.3.5. Eze.36.27. Rom.6.23.

II. That Aſtrology, teaching, by the caſting of Nativities, what men will be, is ridiculous, and impious: becauſe it determineth, that ſuch ſhall be very like in life, & converſation, whom God in his predeſtination hath made unlike. Iacob and Eſau, borne of the ſame parents, and almoſt in the ſame moment of time, (for Iacob Gen.25.26. held Eſau by the heele as he was borne) were of moſt unlike diſpoſitions, & had divers events. The like may we ſee in all twins, and others, which are borne at the ſame time.

III. That God is moſt wiſe; omnipotent, juſt, and mercifull. Rom 11.33. O the wonderfull riches, both of the wiſedome and knowledge of God how unſearchable are his judgements, & his waies paſt finding out! Eph.1.5. Who hath predeſtinate us, to be adopted through Ieſus Chriſt unto himſelfe, according to the good pleaſure of his will.

Secondly, being the ſervants of Chriſt we are admoniſhed.

I. To fight againſt al doubting and diffidence of our ſalvation, becauſe it neither dependeth upon workes, nor faith, but upon Gods decree which is immutable. Rejoyce that your names are written in the booke of life. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods choſen? it is God that juſtifieth, who ſhall condemne? This teacheth, that the anker of hope muſt bee fixed in that truth and ſtability of the immutable good pleaſure of God: ſo that albeit our faith be ſo toſſed, as that it is in danger of ſhipwrack, nevertheleſſe it muſt never ſinke to the bottome, but even in the midſt of danger take hold upon repentance as on a board, and ſo recover it ſelfe.

Mat.21.24. Luk.10.20. Rom.8.3. 2 Tim.2.19.

II. To humble our ſoules under the mighty hand of God: for wee are as clay in the hand of the potter. Rom.11.20. They through infidelity are broken off, but thou ſtandeſt through faith. Be not high minded, but feare.

III. To give all glory to God. 2 Theſſ.2.13. We ought to give thanks alway to God for you brethren, beloved of the Lord, becauſe that God hath from the beginning choſen you to ſalvation.

IV. To beare croſſes patiently. Rom.8.29. Thoſe which he knew before, he hath alſo predeſtinate, to be made like to the image of his ſon. This likeneſſe to Chriſt, is the bearing afflictions. Phil.3.10. That I may know him, and the vertue of his reſurrection, and the fellowſhip of his afflictions, to be made conformable to his death.

V. To doe good workes. Eph.2.10 We are his workemanſhip created in Chriſt Ieſus to doe good workes, which God hath ordained, that wee ſhould walke in them.

Thus much concerning Theology.

AN EXCELLENT TREATISE

of comforting ſuch, as are troubled about their Predeſtination:

Taken out of the ſecond anſwer of Mr. Beza, to D. Andreas, in the act of their Colloquy at Mompelgart, &c.

VNleſſe (ſaith D. Andreas) regeneration be alwaies united to baptiſme, and remaines in ſuch as are baptized, how ſhould the troubled conſciẽces of thoſe be eaſed & comforted, who becauſe they feele not in thẽſelves any good motiõs of Gods holy ſpirit, find none other refuge, but the Word & Sacraments, eſpecially the Sacrament of baptiſme? Now this remedy would be of ſmall force, except it be oppoſed againſt thoſe imaginations, which the divell caſteth into a troubled heart; yea except it taught ſuch, that God is greater then our hart, who in baptiſme hath not onely offered us the adoption of ſons, but hath indeed beſtowed the ſame upon us: as it is ſaid by Chriſt, Mar.16.16. He that beleeveth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved. And by Paul, Gal.3.27. Yee which are baptized, have put on Chriſt. David being armed with the like comfort from his circumciſion, feared not to joyne battell with the Giant Goliah: & if this were not ſo it muſt needs follow, that baptiſme were nothing els but an idle ceremony, & alſo the perſons of the trinity would be thought liers. Wherfore thoſe afflicted men, when Satan aſſaulteth them, muſt reſiſt him with theſe words: depart from me Satan, thou haſt neither part nor portion in the inheritance of my ſoule, becauſe I am baptized in the name of the holy Trinity, and ſo am I truly made the ſon of God by adoption. And theſe are the ſtrong weapons, which ſo many times; and in ſo many words, have been objected againſt me by D. Andreas, and wherby he hath gotten the victory: but becauſe this his reaſon is ſomewhat intricate, I wil explaine it after this ſort. Firſt, for the place of Scripture which he alleadgeth, namely that God is greater then our hearts. 1 Ioh.3.20. It is ſo far from comforting an afflicted conſcience that it will rather drive him to deſpaire. Neither doth Ioh.1. Epiſt.3.20. make mention of it, to eaſe ſuch as are in deſpaire, ſhewing unto them by that ſentence, the greatneſſe of Gods mercies; but rather that he might thereby even bruiſe in pieces the hearts of proud perſons, when they conſider the greatneſſe of Gods majeſty. And for the other place, when as a man doubteth of his ſalvation, and feeleth no teſtimonies of faith in himſelfe, (for ſuch an one we heare ſpeake of) what comfort, thinke you can he have in theſe words: Mar.16.16. He that beleeveth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved? For he would rather reaſon contrarily thus. I indeed am baptized, yet for all that I beleeve not, and therefore my baptiſme is not availeable, I muſt needs be condemned. For the ſaying of Aug. in his treatiſe upon Ioh.6. is very true, who ſpeaking of Simon Magus, ſaith, What good did it to him to bee baptized? Brag not therefore, ſaith he, that thou art baptized, as though that were ſufficient for thee, to inherit the Kingdome of Heaven. As for the place of Paul, Gal.3.12. I ſhewed plainely before, how D. Andreas did violently wreſt it to his purpoſe.

Neither are his reaſons taken from the abſurdity that would follow, of more force then the former, albeit hee maketh them eſpecial pillars to underprop the truth of his cauſe: For, I pray you, is God, of leſſe truth, becauſe his truth is neglected and derided of them that contemne it? Is the ceremony of Baptiſme therfore in vaine, becauſe ſome refuſe the grace offered in Baptiſme: others (if wee may beleeve D. And.) reject that grace whẽ they have received it? What? Is not the Goſpel therefore the power of God to ſalvation, becauſe it is to ſuch as beleeve not, the ſavour of death to eternall death? May not the Supper of the Lord, be a pledge of Gods covenant, becauſe ſo many abuſe theſe holy ſignes, or (as D. Andreas is of opinion) the very body and blood of our Saviour Chriſt? And that I may reaſon from that which is true in the experience of every child: can the Sunne be ſaid to be without light, becauſe they which are blind, and aſleepe, have no benefit by the light thereof, neither ſuch as ſhut their eies ſo cloſe that they will not enjoy the comfort of the light? But amongſt all, this one is moſt childiſh, that Dr. Andreas wil make this his principal argument, namely, that in vaine did men, thus tempted, flie at all unto Baptiſme, unleſſe we conclude with him, that all ſuch as are baptized, are in Baptiſme adopted the ſons of God. For firſt, if this were a good conſequent from baptiſme, it were in vaine, for ſuch an afflicted conſcience, to gather unto himſelf a teſtimony from the word of God, and the other Sacrament of the Lords Supper, unleſſe we make all thoſe to be in like ſort regenerate and adopted, unto whom the word of God is preached, and the Lords Supper adminiſtred, either of which for Dr. Andreas to affirme, is a bold untruth.

But to omit this, what if we grant this which Dr. Andreas requireth concerning Baptiſme? may not for all that, any, that is ſo tempted, by Satans policy, refell this great comforter, by his owne argument? after this ſort. I will grant Dr. Andreas your queſtion: ſuppoſe I have bin baptized and adopted the ſonne of God, yet ſeeing you teach, that the grace of God is not ſo ſure, but that I may fall from the ſame, as indeed I feele that I have grievouſly falne, what do you now elſe but lift me up with one hand to heaven, and with the other caſt mee downe into hell? What meane you therefore to teach me thoſe things which are ſo far from eaſing mee, as that contrarily, they doe more and more lay out unto me mine abominable and ungratefull heart? See now what ſure conſolation, conſciences grievouſly afflicted may reape by this doctrine of their comforter Dr. Andreas.

Now if any be deſirous to know, what ſpirituall comfort is moſt meete to bee miniſtred unto conſciences ſo troubled, I wil ſhew them that which is grounded upon a ſure foundation, and which I my ſelfe have often found to be true in mine own experience: the which alſo I purpoſe to handle more largely, for the benefit of the Chriſtian reader. Firſt therefore we teach, contrarily to that which D. Andreas doth moſt falſely object againſt us, that the eternall decree, or, as Paul ſpeaketh, the purpoſe of God, muſt not be ſought in the bottomleſſe counſell of God, but rather in the manifeſtation of it, namely, in his vocation, by the Word and Sacraments. This I ſpeake of ſuch as are of yeeres of diſcretion, as they muſt needs be, whom we ſeeke to comfort in this place.

Now becauſe that externall vocation, is not proper onely to the elect. Mat. 22. 14. (for many are called, but few are choſen) but ſuch a vocation as is effectuall, that is, whereby the underſtanding is not onely inlightned with the ſaving knowledge of God, but in the will alſo there is created a true, though not a perfect hatred of ſinne, from whence ariſeth an abhorring of ſinne, and love of that which is good, or rather a deſire to will, and doe that which is right. Therefore when we ſee one thus dangerouſly tempted, wee apply unto his afflicted conſcience, that true Nepenthes, and comfortable and reſtorative medicine, which is taken from Gods effectuall vocation, as it were out of an Apothecaries boxe.

If therefore I have to do with ſuch an one, who either was never called by the preaching of the Goſpel, or if he were called, yet ſeemeth both to himſelfe and others, never to have regarded him that called; and hence concludeth that hee is not in the number of them, whom God hath purpoſed to take pity upon: I forthwith tell him, that Satan plaieth the Sophiſter in teaching him thus to conclude: for this his reaſon is as untrue, as if a man looking at midnight, and ſeeing that the Sun is not then riſen, ſhould therefore affirme, that it would never riſe. And this is that which when I objected to D. Andreas p. 482. he very boldly corrupting my meaning, printed this as mine aſſertion, Say unto a man that is afflicted, the Sunne is riſen, although as yet it be not riſen. But I teach not lies, howſoever this depravation of my words came from D. Andreas printers, or himſelfe. And whereas D. Andreas excepted, that this conſolation were to no purpoſe, becauſe he that was afflicted might doubt whether this Sunne would ever riſe or not: I anſwered to him, that which the printers have quite left out, and which I will therefore now more fully repeate. I was wont therefore to tell the partie thus troubled, after he had forſaken his falſe and divelliſh poſition: that although an externall vocation were not of force enough to appeaſe an afflicted conſcience, yet it was of ſufficient force and efficacy againſt the divell. For I tell him that they which never had externall nor internall calling, they (if we regard an ordinary calling) muſt needs periſh: but whoſoever is once called, he hath ſet as it were his foot into the firſt entry into the kingdome of heaven: and unleſſe it be by his owne default, hee ſhall come afterwards into the courts of God, and ſo by degrees into his Majeſties pallace. And for the confirmation of this, I uſe divers wayes. For why, ſay I, doubteſt thou of his good will towards thee, who in mercy hath ſent me a miniſter to call thee unto him? thou haſt no cauſe, unleſſe thou alleadge the number of thy ſinnes. If this be all, why oppoſe the infinite greatneſſe of Gods mercy againſt thy ſinnes, who hath ſent mee to bring thee unto him. The Lord vouchſafeth to bring thee into the way of the elect, why art thou a ſtumbling block unto thy ſelf? & refuſeſt to follow him? if thou feeleſt not as yet inwardly thy ſelfe to be ſtirred forward, pray that thou maiſt know this for a moſt ſure truth, that this deſire in thee is a pledge of Gods fatherly good wil towards thee. He neither can, nor wil be wanting to this which he hath ſtirred up in thee. After theſe exhortations, I ſhew him how ſome are called at the eleventh houre, how the Gentiles after many 1000. yeers were called to be Gods people, how the thiefe was ſaved upon the croſſe: theſe and other remedies I uſed, whereof, I never remember, that it repented mee.

But if I deale with ſuch as have before obeied

the Lords calling, and either by reaſon of ſome grievous ſinne, into which they have falne, or becauſe they have abſented themſelves from the Church of God, or in that they, refuſing publike and private admonitions, have beene offenſive to the Church, or, which in mine experience hath befalne many very good and godly perſons, whileſt they ſatisfied not themſelves, they are ſo altogether buſily converſant in reprehending and judging themſelves, that they for a while forget the mercy of God: with theſe, to omit ſuch as for ſome naturall infirmities, are, if they procure not ſpeedy helpe of ſome expert Phyſition, moſt dangerouſly tempted: with theſe, I ſay, I uſe this order:

First, I deſire that they intimate unto me, that which eſpecially grieveth them: & as I underſtand both the thing, and meaſure thereof by them, I take eſpeciall care of this, that they being already overmuch caſt downe, that I then, by the ſevere denunciation of the law, doe not quite overturne them: yet ſo, as that I doe not altogether withdraw them, either from condemning their former ſins, or the meditatiõ of Gods judgement: And ſo, as much as I can, temper the words of conſolation, as that I nothing cloake Gods anger againſt them for their ſins.

After I have thus prepared them, I then demand, whether they have bin ever in this caſe or no? nay (ſay they, for the moſt part) the time was, when in great joy & peace of cõſcience, I ſerv'd the Lord; thẽ was I an happy perſon, ful of faith, ful of hope: but now wretch that I am have loſt my firſt love, & there is nothing vexeth me more, thẽ to remẽber thoſe times paſt. But, ſay I, whether conſideration is more grievous unto thee, the apprehenſion of Gods judgements, or the diſlike of thy ſelf that thou ſhouldſt offend ſo gracious & loving a father? Both, ſay they, but eſpecially the latter. Therefore, ſay I, ſin alſo diſpleaſeth thee in that it is ſin, namely, becauſe it is evill, and God who is goodnes it ſelfe, is offended with it? It is even as you told us, ſay they, and I am now aſhamed that ſo vile and wicked a wretch as my ſelfe, ſhould come before ſo gracious and mercifull a father. Then I tell them, that no man is offended, but rather is glad, when he can iniury one whom he hateth: this they grant, & withall ſay, God forbid, that albeit the Lord hate me, I in like ſort ſhould hate him, unto whom, if it were poſſible, I would be reconciled againe. Then I adde this: Be of good comfort, my deare brother, you are in good caſe. For who can love God, eſpecially whẽ he is wounded by him? who can bewaile the loſſe of his friendſhip? who can deſire to come againe into his favour, but he, whom God ſtill loveth, although for a time he be angry with him? except peradventure you have not learned thus much, that the knowledge of our ſalvation commeth not from fleſh and blood, but from God himſelf, who firſt vouchſafed to inſtruct us, and from Chriſt Ieſus, manifeſting the Father unto us: And that it is Gods bleſſing, that we do love God, who loved us firſt, when we were his enemies. You have therfore, my good brother, juſt cauſe, why you ſhould be greatly diſpleaſed with many things paſt, but there is no cauſe why you ſhould deſpaire. Briefly, you have inwardly, and, as it were, dwelling with you, evident teſtimonies of your future reconciliation with God: eſpecially, if you ceaſe not to pray unto him earneſtly, who hath laid the foundation of repentance in you, to wit, a diſlike of ſinne, and a deſire to be reconciled unto him. The ſheepe which wandered out of the fold, ceaſed not to be a ſheepe, albeit it went aſtray for a time: you now are that ſheepe, to whom that faithfull Shepheard of all thoſe ſheepe, which the Father hath committed to him, leaving thoſe ninetie and nine, doth not ſo much by my miniſtery, declare that he ſeeketh you, as having already ſought you, though you not ſeeking him, hath indeed found you. Math. 7. 7. Knocke (ſaith he) and it ſhall be opened unto you. And have you now forgotten thoſe promiſes, which were ſo often made to them that repent? and alſo, which they had experience of, who in the ſight of the world were in a deſperate caſe? But I, ſaith he againe, feele no ſenſe of faith, or hope: but I feele all the contrary. Nay, ſay I, you deceive your ſelfe, as I told you before. For it is the Comforter alone, which teacheth you to hate ſinne, not ſo much for the puniſhment, as becauſe it is evill and diſliketh God, albeit he ſheweth not himſelfe ſo fully at the firſt: becauſe you had ſo many waies grievouſly offended him: as that he ſeemeth for a while quite to forſake you. And, that you have not quite loſt him, but that he is yet in ſome ſecret corner of your ſoule, from whence at your inſtant prayers he will ſhew himſelf unto you, this will plainly declare unto you, which I now admoniſh you of the ſecond time. But let us grant as much as you can ſay: yet ſure it is, that your faith was not dead, but only poſſeſſed with a ſpirituall lethargy. You lived in the wombe of your mother, and there were ignorant of your life. A drunken man, although he loſe for a time the uſe of reaſon, and alſo of his limmes, yet he never loſeth reaſon it ſelfe. You would thinke that in winter the trees were dead, but they ſpring againe in the ſummer ſeaſon. At night the Sunne ſetteth, but in the next morning it riſeth againe. And how often ſee wee by experience, that hee which at one time tooke the foyle in a combate, at another did win the prize? And know this, that in a ſpirituall combate of the fleſh with the ſpirit, the like we may ſee in many, partly by reaſon of the weaknes of our nature, partly through ſloth to reſiſt, and partly for default to beware. To theſe he replyeth (for ſuch temptations are very hardly remooved) I would to God, ſaith he, I could perſwade my ſelfe that theſe promiſes belonged to mee. For my preſent eſtate conſtraineth mee to doubt, whether I am the childe of God, or not.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE, EDWARD LORD RVSSELL, EARLE OF BEDFORD, GRACE, AND PEACE, &c.

RIGHT Honourable, excellent is the saying of Paul to Titus: To the pure all things are pure: but to the impure and unbeleeving is nothing pure, but even their mindes and consciences are defiled. Tit. 1. 15. In which words hee determines three questions. The first, whether things ordained and made by God, may become uncleane or no? his answer is, that they may: and his meaning must be conceived with a distinction. By nature things ordained of God are not uncleane: for Moses in Genesis saith, that God saw all things which he had made, and they were very good: yet they may become uncleane either by law, or by the fault of men. By law, as when God forbids us the things which in themselves are good: without whose commandement, they are as pure things not forbidden. Thus, for the time of the old Testament, God forbade the Iewes the use of certaine creatures; not because they were indeed worse then the rest, but because it was his pleasure upon speciall cause to restraine them, that he might put a difference betweene his owne people, and the rest of the world: that he might exercise their obedience, and advertise them of the inward impurity of mind. Now this legall impuritie was abolished at the ascension of Christ. By the fault of men things are uncleane when they are abused, and not applyed to the ends for which they were ordained. The second question is, to whom things ordained of God are pure? He answers, to the pure: that is, to them whose persons stand justified and sanctified before God in Christ in whom they beleeve, who also doe use Gods blessings in holy manner to his glory and the good of men. The third question is, who they are to whom all things are uncleane? His answer is, to the uncleane: by whom hee understands all such: I. whose persons displease God, because they doe not indeed beleeve in Christ. II. Who use not the gifts of God in holy manner, sanctifying them by the word and prayer. III. Who abuse them to bad ends, as to ryot, pride, and oppression of men, &c. Now that to such, the use of all the creatures of God is uncleane, it is manifest: because all their actions are sinnes, in that they are not done of faith: and a mans person must first please God in Christ, before his action or worke done can please him. Againe, they use the blessings and creatures of God with evill conscience, because so long as they are forth of Christ, they are but usurpers thereof before God. For in the fall of the first Adam, we lost the title and interest to all good things: and though God permit the use of many of them to wicked men; yet is not the former title recovered but in Christ the second Adam, in whom we are advanced to a better state, then we had by creation. Acts 15. 10. 1 Tim. 4. 3.

Hence it followes necessarily, that (to omit all other things) Nobility, though it be a blessing and ordinance of God in it selfe, is but an uncleane thing, if the enioyers thereof be not truly engraffed into Christ, and made bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh. The blood unstained before men, is stained blood before God by the fall of Adam, if it bee not restored by the blood of Christ the Lambe of God. And hence it followes againe, that Nobilitie must not dwell solitary, but combine her selfe in perpetuall fellowship with heartie love and sincere obedience of pure and sound religion: without the which all pleasant pastimes, all sumptuousnesse of building, all bravery in apparell, all glistering gold, all delicate fare, all delightfull musicke, all reverence done with cap and knee, all earthly pleasures and delights that heart can wish, are but as a vanishing shadow, or like the mirth, that begins with laughing, and ends with woe. A happy thing were it, if this consideration might take place in the hearts of all Noble men: it would make them honour God, that they might bee honoured of God with everlasting honour: and it would make them kisse the Sonne lest he be angry, and they perish in the way. 1 Sam. 2. 22. 26. Psal. 2. 12.

I speake not this as though I doubted of your Lordships care in this very point: but my onely meaning is, to put you in minde, that as you have begun to cleave unto Christ with full purpose of heart, so you would continue to doe it still, and doe it more; and withall to manifest the same unto the whole world, by honouring Christ with your owne honour, and by resembling him especially in one thing, in that as he grew in stature and yeeres, he also grew in grace and favour with God and men. And for this very cause (without any further consideration of earthly respects) I further present unto you an Exposition of another part of the Catechisme, namely, the Symbole or Creed of the Apostles: which is indeed the very pith and substance of Christian Religion, taught by the Apostles, embraced by the ancient Fathers, sealed by the blood of Martyrs, used by [a] Theodosius the Emperour, as a meanes to end the controversies of his time: and hereupon hath bin called the [b] rule of faith, the [c] key of faith. And furthermore, I hope that your Lordship will accept the same in good part, the rather because you vouchsafed when you were in Cambridge, to be an hearer thereof when it was taught and delivered. Thus craving pardon for my boldnesse, I take my leave, commending your Lordship and yours to the protection of the Almightie. Anno 1595. Apr. 2. Prov. 3. 9, 10. Luk. 2. 15.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE CREEDE.

I beleeve in God, &c.

NO man juſtly can be offended at this, that I begin to treat of the Doctrine of faith without a Text, though ſome be of minde, that in Catechizing, the Miniſter is to proceed as in the ordinary courſe of Preaching, onely by handling a ſet portion of Scripture: and therefore that the handling of the Creed being no Scripture, is not convenient. Indeed I grant, that other courſe to be commendable: yet I doubt not, but in Catechizing, the Miniſter hath his libertie to follow, or not to follow a certaine text of Scripture, as we doe in the uſuall courſe of preaching. My reaſon is taken from the practiſe of the Primitive Church; whoſe Catechiſme (as the Author of the Epiſtle to the Hebrews ſheweth) was contained in ſix principles or grounds of religion, which were not taken out of any ſet text in the old Teſtament: but rather was a forme of teaching gathered out of the moſt cleare places thereof. Hence I reaſon thus; That which in this point was the uſe and maner of the Primitive Church, is lawfull to be uſed of us now: but in the Primitive Church it was the manner to Catechize without handling any ſet text of Scripture: and therefore the Miniſters of the Goſpel at this time may with like libertie do the ſame: ſo be it they doe confirme the doctrine which they teach with places of Scripture afterward.

Now to come to the Creede, let us begin with the name or title thereof. That which in Engliſh wee call the Apoſtles Creed, in other tongues is called Symbolum, that is, a ſhot or a badge. It is called a ſhot, becauſe as in a feaſt or banquet every man payeth his part; which being all gathered, the whole (which is called the ſhot) amounteth: and ſo out of the ſeverall writings of the Apoſtles, ariſeth this Creede or briefe confeſſion of faith. It is a badge, becauſe as a ſouldier in the field by his badge and livery is knowne of what band hee is, and to what Captaine he doth belong: even ſo by this beleefe a Chriſtian man may be diſtinguiſhed and known from all Iewes, Turks, Atheiſts, and all falſe profeſſours: and for this cauſe it is called a badge.

Againe, it is called the Creede of the Apoſtles, not becauſe they were the penners of it, conferring to it beſides the matter [a] the very ſtyle and frame of words, as we have them now ſet downe. Reaſons. I. There are in this Creed certaine words and phraſes, which are not to bee found in the writings of the Apoſtles; and namely theſe: He deſcended into hell: the Catholike Church. The latter whereof, no doubt, [b] firſt began to be in uſe, when after the Apoſtles dayes the Church was diſperſed into all quarters of the earth. II. If both matter and words had beene from the Apoſtles, why is not the Creed Canonicall Scripture, as well as any other writings? III. The Apoſtles had a ſummary collection of the points of Chriſtian Religion which they taught, and alſo delivered to others to teach by; conſiſting of two heads, faith and love: as may appeare by Pauls exhortation to Timothy, wiſhing him to keepe the patterne of wholeſome words: which he had heard of him, in faith and love, which is in Chriſt Ieſus. Now the Creed conſiſts not of two heads, but of one, namely of faith onely, and not of love alſo. Wherfore I rather thinke, that it is called the Apoſtles Creed, becauſe it doth ſummarily containe the chiefe and principall points of religion, handled and propounded in the doctrine of the Apoſtles: and becauſe the points of the Creed are conformable and agreeable to their doctrine and writings.

And thus much of the title. Now let us heare what the Creed is. It is a ſumme of things to bee beleeved concerning GOD and concerning the Church, gathered foorth of the Scriptures. For the opening of this deſcription: firſt I ſay, it is a ſum of things to be beleeved, or an abridgement. It hath bin the practiſe of teachers both in the new and old teſtament, to abridge and contract ſummarily the religion of their time. This the Prophets uſed. For when they had made their ſermons to the people, they did abridge them and penned them briefely: ſetting them in ſome open places, that all the people might read the ſame. So the Lord bade Habakuk to write the viſion which he ſaw, and to make it plaine upon tables, that he may runne that readeth it. And in the new Teſtament, the Apoſtles did abridge thoſe doctrines, which otherwiſe they did handle at large, as may appeare in the place of Timothy aforenamed. Now the reaſon why both in the old and new Teſtament the doctrine of religion was abridged, is that the underſtanding of the ſimple, as alſo their memories might bee hereby helped, and they better inabled to judge of the truth, and to diſcerne the ſame from falſhood. And for this end the Apoſtles Creed being a ſummary collection of things to bee beleeved, was gathered briefely out of the Word of God [d] for helping of the memory and underſtanding of men. I adde that this Creede is concerning God and the Church. For in theſe two points conſiſteth the whole ſumme thereof. Laſtly, I ſay, that it is gathered forth of the Scripture, to make a difference betweene it and other writings, and to ſhew the authority of it; which I will further declare on this manner.

There bee two kindes of writings in which the doctrine of the Church is handled, and they are either Divine or Eccleſiaſticall. Divine, are the bookes of the old and new Teſtament, penned either by Prophets or Apoſtles. And theſe are not onely the pure word of God, but alſo the Scripture of God: becauſe not only the matter of them; but the whole diſpoſition thereof, with the ſtyle and the phraſe was ſet downe by the immediate inſpiration of the holy Ghoſt. And the authority of theſe books is divine, that is, abſolute and ſoveraigne: and they are of ſufficient credit in and by themſelves, needing not the teſtimony of any creature; not ſubject to the cenſure either of men or Angels; binding the conſciences of all men at all times, and being the onely foundation of our faith, and the rule and canon of all truth.

Eccleſiaſticall writings are all other ordinary writings of the Church conſenting with Scriptures. Theſe may bee called the Word or Truth of God, ſo farre forth as their matter or ſubſtance is conſenting with the written Word of God: but they cannot be called the Scripture of God, becauſe the ſtyle and phraſe of them was ſet downe according to the pleaſure of man, and therefore they are in ſuch ſort the Word of God, as that alſo they are the word of men. And their authority in defining of truth and falſhood in matters of religion is, not ſoveraigne, but ſubordinate to the former: and it doth not ſtand in the authority and pleaſure of men and Councels, but in the conſent which they have with the Scriptures.

Eccleſiaſticall writings are either generall, particular, or proper. Generall, are the Creedes and confeſſions of the Church diſperſed over the whole world, and among the reſt the Creed of the Apoſtles, made either by the Apoſtles themſelves, or by their hearers and diſciples, Apoſtolicall men, delivered to the Church, and conveyed from hand to hand, to our times. Particular writings, are the confeſſions of particular Churches: proper writings, are the bookes and confeſſions of private men. Now between theſe, we muſt make difference.

A For the generall Creede of the Apoſtles, (other univerſall Creedes in this caſe not excepted) though it bee of leſſe authority then Scripture; yet hath it more authority then the particular and private writings of Churches and men. For it hath beene received and approoved by univerſall conſent of the Catholike Church in all ages, and ſo were never theſe: in it the meaning and doctrine cannot bee changed by the authority of the whole Catholike Church: and if either the order of the doctrine, or the words whereby it is expreſſed, ſhould upon ſome occaſion be changed, a particular Church of any countrey cannot doe it, without Catholike conſent of the whole Church: yet particular writings and confeſſions made by ſome ſpeciall Churches, may be altered in the words, and in the points of doctrine by the ſame Churches, without offence to the Catholike Church. Laſtly, it is received as a rule of faith among all Churches, to try doctrines and interpretations of Scriptures by, not becauſe it is a rule of it ſelfe, for that the Scripture is alone; but becauſe it borroweth his authority from Scripture with which it agreeth. And this honour no other writings of men can have.

B Heere ſome may demand the number of Creeds. Anſ. I ſay but one Creede, as there is but one Faith: and if it be alleadged, that we have many Creedes, as beſides this of the Apoſtles, the Nicene Creede, and Athanaſius C Creede, &c. I anſwer, the ſeverall Creedes and confeſſions of Churches, containe not ſeverall faiths and religions, but one and the ſame: and this, called the Apoſtles Creede, is moſt ancient, and principall: all the reſt are no new Creedes in ſubſtance, but in ſome points penned more largely for the expoſition of it, that men might better avoide the hereſies of their times.

Further, it may bee demanded, in what forme this Creede was penned? Anſ. In the forme of an anſwer to a queſtion. The reaſon is this. In the Primitive Church, when any man was turned from Gentiliſme to the Faith of Chriſt, and was to be baptized, this [a] queſtion was asked him. What beleeveſt thou? D then he anſwered according to the forme of the Creede, I beleeve in God, &c. And this manner of queſtioning was uſed even from the time of Apoſtles. When the Eunuch was converted by Philip, hee ſaid, What doth let mee to bee baptized? Philip ſaid, If thou doeſt beleeve with all thine heart, thou mayeſt. Then he anſwered, I beleeve that Ieſus Chriſt is the Son of God. By this it appeares, that although all men, for the moſt part among us can ſay this Creed, yet not one of a thouſand can tell the ancient and firſt uſe of it: for commonly at this day of the ſimpler ſort it is ſaid for a prayer, being indeed no prayer: and when it is uſed ſo, men make it no better then a charme.

Before wee come to handle the particular points of the Creed it is very requiſite that we should make an entrance thereto by describing the nature, properties, and kinds of faith, the confession and ground whereof is set forth in the Creed. Faith therefore is a gift of God, whereby we give assent or credence to Gods word. For there is a necessary relation betweene faith and Gods word. The common propertie of faith, is noted by the author to the Hebrewes, when he saith, Faith is the ground of things hoped for: and, the demonstration of things that are not seene: For all this may be understood, not onely of justifying faith, but also of temporary faith, and the faith of miracles. Where faith is said to bee a ground, the meaning is, that though there are many things promised by God, which men doe not presently enjoy, but onely hope for; because as yet they are not: yet faith doth after a sort give subsisting or being unto them. Secondly, it is an evidence or demonstration, &c. that is, by beleeving a man doth make a thing as it were visible, being otherwise invisible and absent.

ſhould

Faith defcribed generally.

Heb. 11. 1.

Faith is of two sorts: either common faith, or the faith of the elect: as Paul saith, hee is an Apostle according to the faith of Gods elect: which is also called faith without hypocrisie. The common faith is that which both the Elect, and reprobate have, and it is three-fold. The first is hystoricall faith, which is, when a man doth beleeve the outward letter and history of the word. It hath two parts, knowledge of Gods word, and assent unto the same knowledge: and it is to be found in the divell and his angels. So Saint Iames saith, the divels beleeve, and tremble. Some will say, what a faith have they? Answ. Such as whereby they understand both the Law and the Gospel; besides, they give assent to it to be true: and they doe more yet, in that they tremble and feare. And many a man hath not so much. For amongst us, there is many a one which hath no knowledge of God at all, more then he hath learned by the common talke of the world: as namely, that there is a God, and that he is mercifull, &c. and yet this man will say, that he beleeveth with all his heart: but without knowledge it cannot be that any should truely beleeve, and therefore hee deceiveth himselfe. Quest. But whence have the divels hystoricall faith? were they illuminated by the light of the spirit? Answ. No: but when the Gospel was preached, they did acknowledge it, and beleeved it to be true, and that by the vertue of the reliques of Gods image, which remained in them since their fall. And therefore this their faith doth not arise from any speciall illumination by his spirit, but they attaine to it even by the very light of nature, which was left in them from the beginning.

Tit. 1. 1.

Iam. 2. 19.

The second kind of faith, is Temporary faith, so called, because it lasteth but for a time and season, and commonly not to the end of a mans life. This kinde of faith is noted unto us in the parable of the seed, that fell in the stonie ground. And there be two differences or kinds of this faith. The first kinde of temporary faith, hath in it three degrees. The first, is to know the word of God, and particularly the Gospell. The second, to give an assent unto it. The third, to professe it, but to goe no further: and all this may bee done without any love to the word. This faith hath one degree more then historicall faith. Examples of it we have in Simon Magus, Act. 8, 13. who is said to beleeve, because he held the doctrine of the Apostle to bee true; and withall professed the same: and in the devils also, who in some sort confessed, that Christ was the Sonne of the most highest, and yet looked for no salvation by him. Mark. 5. 7. Act. 19. 15. And this is the common faith that abounds in this land. Men say they beleeve as the Prince beleeveth, and if religion change, they will change. For by reason of the authority of Princes lawes, they are made to learne some little knowledge of the word: they beleeve it to bee good, and they professe it: and thus for the space of thirty or forty yeeres men heare the word preached, and receive the Sacraments, beeing for all this as voide of Grace as ever they were at the first day: and the reason is, because they doe barely professe it, without either liking or love of the same. The second kinde of temporary faith, hath in it five degrees. For by it, first a man knowes the word. Secondly, hee assenteth unto it. Thirdly, hee professeth it. Fourthly, he rejoyceth inwardly in it. Fiftly, he bringeth forth some kinde of fruit: and yet for all this hath no more in him but a faith that will faile in the end: because hee wanteth the effectuall application of the promise of the Gospel, & is without all manner of sound conversation. This faith is like Corne on the house top, which groweth for a while, but when heat of Summer commeth, it withereth. And this is also set forth unto us in the Parable of the Seed, which fell in stony ground, which is hasty in springing up: but because of the stones, which will not suffer it to take deepe roote, it withereth. And this is a very common faith in the Church of God: by which, many rejoyce in the preaching of the Word, and for a time bring forth some fruits accordingly, with shew of great forwardnes; yet afterwards shake off Religion and all. But (some will say) how can this bee a temporarie faith, seeing it hath such fruites? Ans. Such a kinde of faith is temporarie because it is grounded on temporarie causes which are three. 1. A desire to get knowledge of some strange points of religion. For many a man doth labour for the five former degrees of temporarie faith, onely because hee desires to get more knowledge in Scripture then other men have. The second cause, is a desire of praise among men, which is of that force, that it will make a man put on a shew of all the graces which God bestoweth upon his owne children, though otherwise he want them: and to goe very farre in religion; which appeareth thus. Some there are which

ſeeme very bitterly to weepe for the ſinnes of other men, and yet have neither ſorrow nor touch of conſcience for their owne: and the cauſe hereof is nothing elſe but pride. For he that ſheds teares for another mans ſinnes, ſhould much more weepe for his owne, if he had grace. Againe, a man for his owne ſinnes will pray very ſlackly and dully, when hee prayeth privately: and yet when hee is in the company of others, hee prayes very fervently and earneſtly. From whence is this difference? ſurely often it ſpringeth from the pride of heart, and from a deſire of praiſe among men. The third cauſe of temporary faith, is profit, commodity, the getting of wealth and riches: which are common occaſions to moove to chooſe or refuſe religion, as the time ſerveth: but ſuch a kinde of beleevers imbrace not the Goſpel becauſe it is the Goſpel, that is, the glad tidings of ſalvation; but becauſe it brings wealth, peace, and libertie with it. And theſe are the three cauſes of temporary faith.

The third kinde of faith, is the faith of Miracles: when a man grounding himſelfe on ſome ſpeciall promiſe or revelation from God, doth beleeve, that ſome ſtrange and extraordinary thing, which he hath deſired or foretold, ſhall come to paſſe by the worke of God. This muſt be diſtinguiſhed from hiſtoricall and temporary faith. For Simon Magus having both theſe kinds of faith, wanted this faith of miracles, and therefore would have bought the ſame of the Apoſtles for money. Yet we muſt know, that this faith of miracles may be in hypocrites, as it was in Iudas, and at the laſt judgement it ſhall be found to have beene in the wicked and reprobate; which ſhall ſay to Chriſt, Lord in thy name we have propheſied; and caſt out divels, and done many great miracles.

Act. 8. 19.

Math. 7. 22. 1 Cor. 13. 2.

And thus much for the three ſorts of common faith: Now wee come to true faith, which is called the faith of the Elect. It is thus defined: Faith is a ſupernaturall gift of God in the minde, apprehending the ſaving promiſe with all the promiſes that depend on it. Firſt, I ſay, it is a gift of God, Phil. 1. 29. to confute the blind opinion of our people, that thinke that the faith whereby they are to bee ſaved, is bred and borne with them. I adde that this is a gift ſupernaturall, not onely becauſe it is above the corrupt nature in which we are borne, but alſo becauſe it is above that purenature, in which our firſt parents were created; for in the ſtate of innocency they wanted this faith, neither had they then any need of faith in the Sonne of GOD as hee is Meſſias: but this faith is a new grace of God added to regeneration after the fall, and firſt preſcribed and taught in the covenant of grace. And by this one thing, faith differeth from the reſt of the gifts of God, as the feare of God, the love of God, the love of our brethren, &c: For theſe were in mans nature before the fall; and after it, when it pleaſeth God to call us, they are but renewed; but juſtifying faith admits no renewing. For the firſt ingrafting of it into the heart, is in the converſion of a ſinner after his fall.

The place and ſeat of faith (as I thinke) is the minde of man, not the will: for it ſtands in a kind of particular knowledge or perſwaſion, and there is no perſwaſion but in the minde. Paul ſaith indeed, that wee beleeve with the heart, Rom. 10. 9. But by the heart he underſtands the ſoule, without limitation to any part. Some doe place faith partly in the mind, and partly in the wil, becauſe it hath two parts; knowledge, and affiance: but it ſeemes not greatly to ſtand with reaſon, that one particular and ſingle grace ſhould be ſeated in divers part or faculties of the ſoule.

The forme of faith, is to apprehend the promiſe, Gal. 3. 14. That we might receive the promiſe of the Spirit through faith: and Ioh. 1. 12. to receive Chriſt, and to beleeve, are put one for another; and to beleeve, is to eate and drinke the body and blood of Chriſt; to apprehend properly, is an action of the hand of man, which layes hold of a thing, and puls to himſelfe: and by reſemblance it agrees to faith, which is the hand of the ſoule, receiving and applying the ſaving promiſe.

The apprehenſion of faith, is not performed by any affection of the will, but by a certaine and particular perſwaſion, whereby a man is reſolved, that the promiſe of ſalvation belongs unto him; which perſwaſion is wrought in the minde by the holy Ghoſt, 1 Cor. 2. 12. And by this, the promiſe which is generall, is applyed particularly to one ſubject.

By this one action, ſaving faith differeth from all other kinds of faith. From hiſtoricall; for it wanteth all apprehenſion, and ſtandeth onely in a generall aſſent. From temporary faith, which though it make a man to profeſſe the Goſpel, and to rejoyce in the ſame, yet doth it not throughly apply Chriſt with his benefits. For it never brings with it any thorough touch of Conſcience, or lively ſenſe of Gods grace in the heart. And the ſame may be ſaid of the reſt.

The principall and maine object of this faith, is the ſaving promiſe: God ſo loved the World, that hee gave his onely begotten Sonne, that whoſoever beleeves in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life. But ſome will ſay, Chriſt is commonly ſaid to bee the object of faith. Anſ. In effect it is all one to ſay, the ſaving promiſe, and Chriſt promiſed, who is the ſubſtance of the Covenant. Chriſt then, as he is ſet forth unto us in the Word and Sacraments, is the object of faith. And here certaine queſtions offer themſelves to be skanned.

Ioh. 3. 16.

The firſt: What is that particular thing, which faith apprehendeth? Anſ. Faith apprehendeth whole Chriſt, God and man. For his Godhead without his manhood, and his manhood without his Godhead, doth not reconcile us to God. Yet this which I ſay, muſt be con-conceived with ſome diſtinction according to the difference of his two natures. His Godhead is apprehended, not in reſpect of his efficacy or nature, but in reſpect of his efficacy manifeſted in the manhood, whereby the obedience thereof is made meritorious before God; as for his manhood, it is apprehended both in reſpect of the ſubſtance or thing it ſelfe, and alſo in reſpect of the efficacy and benefits thereof.

The ſecond, in what order faith apprehends Chriſt? Anſ. Firſt of all it apprehends the very body and blood of Chriſt: and then in the ſecond place the vertue and benefits of his body and blood: as a man that would feele in his body the vertue of meate and drinke, muſt firſt of all receive the ſubſtance thereof.

To goe forward. Beſides this maine promiſe, which concernes righteouſneſſe and life everlaſting in Chriſt, there be other particular promiſes touching ſtrength in temptations, comfort in afflictions, and ſuch like, which depend on the former: and they alſo are the object of juſtifying faith: and with the very ſame faith wee beleeve them, wherewith wee beleeve our ſalvation. Thus Abraham by the ſame faith wherewith hee was juſtified, beleeved that he ſhould have a ſonne in his old age, *Rom.*4. 9.22. And Noe by that faith whereby hee was made heire of righteouſneſſe, beleeved that hee and his family ſhould bee preſerved in the flood: this concluſion being alwayes laid downe, that to whom God gives Chriſt, to them alſo he gives all things needfull for this life, or the life to come, in and by Chriſt. And hereupon it comes to paſſe, that in our prayers, beſides the deſire of things promiſed, wee muſt bring faith, whereby we muſt be certainely perſwaded, that God will grant us ſuch things as hee hath promiſed: and this faith is not a new kind or diſtinct faith from juſtifying faith. Thus wee ſee plainely what ſaving faith is.

Whereas ſome are of opinion, that faith is an affiance or confidence, that ſeemes to be otherwiſe, for it is a fruit of faith: and indeed no man can put any confidence in God, till hee bee firſt of all perſwaded of Gods mercy in Chriſt towards him. Eph.3.12.

Some againe are of minde, that love is the very nature and forme of faith: but it is otherwiſe. For as confidence in God, ſo alſo love is an effect which proceedeth from faith, 1 Tim. 1.5. The end of the law is love from a pure heart, and good conſcience, and faith unfained. And in nature they differ greatly. Chriſt is the fountaine of the water of life. Faith in the heart is as the pipes and leads that receive in, and hold the water: and Love in ſome part is as the cocke of the conduit, that lets out the water to every commer. The property of the hand is to hold, and of it ſelfe it cannot cut: yet by a knife or other inſtrument put into the hand, it cuts: the hand of the ſoule is faith, and his property is to apprehend Chriſt with all his benefits: and by it ſelfe can doe nothing elſe: yet joyne love unto it, and by love it will bee effectuall in all good duties. Gal.5.6.

Now to proceede further: firſt, we are to conſider, how faith is wrought: ſecondly, what be the differences of it. For the firſt, faith is wrought in and by the outward miniſtery of the Goſpel, accompanied by the inward operation of the Spirit; and that not ſuddenly, but by certaine ſteps and degrees: as nature frameth the body of the infant in the mothers wombe. 1. by making the braine and heart: 2. by making veines, ſinewes, arteries, bones: 3. by adding fleſh to them all. And the whole operation of the ſpirit ſtands in two principall actions. Firſt, the enlightning of the mind; the ſecond, the mooving of the will. For the firſt, the holy Ghoſt enlightens mens minds with a further knowledge of the law, then nature can affoord; and thereby makes them to ſee the ſinnes of their hearts and lives with the uglineſſe therof: and withall to tremble at the curſe of the law. Afterward the ſame ſpirit opens the eye to underſtand and conſider ſeriouſly of righteouſneſſe and life eternall promiſed in Chriſt. This done, then comes the ſecond worke of the holy Ghoſt, which is the inflaming of the will, that a man having conſidered his fearefull eſtate by reaſon of ſinne, and the benefit of Chriſts death, might hunger after Chriſt; and have deſire not ſo much to have the puniſhments of ſinne taken away, as Gods diſpleaſure; and alſo might enjoy the benefits of Chriſt. And when he hath ſtirred up a man to deſire reconciliation with God in Chriſt, then withall hee gives him Grace to pray not onely for life eternall, but eſpecially for the free remiſſion and pardon of all his ſinnes: and then the Lords promiſe is, Knocke and it ſhall be opened, ſeeke and ye ſhall find. Matth.7. 7. After which hee further ſends his ſpirit into the ſame heart, that deſireth reconciliation with God, and remiſſion of ſinnes in Chriſt: and doth ſeale up the ſame in the heart by a lively and plentifull aſſurance thereof.

The differences and degrees of faith are two: I. a weake faith. II. a ſtrong faith. Concerning the firſt, this weak faith ſhewes it ſelfe by this grace of God, namely, an unfained deſire, not onely of ſalvation, (for that the wicked and graceleſſe man may have) but of reconciliation with God in Chriſt. This is a ſure ſigne of faith in every touched and humbled heart, and it is peculiar to the elect: and they which have this, have in them alſo the ground and ſubſtance of true ſaving faith: which afterwards in time will grow up to great ſtrength. Reaſon. I. Promiſe of life everlaſting, is made to the deſire of reconciliation, Pſal. 10. 17. Lord thou haſt heard the deſire of the poore. Pſal. 14.36. My ſoule deſireth after thee, as the thirſty land. Pſa.145.19. He wil fulfill the deſire of them that feare him. Matth.5.6. Bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt after righteouſnes, for they ſhall be ſatisfied. Rev.21.6. I will give unto him which is athirſt, of the well of the water of life freely. II. The hungring deſire after grace is a ſanctified affection: where one affection is ſanctified, all are ſanctified: where all are ſanctified, the whole man is ſanctified: and he that is ſanctified, is juſtified and beleeves. III. God accepts the will and deſire to repent and beleeve, for repenting and beleeving indeed: wherefore this deſire of reconciliation (if it bee ſoundly wrought in the heart) is in acceptation with God as true faith indeed. But carnall men will ſay, If faith, yea true faith ſhew it ſelfe by a deſire of reconciliation with God in Chriſt for all our ſinnes, then we are well enough, though we live in our ſinnes: for we have very good deſires. I anſwer, that there bee many ſundry fleeting motions and deſires to do good things which grow to no iſſue or head, but in time vaniſh as they come. Now ſuch paſſions have no ſoundneſſe in them, and muſt be diſtinguiſhed from the deſire of reconciliation with God, that comes from a bruiſed heart, and brings alwayes with it reformation of life: therefore ſuch, whoſoever they are that live after the courſe of this world, and thinke notwithſtanding that they have deſires that are good, deceive themſelves.

Now faith is ſaid to be weake, when a man either failes in the knowledge of the Goſpel; or elſe having knowledge, is weake in grace to apply unto himſelfe the ſweet promiſes thereof. As for example, wee know that the Apoſtles had all true ſaving faith (except Iudas) and when our Saviour Chriſt asked them, whom they thought he was; Peter in the perſon of the reſt, anſwered for them all, and ſaid: Thou art Chriſt the Sonne of the living God: for which our Saviour commended him, and in him, them all, ſaying. Thou art Peter, and upon this rocke, (that is, upon Chriſt, which Peter confeſſed in the name of them all) will I build my Church. And yet about that time weſhall find in the Goſpel, that they are called men, of little faith. Now they failed in knowledge of the death of Chriſt, and of his paſsion, and reſurrection; and were carried away with a vaine hope of an earthly kingdome. And therefore when our Saviour ſhewed them of his going downe to Ieruſalem, and of his ſufferings there, Peter a little after his notable confeſſion began to rebuke Chriſt and ſaid, Maſter have pitty on thy ſelfe, this ſhall not be unto thee. And untill hee had appeared unto them after his death, they did not diſtinctly beleeve his reſurrection.

Matth. 16. 16.
Verſ. 18.
Matth. 8. 26.
and 16. 8.
Matth. 16. 21.

Againe, weake faith, though it be joyned with knowledge, yet it may faile in the applying or in the apprehenſion and appropriating of Chriſts benefits to a mans owne ſelfe. This is to be ſeene in ordinary experience. For many a man there is of humble and contrite heart, that ſerveth God in ſpirit and truth, yet is not able to ſay without great doubtings and waverings; I know and am fully aſſured that my ſinnes are pardoned. Now ſhall wee ſay, that all ſuch are without faith? God forbid. Nay, we may reſolve our ſelves, that the true Child of God, may have an hungring deſire in his heart after reconciliation with God in Chriſt for all his ſinnes, with care to keepe a good conſcience, and yet be weake ſometime in the apprehenſion of Gods mercy, and the aſſurance of the remiſſion of his owne ſinnes.

But if faith faile either in the true knowledge, or in the apprehenſion of Gods mercies, how can a man be ſaved by it? Anſ. We muſt know, that this weake faith will as truly apprehend Gods mercifull promiſes for the pardon of ſinne, as ſtrong faith, though not ſo ſoundly. Even as a man with a palſie hand can ſtretch it out as well to receive a gift at the hand of a king, as hee that is more ſound, though it be not ſo firmely and ſtedfaſtly. And Chriſt ſaith, that he will not breake the bruiſed reede, nor quench the ſmoaking flaxe.

The Church of Rome beares men in hand, that they are good Catholikes, if they beleeve as the Church beleeves; though in the meane ſeaſon they cannot tell what the Church beleeves. And ſome papiſts commend this faith, by the example of an old devout father, who being tempted of the divell, and asked how he beleeved; anſwered, that he beleeved as the Church beleeved; being againe asked how the Church beleeved, he anſwered, as I beleeve: whereupon the divell (as they ſay) was faine to depart. Well, this fond and ridiculous kind of faith wee renounce, as being a meanes to nuzzle men in blindneſſe, ſuperſtition, and perpetuall ignorance: yet withall we do not deny but there is an implicite or infolded faith; which is, when a man as yet having but ſome little portion of knowledge in the doctrine of the Goſpel, doth truly performe obedience according to the meaſure thereof: and withall hath care to get more knowledge, and ſhewes good affection to all good meanes whereby it may bee increaſed. In this reſpect a certaine ruler, who by a miracle wrought upon his child, was mooved to acknowledge Chriſt for the Meſſias, and further to ſubmit himſelfe to his doctrine, is commended for a beleever: and ſo are in like caſe the Samaritans.

Ioh 4. 33. and 42.

And thus much of weake faith: which muſt bee underſtood to be in a man, not all the dayes of his life, but while hee is a young Babe in Chriſt. For as it is in the ſtate of the Body, firſt we are babes and grow to greater ſtrength as we grow in yeares; ſo it is with a Chriſtian man. Firſt he is a Babe in Chriſt, having weake faith, but after growes from grace to grace, till he come to have a ſtrong Faith: an example whereof we have in Abraham, who was ſtrong and perfect both in knowledge and apprehenſion. This ſtrong faith, is when a man is indued with the knowledge of the Goſpel, and grace to apprehend and apply the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt unto himſelfe for the remiſſion of his owne ſinnes: ſo as he can ſay diſtinctly of himſelfe and truly, that hee is fully reſolved in his owne conſcience, that he is reconciled unto God in Chriſt for all his ſinnes, and accepted in him to life everlaſting. This degree of faith is proper to him that beginnes to bee a tall man, and of ripe yeeres in Chriſt. And it comes not at the firſt calling of a man unto grace: and if any ſhall thinke that hee can have it at the firſt, he deceiveth himſelfe: for as it is in nature, firſt we are babes, and then as we increaſe in yeeres, ſo we grow in ſtrength: ſo it is in the life of a Chriſtian: firſt, ordinarily, he hath a weake faith, and after growes from grace to grace, till he come to ſtronger faith: and at the laſt he be able to ſay, hee is fully aſſured in his heart and conſcience of the pardon of his ſinnes, and of reconciliation to God in Chriſt. And this aſſurance ariſeth from many experiences of Gods favour and love in the courſe of his life by manifold preſervations and other bleſſings, which being deepely and duely conſidered, bring a man to be fully perſwaded that God is his God, and God the Father his Father, and Ieſus Chriſt his redeemer, and the holy Ghoſt his ſanctifier.

Now howſoever this faith be ſtrong, yet is it alwaies imperfect, as alſo our knowledge is: and ſhall ſo long as wee live in this world bee mingled with contrary unbeleefe and ſundry doubtings more or leſſe. A great part of men among us, blinded with groſſe ignorance, ſay they have faith, and yet indeed have not. For aske them what faith they have, they will anſwer, they beleeve that God is their Father, and the Soune their redeemer, &c. aske them how long they have had this faith, they will anſwer, ever ſince they could remember: aske them whether they ever doubt of Gods favour? they will ſay, they would not once doubt for all the world. But the caſe of theſe men is to bee pitied: for howſoever they may perſwade themſelves, yet true it is, that they have no ſound faith at all, for even ſtrong faith is aſſaulted with temptations and doubtings: and God will not have men perfect in this life, that they may alwaies go out of themſelves, and depend wholly on the merit of Chriſt.

And thus much of theſe two degrees of faith. Now in whomſoever it is, whether it be a weak faith, or a ſtrong, it bringeth forth ſome fruit, as a tree doth in the time of ſummer. And a ſpeciall fruit of faith, is the confeſſion of faith; I beleeve in God, &c. ſo Paul ſaith, With the heart a man beleeveth unto righteouſneſſe, and with the mouth man confeſſeth to ſalvation. Rom. 10. 10. Confeſſion of faith, is when a man in ſpeech & outward profeſſion doth make manifeſt his faith for theſe two cauſes: I. That with his mouth outwardly he may glorifie God, and doe him ſervice both in body and ſoule. II. That by the confeſſion of his faith, he may ſever himſelfe from all falſe Chriſtians, from Atheiſts, hypocrites, and all falſe ſeducers whatſoever. And as this is the dutie of a Chriſtian man, to make profeſſion of his faith: ſo heere in this Creede of the Apoſtles, wee have the right order and forme of making confeſſion ſet downe, as we ſhall ſee in handing the parts thereof.

The Creed therefore ſets downe two things concerning faith, namely, the action of faith, and his object, which alſo are the parts of the Creed. The Action, in theſe words, I beleeve: the object in all the words following, in God the Father Almightie, maker, &c. And firſt let us begin with the action.

I beleeve in God] We are taught to ſay, I beleeve, not we beleeve, for two cauſes: Firſt, becauſe (as we touched before) in the Primitive Church this Creed was made to bee an anſwer to a demand or queſtion, which was demanded of every particular man that was baptiſed: for they asked him thus: What doeſt thou beleeve? then he anſwered, I beleeve in God the Father, &c. And thus did every one of yeeres make profeſſion of his faith, and it is likely that Peter alluded hereunto, ſaying, The ſtipulation or anſwer of a good cõſcience maketh requeſt to God. 1 Pet. 3. 21. The ſecond cauſe is, howſoever we are to pray one for another, by ſaying, Our Father, &c. yet when we come to yeeres, wee muſt have a particular faith of our owne: no man can bee ſaved by another mans faith, but by his owne, as it is ſaid: The juſt ſhal live by his faith. Hab. 2. 4. But ſome will ſay, this is not true, becauſe children muſt be ſaved by their parents faith: the anſwer is this; The faith of the parent doth bring the child to have a title or intereſt to the covenant of grace, and to all the benefits of Chriſt: yet doth it not apply the benefits of Chriſts death, his obedience, his merits, and righteouſneſſe unto the infant: for this the beleever doth only unto himſelfe, and to no other. Againe, ſome may ſay, if children doe not apprehend Chriſts benefits by their parents faith, how then is Chriſts righteouſneſſe made theirs and they ſaved? Anſ. By the inward working of the holy Ghoſt, who is the principall applyer of all graces, whereas faith is but the inſtrument. As for the places of Scripture that mention juſtification and ſalvation by faith, they are to bee reſtrained to men of yeeres: whereas infants dying in their infancie, and therefore wanting actual faith, which none can have without actuall knowledge of Gods will and word, are no doubt ſaved by ſome other ſpeciall working of Gods holy Spirit, not knowne to us.

Furthermore, to beleeve ſignifieth two things, to conceive or underſtand any thing, and withall to give aſſent unto it to bee true: and therefore in this place to beleeve, ſignifieth to know and acknowledge that all the points of Religiõ which follow, are the truth of God. Here therefore wee muſt remember, that this clauſe (I beleeve) placed in the beginning of the Creede, muſt be particularly applyed to all and every article following. For ſo the caſe ſtands, that if faith faile in one maine point, it faileth a man in all: and therefore faith is ſaid to be wholly copulative. Fides eſt tota copulativa. It is not ſufficient to hold one article, but hee that will hold any of them them for his good, must hold them all: and hee which holds them all in shew of words, if he overturne but one of them indeed, he overturnes them all.

Againe, to beleeve is one thing, and to beleeve in this or that, is another thing: and it containes in it three points or actions of a beleever. I. To know a thing. II. To acknowledge the same. III. To put trust and confidence in it. And in this order must these three actions of faith bee applyed to every article following, which concernes any of the persons in Trinitie. And this must bee marked as a matter of a speciall moment. For alwaies by adding them to the words following, we do apply the article unto our selves in a very comfortable manner. As I beleeve in the Father, and doe beleeve that hee is my Father: and therefore I put my whole trust in him, and so of the rest.

Now wee come to the object of generall faith, which is either God or the Church; in handling of both which, I will observe this order: I. I will speake of the meaning of every article. II. Of the duties which we ought to learne thereby. III. And lastly, of the consolations which may be gathered thence. Concerning God, three things are to bee considered. And first, by reason of manifold doubtings that rise in our minds, it may bee demanded, whether there be a God? Many reasons might bee used to resolve those that have scruple of conscience: otherwise we are bound to beleeve that there is a God without all doubting. As for the Atheists which cõfidently avouch there is no God, by Gods law they ought to die the death: nay, the earth is too good for such to dwell on. Malefactours as theeves and rebels, for their offences have their reward of death: but the offence of those, which deny that there is a God, is greater: and therefore deserves a most cruell death.

The second point followeth, namely, what God is? Anſ. Moſes desiring to see Gods face, was not permitted but to see his hinder parts: and therefore no man can bee able to describe God by his nature, but by his effects and properties, on this or such like manner: God is an eſſence ſpirituall, ſimple, infinite, moſt holy. I say first of all, that God is an essence, to shew, that he is a thing absolutely subsisting in himselfe, & by himselfe, not receiving his beeing from any other. And herein hee differs from all creatures whatsoever, which have subsisting and beeing from him alone. Againe, I say he is an essence spirituall, because he is not any kinde of body, neither hath hee the parts of the bodies of men or other creatures, but is in nature a spirit invisible, not subject to any mans senses. I adde also, that he is a simple essence, because his nature admits no manner of composition of matter, or forme of parts. The creatures are compounded of divers parts, and of varietie of natures, but there is no such thing in God: for whatsoever thing he is, hee is the same by one & the same singular & indivisible essence. Furthermore he is infinite, & that divers waies: infinite in time, without any beginning & without end: infinite in place, because hee is every where, & excluded no where, within all places, and forth of all places. Lastly, he is most holy, that is, of infinite wisedome, mercy, love, goodnesse, &c. and he alone is rightly tearmed most holy, because holinesse is of the very nature of God himselfe: whereas among the most excellent creatures it is otherwise. For the creature it selfe is one thing, and the holines of the creature another thing. Thus we see what God is, and to this effect God describes himselfe to be Iehovah Elohim: and Paul describes him to be a King everlasting, immortall, invisible, & only wise, to whom is due all honour and glory for ever.

Exod. 34. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 17.

The third point, is touching the number of Gods, namely, whether there bee more Gods then one, or no. Anſ. There is not, neither can there bee any more Gods then one. Which point the Creede avoucheth, in saying, I beleeve in God, not in Gods: and yet more plainely the Nicene Creede, and the Creede of Athanasius, both of them explaining the words of the Apostles Creede in this manner, I beleeve in one God. Howsoever some in former times have erroniously held: that two Gods were the beginning of all things, one of good things, the other of evill things: others, that there was one God in the old Testament, another in the new: others againe, namely the Valentinians, that there were thirtie couples of gods: and the heathen people (as Augustine reporteth) worshipped thirtie thousand gods: yet we that are members of Gods Church, must hold and beleeve one God alone, and no more; Deut. 4. 39. Vnderſtand this day and conſider in thine heart, that Iehovah hee is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none other. Eph. 4. 6. One God, one faith, one baptiſme. If it be alledged that the Scripture mentioneth many Gods, because (a) Magistrates are called gods, (b) Moses is called Aarons God, (c) the divell and all idols are called gods. The answer is this: They are not properly or by nature Gods, for in that respect there is only one God: but they are so tearmed in other respects. Magistrates are gods, because they are Vicegerents placed in the roome of the true God, to governe their subjects: Moses is Aarons god, because he was in the roome of God to reveale his will to Aaron: the divell is a god, because the hearts of the wicked world give the honour unto him, which is peculiar to the everliving God: Idols are called gods, because they are such in mens conceits and opinions, who esteeme of them as gods. Therfore Paul saith, an idol is nothing in the world, that is, nothing in nature subsisting, or nothing in respect of the divinity ascribed to it.

To proceede forward: to beleeve in this one God, is in effect thus much: I. To know & acknowledge him as hee hath revealed himselfe in his word: II. To beleeve him to be my God: III. From mine heart to put all mine affiance in him. To this purpose Christ saith,

This is eternall life to know thee the only God, and whom thou hast sent Ieſus Chriſt. Now the knowledge here meant, is not a bare or generall knowledge, for that the divels have: but a more ſpeciall knowledge, whereby I know God not onely to be God, but alſo to bee my God, and thereupon do put my confidence in him. Ioh. 17 3.

And thus much of the meaning of the firſt words. I beleeve in God, &c. Now follow the duties which may be gathered hence. Firſt of all; if we are bound to beleeve in God, then we are alſo bound to take notice of our naturall unbeleefe, wherby we diſtruſt God, to checke our ſelves for it, and to ſtrive againſt it. Thus dealt the father of the child that had a dumbe ſpirit, Lord (ſaith he) I beleeve, Lord help mine unbeleefe. And David, Why art thou caſt downe my ſoule? and why art thou ſo diſquieted within me? waite on God. And that which our Saviour Chriſt ſaid once to Peter, men ſhould daily ſpeake to them ſelves: O thou of little faith! why haſt thou doubted? But ſome may ſay, wherein ſtands our unbeleefe? Anſw. It ſtands in two things: I. In diſtruſting the goodneſſe of God, that is, in giving too little or no affiance to him; or in putting affiance in the creature. For the firſt, few men will abide to be told of their diſtruſt in God, but indeed it is a common and rife corruption: and though they ſooth themſelves never ſo, yet their uſuall dealings proclaime their unbeleefe. Goe through all places, it ſhall be found that ſcarce one of a thouſand in his dealings makes conſcience of a lie: a great part of men gets their wealth by fraud and oppreſſion, and all kind of unjuſt and unmercifull dealing. What is the cauſe that they can doe ſo? Alas, alas, if there be any faith, it is pinned up in ſome by-corner of the heart, and unbeleefe beares ſway as the Lord of the houſe. Againe, if a man had as much wealth as the world comes to, hee could find in his heart to wiſh for another; and if he had two worlds, he would bee caſting for the third, if it might bee compaſſed: the reaſon hereof is, becauſe men have not learned to make God their portion, and to ſtay their affections on him: which if they could do, a meane portion in temporall bleſſings would bee enough. Indeed theſe and ſuch like perſons will in no wiſe yeeld that they do diſtruſt the Lord, unleſſe at ſometime they bee touched in conſcience with a ſenſe and feeling of their ſins, and be throughly humbled for the ſame: but the truth is, that diſtruſt of Gods goodnes is a generall and a mother ſinne, the ground of all other ſinnes, and the very firſt and principall ſinne in Adams fall. And for the ſecond part of unbeleefe, which is an affiance in the creatures, reade the whole booke of God, and wee ſhall find it a common and uſuall ſin in all ſorts of men, ſome putting their truſt in riches, ſome in ſtrength, ſome in pleaſures, ſome placing their felicitie in one ſin, ſome in another. When king Aſa was ſicke, he put his whole truſt in the Phyſitians, and not in the Lord. And in our daies the common practice is when croſſes and calamities fall, then there is trotting out to that wiſe man, to this cuning woman, to this ſorcerer, to that wizzard, that is, from God to the divell: and their counſell is received and practiſed without any bones making. And this ſhewes the bitter roote of unbeleefe, & confidence in vaine creatures, let men ſmooth it over with goodly tearmes as long as they wil. In a word, there is no man in the world, be he called, or not called, if he look narrowly unto himſelfe, but he ſhall find his heart filled almoſt with manifold doubtings and diſtruſtings, whereby hee ſhall feele himſelfe even carried away frō beleeving in God. Therefore the dutie of every man is, that will truely ſay that he beleeves in God, to labour to ſee his owne unbeleefe, & the fruits thereof in his life. And for ſuch as ſay they have no unbeleefe, nor feele none; more pittifull is their caſe, for ſo much greater is their unbeleefe. Mar. 9. 24. Pſ. 24. 11. Mat. 14. 31. 1 Chro. 16. 12.

Secondly, conſidering that we profeſſe our ſelves to beleeve in God, we muſt every one of us learne to know God. As Paul ſaith, How can they beleeve in him whom they have not heard? and how can they heare without a preacher? therefore none can beleeve in God, but hee muſt firſt of all heare and be taught by the Miniſterie of the Word to know God aright. Let this bee remembred of young and old, it is not the pattering over the beleefe for a prayer, that will make a man a good beleever, but God muſt bee knowne of us, and acknowledged as he hath revealed himſelfe partly in his Word, and partly in his creatures. Blind ignorance, and the right uſe of the Apoſtles Creede will never ſtand together. Therefore it ſtands men in hand to labor and take paines to get knowledge in Religion, that knowing God aright, they may come ſtedfaſtly to beleeve in him, and truly make confeſſion of their faith. Rom. 10. 14.

Thirdly, becauſe we beleeve in God, therefore another dutie is, to deny our ſelves utterly, and become nothing in our ſelves. Our Saviour Chriſt requires of us to become as little children, if we would beleeve. The beggar depends not upon the reliefe of others, till he find nothing at home: and till our hearts bee purged of ſelfe-love and pride, wee cannot depend upon the favour and goodneſſe of God. Therefore he that would truſt in God, muſt firſt of all bee abaſed and confounded in himſelfe; and in regard of himſelfe, bee out of all hope of attaining to the leaſt ſparke of the grace of God.

Fourthly, in that we beleeve in God, and therfore put our whole truſt and aſſurance in him: we are taught, that every man muſt commit his body, his ſoule, goods, life, yea all that he hath into the hands of God, and to his cuſtodie. So Paul ſaith, I am not aſhamed of my ſufferings for I know whom I have beleeved, and am perſwaded, that he is able to keepe that which I have committed unto him againſt that day. A worthy ſaying, for what is the thing which Paul committed 2 Tim. 1. 12.

unto the Lord? it was his owne ſoule, and the eternall ſalvation thereof. But what mooves him to truſt God? ſurely his perſwaſion, wherby hee knew that God would keepe it. And Peter ſaith: Let them that ſuffer according to the will of God, commit their ſoules to him in well doing, as unto a faithfull creator. Look as one friend layeth downe a thing to bee kept of another: ſo muſt a man give that hee hath to the cuſtodie of God. Few or none can practiſe this, and therefore when any evill befalls them either in body or in goods, or any other way whatſoever, then they preſently ſhew themſelves rather beaſts then men in impatience. For in proſperitie they had no care to put their truſt in God, and therefore in adverſitie when croſſes come, they are void of comfort. But when a man hath grace to beleeve, and truſt in God, he commits all into Gods hands: and though all the world ſhould periſh, yet hee would not be diſmaied. And undoubtedly, if a man will be thankfull for the preſervation of his goods, or of his life, he muſt ſhew the ſame by committing all he hath into Gods hands, and ſuffer himſelfe to be ruled by him.

1 Pet. 4. 19.

Now followes the conſolations and comforts which Gods Church and children reape hereby. Hee that beleeves in God, and takes God for his God, may aſſure himſelfe of ſalvation, and of a happy deliverance in all dangers and neceſſities. When God threatned a plague upon Iſrael for their Idolatrie, good King Ioſias humbled himſelfe before the Lord his God: and hee was ſafe all his daies. And ſo King Hezekiah, when Senacherib the king of Aſſur offered to invade Iudah, truſted likewiſe in the Lord, and prayed unto him, and was delivered: Whereby wee ſee if a man puts his whole truſt in God, he ſhall have ſecuritie and quietneſſe, as Iehoſaphat ſaid to the men of Iudah. And our Saviour Chriſt when hee was upon the croſſe, and felt the whole burden of the terrible wrath of God upon him, cryed, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? And it appeares in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, that Chriſt was heard in that he feared: whereby we are given to underſtand, that they ſhall never bee utterly forſaken, that take God for their God. And king David having experience of this, uſeth moſt excellent ſpeeches for this end, to ſhew that the ground of his comfort was, that God was his God. And it is ſaid, that Daniel had no manner of hurt in the Lyons denne: becauſe hee truſted in the Lord his God. And contrariwiſe ſuch as diſtruſt God, are ſubject to all miſeries and judgements. The Iſraelites in the wilderneſſe beleeved not God, and truſted not in his helpe. therfore fire was kindled in Iacob, and wrath came upon Iſrael.

God, the Father, Almightie.] Some have thought that theſe words are to bee coupled to the former without diſtinction, as if the title of God had beene proper to the firſt perſon the Father, and not common to the reſt: and thus have ſome heretickes thought. But indeede there muſt a pauſe or diſtinction bee made, that the name or title of God may bee ſet in the fore-front, as common to all the three perſons following. For that is the very intent of the order of this Creede, to teach us to beleeve in one God, who is diſtinct in three ſubſiſtences or perſons, called the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt. And here offers it ſelfe to be conſidered, even one of the greateſt myſteries of our religion: namely, that God is the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt: and againe, that the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt are one and the ſame God. Some at the firſt may poſſibly ſay, that this cannot ſtand, becauſe it is againſt all reaſon, that one ſhould bee three, or three one. The anſwer is, that indeede if one and the ſame reſpect bee kept, it is not poſſible, but in divers conſiderations and reſpects it may. And thus the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt are three, namely in perſon; and againe, they three are one not in perſon, but in nature. By nature is meant, a thing ſubſiſting by it ſelfe, that is common to many: as the ſubſtance of man conſiſting of body and ſoule common to all men, which we call the humanitie of a man, is the nature of man. By perſon is meant, a thing or eſſence ſubſiſting by it ſelfe, not common to many, but incommunicable: as among men; theſe particulars, Peter, Iohn, Paul, are called perſons. And ſo in the myſterie of the Trinitie, the divine nature is the Godhead it ſelfe, ſimply and abſolutely conſidered, and a perſon is that which ſubſiſteth in that Godhead, as the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt. Or againe, a perſon is one and the ſame Godhead, not abſolutely conſidered, but in relation, & as it were, reſtrained by perſonal or characteriſticall properties: as the Godhead or God begetting is the Father; God againe conſidered not ſimply, but ſo far forth as he is begotten, is the Sonne; and God proceeding of the Father and the Sonne, the holy Ghoſt. And if any man would conceive in mind rightly the divine nature, hee muſt conceive God or the Godhead abſolutely; if any of the perſons, then he muſt conceive the ſame Godhead relatively with perſonall proprieties. Thus the Godhead conſidered with the proprietie of Fatherhood or begetting, is the Father: and conceiving the ſame Godhead with the proprietie of generation, we conceive the Sonne; and the Godhead with the proprietie of proceeding, wee conceive the holy Ghoſt. Neither muſt it ſeeme ſtrange to any that wee uſe the names of nature and perſon, to ſet forth this myſterie by: for they have beene taken up by common conſent in the Primitive Church, and that upon weightie conſideration, to manifeſt the truth, and to ſtop the mouthes of heretickes; and they are not ſo uſed againſt the proper ſenſe of the Scriptures, nay they are therein (a) contained. Thus we ſee how it comes to paſſe,

that the three things signified by these names, Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost, are each of them one and the same God. And this mystery may well bee conceived by a comparison borrowed from light. The light of the Sunne, the light of the Moone, and the light of the Ayre, for nature and substance are one and the same light: and yet they are three distinct lights. The light of the Sunne being of it selfe and from none, the light of the Moone from the Sunne, and the light of the ayre from them both. So the divine nature is one, and the persons are three subsisting after a divers manner in one and the same nature.

And for the further clearing of this point, we must yet further marke and remember two things: namely, the union and the distinction of the persons. The union is, whereby three persons are not one simply, but one in nature, that is, coessentiall, or consubstantiall; having all one godhead. For the Father is God, the Sonne is God, and the holy Ghost is God: now there are not three distinct Gods, but one God, because there is one God and no more in nature, considering that the thing which is infinite is but one, and is not subject to multiplication: and the Father is this one God, as also the Son, and the holy Ghost. And as these three persons are one in nature, so whatsoever agrees to God simply considered, agrees to them all three. They are all coe qual and coeternall: all most wise, just, mercifull, omnipotent by one and the same wisedome, justice, mercy, power. And becaus they have all one godhead, therefore they are not onely one with another, but also each in other, the Father in the Sonne, and the Sonne in the Father, and the holy Ghost in them both. And we must not imagine that these three are one God, as though the Father had one part of the godhead, the Sonne another part, and the holy Ghost a third. For that is most false, because the infinite and the most simple godhead is not subject to composition or division: but every person is whole God, subsisting not in a part, but in the whole godhead: and the whole entire godhead is communicated from the Father to the Sonne, and from both Father and Sonne to the holy Ghost. But some may yet say, that this doctrine seemes to bee impossible; because three creatures, as for example, Peter, Paul, Timothy, bee three persons, and so remaining, cannot have one and the same nature, that is, the same body, and the same soule. Ans. Three or more men may have the same nature [b] in kinde, but the truth is, they cannot possibly have a nature which shall be one and the same [c] in number, in them all three. For a man is a substance created and finite, and the bodies of men are quantities, and therefore divisible and separable one from another. Hereupon it comes, that the persons of men are not onely distinguished by propriety, but also divided and sundered one from another. And though Peter, Paul, and Timothy, have all one common and universall forme, yet they three are not one man, but three men. Now it is otherwise with the divine nature or godhead, which is uncreated and infinite, and therefore admits neither composition nor division, but a distinction without any separation: so as the three persons subsisting in it, shall not be three Gods, but one and the same God.

Yet further, some will object, that it is truely said of the Father, that hee is God, but the same godhead is not in the Sonne, nor in the holy Ghost; for the Sonne and the holy Ghost have their beginning from the Father. Answ. The Sonne and the holy Ghost have not a beginning of their nature, or of their godhead from the Father, but of their person onely: the person of the Sonne is from the Father, and the person of the holy Ghost is both from the Father and from the Sonne: but the godhead of all three persons is uncreate and unbegotten, and proceeding from none. Yet some may say, both the Sonne and the holy Ghost have received from the Father all their attributes, as wisdome, knowledge, power, &c. Now hee that receiveth any thing from another, is in that respect inferiour to him that giveth it: and therefore the Sonne and the holy Ghost are not God as hee is. Anf. We must know that that which the Sonne receiveth of the Father, he receiveth it by nature, and not by grace: and he receiveth not a part, but all that the Father hath, saving the personall propriety. And the holy Ghost receiveth from the Father and the Sonne by nature, and not by grace: and therefore though both the Sonne and the holy Ghost receive from the Father, yet they are not inferiour to him, but equall with him. And thus much is both necessary and profitable to bee learned of the union betweene the three persons in Trinity, whereby they being three have all one and the same godhead.

The second point to be considered is, that though these three have but one godhead and all make but one God, yet they are distinguished one from another: for the Father is the Father, and not the Sonne or the holy Ghost: the Sonne is the Sonne, and not the Father nor the holy Ghost: and the holy Ghost is the holy Ghost, not the Father nor the Sonne. This distinction of the persons is notably set forth unto us in the baptisme of our Saviour Christ; where it is said, that when Iesus was baptized, he came out of the water: there is the second person: and the holy Ghost descended upon him in the forme of a Dove: there is the third person: and the Father the first person pronounced from heaven, that hee was his onely beloved Sonne in whom hee was well pleased. And wee must not conceive this distinction in such manner, as though these three, Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost, were three names of one God: For the three persons doe not in Name or Word, but really in truth distinctly subsist in the same divine nature. Neither must wee imagine that the three persons are three formes or differences of one God, as ſome hereticks have dreamed, who taught that the Father alone is God, and that hee is called a Father in one reſpect, the Sonne in another, and the holy Ghoſt in a third. For this were nothing elſe, but to make the perſonall proprieties to bee nothing but imaginary accidents, which indeed, or at the leaſt in mans conceit, might come and goe, and be either in the perſons, or forth of them. For the perſonall relations, though in [a] minde they may be diſtinguiſhed from the divine eſſence, yet [b] indeed they are one with it. But ſome will ſay, if they make this diſtinction, there is rather a quaternity then a Trinity: for the Godhead is one, the Father another, the Sonne a third, and the holy Ghoſt a fourth. Thus ſome heretickes have objected againſt the diſtinction of the Trinity: but it is untrue which they ſay. For the Godhead muſt not be ſevered from the Father, nor from the Sonne, nor from the holy Ghoſt: for as the Father is God or the whole Godhead, ſo alſo is the Son and the holy Ghoſt: and the Godhead likewiſe is in every one of theſe three perſons; and every one of them ſubſiſting in the Godhead, the ſame muſt be conceived to be in them all, and not as a fourth thing out of them. And therefore we muſt ſtill maintaine, that theſe three perſons are diſtinguiſhed, and not divided, as three men are divided in being and ſubſtance: for this diviſion cannot be in them, becauſe all three have one divine nature and one Godhead. This is the myſtery of all myſteries to be received of us all, namely, the Trinity of the perſons in the Vnity of the Godhead. This forme of doctrine muſt be retained and holden for theſe cauſes: I. Becauſe by it wee are able to diſtinguiſh this true God from all falſe gods and idols. II. Becauſe among all other points of religion this is one of the chiefeſt, being the very foundation thereof. For it is not ſufficient for us to know God as wee can conceive of him in our owne imagination; but wee muſt know him as hee hath revealed himſelfe in his Word. And it is not ſufficient to ſalvation to beleeve in God confuſedly, but wee muſt beleeve in one God diſtinct in three perſons, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt: yea, and more then this, wee muſt hold and beleeve, that God the Father is our Father, the Sonne our Redeemer, the holy Ghoſt our Sanctifier and Comforter. Well then, if we muſt in this manner beleeve in God, then we muſt alſo know him; for we can have no faith in the thing which is utterly unknowne. Wherefore if we would beleeve in the Father, Sonne, or holy Ghoſt, we muſt know them in part. Ioh. 17. 3. This is life eternall to know thee the onely God and whom thou haſt ſent Ieſus Chriſt. Ioh. 14. 17. The world cannot receive the ſpirit of truth, becauſe it hath neither ſeene him, nor knowne him. 1 Ioh. 2. 23. Whoſoever denyeth the Sonne, hath not the Father. Thirdly, this doctrine directs us in worſhipping God aright: for Vnity in Trinity, and Trinity in Vnity is to bee worſhipped: one God muſt bee worſhipped in the Father, in the Sonne, and in the holy Ghoſt: and if we worſhip God the Father, without the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt; or if we worſhip the Sonne, without the Father and the holy Ghoſt; and the holy Ghoſt, without the Father and the Sonne, we worſhip nothing but an idoll. Againe, if we worſhip the three perſons not as one God, but as three Gods, then likewiſe we make three idols.

Note further, that of all the three perſons, the firſt perſon of the Father is ſet in the firſt place, and deſcribed to us by three things. I. by his title, that he is a Father. II. by his attribute, that he is Almighty. III. by his effect, that he is maker of heaven and earth: of theſe in order, as they lye in the Creede. And firſt of the title (Father.) It may ſeeme that he hath ſome prerogative over the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt, becauſe hee is ſet before them: but wee muſt know that he is ſet before them neither in regard of time, nor of dignity, for therein all three are equall: but in regard of order onely. The Father is the firſt, the Sonne the ſecond, and the holy Ghoſt the third: as may appeare by this ſimilitude. If three Emperours equall in dignity ſhould meet all in one place, being equall alſo in power and majeſty, if all three ſhould ſit downe, though one be no better then another, yet one of them muſt needs ſit downe in the firſt, and another in the ſecond place, and then the third: but yet we cannot ſay, that he which ſate downe firſt is the chiefeſt. And ſo it is in the Trinity, though none be greater or above another; yet the Father is in the firſt place, not becauſe hee is before the Sonne, or the holy Ghoſt in dignity and honour, but becauſe hee is the fountaine of the deity, the Sonne being from him, and the holy Ghoſt from them both.

The meaning

Now let us come to the title of the firſt perſon. The name Father in Scripture, is aſcribed either to God taken indefinitely, and ſo by conſequent to all the three Perſons in Trinity: or particularly to the firſt perſon alone. For the firſt, God is a Father properly and principally, according to the ſaying of Chriſt, Call no man father upon earth, for there is but one your Father which is in heaven: that is, principally: whereas earthly parents, whom we are commanded to worſhip and honour, are but certaine images or reſemblances of our heavenly Father, having this bleſſing, that they are fathers from him. And hereupon this title agrees to men, not ſimply, but ſo farre forth as God honoureth them with fatherhood in calling them to be fathers, whereas God himſelfe receives this honour from none. God is tearmed a father in reſpect both of nature and grace. He is a father in regard of nature, becauſe hee created and governeth all things. In this regard, he is called the [a] Father of ſpirits: and [b] Adam is called the Son of God. He is a father in reſpect of grace becauſe wee are regenerate by him, accepted to bee his ſonnes by adoption through the merits of Chriſt. And in this reſpect the ſecond perſon as well as the firſt is called c a Father, and ſaid to have an off-ſpring d or ſeede and e children. But when the name of Father is given to the firſt perſon, it is done upon a ſpeciall conſideration, becauſe he is a Father by nature to the ſecond perſon, begetting him of his owne ſubſtance before all worlds. By this it appeares, that out of the title of the firſt perſon, we may fetch a deſcription therof on this manner. The Father is the firſt perſon in Trinity, begetting the Sonne. Now to beget, is the perſonall property whereby hee is diſtinguiſhed from the other two. If it bee ſaid, that creatures doe beget, and that therefore to beget is not proper to the Father: the anſwer is, that in this point there are many differences betweene God the Father and all creatures. Firſt, the Father begets the Sonne before all eternity: and therefore God the Father begetting, and the Sonne begotten are equall in time: whereas in earthly generation the father is before the ſonne in time. Secondly, God the Father begets his Sonne by communicating to him his whole eſſence or Godhead, which cannot bee in earthly parents, unleſſe they ſhould bee aboliſhed and come to nothing: Whereas nevertheleſſe, God the Father giving his whole nature to his Sonne, retaines the ſame ſtill, becauſe it is infinite. Thirdly, the Father begets the Sonne in himſelfe, and not forth of himſelfe: but in earthly generation the Father begetting is forth of the child, and the child forth of the Father. And that muſt not trouble us which hereticks alleadge againſt this doctrine, namely, that if the Father who is of one nature with the Sonne, did beget the Sonne, then hee did beget himſelfe: for the Godhead of the Father doth not beget either the Godhead or the perſon of the Sonne: but the perſon of the Father begets the perſon of the Sonne, both which in one Godhead are really diſtinct.

Thus wee ſee what the Father is. Now to beleeve in the Father, is to bee perſwaded, that the firſt perſon in Trinity, is the Father of Chriſt, and in him my Father particularly, and that for this cauſe I intend and deſire for ever to put my truſt in him.

The duties which we may learne hence are manifold. And here wee have occaſion offered, firſt of all to conſider who is our father by nature, I ſhall ſay to corruption (ſaith Iob) thou art my father: and to the worme, thou art my mother: ſeeing God vouchſafeth this great prerogative to them that love him, that hee will be their father, therefore Iob in conſideration hereof would have every man to have recourſe to his owne naturall condition, to ſee who is his father by nature. Iob ſaith, corruption is his father: but if wee marke well the condition of our nature, we ſhall further ſee every man to bee the child of wrath, and that Satan is his father: for ſo long as a man walks in his ſins (which every man doth by nature) ſo long doth he ſhew himſelfe to be the lively child of the divell. And thus Chriſt reaſoneth againſt the Scribes and Phariſees: Yee are of your father the divell, and the luſts of your father, yee will doe. And true it is, that no child is ſo like his father that begot him, as every man by nature is like the divell: and the whole tenour and courſe of his naturall life without grace, is a lively reſemblance of the diſpoſition of Satan.

Secondly, every one that beleeves God to bee a Father, and in Chriſt his Father, muſt as a good child bee obedient to his fathers will. So Salomon ſaith, A wiſe ſonne maketh a glad father. How? by doing his will: and therefore when one told our Saviour Chriſt that his mother and brethren ſtood without, deſiring to ſpeake with him, hee ſaid, Whoſoever ſhall doe my Fathers will which is in heaven, the ſame is my brother, my ſiſter, and mother: wherein we may note, that he that will have God the Father to bee his father, and Chriſt Ieſus his brother, muſt doe the will of God the Father. And hence God ſaith, If I bee a maſter, where is my feare? If I bee a Father, where is my honour? Where is plainely taught this ſecond duty; that if God bee our Father, then as good children wee muſt ſhew obedience unto him: but if wee diſobey him, then we muſt know, that that former ſaying of Chriſt will bee verified upon us, that becauſe men doe the luſts of the divell, therefore they are the children of the divell. But leſt this fearefull ſentence be verified of us, it is the duty of every man that maketh this confeſſion, that hee beleeves God to be his Father, firſt, to labour to know Gods will; and ſecondly, to performe continuall obedience unto the ſame: like unto a good child, that would faine pleaſe his father, and therefore is alwayes ready to doe the beſt hee can. And without doubt, that man which unfainedly takes God for his Father, is then moſt grieved, when as by any ſinne hee diſpleaſeth him, and no other croſſe or calamity is ſo grievous unto him. The greateſt griefe that the prodigall ſonne upon his repentance had, was that he had offended his father, by ſinning againſt heaven, and againſt him: the ſame alſo muſt be our griefe: and all our care muſt be ſet on this, to conſider how wee may bee obedient children to this our loving Father.

Thirdly, that man that beleeves God to bee his Father, muſt imitate and follow him: for it is the will of God that his children ſhould be like unto himſelfe. Now wee follow God ſpecially in two things. I. In doing good to them that perſecute us: ſo ſaith our Saviour Chriſt; Pray for them that hurt you, that you may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh the Sunne to riſe on the evill and on the good, and ſendeth raine on the juſt and unjuſt. II. Our heavenly Father is mercifull: for he is the father of the fatherleſſe, and therefore hee that will be a ſonne of this Father, muſt bee mercifull to his poore brethren; as Iob ſaith of himſelfe, I was eyes to the blind, and I was feete unto the lame, I was a father to the poore.

Iob 29. 15,16.

4. Fourthly, ſeeing we beleeve God to be our Father, we are hereby taught to uſe moderate care for the things of this life; for if a man know himſelfe to be the child of God, then he alſo knowes, that God will provide for him, as we know in a family the Father provideth for all. Now God is a father, and his Church is this family: therefore if thou wilt be a member of Gods Church, and a child of God, thou muſt caſt thy care on God, and follow the counſell of Chriſt: Be not too carefull for your life, what ye ſhall eate, or what ye ſhall drinke. And marke his reaſon drawne from the point which we have in hand; The fowles of the heaven (ſaith he) they neither ſow, nor reap, nor carry into barnes: and yet your heavenly father feedeth them: are ye not much better then they? But alas, the practice of the world is contrary: for men have no care for the knowledge of Gods word, nor the meanes of their ſalvation: all their minds are ſet on the things of this life, when as Chriſt ſaith: Firſt ſeeke the kingdome of heaven, and the righteouſneſſe thereof, and all theſe things ſhall be miniſtred unto you. If wee ſhould ſee a yong man provide for himſelf, and no man elſe for him, we ſhould preſently ſay, ſurely his father is dead: even ſo, when a mans care is ſet wholly both day night for the things of this life, it argues that God hath either caſt him off, or elſe that hee takes him for no father of his.

Mat. 6. 25. Verſ. 26. Verſe 33.

5. Fiftly, if God be our father, then we muſt learne to beare any croſſe patiently, that hee ſhall lay upon us, either in body or in minde, and alwaies looke for deliverance from him: for whom the Lord loveth, them hee chaſtiſeth: and if yee endure chaſtiſing (ſaith the Apoſtle) God offereth himſelfe unto you as unto children: which may appeare more plainly by this compariſon: If two children ſhould fight, and a man comming by, ſhould part them, and after beate the one, and let the other goe free: every man that ſeeth this, will ſay, that that child which he beates is his owne ſonne. Even ſo, when God chaſtiſeth us, he ſheweth himſelfe unto us a Father, if we ſubmit our ſelves. Now if our earthly fathers corrected us, and we gave them reverence, taking it patiently, ſhould we not much rather be in ſubjection to the Father of ſpirits, that we may live? Therefore the concluſion is this, If we diſpleaſe God, be ye ſure, hee will correct us; and when his hand is upon us, wee muſt not murmure againſt him, but beare it with a milde ſpirit: and furthermore when we are under the croſſe, we muſt alwaies looke for deliverance, from this Father onely. If a ſonne when hee is beaten ſhould flie to his Fathers enemies for helpe and counſell; it would argue that hee were but a graceleſſe child. Sundry and divers calamities and croſſes befall men in this life: which they cannot

Heb. 12. 7. Verſe 9.

A brooke: and therefore it is a common practice of many among us in theſe dayes, when Gods hand is upon them, to goe for helpe to the divell; they ſeeke for counſell at witches and Wiſemen (as I have ſaid) but let them looke unto it, for that is the right way to double their miſery, and to ſhew themſelves lewd children.

Laſtly, if wee confeſſe and beleeve God to bee the Father of Chriſt, and in him our Father alſo; then in regard of our converſation, wee muſt not frame our ſelves like unto the world: but the courſe of our lives muſt be in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe. Paul exhorteth the Corinthians to ſeparate themſelves from Idolaters, alledging the place out of the B old Teſtament, where the Lord biddeth the Iſraelites to come out from Idolaters, and to touch no uncleane thing: and the reaſon followeth out of Ieremy, that if they doe ſo, then God will be their Father, and they ſhall be his children, even his ſonnes and daughters: which reaſon Paul urgeth in the next chapter to this effect: conſidering wee have theſe promiſes, that therefore wee ſhould cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit, and grow up unto holineſſe in the feare of the Lord. Where if we marke the place diligently, we ſhall find this leſſon; That every man who takes God for his Father, muſt not onely in this ſinne of Idolatry, but in all other ſinnes ſeparate himſelfe, that men by his godly life may know whoſe child he is. But ſome will ſay, this exhortation is needleſſe amongſt us, for we have no cauſe to ſeparate our ſelves from others, becauſe all amongſt us are Chriſtians, all beleeve in God, and are baptized, and hope to bee ſaved by Chriſt. Anſw. In outward profeſſion, I confeſſe wee carry the ſhew of Chriſtians, but in deed and truth, by our lives and converſations, very many among us deny Chriſt: for in every place the common practice is, to ſpend the time in drunkenneſſe and ſurfetting, in chambering and wantonneſſe: yea, great is the company of thoſe that make a trade of it: take this lewd converſation from many men, and take away their lives. And on the Lords day it may bee ſeene both publikely and privately, in houſes and in the open ſtreets, there is ſuch revell, as though there were no God to ſerve. In the ſixe daies of the weeke, many men walke very painfully in their calling: but when the Lords day commeth, then every man takes licence to doe what he will: and becauſe of the Princes lawes, men will come formally to the Church for faſhions ſake: but in the meane time how many doe nothing elſe but ſcorne, mocke, and deride, and as much as in them lyeth, diſgrace both the word and the miniſters thereof; ſo that the common ſaying is this: oh hee is a preciſe fellow, hee goes to heare Sermons, he is too holy for our companie. But it ſtands men in hand to take out a better leſſon; which is, if we will have God to be our Father, we muſt ſhew our ſelves to bee the children of God by repentance and newneſſe of life: hee cannot bee but a graceleſſe child, that wil lead a rebellious life flat againſt his fathers minde. Let us then ſo behave our ſelves, that we may honour our Father which is in heaven, and not diſhonour him in our lives and callings: rather let us ſeparate our ſelves from the filthineſſe of the fleſh, loathing thoſe things which our father loatheth, and flying from thoſe things which our father abhorreth.

Conſolations. And thus much for the duties. Now follow the conſolations which ariſe from this point. But firſt we are to know, that there are three ſorts of men in the world. The firſt, are ſuch as will neither heare nor obey the word of God. The ſecond ſort, are thoſe which heare the word preached unto them, but they will not obey: both theſe ſorts of men are not to looke for any comfort hence. Now there is a third ſort of men, which as they heare Gods word; ſo they make conſcience of obeying the ſame in their lives and callings: and theſe are they in whom the conſolations that ariſe out of this place, doe rightly belong, and muſt be applyed.

1. Firſt therefore, ſeeing God the Father of Chriſt, and in him the father of all that obey and doe his will, is our father, here note the dignitie and prerogative of all true beleevers: for they are ſonnes and daughters of God, as ſaith S. Iohn, So many as received him, to them he gave a prerogative to be the ſonnes of God: even to them that beleeve in his name. Ioh. 1. 12. This priviledge will appeare the greater, if we conſider our firſt eſtate: for as Abraham ſaith, We are but duſt and aſhes, Gen. 18. 27. and in regard of the depravation of our natures, we are the children of the divell: therefore of ſuch rebels to bee made the ſonnes of God, it is a wonderfull priviledge and prerogative, and no dignitie like unto it. And to inlarge it further, he that is the Sonne of God, is the brother of Chriſt, and fellow-heire with him; and ſo heire apparant to the kingdome of heaven: and in this reſpect, is not inferiour to the very Angels. This muſt be laid up carefully in the hearts of Gods people, to confirme them in their converſation among the company of ungodly men in this world.

2. Secondly, if a man doe indeavour himſelfe to walke according to Gods word, then the Lord of his mercy will beare with his wants: for as a father ſpareth his owne ſonne, ſo will God ſpare them that feare him. Now a father commands his childe to write, or to apply his booke: though all things herein be not done according to his minde, yet if he finde a readineſſe with a good indeavour, he is content, and fals to praiſe his childs writing or learning. So God giveth his commandements, and though his ſervants faile in obedience; yet if the Lord ſee their hearty indeavour, and their unfained willingneſſe to obey his will, though with ſundry wants, he hath made this promiſe, and will performe it, that as a father ſpareth his ſonne, ſo will he ſpare them. Mal. 3. 17. Pſal. 103. 13. If a child be ſicke, will the father caſt him off: nay, if through the grievouſneſſe of his ſickneſſe hee cannot take the meate that is given him, or if he take it, and for faintneſſe picke it up againe, will the father of the childe thruſt him out of doores? no: but hee will rather pittie him. And ſo when a man doth indeavour himſelfe through the whole courſe of his life to keepe Gods commandements, God will not caſt him away, though through weakeneſſe he faile in ſundry things and diſpleaſe God. This prerogative can none have, but hee that is the childe of God: as for others, when they ſinne, they doe nothing elſe but draw downe Gods judgements upon them, for their deeper condemnation.

3. Thirdly, hence we learne, that the childe of God cannot wholly fall away from Gods favour, I doe not ſay, that he cannot fall at all: for he may fall away in part, but hee cannot wholly. Indeed ſo oft as hee ſinnes, he deprives himſelfe wholly of Gods favour as much as in him lyeth: yet God for his part ſtill keepeth the minde and purpoſe of a Father. David loved his ſonne Abſolon wonderfully, but Abſolon like a wicked ſonne played a lewde pranck; and would have thruſt his father out of his kingdome: and David although he was ſore offended with Abſolon, and ſhewed tokens of his wrath, yet in heart he loved him; and never purpoſed to caſt him off. Hereupon when he went againſt him, he commanded the captaines to intreat the young man Abſolon gently for his ſake. 2 Sam. 18. 5. And when he was hanged by the haire of the head in purſuing of his father, then David wept and cryed, O my ſonne Abſolon, my ſonne Abſolon, would God I had dyed for thee, Abſolon my ſonne. Verſe 33. And ſo it is with God our heavenly Father, when his children ſinne againſt him, and thereby loſe his love and favour, and fall from grace, he forſakes them: but how farre? Surely he ſhewes ſignes of anger for their wickedneſſe, and yet indeed his love remaines toward them ſtill: and this is a true concluſion. The grace of God in the adoption of the elect is unchangeable, and he that is the child of God can never fall away wholly or finally. On the contrary, that is a bad and comfortleſſe opinion of the Church of Rome; which holdeth, that a man may be juſtified before God, and yet afterward by a mortall ſinne, finally fall from grace and be condemned. Torren. conſeſſ. Auguſt.

4. Fourthly, the child of God that takes God the Father for his Father, may freely come into the preſence of God, and have libertie to pray unto him. We know it is a great priviledge to come into the chamber of preſence before an earthly Prince: and few can alwaies have this prerogative, though they bee great men: yet the Kings owne ſonne may have free entrance, and ſpeake freely unto the king himſelfe, becauſe he is his ſonne. Now the children of God have more prerogative then this: for they may come into the preſence, not of an earthly king, but of Almightie God the King of kings: and as they are the ſonnes of God in Chriſt, ſo in him they may freely ſpeake unto God their Father by prayer. And this overthrowes the doctrine of ſuch as bee of the Church of Rome, which teach and hold, that a man muſt come to ſpeake to God by prayer through the interceſſion of Saints; for, ſay they, the preſence of God is ſo glorious, that wee may not be ſo bold, as of our ſelves to ſpeake unto him; but needs muſt have the interceſſion of others.

5. Laſtly, God will provide for all his Church and children all things needfull both for their bodies and ſoules: ſo our Saviour Chriſt bids his diſciples take no thought what they ſhould eate, or what they ſhould drinke, or wherewith they ſhould be cloathed, adding this reaſon: for your heavenly Father knoweth all your wants. And if we take thought, it muſt be moderate, and not diſtruſtfull: it is a part of the fathers dutie to provide for his Family & children, and not the children for the father. Now ſhall an earthly father have this care for his children: and ſhall not our heavenly Father much more provide for thoſe that feare and love him? Nay, marke further, in Gods church there be many hypocrites which receive infinite benefits from God, by reaſon of his elect children with whom they live: and wee ſhall ſee this to be true, that the wicked man hath ever fared better for the godly mans cauſe. Sodome and Gomorrha received many benefits by reaſon of righteous Lot: and when the Lord was purpoſed to deſtroy Sodome, hee was faine to pull Lot forth of the citie: for the text ſaith, the Angel of the Lord could not doe any thing, till hee was come out of it. So alſo in Pauls dangerous voyage towards Rome, all the men in it fared better for Pauls companie: for the Lord told Paul by an Angel, that there ſhould be no loſſe of any mans life, for the Lord had given to him all that ſayled with him. And undoubtedly, if it were not for ſome few that feare God, hee would powre downe his vengeance upon many nations and kingdomes, there is ſuch exceſſe of wickedneſſe in all ſorts. Againe, if the Lord doe thus carefully provide for his children all kind of benefits; what a wonderful wickedneſſe is this, for men to get their living by ungodly meanes; as uſury, carding, dicing and ſuch like exerciſes? If a man were perſwaded, that God were his Father, and would provide ſufficiently both for his body & ſoule; ſo that uſing lawfull meanes he ſhould ever have enough: out of all doubt he would never after the faſhion of the world uſe unlawfull and prophane meanes to get a living. But this prooveth, that howſoever many men ſay, God is their Father, yet indeed they deny him.

Matth. 6. 32.

Gen. 19 22.

Act. 27. 24.

And thus much of this title, Father, the firſt thing whereby the firſt perſon is deſcribed. Now followeth the ſecond point, namely, his attribute of Omnipotẽcie, in the word Almighty.

A And whereas the Father is ſaid to be Almightie, it is not ſo to be underſtood as though the Sonne were not Almightie, or the holy Ghoſt not Almightie; for every propertie or attribute (ſave the perſonall properties) is common to all the three perſons. For as God the Father doth impart his godhead unto the Sonne, and to the holy Ghoſt, ſo doth hee communicate the properties of the godhead to them alſo.

God is omnipotent two waies: I. Becauſe he is able to doe whatſoever he will. II. Becauſe he is able to doe more then hee will doe. For the firſt, that God is able to doe whatſoever he will. David ſaith, Our God is in heaven, and he doth whatſoever he will: for there is nothing that can hinder God; but as he willeth, B ſo every thing is done. Secondly, that God can doe more then he willeth to be done, it is plaine, where John Baptiſt ſaith, God is able of theſe ſtones to raiſe up children unto Abraham: for though God can doe thus much, yet hee will not doe it. So likewiſe when Chriſt was betrayed, the Father could have given him more then 12. legions of Angels to have delivered him out of their hands, but yet he would not: and the like may bee ſaid of many other things. The Father is and was able to have created another world, yea a thouſand worlds but he would not, nor will not. And likewiſe Chriſt being upon the croſſe, was able at their C bidding to have come downe, and ſaved himſelfe from death, but hee would not: & therefore this is true, the Lord can doe any thing that hee willeth to be done actually, yea and more then he will. But ſome will ſay, God can not doe ſome things which man can doe, as God cannot lie, nor denie himſelfe, and therefore he is not omnipotent. Anſw. Although ſome have thought that God could doe even theſe things; and he did them not, becauſe he would not: yet we muſt know and beleeve, that God can neither lie, nor deny himſelfe: indeed man can doe both, but theſe and many other ſuch things if God could doe them, he could not be God. God indeed can doe all things which ſhew forth his glory and majeſtie: but D ſuch things as are againſt his nature he cannot doe: as for example: God cannot ſinne, and therefore can not lie: and becauſe he cannot doe theſe things, for this very cauſe he is omnipotent: for theſe and ſuch like, are works of impotencie: which if God could doe, hee ſhould even by his owne word be judged impotent. Secondly, hee cannot doe that which implies contradiction: as when a thing is, to make it at the ſame time to be, and not to be: as when the Sunne doth ſhine, to make it at the ſame inſtant to ſhine and not to ſhine. And therefore falſe is the doctrine of that Church, which in their Tranſubſtantiation make the body of Chriſt, (whoſe eſſentiall propertie is to be only in one place at once) to be circumſcribed, and not to be circumſcribed: to be in one place, and not to be in one place.

And

And thus much for the meaning. Now follow the duties whereunto we are mooved by this doctrine of Gods Ommipotency.

First, whereas God the Father is said to bee Almighty, wee are taught true humiliation: Humble your selves under the mighty hand of God, saith Peter: where he giveth an exhortation to humility, and alleadgeth the cause, because God is Almighty. To make this more plaine. Every one of us was borne in sinne, and by nature we are most wretched in our selves: now what an one is God? Surely he is able to doe whatsoever he will, yea and more then he will, and is able to destroy such as rebell against him every moment. Therefore our duty is to cast downe our selves for our sinnes in his presence. This true humiliation was that which our Saviour Christ would have brought the young man in the Gospel unto, when hee bad him goe sell all that he had and give to the poore. Therefore whosoever thou art, take heede thou must: for if thou runne on in thy wickednesse, and still rebell against God, it is a thousand to one at length he will destroy thee. For hee is an Almighty God, and able to doe whatsoever hee will: his hand is mighty, it boots not a man to strive with him: for he was never yet overmastered, and for this cause we must needs cast downe our selves under his hands. It is a fearefull thing (saith the holy Ghost) to fall into the hands of the living God: therefore if we would escape his heavy and terrible displeasure, the best way for us is, to abase our selves, and be ashamed to follow our sinnes. Christ biddeth us not to feare him that is able to kill the body, and can goe no further: But wee must feare him that is able to cast both body and soule into hell fire. Example of this wee have in David, who when hee was persecuted by his owne sonne Absolon, hee said unto the Lord. If he thus say, I have no delight in thee, behold here I am, let him doe to me as seemeth good in his eyes. But some will say, I will live a little longer in my sinnes, in lying, pride, Sabbath-breaking, in swearing, dicing, gaming, & wantonnes: for God is mercifull, and in my old age I will repent. Ans. Well; sooth not thy selfe: but marke, usually when God holds backe his hand for a season, hee doth as it were fetch a more mighty blow, for the greater confusion of a rebellious sinner; therefore humble, submit, and cast downe thy selfe before God, and doe not strive against him: his hand is mighty, and will overthrow thee. Though thou hadst all learning, wisedome, might, riches, &c. yet (as Christ said to the young man) one thing is wanting, that thou shouldest be humbled; and untill thou be humbled, nothing is to be looked for but Gods judgements for sin.

Secondly, seeing God is Almighty; we must tremble and feare at all his judgements, wee must stand in awe, quake, and quiver at them, as the poore child doth, when hee seeth his father come with the rod. Example of this wee have often in Gods Word; as when the sonnes of Aaron offered strange fire before the Lord, he sent fire from heaven, and burned them up. And though Aaron was very sorry for his sonnes, yet when Moses told him, that the Lord would bee glorified in all that came neere him, then the text saith, Aaron held his peace. So also wee reade that the Apostles reprooved Peter, for preaching unto the Gentiles: but when Peter had expounded the things in order which hee had seene, then they held their peace and glorified God. As also David saith: I held my tongue, O Lord; because thou didst it. Isaiah saith, In hope and silence is true fortitude. If a man be in trouble hee must hope for deliverance, and be quiet and patient at Gods judgements. But the practice of the world is flatte contrary; For men are so farre from trembling at them, that they use to pray to God that plagues, curses, and vengeance may light upon them, and upon their servants and children. Now the Lord being a mighty God often doth answerably bring his judgements upon them. Againe, many carried away with impatience, wish themselves hanged or drowned, which evils they thinke shall never befall them: yet at the length God doth in his justice bring such punishments upon them according as they wished. And (which is more) in all ages there have beene some which have scorned and mocked at Gods judgements. Hereof we had not farre hence a most fearefull example. One being with his companion in a house drinking on the Lords day, when he was ready to depart thence, there was great lightning and thunder: whereupon his fellow requested him to stay, but the man mocking and jesting at the thunder and lightning, said (as report was) it was nothing but a knave cooper knocking on his tubbes, come what would, hee would goe; and so went on his journey: but before hee came halfe a mile from the house, the same hand of the Lord, which before hee had mocked, in a cracke of thunder strooke him about the girdlestead, that he fell downe starke dead. Which example is worthy of our remembrance, to put us in mind of Gods heavie wrath against those which scorne his judgements: for our dutie is to tremble and feare: and it were greatly to be wished, that we could with open eye behold the terriblenesse & fearefulnesse of Gods judgements: it would make a man to quake and to leave off sinne. If a man passe by some high and dangerous place in the night when hee cannot see, hee is not afraid; but if you bring him backe againe in the day, and let him see what a steep & dangerous way he came, hee will not be perswaded to passe the same way again for any thing: so is it in sinning: for men living in ignorance and blindnesse, practise any wickednesse, and doe not care for Gods judgements: but when God of his goodnesse bringeth them backe, and openeth their eies to see the downefall to the pit of hell, and the judgements of God due to their sinnes: then (they say) they will never ſinne as they have done, but become new men, and walke in the way to eternall life.

Thirdly, we are taught by the Apoſtle Paul, that if we be to doe any duty to our brethren, as to releeve them, we muſt doe it with cheerefulneſſe: for he laboureth to perſwade the Corinthians to cheerefull liberalitie, and the reaſon of his perſwaſion is, becauſe God is able to make all grace to abound towards them. Where alſo this duty is taught us, that ſeeing God is omnipotent, and therefore able to make us abound, therefore we muſt give cheerefully to our poore brethren which want. 2 Cor. 9. 7, 8.

Fourthly, whereas there are many in every place, which have lived long in their ſinnes, even from their cradle; ſome in wantonneſſe, ſome in drunkenneſſe, ſome in ſwearing, ſome in idleneſſe, and ſuch like: out of this place to all ſuch there is a good leſſon, namely, that every one of them doe now become new men, & repent of all their ſins, for all their life paſt. For marke what Paul ſaith of the Iewes which are cut off from Chriſt through unbeleefe, and have continued in hardneſſe of heart, and deſperate malice againſt him, almoſt 16. hundreth yeeres: If (ſaith he) they abide not ſtill in unbeleefe, they may be grafted in their olive again: and his reaſon is this, becauſe God is able to graft them in againe. Even ſo, though we have lived many yeeres in ſin, (and ſure it is a dangerous and fearefull caſe for a man to live 20. 30. or 40. yeeres under the power of the divell;) yet we muſt know, that if we will now live a new life; forſake all our ſinnes, and turne to God, wee may be received to grace, and be made a branch of the true Olive, though wee have borne the fruits of the wilde olive all our life long. But ſome will object, that they have no hope of Gods favour, becauſe they have bin ſo grievous ſinners, and continued in them ſo long. Anſ. But know it, whoſoever thou art, God is able to graft thee in; and if thou repent, hee will receive thee to his love and favour. This muſt be obſerved of all, but eſpecially of ſuch as are old in yeeres, and remaine ignorant without knowledge, they muſt turne to the Lord by repentance: otherwiſe, if they continue ſtill profane and impenitent, they muſt know this, that their damnation comes poſthaſte to meete them, and they to it. Rom. 11. 23.

And thus much for the duties. Now follow the conſolations which Gods Church reape from this, that God the Father is Omnipotent. Firſt, the wonderfull power of God ſerveth to ſtrengthen us in prayer unto God: for he that will pray truely, muſt onely pray for thoſe things for which hee hath warrant in Gods word: all our prayers muſt be made in faith, and for a man to pray in faith, it is hard: therefore a ſpeciall meanes to ſtrengthen us herein, is, the mightie power of God. This was the ground and ſtay of the leper, whom our Saviour Chriſt cleanſed: Lord (ſaith he) if thou wilt, thou canſt make mee cleane. And in the Lords prayer, when our Saviour Chriſt hath taught us to make ſixe petitions; in the end he giveth us a reaſon, or motive to induce us to ſtand upon, and to waite for the benefits before craved, in theſe words: Thine is the kingdome, thine is the power, &c. Mat. 8. 2.

Secondly, hence we learne this comfort, that all the gates of hell ſhall never be able to prevaile againſt the leaſt member of Chriſt. I doe not ſay, they ſhall never be able to aſſault, or tempt them, for that may bee: but they ſhall never overcome them. How (will ſome ſay) may we be reſolved of this? I anſwer, By reaſon of Faith; for if a Chriſtian man doe beleeve that God the Father, and Chriſt his Sonne, is Almightie, no enemy ſhall ever be able to prevaile againſt him. So Saint Iohn reaſoneth: Little children, ye are of God, and have overcome them, that is, all falſe teachers, becauſe greater is he that is in you (Chriſt Ieſus by his holy ſpirit, who is God, and therefore Almightie) then he that is in the world; that is, the ſpirit of Satan: therefore you need not to feare. So David compareth himſelfe to a ſilly ſheepe, and ſaith: Though I ſhould walke through the valley of the ſhadow of death, that is, as it were in the mouth of the Lyon, yet I would feare none evill: why ſo? becauſe the Lord is with him: thy rod (ſaith he) and thy ſtaffe comfort me. 1 Ioh. 4. 4. Pſal. 23. 4.

Thus much for the benefits. Now whereas it is ſaid the firſt Perſon is a Father, and alſo Almightie, joyne theſe two together, and hence will ariſe ſingular benefits and inſtructions. Firſt, whereas we are taught to confeſſe, that the firſt Perſon is a Father Almightie, we, and every man muſt learne to have experience in himſelfe, of the mighty power of this Almighty Father. Why, will ſome ſay, that is nothing, for the divell and all the damned ſoules feele the power of the Almighty. True indeed they feele the power of God, namely, as he is an Almighty Iudge condemning them; but they feele not the power of an Almighty Father: this is the point whereof wee muſt indeavour to have experience in our ſelves. Paul prayeth, That the God of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt the Father of glory, would give unto the Epheſians the ſpirit of wiſedome, to ſee what is the exceeding greatneſſe of his power in them which beleeve, according to the working of his mighty power, which he wrought in Chriſt. Which place muſt bee conſidered: for here the Apoſtle would have us have ſuch a ſpeciall manifeſtation of Gods power in our ſelves, like to that which hee did once ſhew forth in Chriſt. But how did Chriſt ſee and find the power of God as hee was man? Anſ. Divers wayes. I. on the croſſe he dyed the firſt death; which is the ſeparation of body and ſoule: and he ſuffered the ſorrowes of the ſecond death. For in his ſoule hee bare the whole wrath of God, and all the pangs of hell, and after was buried and laid in the grave, where death triumphed over him for the ſpace of three dayes. Now in this extreamity God did ſhew his power, in that hee raiſed Chriſt from death to life. And looke as his power was Eph. 1. 19.

manifeſted in Chriſt the head; ſo muſt it bee manifeſted in all his members: for every man hath his grave, which is naturall ſin and corruption, which we draw from our firſt parents, & looke as a man lyes dead in the grave, and can moove neither hand nor foote; ſo every man by nature lyeth dead in ſin. Now as God did ſhew his power in raiſing Chriſt frō death: ſo every one muſt labor to have this knowledge and experience in himſelf of the mighty power of God, in raiſing him from the grave of ſinne to newneſſe of life. For thus Paul makes a ſpeciall requeſt, that hee might know Chriſt, and the vertue of his reſurrection, that is, that he might feele in himſelfe that power whereby Chriſt was raiſed from death to life, to raiſe him alſo from the bondage of his ſinnes to a new life more and more. Furthermore, when Chriſt was upon the croſſe, and all the gates of hell were open againſt him, then did he vanquiſh Satan, he bruiſed the Serpents head; and as Paul ſaith, Col. 2. 15. He ſpoiled principalities and powers, and made a ſhew of them openly, and hath triumphed over them on the croſſe: he overcame the divell and all his angels by the power of his Almightie Father, and by his owne power as he is God. And even ſo muſt Chriſtian men labour to finde the ſame power in themſelves of this Almighty Father by which Chriſt did triumph over Satan: that by it they may tread him under their feete, which men can never doe by any power in themſelves. Againe, Chriſt prayeth that that cup might paſſe from him: and yet he ſaith, Luke 22. 42. Not my will, but thy will be fulfilled. For it was neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer. And this requeſt was heard, not becauſe he was freed frō death, but becauſe God his Father Almightie gave him power and ſtrength in his manhood to beare the brunt of his indignation. Now look as this power was effectuall in Chriſt Ieſus the head, to make him able and ſufficient to beare the pangs of hell: ſo the ſame power of God, is in ſome meaſure effectuall in all the members of Chriſt, to make them both patient, and of ſufficient ſtrength to beare any affliction, as Saint Paul ſaith, Coloſſians 1. 11. Being ſtrengthened with all might through his glorious power, unto all patience, & long-ſuffering, with joyfulneſſe. And this is a notable point which every one ought to learne: that whereas they confeſſe God to bee their Almightie Father, they ſhould herewithall labour to feele and have experience in themſelves, that he is Almighty in the beginning and continuing of grace unto them, and in giving them power and patience to ſuffer afflictions. Further, Chriſt Ieſus, when the work of our redemption was accompliſhed, was lifted up into heaven, and ſet at the right hand of God in heavenly places far above all principalities and powers, &c. even by the power of his Father: well, as this power was made manifeſt in the head; ſo muſt it be in the members thereof. Every child of God ſhall hereafter ſee and feele in himſelf the ſame power to tranſlate him from this vale of miſery in this life, to the kingdome of heaven. Wherefore to conclude, wee have great cauſe to be thankfull and to praiſe God for this priviledge, that hee ſhewes his power in his children in regenerating them, in making them die unto ſinne, and to ſtand againſt the gates of hell, and to ſuffer afflictions patiently: as alſo that he tranſlates them from death to life. And every one ſhould ſhew his thankfulneſſe, in labouring to have experience of this power in himſelf, as Paul exhorteth us in his Epiſtles to the Coloſſians and Epheſians: yea, reade all his Epiſtles, and we ſhall finde he mentioneth no point ſo often as this, namely, the mighty power of God, manifeſted firſt in Chriſt, & ſecondly in his members: and he accounts all things loſſe that he might know Chriſt, and the vertue of his reſurrection. This point is the rather to be marked, becauſe this power in the matter of grace is not to be ſeene with eye; and few there be in reſpect that have felt the vertue thereof in themſelves: for the divell doth mightily ſhew his contrary power in the greateſt part of the world, in carrying them to ſin and wickednes.

Secondly, hence we learne, that which Paul teacheth, namely, to know that all things work together for the beſt unto them that love God. God is Almighty, & therfore able to do whatſoever he will: he is alſo a Father, and therefore is willing to do that which is for our good. But ſome will ſay, we are ſubject to many croſſes, yea to ſin: what? can our ſinnes turne to our good? Anſ. If God Almighty be thy Father, he will turne thine afflictions, yea thy ſinnes which by nature are evill, beyond all expectation unto thy ſalvation. And thus much God will doe to all ſuch as bee obedient unto him: yet no man muſt hereupon preſume to ſinne.

Thirdly, whereas we beleeve that God is a mighty Father, it ſerves to confirme Gods children in the promiſes of mercy revealed in his word. The chiefeſt whereof is, that if men will turne from their ſinnes, and beleeve in Chriſt, they ſhall not periſh, but have life everlaſting. I know ſome men will make it an eaſie thing to beleeve, eſpecially thoſe which never knew what faith meant. But ſuch perſons need no meanes of confirmation of Faith: therefore let all thoſe which have taſted of the hardneſſe of attaining unto it, learne how to eſtabliſh their wavering hearts in the promiſe of God, by the conſideration of theſe two points: God is a Father, and therefore he is willing: he is Almightie, and therefore he is able to performe his promiſe. He that will be reſolved of Gods promiſes, muſt have both theſe ſetled in his heart, & build on them as on two foundations.

It followeth, Creator of Heaven and Earth.] Wee have ſpoken of the title of the firſt perſon, and of his attributes: now we come to ſpeake of his effect, namely, the Creation: but before we come to it, we are to anſwer a certen objection which may be made. At the firſt it may ſeeme ſtrange to ſome, that the worke of Phil. 3. 10.

Phil. 3. 10.

Rom. 8. 28.

Eph. 1. 20, 21.

Creation is aſcribed to the firſt perſon in Trinitie the Father: whereas in the Scripture it is common to them all three equally. And firſt, that the Father is Creator, it was never doubted; as for the ſecond perſon the Sonne, that he is Creator, it is evident: All things are made by it, that is, by the Sonne, who is the ſubſtantial word of the Father, & without it was made nothing that was made. And againe it is ſaid, that God by his Son made the world. As for the holy Ghoſt, the worke of creation is alſo aſcribed unto him: and therefore Moſes ſaith, The ſpirit mooved upon the waters: and Iob ſaith, His ſpirit hath garniſhed the heavens. How then is this peculiar to the Father, being common to all the three perſons in Trinity? I anſwer, The actions of God are two-fold: either inward, or outward. The inward actions are thoſe, which one perſon doth exerciſe toward another: as the Father doth beget the Sonne, and this is an inward action peculiar to the Father: and all inward actions are proper to the perſons from whom they are. So the Sonne doth receive the Godhead by communication from the Father: and the holy Ghoſt from them both: and theſe are inward actions peculiar to theſe perſons. So likewiſe, for the Father to ſend his Sonne, it is an inward action proper to the Father, and cannot be communicated to the holy Ghoſt: and the Sonne to bee ſent by the Father only, is a thing proper to the Sonne, and not common to the Father, or to the holy Ghoſt. Now outward actions, are the actions of the perſons in the Trinitie to the creatures, as the worke of Creation, the worke of preſervation, and of redemption. Theſe and all ſuch actions are common to all the three perſons: the Father createth, the Son createth, and the holy Ghoſt createth: and ſo we may ſay of the works of government, and of redemption, and of all outward actions of the perſons to the creatures. But ſome againe may ſay, how then can the worke of creation, being an outward action of God to the creature, be peculiar to the firſt perſon the Father? I anſwer, The worke of creation is not ſo proper to the firſt perſon, as that it cannot alſo be common to the reſt: for all the three perſons joyntly created all things of nothing; onely they are diſtinguiſhed in the manner of creating. For the Father is the cauſe that beginneth the worke, the Sonne puts it in execution, the holy Ghoſt is the finiſher of it. And againe, the Father createth by the [a] Son, and by the holy Ghoſt: the Son createth by the holy Ghoſt and from the Father: the holy Ghoſt createth not by the Father nor by the Sonne: but from the Father and the Sonne. And this is the reaſon why the work of creation is aſcribed here unto the Father, becauſe he alone createth after a peculiar manner, namely, by the Sonne and by the holy Ghoſt: but the Son and the holy Ghoſt create not by the Father, but from him.

Thus having anſwered the objection, wee come to ſpeake of the Creation it ſelfe. In handling whereof, wee muſt withall treat of the Counſell of God, as being the cauſe thereof, and of the Government of the creatures, as being a worke of God whereby he continues the creation. And the order which I will obſerve, is firſt to ſpeake of the Counſell of God, and ſecondly of the Execution of his Counſell, which hath two ſpeciall branches, the firſt the Creation, the ſecond the preſervation or government of things created.

The Counſell of God, is his eternall and unchangeable decree, whereby hee hath ordained all things either paſt, preſent, or to come, for his owne glory. Firſt I call it a decree, becauſe God hath in it ſet downe with himſelfe as appointed ſoveraigne Lord, what ſhall be, what ſhall not be. I adde further, that all things whatſoever, come under the compaſſe of this decree, as Paul ſaith, He worketh all things according to the counſell of his will. And our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, that a ſparrow cannot fall on the ground without the heavenly Father: yea further, he tels his diſciples, that the very haires of their heads are numbred, meaning that they are knowne and ſet downe in the counſell of God. And conſidering that God is King over heaven and earth; and that moſt wiſe, yea wiſedome it ſelfe; and moſt mighty, yea might and power it ſelfe: it muſt needs be that he hath determined how all things ſhall come to paſſe in his kingdome, with all their circumſtances, time, place, cauſes, &c. in ſuch particular manner, that the very leaſt thing that may bee, is not left unappointed and undiſpoſed.

The counſell of God hath two properties, eternitie and unchangeableneſſe. It is eternall, becauſe it was ſet downe by God from everlaſting before all times, as Paul ſaith: God hath choſen the Epheſians to ſalvation before all worlds. And he ſaith of himſelfe, that he was called according to the purpoſe of God, which was before all worlds. Againe, the ſame counſell once ſet downe, is unchangeable. God ſaith, I am Iehovah, I change not. With God (ſaith St. Iames) there is no variablenes, nor ſhadow of change. Now ſuch as God is, ſuch is his decree or counſell. And beeing unchangeable, his counſels alſo are unchangeable.

Gods counſel hath two parts: his foreknowledge, and his will or pleaſure. His foreknowledge, whereby he did foreſee all things which were to come. His wil, wherby in general manner he wils & ordaines whatſoever is to come to paſſe: and therefore ſuch things as God altogether nilleth, cannot come to paſſe. Now theſe two parts of the counſell of God muſt bee joyned together, and not ſevered. Will without knowledge is impotent, and foreknowledge without will, is idle. And therefore ſuch as hold that God doth barely foreſee ſundry things to come, no manner of way either willing or decreeing the iſſue and event of them, doe bring in little better then Atheiſme. For if wee ſay that any thing comes to paſſe either againſt Gods will, or God not knowing of it, or not regarding it, wee shall make him either impotent or careleſſe, and raze the very foundation of Gods providence.

And this decree of God must be conceived of us, as the most generall cause of all things subsisting: being first in order, having all other causes under it, and most principall, over-ruling all, over-ruled by none.

Thus wee see what is to be held touching Gods counsell: now for the better clearing of the truth, three objections of some difficultie are to be answered. First, may some man say, if God decree and ordaine all things whatsoever, then he decreeth and ordaineth sinne: but God decrees not sinne in as much as it is against his will: and therefore he decrees not all things. Answ. We use not to say that God doth simply will or decree sinne, but onely in part, adding withall these caveats: I. That God willeth and decreeth sinne, not properly as it is sinne, but as it hath in it sundry regards and respects of goodnesse, so farre forth as it is a punishment, or chastisement, or triall, or action, or [a] hath an existence in nature. II. God can so use evill instruments, that the worke done by them being a sinne, shall nevertheleſſe in him bee a good worke: because hee knowes how to use evil instruments well. If it be further alledged, that God willeth no wickednesse. Psal. 5. 5. we must know, that Gods will is two-fold, generall, and speciall. Generall, whereby God willeth and decreeth that a thing shall be: and by this kinde of will he may be said to will sinne; and that without sinne. For though he decree it thus, yet doth he not instill wickednesse into the heart of any sinner, & his decree is onely for a most excellent end. For in regard of God which decreeth it, it [b] is good that there should bee evill. To this purpose Augustine saith excellently, By an unspeakeable manner it comes to passe, that that which is against God will, is not without his will. Now the speciall will of God is that, whereby he willeth any thing in such manner, that hee approoveth it, and delighteth in it. And thus indeed wee cannot say without blasphemy, that God willeth sinne. Thus then we see in what manner, and how farre forth God may be said to decree sinne, that is, to will and appoint the permission of it.

Againe, it may be objected thus: If all things be determined by the unchangeable decree of God, then all things come to passe by an unchangeable necessitie: and men in their actions have no free will at all, nor liberty in doing any thing. Answ. This must bee learned as a certaine rule, that the necessary decree of God, doth not abolish the nature of the second causes, and impose necessity upon the will of man, but only order and incline it without any constraint, to one part. As for example: When a people is gathered together to heare Gods word, there is none of them but they know that they come thither by Gods providence, (and in that respect necessarily) yet before they come, they had all freedome and libertie in themselves to come or not to come: and Gods eternall counsell did not hinder the libertie of our wils, in comming or not comming, nor take away the same: but onely incline and turne them to the choise of one part. Another example hereof we may have in our Saviour Christ, whose state & condition of body if we regard, he might have lived longer: yet by the eternall counsell of God hee must die at that place, at that time, at that houre, where & when he died. Whereby we may see, that Gods counsell doth not hinder the will of man; but only order and dispose it. Which answer being well marked, we shal see these two will stand together: the necessary & unchangeable counsell of God, and the free will of man: And againe, that the same action may be both necessary & contingent: necessary, in regard of the highest cause, the counsell of God; not necessary, but contingent, in respect of the second causes, as among the rest, the will of man.

Thirdly, some will yet object against this doctrine, that if all things come to passe according to Gods unchangeable decree, then what needs the using of any means? what needs the preaching of the word? and receiving of the Sacraments? what needs any lawes, Princes, Magistrates, or government? what needs walking in mens ordinary callings? all is to no end; for let men play, or worke, sleepe, or wake; let them doe what they will; all is one: for Gods eternall counsell must needs come to passe. Therefore it may seeme in vaine for men to busie themselves about such things. Answ. But we must know, that as God hath appointed all things to come to passe in his eternall and unchangeable counsell; so in the same decree, he hath together set down the meanes and wayes whereby he will have the same things brought to passe: for these two must never be severed, the thing to be done, and the meanes whereby it is done. We may reade in the Acts in Pauls dangerous voyage towards Rome, an Angel of the Lord told Paul, that God had given him all that sailed with him in the ship: now the Souldiers and Mariners hearing this, might reason thus with themselves: Seeing God hath decreed to save us all, we may doe what we will, there is no danger, for we shall all come to land alive: but marke what Paul saith, Except these abide in the ship, yee cannot be safe: where we see, that as it was the eternall counsell of God to save Paul, and all that were with him; so hee decreed to save all by this particular meanes of their abode in the ship. King Ezechias was restored to his health, and received from God a promise that he should have fifteene yeeres added to his daies, and the promise was confirmed by a signe: now what doth he? cast off all meanes? no: but as he was prescribed, so he applyeth a bunch of dry figs to his sore, and useth still his ordinary dyet. Therefore it is grosse ignorance and madnesse in men, to reason so against Gods decree; God in his unchangeable counſell hath decreed and ſet downe all things how they ſhall be; therefore I will uſe no meanes, but live as I liſt: nay rather we muſt ſay the contrary; becauſe God hath decreed this thing or that to be done: therefore I will uſe the meanes which God hath appointed to bring the ſame to paſſe.

Now followes the Creation, which is nothing elſe but a worke of the bleſſed Trinitie, forming and framing his creatures which were not before, and that of nothing. The points to be knowne concerning the creation are many. The firſt, is the thing by which God did begin and finiſh the creation. And we muſt underſtand that at the firſt God made all things without any inſtrument or meanes, and not as men doe which bring to paſſe their buſines by ſervants and helps, but onely by his word and commandement; as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, He commanded, and all things were made. Pſal.148.5. In the beginning God ſaid, Let there be light, and there was light: and by the ſame meanes was the creation of every creature following. Gen.1.3. The very power of the Word and Commandement of God was ſuch, as by it that thing was made and had a beeing, which before was not. It may be demanded, what word this was by which God is ſaid to make all things. Anſ. The word of God in Scripture is taken three waies: for the ſubſtantial word, for the ſounding or written word, for the operative or powerfull word. The ſubſtantiall word, is the ſecond perſon begottē of the ſubſtance of the Father. Now howſoever it be true, that God the Father did create all things by his word, that is, by his Son: yet doth it not ſeeme to be true that by theſe words [God ſaid, Let there be, this or that] that the Sonne is meant. For that word which God gave out in the creation was in time, whereas the Son is the word of the Father before all times: and againe, it is a word common to the three perſons equally, whereas the Sonne is the word of the Father onely. Furthermore, it is not like that it was any ſounding word ſtanding of letters and ſillables, and uttered to the creatures after the uſuall manner of men, that was the cauſe of them: it remaines therefore that all things were made by the operative word, which is nothing but the pleaſure, will, and appointment of God, and is more powerfull to bring a thing to paſſe, then all the meanes in the world beſide. Heb.1.3. For Gods willing of any thing, is his effecting and doing of it. And this is prooved by David when he ſaith, He ſpake the word, and they were made: hee commanded, and they were created. Pſal.33.6,9. Hence we muſt take out a ſpeciall leſſon, needfull to be learned of every man. Looke what power God uſed and ſhewed in making the creatures when they were not, the ſame power he doth, can, and will ſhew forth in re-creating and redeeming ſinfull men by the precious blood of Chriſt. By his word he created mans heart when it was not; and he can and will as eaſily create in us all, new hearts, ſpecially when Pſal.51.10.

A we uſe the good meanes appointed for that end. As, when Chriſt ſaid to dead Lazarus, Lazarus, come forth, he aroſe and came forth of his grave, though bound hand and foot: ſo when the Lord ſpeaks to our dead heart by his word and ſpirit, we ſhall riſe forth of the graves of our ſinnes and corruptions. In the creation of the great world, God ſaid, Let there be light, and preſently darkeneſſe gave place: and the ſame hee can doe to the little world, that is, to man. We are by nature darkeneſſe, and let God but ſpeake to our blind underſtandings, our ignorance ſhall depart, and we ſhall be inlightened with the knowledge of the true God and of his will: as Paul ſaith, Ioh.11.44.

B God that commanded the light to ſhine out of darkeneſſe, is he which hath ſhined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Ieſus Chriſt. 2 Cor.4.6.

Secondly, God made all creatures, without motion, labour, or defatigation: for his very bidding of the worke to be done, was the doing of it. And this thing no creature can doe, but God onely, though unto Adam labour was without paine before the Fall.

Thirdly, the matter and the firſt beginning of all creatures was nothing, that is, all things were made, when as there was nothing whereof they might be made, as Paul ſaith, God calleth thoſe things which bee not, as though they were. Rom.4.17. And indeed in the firſt creation, all things

C muſt be made either of the eſſence of God, or of nothing: but a creature cannot be made of the eſſence of God, for it hath no parts, it is not diviſible: and therefore God made all things that were made out of himſelfe or his owne eſſence: the concluſion then is, that the framing of the creatures in the beginning, was not of any matter, but of nothing, becauſe before the creation, out of God there was nothing. This muſt teach us to humble our ſelves. Many there be that ſtand upon their anceſtours: but let them here look whence they came firſt, namely, as Abraham ſaith of himſelfe, of duſt and aſhes. And what was this duſt and aſhes made of? ſurely of nothing: wherefore every mans firſt beginning is of nothing. Well then, ſuch men, as are carried away with their pedigree and deſcent, if they looke well unto it, they

D ſhall finde ſmall cauſe to boaſt or bragge: And this conſideration of our firſt beginning, muſt moove us to true humiliation in our ſelves.

Fourthly, God in framing his creatures in the beginning made them good; yea very good. Now the goodnes of the creature is nothing elſe, but the perfect eſtate of the creature, wherby it was conformable to the will & minde of the Creator allowing and approving of it, when he had made it: for a creature is not firſt good, and then approoved of God: but becauſe it is approoved of God, therefore it is good. But wherein, will ſome ſay, ſtands this goodneſſe of the creature? I anſwer, in three things. I. in the comelineſſe, beautie and glory of every worke in his kinde both in forme and constitution of the matter. II. In the excellency of the vertue which God hath given to it: for as he hath appointed every creature for some especiall end, so he hath fitted and furnished it with sufficient power & vertue for the accomplishing of the same end. III. In the exceeding benefit and profitableneſſe that came by them to man. But since the fall of man, this goodneſſe of the creature is partly corrupted, and partly diminished. Therefore when we see any want, defect, or deformity in any of them, we must have recourse backe againe to the apostasie of our first parents, and remember our fall in them, and say with a sorrowfull heart, this comes to passe by reason of mans most wretched sin, which hath defiled heaven & earth, and drawn a curse not only upon himselfe, but upon the rest of the creatures for his sake, whereby their goodnes is much defaced.

Fifthly, the end of creation, is the glory of God, as Salomon saith, God made all things for his owne sake, yea even the wicked for the day of evill. Prov. 16. 4. And God propounds this principall end to himselfe, not as though he wanted glory, and would purchase it unto himselfe by the creation; for he is most glorious in himselfe, and his honour and praise being infinite, can neither be encreased nor decreased: but rather that he might communicate, and make manifest his glory to his creatures, and give them occasion to magnifie the same. For the reasonable creatures of God, beholding his glory in the creation, are mooved to testifie and declare the same among men.

The sixth shall be touching the time of the beginning of the world, which is betweene five thousand and sixe thousand yeeres agoe. For Moses hath set downe exactly the computation of time from the making of the world to his owne daies: and the Prophets after him have with diligence set down the continuance of the same to the very birth of Christ. But for the exact account of yeeres Chronologers are not all of one minde. Some say there bee 3929. from the creation to Christs birth, as Beroaldus: some 3952. as Hierome and Bede: some 3960. as Luther and Io. Lucidus: some 3963. as Melanchthon in his Chronicle, & Funcius: some 3970. as Bullinger and Tremelius: some towards 4000. as Buntingus. Now from the birth of Christ to this day, are 1592. yeres, and adding these together, the whole time amounteth. And God would have the very time of the beginning of the world to bee revealed: First, that it might be knowne to the Church, when the covenant of grace was first given by God to man, and when it was afterward renued, and how Christ came in the fulnes of time, Gal. 4. 4. Secondly, that we might know that the world was not made for the eternall & ever-living God, but for man. Thirdly, that we might learne not to set our hearts on the world, and on the things therein, which have beginning and end, but seeke for things eternall in heaven. And before the time which I have named began, there was nothing beside God: the world it selfe, and all things else were uncreated. Some men use to object and say, what did God all that while before the world was? how did he imploy himselfe? what, was he idle? Answ. The Iewes to this bad question make as bad an answer. For they say he was continually occupied in making many little worlds, which he continually destroyed as he made them: because none pleased him till he made this. But we must rather say, that some things are revealed which God did then, as that he decreed what should come to passe when the world was: and that then the blessed persons in Trinitie did take eternall delight each in other. Prov. 8. 30. If any man will needs know more, let them heare what Moses saith, Secret things belong to the Lord our God; but things revealed, to us and our children for ever: Deut. 29. 29. and let them marke what One eluding the question, answered: namely, that God was making hell fire to burne all such curious persons as will needs know more of God then hee hath revealed to them: for where God hath not a mouth to speake, there we must not have an eare to heare: therefore our duty is, to let such curious questions passe. August. l. 1. confess. 2. 12.

Seventhly, some may aske in what space of time did God make the world? I answer, God could have made the world, and all things in it in a moment: but hee began and finished the whole worke in sixe distinct daies. In the first day he made the matter of all things and the light: in the second the heavens: in the third day hee brought the sea into his compasse, and made the dry land appeare, and caused it to bring forth hearbs, plants, and trees: in the fourth day hee made the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres in heaven: in the fifth day he made the fishes of the sea, the fowles of the heaven, and every creeping thing: in the sixth day he made the beasts of the field, and all cattell, and in the end of the sixth day hee made man. Thus in sixe distinct spaces of time, the Lord did make all things: and that especially for three causes. I. To teach men that they ought to have a distinct and serious consideration of every creature: for if God had made the world in a moment, some might have said, this work is so mystical, that no man can speak of it. But for the preventing of this cavil, it was his pleasure to make the world and all things therein in sixe daies: and the seventh day hee commanded it to be sanctified by men, that they might distinctly & seriously meditate upon every daies worke of the Creation. II. God made the world, & every thing therein in sixe distinct daies, to teach us, what wōderful power and liberty he had over all his creatures: for he made the light when there was neither Sun nor Moone, nor Stars; to shew, that in giving light to the world, he is not bound to the Sun, to any creature, or to any meanes: for the light was made the first day: but the Sunne, the Moone, and the Stars were not created before Gen. 1.

the fourth day. Againe, trees and plants were created the third day: but yet the Sunne, Moone, and the Starres, and raine which nourish and make hearbs, trees, and plants to grow, were not created till after the third day: which shews plainly, that God can make trees, plants and hearbs to grow without the meanes of raine, and without the vertue and operation of the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres. III. He made the world in sixe distinct daies, and framed all things in this order, to teach us his wonderfull providence over all his creatures: for before man was created hee provided for him a dwelling place, and all things necessary for his perpetuall preservation, and perfect happinesse and felicitie. So also hee created beasts and cattell; but not before he had made hearbs, plants, and grasse, and all meanes whereby they are preserved. And if God had this care over man when as yet he was not: much more will God have care over him now when he is, and hath a being in nature.

Duties. And thus much concerning the points of doctrine touching the Creation. The duties follow. And first, by the worke of creation we 1. may discerne the true Iehovah from all false gods and idols in the world. This Isaiah maketh plaine, bringing in the Lord reasoning thus: I am God, and there is none other God besides mee. How is that prooved? thus: I forme the light, and create darkenesse, I make peace, and create evill: I the Lord doe all these things. Esa. 45. 6,7. If a man aske thee how thou know'st the true God from all false gods: thou must answer, by the worke of creation: for he alone is the maker of heaven and earth, and all things in them. This property cannot agree to any creature, to any man, Saint or Angel: nay, not to all men and all Angels: they cannot give being to a creature which before was nothing.

2. Secondly, whereas God the Father is Creatour of all things, and hath given unto man reason, understanding, and abilitie more then to other creatures, we are taught to consider and meditate of the worke of Gods Creation. This the Wise man teacheth us, saying, Consider the worke of God. Eccles 7.15. And indeed it is a speciall duty of every man which professeth himselfe to be a member of Gods Church, as he acknowledgeth God to be the Creator, so to looke upon his workemanship, and view and consider all creatures. A skilfull workman can have no greater disgrace, then when he hath done some famous thing, to have his friend passe by his worke, and not so much as looke upon it. If it be demanded, for what end we must looke upon the work of Gods creation; I answer, that in it we may see and discerne Gods power, wisedome, love, mercy, and providence, and all his attributes, and in all things his glory. This is a most necessary dutie to be learned of every man: we thinke nothing too much or too good to bestow on vaine shewes and plaies, idle sports and pastimes, which are the vanities of men, and we do most willingly behold them: in the meane season utterly neglecting and contemning the glorious worke of Gods creation. Well, the Lord hath appointed his Sabbath to be sanctified, not onely by the publike ministery of the word, and by private prayer, but also by an especiall consideration and meditation of Gods creatures: and therfore the duty of every man is this, distinctly and seriously to view and consider the creatures of God; and thereby take occasion to glorifie his name, by ascribing unto him, the wisdome, glory, power, and omnipotency that is due unto him, and appeares in the same.

Thirdly, we must give God glory in all 3. his creatures, because hee is the Creator of them all. So in the Revelation the foure and twenty Elders fall downe before him, and say Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour, and power: Rev. 4.11. giving this reason, for thou hast created all things, and for thy wils sake they are and have beene created. Reade the Psalmes, 147. and 148. both which tend to this effect, that God must be praised: because he is the Creator of all things, to whom all glory is due. We know, that when men behold any curious worke of a cunning and skilfull craftsman, straightway they will leave the worke, and inquire after him that made it, that they may praise his skill. The same is our duty in this case, when we come abroad, and behold every where in all the creatures the admirable and unspeakeable wisedome, goodnesse, and power of God, then we must make haste from the creature, and goe forward to the Creator, to praise and glorifie him: and herein must we shew our selves to differ from bruite beasts, in that by the use and view of Gods creatures, we doe returne due glory, praise, and honour unto the Creator.

Our fourth duty is set downe by the Pro- 4. phet Amos, who mooving the people to meet God by repentance, addeth a reason taken from the Creation. He that formeth the mountaines and createth the winds, which declareth unto man what is his thought, which maketh the morning darkenesse, &c. The Lord God of hosts is his name. Amos 4.13. The meaning of the Prophet is this: God is a terrible judge, and we are as traitors and rebels against him: therefore the best way that wee can take, is this: he is comming to judgement, let us therefore meete him, fall down before him, and humble our selves under his mightie hand. And the holy Ghost by the Prophet would move the people to meet God by serious repentance, by a reason framed thus: If God who is their Iudge, be able to create the winds, and to forme the mountains, and to make the morning darkenesse: then he is also able to make an eternall judgement for their confusion. And therefore all such as be impenitent sinners, let them prepare themselves to turne unto him: and surely if men had grace to lay this to their hearts, they would not live so long in their sins without repentance as they doe: nay rather they would prepare themselves themſelves to meete him in the way before he come to judgement, becauſe he is a Creator, and therefore able to bring infinite puniſhments upon them at his pleaſure, and to bring them to nothing, as he made them of nothing. And let them know it whoſoever they be that goe forward in their ſinnes, that God the Creator whenſoever hee will, can open hell to devoure them: and that he can ſhew himſelfe as mighty in his judgements to mans deſtruction, as he was mighty in the beginning in giving us being when we were nothing. Wherefore notable is the practiſe of David, who inures himſelfe to the feare of God by the conſideration of his creation, ſaying, I am fearefully, and wonderfully made, &c. Pſal.139.14.

Laſtly, thoſe that have beene impenitent ſinners through all their life paſt, muſt not onely learne to repent for their ſinnes; but alſo indeavour to performe obedience unto Gods Word. God is a Creator, and the thing created ſhould in all reſpects bee conformable to his will: for David ſaith, Thine hands have faſhioned me, and framed me, give me underſtanding therefore that I may learne thy Commandements. Pſal.119.37. And good reaſon: for there is no man of any trade, but he would faine have all that he maketh and deviſeth, to be uſed: but yet ſo as the uſe thereof muſt bee conformable to the will of the maker. For this cauſe Moſes that faithfull ſervant of God ſaith, that the people of Iſrael dealt wrongfully with the Lord: why? for he hath created them, and proportioned them: he is their father and he bought them: yet they have diſhonoured him by corrupting themſelves towards him by their vice. Deut.32.5,6.

All creatures in heaven and earth doe the will of the Creator, except man, and the divell and his angels: for the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres, they keepe that courſe which God hath appointed them: but man though he bee bound to doe the will of God, becauſe God is his Creator, yet hee rebels againſt him. The potter, if in tempering his clay, hee cannot make and frame it according to his minde, at length hee will daſh it in peeces: ſo God, hee createth man, not that he ſhould doe his owne will, but Gods will: and therefore the Lord in his wrath will confound him eternally, whoſoever he be that followeth the luſts of his own wicked heart, and will not be brought to bee conformable to Gods will, but goes on in his rebellion without ſtay. For this cauſe it ſtands every man in hand to yeeld himſelfe plyable to Gods will, and to endeavour to obey it by keeping a good conſcience before God, and all men, and by walking faithfully in his calling, leſt the end be confuſion. If a man have a trade and other men come into his ſhop, and uſe ſuch tooles and inſtruments as bee there, to wrong ends, hee will in no wiſe brooke it, but take the abuſe in great diſpleaſure: now the world is as it were an opened ſhop, which God hath ſet forth unto his glory and majeſty, and the creatures of all kinds to bee inſtruments appointed for excellent uſes, and ſpecially man for the accompliſhment of his will. And therefore when hee rebels againſt the will of God, and by ſinne puts the creatures to wrong ends, hee cannot but moſt grievouſly offend God.

D

And thus much of the duties. Now, in the third place follow the conſolations unto Gods Church and people. Firſt, as Saint Peter ſaith: God is a Creator, yea a faithfull Creator. The properties of a faithfull Creator are two: I. Hee will preſerve his creature; no man is ſo tender over any worke as hee that made it, for hee cannot abide to ſee it any way abuſed. God therefore being a faithfull Creator, tenderly loves all his Creatures. So Iob reaſoneth with God, that hee will not caſt him off, becauſe he is the worke of his hands. Iob 10.3. II. God will beare with his creature, to ſee whether it will bee brought to any good end and uſe, before he will deſtroy it. And to uſe the former compariſon: the potter will turne and worke the Clay every way to make a veſſell unto his mind; but if it frame no way, then will he caſt it away, and daſh it againſt the wall. And ſo God who created man, ſtill preſerveth him, and uſeth all means to make him conformable to his will, before hee caſt him off. The Lord did long ſtrive with men in the old world, to turne them from their wickedneſſe: but when nothing would ſerve them, it is ſaid: It repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth. Gen.6.6. And in like manner, if we which are the creatures of God, ſhall rebell againſt this our Creator; it may bee, hee will beare with us for a time: but if we continue therein, and doe not turne to him by repentance, hee will bring upon us a finall deſtruction both in body and ſoule. Yet I ſay, before he doe this, his manner is to try all meanes to preſerve us, and turne us unto him: and afterward if nothing will ſerve, then will hee ſhew forth his power in mens confuſion: and therefore it ſtands us in hand to looke unto it betime.

Conſolations. I. 1 Pet.4.19.

Secondly, looke what power the Lord did manifeſt in the creation of all things, the ſame power he both can and will make manifeſt in the redemption of mankind. In the beginning God made all things by his Word; and ſo likewiſe hee is able ſtill to make by the power of his Word, of a wicked man that is dead in ſin, a true and lively member of Chriſt: which the Prophet Iſaiah ſignifieth when he ſaith, The Lord that created the heavens, and ſpred them abroad, he that ſtretcheth forth the earth, and the bounds thereof, &c. I the Lord have called thee in righteouſneſſe. Iſai.45.12, 13. This muſt not encourage evill men in their wickedneſſe, but it ſerveth to comfort the people of God, conſidering that the ſame God which once created them, is alſo as able to ſave them: and will ſhew himſelfe as mighty in their redemption, as hee was in their creation of nothing.

And thus much of the creation in generall. Now it followeth, that we come to the handling of the parts thereof. For it is not ſaid barely that God is a Creator; but particularly that he is a Creator of Heaven and earth: of both which we will ſpeake in order: and firſt of the creation of Heaven.

Heaven] in Gods Word ſignifieth all that is above the earth: for the ayre wherein wee breathe is called heaven. And according to this acceptation of the word, there are three Heavens, as Paul ſaith, Hee was taken up into the 2 Cor.12.2. third heaven. The firſt of theſe heavens is that ſpace, which is from the earth upward unto the firmament, where the ſtarres are. Thus the birds which flye in the ayre betweene the earth and the ſtarres, are called the fowles of heaven: and when God ſent the flood to drowne the old world, Moſes ſaith, the windowes of heaven Gen.7.11. were opened: meaning, that God powred downe raine from the cloudes aboundantly, for the making of a flood to drowne the world. The ſecond heaven is that which containeth the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres: ſo Moſes Gen.1.14. ſaith, that God in the beginning created the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres, and placed them in the firmament of heaven. Beſides theſe two heavens, there is a third which is inviſible: and yet it is the worke of Gods hands: and it is that glorious place where Chriſt even in his manhood ſitteth at the right hand of the Father, and whither the ſoules of the faithfull departed are carried and placed: and in which at the end of the world ſhall all the elect both in body and ſoule, have perfect joy and bliſſe in the glorious ſight and preſence of God for ever. But for the better conceiving the truth, we are to ſkanne and conſider diligently three queſtions. Firſt, whether this third heaven be a creature; for many have thought it was never created, but was eternall with God himſelfe: but it is a groſſe errour contrary to Gods Word. For the Scripture ſaith, Abraham loo- Heb.11.10. ked for a city (meaning the heavenly Ieruſalem, this third heaven) having a foundation whoſe builder and maker is God. Further, if it bee eternall, it muſt either be a creator, or a creature; but it is no creator, for then it ſhould be God: and therefore it muſt needs be a creature. But ſome will ſay, the Lord is eternal, and this third heaven hath alwayes beene the place of the Lords aboad, and therefore it is alſo eternall. Anſ. True it is indeed that God doth ſhew his glory and majeſty in the third heaven: but yet that cannot poſſibly containe his Godhead, as 1 King.8.27 Salomon ſaith: Behold the heavens, and the hea- ven of heavens are not able to containe thee. Wherefore though God doth manifeſt his eternall glory in this third heaven, yet doth it not follow, that therefore this place ſhould be eternall: for he needs no habitation to dwell in, hee is every where, filling all things with his preſence, excluded from no place. The ſecond queſtion is, where this third heaven is? Anſ. There are ſome Proteſtants ſay, it is every where: and they hold this opinion to maintaine the reall preſence of the Lords body in or about the Sacrament. But if it were every where, then hell ſhould be in heaven, which no man will ſay: but heaven indeed is above theſe viſible heavens which wee ſee with our eyes: ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, Chriſt aſcended on Eph.4.18. high farre above all heavens, &c. And againe, it is ſaid of Steven, that being full of the holy Act.7.55. Ghoſt, He looked up ſtedfaſtly into the heavens, 56. and ſaw them open, and the Sonne of man ſtanding at the right hand of God. Thirdly, it may be demanded, why God created this third heaven? Anſ. God made it for this cauſe, that there might bee a certaine place wherein hee might make manifeſt his glory and majeſty to his elect Angels and men; for the which cauſe it was created a thouſandfold more glorious then the two former heavens are, and in this reſpect is called Paradiſe, by reaſon of the joy and Luk.23.43. pleaſure ariſing from Gods glorious preſence. And our Saviour Chriſt calleth it the houſe of Ioh.14.2. God his Father: becauſe into it muſt be gathered all Gods children. It is called the kingdome of heaven, becauſe God is the King thereof, and ruleth there in perfect glory. True it is, God hath his kingdome here on earth: but he ruleth not ſo fully and gloriouſly here, as hee ſhall in heaven: for this is the kingdome of grace, but that is the kingdome of his glory, where he ſo reigneth, that hee will be all in all, firſt in Chriſt, and then in the elect both Angels and men.

Now follow the duties whereunto we are Duties. mooved principally in conſideration of the making of the third heaven. Firſt, if God created it eſpecially for the manifeſtation of his glory unto men, that at the end of the world, by the fruition of Gods moſt glorious preſence, there they might have perfect joy and felicity: we have occaſion here to conſider the wonderfull madneſſe and forgetfulneſſe that reigneth every where among men, which only have regard to the eſtate of this life, and caſt all their care on this world, and never ſo much as once dreame of the joyfull and bleſſed eſtate which is prepared for Gods children in the higheſt heaven. If a man having two houſes; one but a homely cottage, and the other a princely pallace, ſhould leave the better, and take all the care and paines for the dreſſing up of the firſt, would not every man ſay, he were a madde man? yes undoubtedly. And yet this is the ſpirituall madneſſe that takes place every where among men: for God hath prepared for us two houſes, one is this, our body which we beare about us, which is an houſe of Clay, as Iob ſaith, We dwell in houſes of clay whoſe foun- Iob 4.19. dation is duſt, which ſhall be deſtroyed before the 2 Pet.1.14. moth: and as Peter ſaith, a Tabernacle or tent, 1 Pet.2.11. which we muſt ſhortly take downe; and wherin wee abide but as pilgrimes and ſtrangers. Againe, the ſame God of his wonderfull goodneſſe hath provided for us a ſecond houſe in the third heaven, wherein wee muſt not abide for a time and ſo depart; but for evermore enjoy the bleſſed felicity of his glorious preſence.

ſence. For all this marke a ſpirituall phrenſie poſſeſsing the minds of men: for they imploy all their care and induſtry for the maintaining of this houſe of clay, whoſe foundation is but duſt: but for the bleſſed eſtate of the ſecond houſe, which is prepared for them in the kingdome of Heaven, they have little regard or care. They will both runne and ride from place to place day and night, both by Sea and Land: but for what? Is it for the preparing of a manſion place in the heavenly Ieruſalem? nothing leſſe, for they will ſcarce goe out of the doore to uſe any meanes whereby they may come unto it: but all their ſtudy is to patch up the ruines and breaches of their earthly cabbin. Now let all men judge in their owne conſciences, whether, as I have ſaid, this be not more then ſenceleſſe madneſſe? Againe, the body is but a Tabernacle wherein wee muſt reſt as it were for a night, as a ſtranger doth in an Inne, and ſo away: but the ſecond houſe is eternall in the Heavens, an everlaſting ſeate of all felicity and happineſſe. And therefore our duty is above all things to ſeeke the kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe, as Chriſt himſelfe biddeth us. And if the Lord have there prepared ſuch a place for us, then we muſt in this world uſe all good meanes, whereby we may be made worthy the fruition of it; and alſo fit and ready at the day of death to enter into it; which at the day of judgement we ſhall fully poſſeſſe both in ſoule and body, and there reigne eternally in all happineſſe with God Almighty our Creator, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt. But ſome may ſay, how ſhall a man ſo prepare himſelfe, that hee may bee fit for that place? Anſw. This the holy Ghoſt teacheth us: for ſpeaking of this heavenly Ieruſalem, he ſaith, There ſhall enter into it none uncleane thing, neither whatſoever worketh abomination or lyes. The meanes then to make our ſelves fit, is to ſeeke to bee reconciled to God in Chriſt for our ſinnes paſt, and withall to indeavour to have an aſſurance of the free remiſſion and pardon of them all in the Blood of Chriſt. And as touching that part of life which is to come, wee muſt remember what Saint Iohn ſaith, Every one that hath this hope purifieth himſelfe, meaning, that hee which hath hope to reigne with Chriſt in Heaven, uſeth the meanes whereby he may purifie and keepe himſelfe from ſinne: as alſo he ſaith after, that he which is borne of God keepeth himſelfe, and the wicked one toucheth him not. Signifying that all ſuch perſons as are truly juſtified & ſanctified, carry ſuch a narrow and ſtraite watch over the whole courſe of their lives and converſations, that the divell can never give them deadly wounds, and wholly overcome them. Now the man that is reſolved in his conſcience of the pardon of his ſinne for the time paſt, and hath a ſtedfaſt purpoſe in his heart to keepe himſelfe upright, and continually to walke in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe all the dayes of his life: this man, I ſay, is prepared and made fit to enter into the heavenly Ieruſalem: come death when it will, hee is ready. And howſoever he muſt not looke for heaven here upon earth, yet he is as it were in the ſuburbs of this heavenly Citie: and at the end of this life, the King thereof, the Lord Ieſus will open the gates, and receive him into his Kingdome for he is already entred into the Kingdome of Grace. To conclude this point, let every man in the feare of God, bee mooved hereby to ſet his heart to prepare himſelfe; that when God ſhall call him hence, he may be fit to enter into that glory.

Secondly, ſeeing God hath prepared the third heaven for us, it teacheth every man in this world to be content with the eſtate wherein God hath placed him, whether it be high or low, rich or poore: why ſo? becauſe here he is but a pilgrime, and lives in a cottage of clay, & in a tent wherein he muſt abide but a while, as a pilgrime doth, oftentimes carrying his houſe about with him; and we ſhall in better ſort accept the afflictions which God ſends us in this life, if we remember that there is prepared for us a place of joy, which muſt be our reſting place and perfect felicitie for evermore. This was the practiſe of the children of God, eſpecially of Abraham: for when the Lord called him out of his owne countrey, he obeyed, and by faith abode in the promiſed land, as in a ſtrange countrey, as one that dwelt in tents with Iſaac and Iacob heires with him in the ſame promiſe: and the reaſon followeth. for hee looked for a citie having a foundation, whoſe builder and maker is God. They beleeved that theſe things which the Lord promiſed, were ſhadowes of better things: and hereon ſtayed themſelves, being well content with that eſtate whereto God had called them. So Paul was contented to beare the afflictions which God had layed upon him, and his reaſon was, Becauſe (ſaith he) wee looke not on things which are ſeene, but on things which are not ſeene: for the things which are ſeene are temporall, but the things which are not ſeene are eternall. And in the next chapter: Wee know (ſaith he) that if our earthly houſe of this Tabernacle be deſtroyed, we have a dwelling given us of God, that is, an houſe not made with hands, but eternall in the heavens. And for this cauſe his deſire was rather to remove out of this body, & to be with the Lord.

And thus much concerning heaven. Now followeth the ſecond part of Gods creation in theſe words.

And earth ] Earth ſignifieth the huge maſſe or body ſtanding of ſea and land, on which we live, and all things that be in or upon the earth whatſoever: as Paul ſaith, For by him were created all things that are in heaven or in earth, &c. In other Creeds which were made ſince this of the Apoſtles, being expoſitions of that; there is added, maker of all things viſible and inviſible. Here we have occaſion to ſpeake of all creatures; but that were infinite: therefore I will make choice of theſe two, good angels, & men

Col. 1. 16.

I. That Angels had a beginning it is no queſtion: for Paul ſaith, that by God all things were created in heaven and earth, things viſible and inviſible, whether thrones, principalities, or powers. And in reſpect of the creation, Angels are called the ſonnes of God. But the time and day of their creation cannot bee ſet downe further then this, that they were created in the compaſſe of the ſixe dayes. For Moſes ſaith, Thus, namely in the compaſſe of the firſt ſixe dayes, the heavens and the earth were faſhioned, and all the hoaſt of them: that is, all variety of creatures in heaven and earth, ſerving for the beauty and glory thereof; whereof no doubt the Angels are the principall.

Col.1.16.

Gen.2.1.

II. Touching the nature of Angels, ſome have thought that they are nothing but qualities and motions in the minds of men, as the Sadduces and the Libertines of this time: but the truth is, that they are ſpirits, that is, ſpirituall and inviſible ſubſtances created by God, and really ſubſiſting: for the Scripture aſcribes unto them ſuch kind of actions which cannot be performed by the creatures, ſave onely ſuch as be ſubſtances: as to ſtand before the throne of God, to behold the face of the father, to carry mens ſoules to heaven, yet we muſt not imagine that they are bodily ſubſtances conſiſting of fleſh and bone. And though they tooke upon them viſible ſhapes and formes, and did eate and drinke in company of men, and thereupon are called [a] Men in Scripture: yet they did this by divine diſpenſation for a time, that they might the better performe the actions and buſineſſes among men, to which they were by God appointed. And the bodies of men which they aſſumed, were no Parts of their natures united to them, as our bodies are to us; but rather they were as garments are to us, which they might put off and on at their pleaſure. If any ſhall aske, whence they had theſe bodies, the anſwer is, that either they were created of nothing by the power of God, or framed of ſome other matter ſubſiſting before. If againe it be asked, what became of theſe bodies when they layed them downe, becauſe they uſed them but for a time; the anſwer may be, that if they were made of nothing, they were againe reſolved into nothing: if made of other creatures, that then they were reſolved into the ſame bodies of which they were firſt made, though indeed we can define nothing certainely in this point.

[a] Luk.24.4.

III. Angels are reaſonable creatures, of excellent knowledge and underſtanding, farre ſurpaſſing all men ſave Chriſt. Their knowledg is threefold: naturall, revealed, experimentall. Natural, which they received from God in the creation. Revealed, which God makes manifeſt to them in proceſſe of time, whereas before they knew it not. Thus God revealed to Gabriel the myſtery of the 70. weekes, Dan. 8. and 9. And in the Apocalypſe many things are revealed to the Angels that they might reveale them to us. Experimentall knowledge, is that which they get by obſerving the dealing of God in the whole world, but eſpecially in the Church. And thus Paul ſaith, that to principalities and powers in heavenly places is knowne the manifold wiſedome of God by the Church.

Eph.3.10.

IV. And as the knowledge, ſo alſo the power of the good Angels is exceeding great. They are able to doe more then all men can. Therefore Paul cals them mighty Angels. 2 Theſ. 1.7. Yea, their power is farre ſuperiour to the power of the wicked angels, who ſince the fall are under them and cannot prevaile againſt them.

Pſal.103.20.

Aug. de Trin. lib.3. cap.3.

V. The place of the abode of Angels, is the higheſt Heaven, unleſſe they be ſent thence by the Lord, to doe ſome thing appointed by him. This our Saviour Chriſt teacheth when he ſaith, that the angels of little ones, doe alwaies behold the face of their Father in heaven. And the wicked angels before their fall were placed in heaven, becauſe they were caſt thence.

Matth.18.10.

VI. That there be certaine diſtinctions and diverſities of Angels, it is very likely, becauſe they are called thrones, and principalities, and powers, Cherubim and Seraphim. But what be the diſtinct degrees and orders of Angels, and whether they are to be diſtinguiſhed by their natures, gifts, or offices, no man by Scripture can determine.

VII. The Miniſtery of Angels to which the Lord hath ſet them apart, is three-fold, and it reſpecteth either God himſelfe, or his Church, or his enemies. The Miniſtery which they performe to God, is firſt of all, to adore, praiſe, and glorifie him continually. Thus the Cherubins in Eſaies viſion cry one to another, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God of hoaſts: the world is full of his glory. And when they were to publiſh the birth of the Meſſias, they begin on this manner, Glory to God in the higheſt heavens, peace on earth. And Iohn in his viſion heard the Angels about the throne, crying with a loud voyce, Worthy is the Lambe, &c. to receive power, riches, and ſtrength, wiſedome, and honour, and glory, and praiſe. And indeed the higheſt end of the miniſtery of angels, is the manifeſtation of the glory of God. The ſecond, is to ſtand in Gods preſence, evermore ready to doe his commandements, as David ſaith, Praiſe the Lord, ye his angels that excell in ſtrength, that doe his commandements in obeying the voice of his word. And here is a good leſſon for us. We pray daily, that we may doe the will of God, as the Angels in heaven doe it: let us therefore be followers of the holy Angels in praiſing God, and doing his commandements as they doe.

Luk.2.14.

Apoc.5.11, 12.

Pſal.103.26.

The miniſtery of Angels concerning the Church, ſtands in this, that they are miniſtring ſpirits for the good of them which ſhall be the heirs of ſalvatiõ. This good is threefold; in this life, in the end of this life, and in the laſt judgement: againe, the good which they procure to the people of God in this life, is either in reſpect of body or ſoule. In reſpect of the body, in that they doe moſt carefully performe all manner of duties which doe neceſſarily tend to preſerve the temporall life of Gods Children, even from the beginning of their dayes to the end. David ſaid, that they pitch their tents about him that feares the Lord. When Agar was caſt forth of Abrahams family, and wandered in the wildemeſſe, an Angell comes unto her, and gives her counſell to returne to her miſtreſſe and humble herſelfe. When Elias fled from Ieſabel, hee was both comforted, directed, and fedde by an Angell. And an angell bids the ſame Elias bee of good courage and without feare to goe to King Achazias and reproove him. Angels bring Lot and his family out of Sodome and Gomorrah, before they burne the Cities with fire and brimſtone. When Iacob feared his brother Eſau, he ſaw Angels comming unto him: and hee plainely acknowledgeth that they were ſent to be his protectors and his guides in his journey. Abraham being perſwaded of the aſſiſtance of Gods Angels in all his wayes, ſaid to his ſervant, The Lord God of heaven, who tooke me from my fathers houſe, &c. Will ſend his Angel before thee. The wiſe men that came to ſee Chriſt, are admoniſhed by Angels to returne another way: and Ioſeph by the direction of an Angel, fled into Egypt, that he might preſerve Chriſt from the hands of the cruell tyrant. The tents of the Iſraelites were garded by Angels. The three Children are delivered from the fiery furnace: and Daniel out of the Lyons denne by Angels. When Chriſt was in heavyneſſe, they miniſtred unto him and comforted him: and they brought Peter out of priſon, and ſet him at liberty.

Againe; the Angels procure good unto the ſoules of the godly, in that they are maintainers and furtherers of the true worſhippe of God, and of all good meanes, whereby we attaine to ſalvation. The law was delivered in Mount Sina by Angels; and a great part of the revelation of Iohn. They expound to Daniel the 70. weekes. They inſtruct the Apoſtles touching the returne of Chriſt to the laſt judgement. An Angell forbids Iohn to worſhip him, but worſhip God the Creator of heaven and earth. They fetch the Apoſtles out of priſon, and bid them teach in the Temple. An Angell brings Philip to the Eunuch, that hee may expound the Scriptures to him. Laſtly, they reveale the myſteries and the Will of God: as to Abraham that hee ſhould not kill his ſonne Iſaac; to Mary and Elizabeth, the nativity of Iohn Baptiſt, and of Chriſt our Saviour; and all this they doe according unto the will of God. Gal. 1. 8. Beſide all this, Angels rejoyce at the converſion of ſinners by the miniſtery of the Goſpell. And for the Churches ſake, they protect not onely particular men, but even whole nations and kingdomes.

Act. 7. 38. Dan. 9. 22. Act. 1. 11. Apoc. 21. 10. Act. 5. 20. Act. 8. 26. Gen. 22. 12. Luk. 1. 13. 28. 35. Luke 15. 7. 10. Luk. 16. 22.

The miniſtery of Angels in the end of this life; is to carry the ſoules of the godly into Abrahams boſome, as they did the ſoule of Lazarus. And in the day of judgement to gather all the elect that they may come before Chriſt, and enter into eternall fruition of glory both in body and ſoule. Matth. 25. 32.

The third and laſt part of the miniſtery of Angels, concernes Gods enemies; and it is to execute judgements on all wicked perſons and impenitent ſinners. Thus all the firſt borne of Egypt are ſlaine by an Angell. When Ioſhua was about to ſacke Iericho, an Angel appeared unto him as a captaine, with a drawn ſword to fight for Iſrael. When the hoſt of Zenacherib came againſt Iſrael, the Angell of the Lord in one night ſlue an hundred eighty and five thouſand. Becauſe Herod gave not glory unto God, the Angell of the Lord ſmote him, ſo as he was eaten up of wormes and dyed. Exod. 12. 23. 29. Ioſ. 5. 13. 2 Kings 19. 35. Act. 12. 23.

And thus wee ſee what points wee are to marke touching the good Angels. Now followeth the uſe which we are to make in regard of their creation. Firſt, whereas they are Gods Miniſters to inflict puniſhments upon the wicked, here is a ſpeciall point to be learned of us; that every man in the feare of God take heed how hee liveth and continueth in his ſins, for the caſe is dangerous, conſidering that God hath armies of Angels, which ſtand ready every where to execute Gods heavy judgements upon them that live thus. When the people of Iſrael had ſinned againſt the Lord, Moſes ſaith; they were naked, that is open to all the judgements of God: even deſtitute of the guard of his good Angels. Wretched Balaam that wizzard went to Balac to curſe the children of Iſrael: and as he went it is ſaid, the Angel of the Lord ſtood in his way with a drawn ſword: and if the aſſe had beene no wiſer then his maſter, the Angel had ſlaine him. Whereby it appeares, that when we ruſh on into the practiſe of any ſinne, we doe as much as in us lyeth, to cauſe God to ſend downe his judgements upon us for our ſinnes, and that by the miniſtry of his Angels.

Duties. 1. Exod. 32. 25. Numb. 12. 31.

Secondly, we are taught another leſſon by Chriſt himſelfe: See (ſaith he) that you deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones: now marke his reaſon for I ſay unto you, that in heavē their angels do alwaies behold the face of my father. By little ones he meaneth yong infants which are within the covenant; or others which are like to young infants in ſimplicitie and innocencie of life and humilitie. And Chriſt will not have them to bee deſpiſed. A duty very needfull to bee ſtood upon in theſe times. For now adayes, if a man carry but a ſhew of humilitie, of good conſcience, and of the feare of God, hee is accounted but a ſilly fellow, hee is hated, mocked, and deſpiſed on every hand. But this ſhould not bee ſo. For him whom God honoureth with the protection of his good Angels, why ſhould any mortall man deſpiſe? And it ſtands mockers and ſcorners in hand to take heede whom they mocke. For though men for their parts put up many abuſes and injuries, yet their angels may take juſt revenge, by 2. Matth. 18. 10.

ſmiting them with plagues and puniſhments for their offences.

Thirdly, ſeeing Angels are about us, and ſerve for the good of men, we muſt do whatſoever we do in reverent and ſeemely manner, as Paul gives counſell to the Philippians, Brethren (ſaith he) whatſoever things are true, whatſoever things are honeſt, juſt, pure, and pertaine to love, of good report: if there be any vertue, if there be any praiſe, think on theſe things: many men do all their affaires orderly for avoiding ſhame, but wee muſt doe the ſame upon a further ground, namely, becauſe Gods holy Angels waite on us. And conſidering that men have care to behave themſelves well when they are before men, what a ſhame is it for a man to behave himſelfe unſeemely either in open or in ſecret, he then being before the glorious Angels? Paul ſaith, that the woman ought to have power on her head, becauſe of the Angels; that is, not onely the Miniſters of the Church, but Gods heavenly Angels, which daily wait upon his children, and guard them in all their waies.

Phil. 4. 8.

Fourthly, this muſt teach us modeſty, and humilitie: for the Angels of God, are very notable & excellent creatures, and therefore they are called in the Pſalmes Elohim, Gods: yet how excellent ſoever they be, they abaſe themſelves, to become guardians and keepers unto ſinfull men. Now if the angels doe ſo abaſe themſelves; then much more ought every man to abaſe and humble himſelfe in modeſtie and humilitie before God: and whatſoever our calling is, we muſt not be puffed up, but be content. This is a neceſſary dutie for all, but eſpecially, for thoſe which are in the Schooles of the Prophets; whatſoever their gifts or birth be, they muſt not thinke themſelves too good for the calling of the miniſtery. And if God have called us thereunto, wee muſt be content to become ſervants unto all in the matter of ſalvation, though the men whom we teach bee never ſo baſe or ſimple; for no man doth ſo farre excell the baſeſt perſon in the world, as the glorious Angels of God doe exceed the moſt excellent man that is; therefore ſeeing they vouchſafe to become ſervants unto us, wee muſt not thinke our ſelves too good to ſerve our poore brethren.

And thus much of the duties. Now follow the conſolations that ariſe from this, that God hath given his glorious angels to ſerve for the protection and ſafegard of his Church & people. If mens ſpirituall eyes were opened, they ſhould ſee the divell and his angels, and all the wicked of this world to fight againſt them: and if there were no means of comfort in this caſe, then our eſtate were moſt miſerable. But marke, as Gods ſervant hath all theſe wicked ones to be his enemies: ſo he hath garriſons of angels that pitch their tents about him and defend him from them all. So David ſaith, Hee ſhall give thy angels charge over thee, & they ſhal keepe thee in all his wayes, that thou daſh not thy foot againſt a ſtone: where the angels of God are

Pſal. 91. 11.

A compared to Nources, which carry little children in their armes, feed them, and are alwaies ready at hand, to ſave them from fals & many other dangers. When the king of Syria ſent his Horſes and Chariots to take Eliſha the Lords Prophet, becauſe he revealed his counſell to the King of Iſrael: his ſervant ſaw them round about Dothan where he was, and he cried, Alas, maſter what ſhall we doe? then Eliſha anſwered, Feare not, for they that be with us, are more thē they that be with them: & he beſought the Lord to open his ſervants eyes, and he looked, and behold, the mountaines were full of horſes and chariots of fire round about Eliſha. So likewiſe not many yeeres agoe, our land

2 King. 6. 17.

B was preſerved from the invaſion of the Spaniard, whoſe huge Navie lay upon our Seacoaſts: but how were we delivered from thē? ſurely by no ſtrength, nor power, nor cunning of man; but it was the Lord, no doubt, by his angels that did keepe our coaſts, and did ſcatter our enemies, and drowne them. Let enemies rage, and let them doe that they will, if a man keepe himſelfe in the wayes which God preſcribeth, hee hath Gods Angels to guide and preſerve him: which thing muſt moove men to love and embrace the true religion, and to conforme themſelves in all good conſcience to the rule of Gods Word. For when a man doth not ſo, all the Angels of God are his enemies; and at all times ready to

C execute Gods vengeance upon him: but when men carry themſelves as dutifull children to God, they have this prerogative, that Gods holy Angels doe watch about them, and defend them day and night from the power of their enemies, even in common calamities and miſeries. Before God ſends his judgements on Hieruſalem, an angell is ſent to marke them in the foreheads that mourne for the abominations of the people. And this priviledge none can have, but hee whoſe heart is ſprinkled with the blood of Chriſt, and that man ſhall have it unto the end.

Ezech. 9. Exod. 12. 23. with 1 Cor. 5. 7.

And thus much of the creation of Angels. Now it followes to ſpeake of the creation of Man: wherein we muſt conſider two things:

D I. the points of doctrine. II. the uſes. For the points of doctrine. Firſt, Man was created and framed by the hand of God, and made after the Image of God. For Moſes brings in the Lord ſpeaking thus, Let us make man in our image, &c. in the image of God created he them, which alſo muſt bee underſtood of Angels. The Image of God, is nothing elſe but a conformity of man unto God, whereby man is holy as God is holy: for Paul, ſaith, Put on the new man, which after God, that is, in Gods image is created in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe. Now I reaſon thus: wherein the renuing of the image of God in man doth ſtand, therein was it at the firſt; but the renuing of Gods image in man doth ſtand in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe: therefore Gods image wherein man was created at the beginning, was a conformity

Gen. 1. 26.

Eph. 4. 24.

to God in righteouſnes & holines. Now whether Gods image doth further conſiſt in the ſubſtance of mans body and ſoule, or in the faculties of both, the Scripture ſpeaks not. This image of God hath 2. principall parts: I. Wiſedome. II. Holines. Concerning wiſedome Paul Col.3.10. ſaith, Put yee on the new man which is created in knowledge after the image of him which created him. This wiſedome conſiſts in three points. I. In that he knew God his Creator perfectly: for Adam in his innocencie knew God ſo far forth as it was convenient for a creature to know his Creator. II. He knew Gods will ſo far forth as it was convenient for him, to ſhew his obedience thereunto. III. He knew the wiſdome and will of his Creator touching the particular creatures: for after Adam was created, the Lord brought every creature unto him preſenting them unto him, as being Lord and King over them, that he might give names unto them. Whereby it appeares that Adam in his innocency did know the nature of all creatures, and the wiſdome of God in creating them, els he could not have given them fit names: and when God brought Eve unto Adam, he knew Gen.1.23. her at the firſt, and ſaid, This is now bone of my bone, and fleſh of my fleſh, ſhee ſhall be called woman, &c. The ſecond part of Gods image in man, is holines and righteouſnes; which is nothing els but a conformity of the will and affectiõs, & of the whole diſpoſition of man both in body & ſoul, to the wil of God his Creator. Yet we muſt remember that Adam in his innocency had a changeable will, ſo as he could either wil good or evil: he was created with ſuch liberty of wil, as that he could indifferently wil either. And we muſt not think that the will of the creature was made unchangeably good, for that is peculiar to the will of God, and hereby is the Creator diſtinguiſhed from the creature.

And here two things offer themſelves to be conſidered. The firſt, why the man is called the 1 Cor.11.7. image of God, and not the woman. Anſw. He is ſo called, not becauſe holineſſe and righteouſneſſe is peculiar to him which is common to both: but becauſe God hath placed more outward excellency and dignitie in the perſon of a man then of a woman. The ſecond, how Chriſt ſhould be called the image of God. Anſ. Col.1.15. He is ſo called for two ſpeciall cauſes. Firſt, becauſe he is of the ſame ſubſtance with the Father; and therefore is his moſt abſolute image, and as the author of the Hebrewes ſaith, The Heb.1.3. brightneſſe of his glory, and the ingraven forme of his perſon. Secondly, becauſe God being inviſible doth manifeſt himſelfe in Chriſt, in whom as in a glaſſe wee may behold the wiſedome, goodneſſe, juſtice, and mercy of God.

The ſecond point to bee conſidered in the creation of man, is the dignitie of his perſon: Pſal.8.5. for David ſaith, Thou haſt made him little inferior to the angels, & crowned him with glory, and worſhip. This dignity ſtands in foure points. I. A bleſſed communion with the true God: for Paul ſpeaking of the Gentiles which were not called, ſaith, they were ſtrangers from the life of God. Eph.4.18. Where by the contrary we may gather, that our firſt parents in their innocency lived the life of God, which is nothing elſe but to leade a life here on earth, as that the creature ſhall have a bleſſed and immediate fellowſhip with God; which ſtands in this, that before the fall of man, God revealed himſelfe in a ſpeciall manner unto him, ſo as his very body & ſoule was a temple and dwelling place of the Creator. This fellowſhip between God and man in his innocency, was made manifeſt in the familiar conference which God vouchſafed to man: but ſince the fall, this communion is loſt: for man cannot abide the preſence of God. And therfore when Peter had fiſhed all night, and caught nothing, our Saviour bade him caſt downe his net to make a draught, who did ſo; but when he ſaw the great multitude of fiſhes that were taken, at this ſight beholding but as it were ſome ſparks of the glorious Majeſtie of God in Chriſt, hee fell downe at his feete, ſaying, Lord depart from me, for I am a ſinner. Luke 5.8. The ſecond point wherein mans dignitie conſiſteth, is, that man was made Lord & King over all creatures, as David ſaith, Thou haſt Pſal.8.6. made him to have dominion in the works of thy hands: and therefore God having created him in his image, biddeth him, Rule over the fiſhes of the ſea, over the fowles of the heavẽ, & over every Gen.1.28. beaſt that moveth upon the earth: and afterward he brought them all to him, as to a ſoveraigne Lord and King to be named by him: and anſwerably every creature in his kind gave reverence and ſubjection unto man, before his fall, as to their Lord and King. Where by the way we muſt remember, that whẽ we ſee any creature that is hurtfull and noiſome unto man, and would rather devoure then obey him; it muſt put us in minde of our ſinne: for by creation we were made Lords and Kings over all creatures, and they durſt not but reverence and obey us: but the rebellion of man unto God, is the cauſe of the rebellion of the creatures unto us. The third part of mans dignitie by creation, is, that before his fall he had a wonderfull beauty and Majeſty above all creatures in his body: whereupon David ſaith, the Lord hath crowned him with glory and worſhip. Pſal.8.5. And in the renuing of the Covenant with Noe; God ſaith, that the dread and feare of man ſhalbe Gen.9.2. upon all creatures: which now though it be but ſmall, yet doth it plainly ſhew what was the glory & majeſty of mans perſon at the firſt. The fourth dignity of mans eſtate in innocency, is that his labour was without paine or wearines: if he had never falne, he ſhould have laboured in the garden; but ſo, as he ſhould never have bin wearied therewith. For when Adam was falne, God ſaid, In the ſweat of thy face ſhalt thou Gen.3.19. eate thy bread. Now if the paine in labour come after as a curſe upon man for his tranſgreſſion, then before his fall man felt no paine in his affaires. And in theſe foure things conſiſteth mans dignitie which he had in the creation.

Now in the third followeth mans calling before his fall; which is twofold. I. particular. II. Generall. Mans particular calling was to come into the garden of Eden, to keep it, and to dreſſe the trees & fruits therof. This ſhews unto us a good leſſon, that every man muſt have a particular calling wherein he ought to walke: and therefore ſuch as ſpend their time idlely in gaming and vaine delights, have much to anſwer to God at the day of judgment. This will not excuſe a man to ſay then, that he had land and living to maintaine himſelf, and therefore was to live as he liſt; for even Adam in his innocency had all things at his will, and wanted nothing, yet even then God imployed him in a calling: therefore none muſt be exempted, but every man both high and low muſt walke in his proper calling. Adams generall calling was to worſhip his Creator, to which he was bound by the right of creation, conſidering the morall law was written in his heart by nature. Which is ſignified in the Decalogue, where the Lord requires worſhip and obedience of his people, becauſe he is Iehovah, that is, one which hath being in himſelfe, and gives beeing to all men by creation. For the better underſtanding of this point, wee are to conſider three things. I. The place where Adam did worſhip. II. The time. III. The Sacraments. For the firſt, God ever ſince the beginning had a place where he would be worſhipped, & it is called Gods Houſe, which then was the garden of Eden. For it was unto Adam a place appointed by God for his worſhip: as Church-aſſemblies are unto us: where alſo the Lord at ſometime did in a ſpeciall manner ſhew himſelfe unto his creature. Touching the time of Gods worſhip, it was the ſeventh day from the beginning of the creation, the Sabbath day. And here we muſt note, that the keeping of the Sabbath is morall. Some indeed doe pleade that it is but a ceremonie; yet falſely: for it was ordained before the fall of man, at which time Ceremonies ſignifying ſanctification had no place. Nay marke further: Adam in his innocencie was not clogged with ſinne as wee are: yet then hee had a ſet Sabbath to worſhip God his Creator: and therefore much more need hath every one of us of a Sabbath day, wherein we may ſever our ſelves from the works of our callings, and the works of ſinne, to the worſhip of God in the exerciſe of religion, and godly meditation of our creation. This point muſt be learned of us, for when no occaſion is offered of buſines, then men will formally ſeeme to keepe the Sabbath: but if there come occaſion of breaking the Sabbath: as traffick, gaming, and vaine ſhewes, then Sabbath farwell; men will have their pleaſures, let them worſhip God that will. But let us remember in the feare of God, that whoſoever continue in the breach of this law being morall, God will no leſſe poure forth his puniſhments upon them, then for the breach of any other commandement: the conſideration whereof, muſt moove every man to a reverent ſanctifying of the Lords day.

Gen. 28. 17.

Now for Adams ſacraments they were two: the tree of life, and the tree of knowledge of good and evill: theſe did ſerve to exerciſe Adam in obedience unto God. The tree of life, was to ſignifie aſſurance of life for ever, if he did keepe Gods commandements: the tree of knowledge of good and evill, was a ſacrament to ſhew unto him, that if he did tranſgreſſe Gods commandements, he ſhould die: and it was ſo called, becauſe it did ſignifie that if hee tranſgreſſed this law, hee ſhould have experience both of good and evill in himſelfe. Gen. 2. 7.

Now in the fourth place followeth the end of the creation of man, which is two-fold. Firſt, that there might be a creature to whom God might make manifeſt himſelfe, who in a ſpeciall manner ſhould ſet forth and acknowledge his wiſedome, goodneſſe, mercy, in the creation of heaven and earth, and of things that are in them, as alſo his providence, in governing the ſame. Secondly, God having decreed to glorifie his name in ſhewing his mercy, and juſtice upon his creature, hereupon in time createth men to ſhew his mercy in the ſalvation of ſome, and to ſhew his juſtice in the juſt and deſerved damnation of other ſome. And therefore he hath appointed the creation ſpecially of man, to be a meanes of manifeſtation and beginning of the execution of his eternall counſell.

Thus much concerning mans creation in generall. The ſpeciall parts of man are two: body, and ſoule. And the reaſon why the Lord would have him ſtand on theſe two parts is this: Some creatures made before him were onely bodily; as beaſts, fiſhes, fowles: ſome ſpirituall, as Angels: now man is both: ſpirituall in regard of his ſoule, corporall and ſenſible in regard of his body, that nothing might be wanting to the perfection of nature. If it be alleadged, that man conſiſts of three parts, body, ſoule, and ſpirit, becauſe Paul prayeth, 1 Theſ. 5. 23. that the Theſſalonians may be ſanctified, in body, ſoule, and ſpirit: the anſwer is, that the ſpirit ſignifies the minde, whereby men conceive and underſtand ſuch things as may be underſtood: and the ſoule is there taken for the will and affections: and therefore theſe twaine are not two parts, but only two diſtinct faculties of one and the ſame ſoule.

The body of man at the firſt was formed by God of clay, or of the duſt of the earth, not to be the grave of the ſoule, as Plato ſaid, but to be an excellent and moſt fit inſtrument to put in execution the powers and faculties of the ſoule. And howſoever in it ſelfe conſidered, it is mortall, becauſe it is compounded of contrary natures called Elements: yet by the appointment and bleſſing of God in the creation, it became immortall till the fall of man.

As for the ſoule, it is no accidentary quality, but a ſpirituall and inviſible eſſence or nature, ſubſiſting by it ſelfe. Which plainly appeares Zach. 12. 1.

in

in that the ſoules of men have being and continuance as well forth of the bodies of men as in the ſame; and are as well ſubject to torments as the body is. And whereas we can and doe put in practiſe ſundry actions of life, ſenſe, motion, underſtanding, we doe it only by the power and vertue of the ſoule.

Zach. 12. 1.

Hence ariſeth the difference betweene the ſoules of men, and beaſts. The ſoules of men are ſubſtances; but the ſoules of other creatures ſeeme not to be ſubſtances; becauſe they have no being out of the bodies in which they are: but rather they are certaine peculiar qualities ariſing of the matter of the body, and vaniſhing with it. And it may be for this cauſe, that the ſoule of the beaſt is ſaid to be in the blood, wheras the like is not ſaid of the ſoule of man.

Gen. 9. 4.

And though mens ſoules be ſpirits as angels are, yet a difference muſt be made. For angels cannot be united with bodies, ſo as both ſhall make one whole and entire perſon, whereas mens ſoules may: yea the ſoule coupled with the body is not onely the moover of the body, but the principall cauſe that makes man to be a man.

The beginning of the ſoule is not of the eſſence of God; unleſſe wee will make every mans ſoule to be God; neither doth it ſpring of the ſoule of the parents, for the ſoule can no more beget a ſoule, then an Angell can beget an Angell. And Adam is called a living ſoule, and not a quickening ſoule. And earthly fathers are called the fathers of our bodies, and not of our ſoules. It remaines therefore as being moſt agreeable to the Scriptures, that the ſoules of men are then created by God of nothing, when they are infuſed into the body.

1 Cor. 15. 45. Heb. 12. 9.

And though the ſoules of men have a beginning, yet they have no end, but are eternall. And when they are ſaid to die, it is not becauſe they ceaſe at any time to ſubſiſt or have being in nature, but becauſe they ceaſe to be righteous, or to have fellowſhip with God.

Whereas our bodies are Gods workemanſhip, wee muſt glorifie him in our bodies, and all the actions of body and ſoule, our eating and drinking, our living and dying, muſt bee referred to his glory: yea we muſt not hurt or abuſe our bodies, but preſent them as holy and living ſacrifices unto God. And whereas God made us of the duſt of the earth, we are not to glory and boaſt our ſelves, but rather to take occaſion to praiſe the great goodneſſe of God, that hath vouchſafed to honour us being but duſt and aſhes. And after that man is created, what is his life? alas it is nothing but a little breath: ſtop his mouth and his noſthrils, and he is but a dead man. By this wee are put in minde to conſider of our fraile and uncertaine eſtate, and to lay aſide all confidence in our ſelves: and for this cauſe the Prophet Eſay teacheth us to have no confidence in man, becauſe his breath is in his noſthrils. Againe, let us marke the frame and ſhape of mans body. All other creatures goe with their bodies and eyes to the ground-ward; but man was made to goe upright; and whereas all other creatures have but foure muſkles to turne their eyes round about, man hath a fifth to pull his eyes up to heaven-ward. Now what doth this teach us? ſurely, that howſoever we ſeeke for other things, yet firſt of all, and above all, we ſhould ſeeke for the kingdome of heaven, & the righteouſneſſe thereof: and that our whole deſire ſhould be ſet to enjoy the bleſſed eſtate of Gods children in heaven. Secondly, it teaches us in receiving Gods creatures, to returne thankfulnes unto God, by lifting up the heart to heaven for the ſame. Theſe are very needfull and profitable leſſons in theſe dayes; for moſt men indeed goe upright: but looke into their lives, and they might as well goe on all foure: for in their converſation they ſet their whole hearts upon the earth, as the beaſt doth, and their eyes upon the things of this world: hereby they doe abaſe themſelves, and deface their bodies, & being men, make themſelves as beaſts: we ſhall ſee great numbers of men that run and ride from place to place, to provide for the body, but to ſeeke the kingdome of heaven, where their ſoules ſhould dwell after this life in joy for ever, they will not ſtirre one foote.

Thirdly, mans body by creation, was made a temple framed by Gods own hands for himſelfe to dwell in; therefore our duty is to keepe our bodies pure and cleane, and not to ſuffer them to be inſtruments, whereby to practiſe the ſinne of the heart. If a man had a faire houſe wherein he muſt entertaine a Prince, and ſhould make thereof a ſwine-ſtye, or a ſtable, would not all men ſay, that hee did greatly abuſe both the houſe and the Prince? even ſo mans body being at the firſt made a pallace for the everliving God, if a man ſhall abuſe it by drunkenneſſe, ſwearing, lying, fornication, or any uncleanneſſe, hee doth make it in ſtead of a temple for the holy Ghoſt, to be a ſtye or ſtable for the divell. For the more filthy a mans body is, the more fit it is to be a dwelling place for ſinne and Satan.

1 Cor. 6. 19.

Fourthly, man by creation was made a goodly creature in the bleſſed image of God: but by Adams fall men loſt the ſame, and are now become the deformed children of wrath: our dutie therefore is, to labour to get againe our firſt image, and indeavour our ſelves to become new creatures. If a Noble man ſhould ſtaine his blood by treaſon, after his death the poſteritie will never be at reſt, till they have got away the ſpot: Man, by Adams fall, is become a limme of the divell, a rebell and a traitor againſt Gods majeſty: and this is the ſtate of every one of us, by nature we are at enmity with God, and therefore we ought to labour above all things in the world, to be reſtored in Chriſt to our firſt eſtate and perfection, that ſo we may become bone of his bone, fleſh of his fleſh, being juſtified and ſanctified by his obedience, death, and paſſion.

1 Cor. 6. 20. 1 Cor. 10. 31. Rom. 22. 1. Eſa. 2. 22.

Fifthly, man was created, that there might be a way prepared, whereby God might ſhew his grace and mercy in the ſalvation of ſome, and his juſtice in the deſerved damnation of others for their ſinnes: and in the creation of man Gods eternall counſell begins to come into execution. Hereupon it ſtands us in hand to make conſcience of every evill way, being repentant for all our ſins paſt, and having a conſtant purpoſe never to ſinne more as wee have done, that by our good converſation here in this life, we may have aſſurance that we be eternally choſen to ſalvation by the Lord himſelfe.

Laſtly, whereas we have learned, that the ſoule of man is immortall, wee are hereby taught to take more care for the ſoule then for the body. For it cannot bee extinguiſhed: When it is condemned, euen then it is alwayes in dying, and can never dye. But alas, in this point the caſe is flat contrary in the world: for men labour all their lives long to get for the body, but for the ſoule they care little or nothing at all, whether it ſinke or ſwim, goe to heaven or hell, they reſpect not. This doth appeare to be true, by the practiſe and behaviour of men on the Lords day: for if the number of thoſe which come to heare Gods Word, were compared with thoſe which runne about their worldly wealth and pleaſure, I feare me the better ſort would be found to be but a little handfull to a huge heape, or as a drop to the Ocean ſea, in reſpect of the other. But wilt thou go an hundred miles for the increaſe of thy wealth, and delight of thy body? then thinke it not much to goe ten thouſand miles (if need were) to take any paines for the good of thy ſoule, & to get food for the ſame, it being everlaſting.

And thus much for the duties. Now follow the conſolations. Although by reaſon of the fall of man wee can have but little comfort now: yet the Creation doth confirme the unſpeakeable providence of God over his creatures, but eſpecially over man, in that the Lord created him the ſixt day: and ſo before he was made, prepared him a Paradiſe for his dwelling place, and all creatures for his uſe and comfort. And if he were thus carefull for us when we were not, then no doubt he will be much more carefull for us at this preſent, in which we live and have being. Nay, marke further; ſince the fall man eates and drinkes in quantity a great deale which in common reaſon ſhould rather kill him, then turne to the ſtrength and nouriſhment of his body: yet herein doth the wonderfull power of the Creator moſt notably appeare, who hath made mans ſtomacke as a lymbecke or ſtyll to digeſt all meates that are holeſome for his nouriſhment and preſervation.

And thus much for the Creation. Now in theſe words, maker of heaven and earth] is more to be underſtood then the worke of creation, namely, Gods providence in governing all things created, as he appointeth in his eternall decree: and therefore Saint Peter ſaith, God is 1 Pet. 4. 19.

A a faithfull Creatour, that is, God did not onely make heaven and earth, and ſo leave them, as Maſons and Carpenters leave houſes when they are built: but by his providence he doth moſt wiſely governe the ſame. Now therefore let us come to ſpeake of Gods providence. And firſt of all the queſtion offers it ſelfe to be conſidered, whether there be any providence or no? for the minds of men are troubled with many doubtings hereof. And to make the queſtion out of all doubt, I will uſe foure arguments to confirme the providence of God. The firſt, is the teſtimony of the Scripture, which aſcribes the event of all particular actions, even ſuch as are in themſelves caſuall, as the caſting of B lots, and ſuch like, to the diſpoſition of God: which very thing alſo teacheth, that even men themſelves, indued with reaſon and underſtanding, have need to be guided in all things, and governed by God: and it ſerves to confute thoſe that deny Gods providence. Why ſayeſt thou, O Iacob, and ſpeakeſt, O Iſrael, my way is hid from the Lord, and my judgement is paſt over by my God? The ſecond argument may be taken from the order which appeareth in the whole courſe of nature. Firſt, to begin with families; there is to be ſeene an Eutaxy or ſeemly order, in which ſome rule, and ſome obey: and the like is to be found in Townes, Cities, Countries, and Kingdomes: yea even in the whole world, in which all things are ſo diſpoſed, that one ſerveth for C the good of another. Trees and hearbes, and graſſe of the field ſerve for beaſts and cattell: beaſts and cattell ſerve for men: the heavens above ſerve for them which are beneath: and all the creatures which are above and beneath ſerve for God. This argueth, that God is moſt wiſe and provident in ordering and diſpoſing all things whatſoever. The third argument is taken from the conſcience ſpecially of malefactors. Suppoſe a man that commits a murder ſo cloſely, that no man knowes thereof, and that the party himſelfe is free from all the danger of the law: yet ſhall he have his owne conſcience to accuſe, upbraid, and condemne him, yea even to fright him out of his wits, and to give him no more reſt then he can find upon D the racke or gybbet. Now this accuſation and terrour of conſcience, is nothing elſe but the fore-runner of another moſt terrible judgement of God, who is Lord of all creatures, and judge of all men. And this alſo prooves the providence of God. For if the conſcience can finde a man out, and lay his faults to his charge, how much more ſhall God himſelfe the Creatour of the conſcience ſee and conſider all his doings? The fourth and laſt argument is this: The propheſies of things to come ſhould bee uncertaine or falſe, if God governed not the world. But now conſidering things many yeers ago fore-told, come to paſſe in the ſame manner, as they were fore-told by the Prophets and Apoſtles: hereby we muſt certainely conclude, that there is a providence of God, whereby all and every thing is governed.

Against the providence of God ſundry things be alleaged. The firſt and ſpeciall is that providence and diſorder, confuſion and order cannot ſtand together. Now in the world there is nothing but diſorder and confuſion, in ſeditions, treaſons, conſpiracies and ſubverſions of kingdomes: where alſo ſinne and wickedneſſe prevailes. Anſw. It is true indeede there hath beene confuſion in the world ever ſince the fall of man and Angels; and it ariſeth not from God, but from them alone; who as they did at the firſt tranſgreſſe the wil of God, ſo they doe what they can to turne all upſide downe. Now then confuſion and diſorder is only in reſpect of the divell and his inſtruments; but in regard of God, in the very midſt of all confuſion there is order to be found, becauſe he can, and doth diſpoſe it to the glory of his owne name, and to the good and ſalvation of his choſen, as alſo to the confuſion of his enemies.

2. Againe, it may be objected, that with ungodly and wicked men all things go well, and contrariwiſe with the godly all things go hardly. For through the world none are more moleſted and more under outward miſery then they: but if there were any providence in God, then it ſhould be otherwiſe; the godly ſhould flouriſh, and the wicked periſh. Anſ. The conſideration of the outward eſtate of men in the world, was to David an occaſiõ of a ſore temptation. For when he ſaw the wicked to proſper alway, and their riches to increaſe, he brake foorth and ſaid, Certainly I have cleanſed my heart in vaine, and waſhed my hands in innocency. Pſa.73.13. Now if wee would repell this temptation, as David afterward did, then wee muſt goe into the Lords Sanctuary verſe.17. with him: and learne to be reſolued in theſe points: I. Though the godly be laden with miſeries, yet even that, by the eſpeciall providence of God, turnes to their great good. For every man ſince the fall of Adam is ſtained with the lothſome contagion of ſinne. Now the child of God that is truely regenerate, and muſt be fellow-heire with Chriſt after this life in the kingdome of glory, muſt in this life be caſt into the Lords furnace, that in the fire of affliction he may more and more be skoured and purified from the corruption of his nature, and be eſtranged from the wickedneſſe of the world. II. The proſperous ſucceſſe of the wicked, their ſpoiles, their revenewes, and all their honour turnes to their greater woe in the end: as doth appeare in Iobs hiſtory, and in the examples of the Chaldeans, of David enemies, and of Dives and Lazarus.

3. Thirdly, it may be objected, that many things come to paſſe by chance, and therefore not by Gods providence: becauſe chance and providence cannot ſtand together. Anſ. We muſt diſtinguiſh between chance & meer chance. Chance is, when any thing comes to paſſe, the cauſe thereof being unknowne not ſimply, but in reſpect of man: and therefore in regard A of men which know not the reaſon of things, wee may ſay there is chance: and ſo the ſpirit of Gods ſpeaks, Time and chance come to them al, & againe, By chance there came down a Prieſt the ſame way. Eccle.9.11. Luke 10.31. Now this kinde of chance is not againſt the providence of God, but is ordered by it. For things which in regard of men are caſuall, are certainly knowne and determined by God. Meere chance is, when things are ſaid or thought to come to paſſe without any cauſe at all. But that muſt be abhorred of us as an overturning the providence of God.

Thus ſeeing it is plaine that there is a providence, let us in the next place ſee what it is. Providence is a moſt free and powerfull action B of God, whereby he hath care over all things that are. Providence deſcribed

Providence hath two parts, knowledge and government. Gods knowledge, is whereby all things from the greateſt to the leaſt are manifeſt before him at all times. As David ſaith, His eyes will conſider, his eye-liddes will try the Children of men. Pſa.11.4. And againe, Hee abaſeth himſelfe to behold the things that are in the heauen and the earth. Pſal.113.6. And the Prophet Hanani ſaid to Aſa, The eyes of the Lord behold all the earth. 2.Chron.16.9. And S. Iames ſaith, From the beginning of the world God knoweth all his workes. Act.15.18. This point hath a double uſe, as S. Peter ſaith, it muſt moove us to eſchue evill and doe good: Why, Becauſe, ſaith he, the eyes of the Lord are upon the juſt, and his countenance againſt evill doers. 1.Pet.3.11, 12. Secondly, it muſt C comfort all thoſe that labour to keepe a good conſcience. For the eyes of God behold all the earth to ſhew himſelfe ſtrong with them that are of perfect heart towards him. 2.Ch.16.9.

Government, is the ſecond part of Gods providence, whereby hee ordereth all things and directeth them to good ends. And it muſt be extended to the very leaſt thing that is in heaven or earth, as to the ſparrowes, and to oxen, Matth.6.26 Deut.25.4. and the haires of our heads. Mar.10.30. And here we muſt conſider two things, the manner of government, and the meanes.

The manner of government is diverſe, according as things are good or evill. A good thing is that which is approved of God. As D firſt of all the ſubſtances of all creatures, even of the divels themſelves: in whom whatſoever is remaining ſince their creation is in it ſelfe good. Secondly, the quantities, qualities, motions, actions, and inclinations of the creatures in themſelves conſidered with all their events are good. Againe, good is either naturall or morall. Naturall, which is created by God for the lawfull uſe of man. Morall, which is agreeable to the eternall and unchangeable wiſedome of God, revealed in the morall law.

Now God governeth all good things two wayes. Firſt, by ſuſtaining and preſerving them that they decay not. Secondly, by mooving them that they may attaine to the particular ends for which they were ſeverally ordained. For the quality and vertues which were placed in the Sunne, Moone, Starres, Trees, Plants, Seedes, &c. would lie dead in them and be unprofitable, unleſſe they were not onely preſerved, but alſo ſtirred up and quickened by the power of God ſo oft as hee imployes them to any uſe.

Evill, is the deſtruction of nature: and it is taken for ſinne, or for the puniſhment of ſinne. Now ſin is governed of God by two actions: the firſt, is an operative permiſsion. I ſo cal it, becauſe God partly permitteth ſinne, and partly worketh in it. For ſinne as it is commonly taken hath two parts; the ſubject or matter, and the forme of ſinne: the ſubject of ſinne, is a certaine quality or action; the forme, is the anomie or tranſgreſsion of Gods law. The firſt is good in it ſelfe, and every quality or action, ſo far forth as it is a quality or action, is exiſting in nature, and hath God to be the author of it. Therefore ſinne, though it be ſufficiently evill to eternall damnation, yet can it not be ſaid to be abſolutely evill as God is abſolutely good, becauſe the ſubject of it is good, and therefore it hath in it reſpects and regards of goodneſſe. In reſpect of the ſecond, that is, the breach of the law it ſelfe, God neither willeth, nor appointeth, nor commandeth, nor cauſeth, nor helpeth ſinne, but forbiddeth, condemneth, and puniſheth it: yet ſo, as withall he willingly permitteth it to be done by others, as men and wicked Angels, they being the ſole authors and cauſes of it. And this permiſsion by God is upon a good end: becauſe thereby hee manifeſteth his juſtice and mercy. Thus it appeares that in originall ſinne, the naturall inclination of the mind, will, and affections in it ſelfe conſidered is from God but the ataxie or corruption of the inclination in no wiſe from him, but onely permitted: againe, that in actuall ſinne the motion of the body or mind is from God, but the evilneſſe and diſorder of the motion is not from him, but freely permitted to be done by others. As for example; In the act of murder, the action of moving the whole body, of ſtirring the ſeverall joynts, and the fetching of the blow whereby the man is ſlaine, is from God; for in him we live, moove, and have our being: but the diſpoſing and applying of all theſe actions to this end, that our neighbours life may be taken away, and we thereby take revenge upon him, is not from God, but from the wicked will of man and the divell.

Act. 17. 28.

Gods ſecond action in the government of ſinne, is after the juſt permiſsion of it, partly to reſtraine it more or leſſe, according to his good wil and pleaſure; and partly to diſpoſe and turne it againſt the nature thereof to the glory of his owne name, to the puniſhment of his enemies, and to the correcting and chaſtiſement of his elect.

As for the ſecond kinde of evill, called the puniſhment of ſinne, it is the execution of juſtice, and hath God to be the author of it. And in this reſpect Eſay ſaith, that God createth evil: and Amos, That there is no evill in the city which God hath not done. And God as a moſt juſt judge

Iſa. 45. 7. Amos 3. 6.

A may puniſh ſin by ſinne, himſelfe in the meane ſeaſon free from all ſinne. And thus the places muſt bee underſtood, in which it is ſaid, that God giveth Kings in his wrath; hardeneth the heart, blindeth the eyes; mingleth the ſpirit of errours; giveth up men to a reprobate ſenſe; ſendeth ſtrong illuſions to beleeve lyes; ſendeth evill ſpirits giving them commandement to hurt, and leave to deceive, &c.

Thus having ſeene in what manner God governeth all things, let us now come to the means of government. Sometimes God worketh without meanes; thus hee created all things in the beginning: and he made trees and plants to grow and flouriſh without the heat
B of the Sun or rain: ſometimes he governes according to the uſual courſe & order of nature, as when hee preſerves our lives by meate and drinke: yet ſo, as he can and doth moſt freely order all things by meanes either above nature or againſt nature, as it ſhall ſeeme good unto him. As when he cauſed the ſunne to ſtand in the firmament, and to goe backe in Ahaz dial: when hee cauſed the fire not to burne the three children: when he kept backe dew and raine three yeeres in Iſrael, when he made waters to flow out of the rock: when he cauſed Elias cloake to divide the waters of Iorden: when he cauſed yron to ſwimme: when he preſerved Ionas alive three daies and three nights in the whales bellie: when he cured diſeaſes, by the ſtrength
C of nature incurable, as the leproſie of Naaman; the iſſue of blood and blindneſſe, &c.

Among all the meanes which God uſeth, the ſpeciall are the reaſonable creatures, which are no paſsive inſtruments, as the toole in the hand of the workman, but active: becauſe as they are mooved by God, ſo againe being indued with will and reaſon, they moove themſelves. And ſuch inſtruments are either good or evill. Evill, as wicked men and Angels. And theſe he uſeth to doe his good will and pleaſure, even then when they do leaſt of all obey him. And conſidering that the ſinning inſtrument which is mooved by God, doth alſo moove it ſelf freely without any conſtraint on D Gods part: God himſelfe is free from all blame, when the inſtrument is blame-worthy. In directing the inſtrument, God ſinneth not: the action indeede is of him, but the defect of the action from the inſtrument: which being corrupt, can it ſelfe doe nothing but that is corrupt: God in the meane ſeaſon by it, bringeth that to paſſe which is very good. The whole cauſe of ſinne is in Satan and in us: as for God, he puts no wickednes into us, but the evill which hee findes in us hee mooves, that is, orders and governes, and bends it by his infinite wiſedome, when and in what manner it pleaſeth him, to the glorie of his name, the evil inſtrument not knowing ſo much, nay, intending a farre other end. As in the mill, the horſe blindfolded goes forward, and perceives nothing but that hee is in the ordinarie way, whereas the miller himſelfe whips him and ſtirs him forward for an other end, namely for the grinding of corne. And this is that which wee muſt hold touching Gods providence over wicked men and Angels: and it ſtands with the tenour of the whole Bible. Ioſephs brethren ſold him to Egypt very wickedly, even in the teſtimony of their owne conſciences: yet Ioſeph having reſpect to the counſell and worke of God which he performed by his brethren, ſaith, that the Lord ſent him thither. And the Church of Ieruſalem ſaith, that Herod and Pontius Pilate did nothing in the death of Chriſt, but that which the hand and the counſell of God had determined to be done: becauſe though they wickedly intended nothing but to ſhew their malice and hatred in the death of Chriſt: yet God propounding a further matter by them then ever they dreamed of, ſhewed forth his endleſſe mercy to man in the worke of redemption. On this manner muſt all the places of Scripture be underſtood, in which it is ſaid, that God gave the wives of David to Abſolon; that God moved David to number the people; that he commanded Shemei to raile on David; that the Medes and Perſians are his ſanctified ones: that the revolt of the ten tribes was done by God. &c. By all theſe examples it appeares, that we muſt not ſever Gods permiſſion from his wil or decree; and that we muſt put difference between the evill worke of man, and the good worke of God which he doth by man: and the whole matter may yet be more cleerely perceived by this compariſon: A theefe at the day of aſſiſe is condemned, and the magiſtrate appoints him to be executed; the hangman owing a grudge to the malefactor, uſeth him hardly, and prolongeth his puniſhment longer then he ſhould: Now the magiſtrate and the hangman do both one and the ſame worke, yet the hangman for his part is a murtherer, the magiſtrate in the meane ſeaſon no murtherer; but a juſt judge putting juſtice in execution by the hangman: ſo God though he uſe evill inſtruments, yet is he free from the evill of the inſtruments.

And further we muſt here marke the difference which muſt bee made in Gods uſing of all kinds of inſtruments. When he uſeth good creatures, as Angels, he worketh his will not onely by them, but alſo in them: becauſe hee inſpires them and guides them by his ſpirit, ſo as they ſhall will, and doe that which he willeth and intendeth. As for evill inſtruments, hee worketh by them onely, and not in them; becauſe hee holds backe his grace from them, and leaves them to themſelves, to put in practiſe the corruption of their owne hearts.

Thus much of the parts of Gods providence: now follow the kindes thereof. Gods providence is either generall or ſpeciall. Generall, is that which extends it ſelfe to the whole world and all things indifferently, even to the divels themſelves. By this providence God continues and maincaines the order which hee ſet in nature in the creation, and he preſerves the life, ſubſtance, and the being of all and every creature in his kind. Pſal. 104.

The ſpeciall providence is that, which God ſheweth and exerciſeth towards his Church and choſen people, in gathering and guiding them, and in preſerving them by his mighty power againſt the gates of hell. And therefore Gods Church here upon earth is called the Kingdome of grace, in which he ſhewes not onely a generall power over his creatures, but withal the ſpecial operatiõ of his ſpirit in bowing and bending the hearts of men to his will. Iſai. 43. 1, 2. Zach. 2. 8.

Thus much concerning the doctrine or Gods providence. Now followes the duties. 1. Duties from Gods providence.

First, ſeeing there is a providence of God over every thing that is, wee are hereby taught to take good heed of the tranſgreſſion of the leaſt of Gods Commandements. If men were perſwaded that the Prince had an eye every where, doubtleſſe many ſubjects in England would walke more obediently to the lawes of the land then they doe: and durſt in no wiſe worke ſuch villanies as are daily practiſed. Well, howſoever it is with earthly Princes, yet this all-ſeeing preſence is leaſt wanting in God: he hath an eye every where: whereſoever thou art, there God beholdeth thee, as David ſaith, God looked downe from Heaven upon the children of men, to ſee if there were any that would underſtand and ſeeke God. Therfore except thou be brutiſh and paſt ſhame, take heed of ſinne. Pſal. 53.

If men had but a ſparke of grace, the conſideration of this would make them loath the practiſe of any evill worke; Eliah ſaith to Ahab: As the Lord God of Iſrael liveth before whom I ſtand, there ſhall be neither dewe nor raine theſe three yeeres. Where the Prophet confirmeth his ſpeech with an oath, ſaying. As the Lord of hoſts liveth it ſhall be ſo. And leſt Ahab ſhould thinke he made no conſcience what he ſaid, he addeth this clauſe, that he ſtood in the preſence of God. As if he ſhould ſay: howſoever thou thinkeſt of me, yet as it ſtands me in hand, ſo doe I make conſcience of my Word: for I ſtand in the preſence of God, and therefore know it, as the Lord liveth there ſhall bee no raine nor dew theſe three yeares. So Cornelius having an eye to Gods providence, doth move himſelfe and all his houſhold to a ſolemne hearing of the Word of God delivered by the mouth of Peter, ſaying, that they were all preſent before God, to heare all things commanded of him. As theſe men had regard to Gods providence, ſo we likewiſe muſt behave our ſelves reverently, making conſcience of our behaviour both in words and workes: becauſe whereſoever we be, we are in the preſence of God. 1 Kin. 17. 1. Act. 10. 33.

Secondly, if there be a providence of God over every thing, then we muſt learne contentation of mind in every eſtate; yea, in adverſity under the croſſe when all goes againſt us we muſt be content, becauſe Gods providence hath ſo appointed. So David in the greateſt of his griefes was dumbe and ſpake nothing; his reaſon was, becauſe thou Lord didſt it. Pſal. 39.

And when Shemei curſed David, Abiſhai would have had the King to have given him leave to have ſlaine him: but David would not ſuffer it, but ſaid, Hee curſeth even becauſe the Lord hath bidden him curſe David: who dare then ſay, Wherefore haſt thou done ſo? In whoſe example wee may ſee a patterne of quietneſſe of mind. When a croſſe commeth, it is a hard thing to be patient; but wee muſt draw our ſelves thereunto by conſideration of Gods eſpeciall providence. 2 Sam. 16. 10.

Thirdly, when outward meanes of preſervation in this life doe abound, as health, honour, riches, peace, and pleaſure, then we muſt remember to be thankfull, becauſe theſe things alwayes come by the providence of God. Thus Iob was thankfull both in proſperity and adverſity: The Lord, ſaith he, gave, and the Lord taketh away, bleſſed be the name of the Lord. Indeed to be patient in every eſtate and thankfull to God, is a very hard matter: yet will it bee more eaſie, if we learne in all things that befall us in this life, never to ſever the conſideration of the things that come to paſſe from Gods providence. For as the body and ſoule of man (though we ſee onely the body) are alwayes together, as long as a man liveth: ſo is Gods providence joyned with the thing done: wherfore as wee looke on the thing done, ſo wee muſt alſo in it, labour to ſee and acknowledge the good pleaſure and appointment of God. As for example: a mans houſe is ſet on fire, and all his goods conſumed; this very ſight would make him at his wits end: but now as he beholds this event with one eye, ſo with the other eye hee muſt at that very inſtant looke upon Gods bleſſed providence. When a man beholds and feeles the loſſe of his friends, hee can not but grieve thereat, unleſſe hee bee more ſenſeleſſe then ſtocke or ſtone: yet that he may not be overwhelmed with griefe, he muſt ever with one eye looke at the pleaſure of God herein. This will bee an eſpeciall meanes to ſtay the rage of any headſtrong affection in all our afflictions. In the world the manner of men is, if health, wealth, and eaſe abound, to thinke all is well: but if croſſes come, as loſſe of friends, and loſſe of goods, then men cry out, as being ſtraught of their wits: the reaſon is, becauſe they looke onely at the outward meanes, and tye Gods providence to them; not being able to ſee any goodneſſe or providence of God out of ordinary meanes. Againe, when a man is ſtored with riches, honour, wealth and proſperity, he muſt not barely looke on them, but behold withall Gods goodneſſe, and bleſſing in them: for if that be wanting, all the riches in the world are nothing. Likewiſe in receiving thy meate and drinke, thou muſt looke further into the bleſſing of God upon it: which if it be away, thy meate and thy drinke can no more nouriſh thee then the ſtone in the wall. And the ſame muſt we doe in every buſineſſe of our callings; which if men could learne to practiſe, they would not ſo much truſt to the meanes, as honour, wealth, favour, &c. but rather to God himſelfe. The Lord by the Prophet Habakkuk reproves the Chaldeans for offering ſacrifice unto their nets; which ſinne they committed becauſe they looked onely upon outward things: and like moles had no power to ſee further into them, and to behold the worke of God in all their proceedings. And this is the very cauſe why we are unthankfull for Gods benefits; for though we behold the bare creatures, yet are we ſo purblind, that we cannot diſcerne any bleſſing and providence of God in them. Therefore let us learne to looke upon both joyntly together, and ſo ſhall we be thankfull unto God in proſperity, and patient in adverſity with Iob and David. This leſſon Paul learned; I can be abaſed (ſaith he) and I can abound; every where in all things I am inſtructed, both to bee full and to be hungry: and to abound, and to be in want. Hab. 1. 16. Iob 1. 22. Phil. 4. 12, 13.

Fourthly, ſeeing Gods providence diſpoſeth all things, we are taught to gather obſervations of the ſame, in things both paſt and preſent, that we may learne thereby to be armed againſt the time to come. Thus David when he was to encounter with Goliah, gathered hope and confidence to himſelfe for the time to come, by the obſervation of Gods providence in the time paſt: for, ſaith he, when I kept my Fathers ſheepe, I ſlue a Lyon and a Beare that devoured the flocke: now the Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the Lyon, and out of the paw of the Beare, he will deliver mee out of the hand of this Philiſtim. 4. 1 Sam. 17. 37.

Fifthly, becauſe Gods providence diſpoſeth all things, when we make lawfull promiſes to doe any thing, wee muſt put in, or at the leaſt conceive this condition [if the Lord will] for S. Iames ſaith, that we ought to ſay, If the Lord will, and if we live, we will doe this or that. This alſo was Davids practiſe: for to all the congregation of Iſrael he ſaid, If it ſeeme good to you, and if it proceed from the Lord our God, we will ſend to and fro, &c. 5. Iam. 4. 15. 1 Chron. 13. 2.

Sixthly, ſeeing Gods providence is manifeſt in ordinary meanes, it behooveth every man in his calling to uſe them carefully: and when ordinary meanes be at hand, we muſt not looke for any helpe without them, though the Lord be able to doe what he will without meanes. Ioab when many Aramites came againſt him, he harmed his ſouldiers though they were but few in number, bidding them be ſtrong & valiant for the people, and for the Cities of their God, and then let the Lord doe that which is good in his eyes. And our Saviour Chriſt avoucheth it to be flat tempting of God for him to leape downe from the pinacle of the Temple to the ground, whereas there was an ordinary way at hand to deſcend by ſtaires. Hence it appeares, that ſuch perſons, as will uſe no meanes whereby they may come to repent and beleeve, doe indeed no more repent and beleeve, then they can bee able to live which neither eate nor drinke. 6. 2 Sam. 10. 12. Mat. 4. 6.

And thus much of the duties. Now follow the Conſolations. Firſt, this very point of Gods ſpeciall providence, is a great comfort to Gods Church: for the Lord moderateth the rage of the divel & wicked men, that they ſhall not hurt the people of God. David ſaith, the Lord is at my right hand, therefore I ſhall not ſlide. And, When Ioſephs brethren were afraid becauſe they had ſold him into Egypt, hee comforteth them ſaying, that it was God that ſent him before them for their preſervation. So King David when his ſouldiers were purpoſed to ſtone him to death, he was in great ſorrow; but it is ſaid, He comforted himſelfe in the Lord his God. Where we may ſee, that a man which hath grace to beleeve in God, and relie on his providence in all his afflictions and extremities ſhall have wonderfull peace and conſolation.

Conſolations.

Pſal. 16. 8.

Gen. 45. 7.

1. Sam. 3. 86.

Before wee can proceede to the articles which follow, it is requiſite that we ſhould intreat of one of the greateſt workes of Gods providence that can be, becauſe the opening of it giveth light to all that inſueth. And this worke, is a Preparation of ſuch meanes whereby God will manifeſt his juſtice and mercy. It hath two parts, the juſt permiſſion of the fall of man, & the giving of the Covenant of grace. For ſo Paul teacheth when he ſaith, That God ſhut up all under unbeleefe, that he might have mercy upon all. And againe, The Scripture hath concluded all under ſinne, that the promiſe by the faith of Chriſt Ieſus ſhould be given to them that beleeve.

Rom. 11. 32.

Gal. 3. 22.

Touching the firſt, that wee may rightly conceive of mans fall, we are to ſearch out the nature and parts of ſinne. Sinne is any thing whatſoever is againſt the wil & word of God: as S. Iohn ſaith, ſin is the tranſgreſſion of the law, And this definition Paul confirmeth when he ſaith, that by the law comes the knowledge of ſin: and, where no law is, there is no trangreſſion: and, Sinne is not imputed, where there is no law.

Sinne.

1. Iohn 3. 4.

Rom. 3 10. and 4. 15. and 5. 13.

In ſinne we muſt conſider three things; the fault, the guilt, the puniſhment. The fault, is the anomie or the inobedience it ſelfe, and it comprehends not onely huge and notorious offences, idolatrie, blaſphemie, theft, treaſon, adulterie, and all other crimes that the world cries ſhame on: but every diſordered thought, affection, inclination: yea, every defect of that which the law requireth.

The guilt of ſinne, is whereby a man is guiltie before God, that is, bound and made ſubject to puniſhment. And here two queſtions muſt be skanned: where man is bound? and by what? For the firſt, Man is bound in conſcience. And hereupon the conſcience of every ſinner ſits within his heart as a little judge to tell him that he is bound before God to puniſhment. For the ſecond, it is the order of divine juſtice ſet down by God which binds the conſcience of the ſinner before God: for he is Creator and Lord, and man is a creature, and therefore muſt either obey his will and commandement, or ſuffer puniſhment. Now then by vertue of Gods law, conſcience binds over the creature to beare a puniſhment for his offence done againſt God: yea it tels him, that he is in danger to be judged and condemned for it. And therefore the conſcience is as it were the Lords Sergeant to informe the ſinner of the bond and obligation whereby hee alwayes ſtands bound before God.

The third thing which followeth ſinne, is puniſhment, and that is death. So Paul ſaith, The ſtipend of ſin is death: where by death, we muſt underſtand a double death, both of body and ſoule. The death of the body, is a ſeparation of the body from the ſoule. The ſecond death, is a ſeparation of the whole man, but eſpecially of the ſoule from the glorious preſence of God. I ſay not ſimply from the preſence of God, for God is every where: but onely from the joyful preſence of Gods glory. Now theſe two deaths are the ſtipend or allowance of ſinne: and the leaſt ſin which a man committeth, doth deſerve theſe two puniſhments. For in every ſinne the infinite juſtice of God is violated: for which cauſe there muſt needs be inflicted an infinite puniſhment, that there may bee a proportion betweene the puniſhment and the offence. And therefore that diſtinction of ſinne which Papiſts make, namely, that ſome are in themſelues veniall, & ſome mortall, is falſe, and hereby confuted: otherwiſe in reſpect of the divers eſtate and condition of men, ſinnes are either veniall or mortall. Veniall they are to the elect, whoſe ſinnes are pardonable in Chriſt: but to the reprobate all ſinnes are mortall.

Rom. 6. 23.

Neverthelеſſe we hold not all ſinnes equall, but that they are greater or leſſe according to the diverſitie of objects and other circumſtances.

Thus much of ſinne in generall: now wee come to the parts of it. The firſt ſinne of all that ever was in man, is the ſinne of Adam, which was his diſobedience in eating the forbidden fruite: In handling whereof ſundrie points are to be opened, but let us begin with the cauſes thereof.

Rom. 5. 5

The outward efficient cauſe was the divell. And though he be not named by Moſes in the hiſtory of the fall, yet that is not to trouble us, for wee muſt not conceive otherwiſe of the ſerpent, then of the inſtrument and mouth of the divell. For it is not likely, that it being a bruit creature ſhould be able to reaſon and determine of good and evill, of truth & falſhood. Now in the temptation the divell ſhewes his malice and his fraud. His malice, in that whereas hee can not overturne God himſelfe, yet hee labours to diſturbe the order which hee hath ſet downe in the creation, and eſpecially the image of God in the moſt excellent creatures on earth, that they may bee in the ſame miſerable condition with himſelfe. His fraud, Firſt, in that he beginnes his temptation with the woman being the weaker perſon, and not with the man, which courſe he ſtill continues:

as may appeare by this, that [a] more women are intangled with witchcraft, and ſorcery then men. Secondly, he ſhewes his fraud, in that he proceeds very ſlily and intangles Eve by certaine ſteppes and degrees. For firſt, by mooving a queſtion, he drawes her to liſten unto him, and to reaſon with him of Gods Commandement. Secondly hee brings her to looke upon the tree, and wiſhly to view the beauty of the fruit. Thirdly, hee makes her to doubt of the abſolute truth of Gods Word and promiſe, and to beleeve his contrary lyes. Fourthly, having blinded her minde with his falſe perſwaſion, ſhe deſires and luſts after the forbidden fruite, and thereupon takes it, eates it, and gives it to her husband.

The inward cauſe, was the will of our firſt parents, even in the teſtimony of their owne conſciences, as Salomon ſaith, This have I found, that God made man righteous, but they have found many inventions. But it may be objected, that if Adam were created good, hee could not be the cauſe of his owne fall, becauſe a good tree cannot bring forth evill fruit. Anſ. Freedome of his will is fourefold. I. Freedome to evill alone, this is onely in wicked men and Angels, and is indeed a bondage: the ſecond, is freedome to good alone, and that is in God and the good Angels by Gods grace: the third, is freedome to good in part, joyned with ſome want of liberty, by reaſon of ſinne: and this is in the regenerate in this life: the fourth, is freedome either to good or evill indifferently. And this was in Adam before his fall, who though he had no inclination to ſinne, but onely to that which was acceptable to God: yet was hee not bound by any neceſſity, but had his liberty freely to chuſe or refuſe either good or evill. And this is evident by the very tenour of Gods Commandement, in which hee forbids Adam to eate the forbidden fruit: and thereby ſhewing that hee being created righteous, and not prone to ſinne, had power to keepe or not to keepe the Commandement: though ſince the fall, both hee and we after him cannot but ſinne. Wherefore Adam being allured by Satan, of his owne free accord changed himſelfe and fell from God. Now then as the good tree changed from good to evill, brings forth evill fruit: ſo Adam by his owne inward and free motion changing from good to evill, brings forth evill.

Eccle. 7. 31.

As for God, hee is not to bee reputed as an author or cauſe any way of this ſinne, for hee created Adam and Eve, righteous, endued them with righteous wils: and he told them what he would exact at their hand, and what they could performe: yea hee added threatnings, that with the feare of danger hee might terrifie them from ſinne. Some may ſay, whereas God foreſaw that Adam would abuſe the liberty of his will, why would he not prevent it? Anſw. There is a double grace [b] the one to bee able to will and doe that which is good, the other to bee able to preſevere in willing and doing the ſame. Now God gave the firſt to Adam, and not the ſecond: and he is not to be blamed of us, though he confirmed him not with new grace, for he is debter to no man to give him ſo much as the leaſt grace; whereas he had alreadie given a plentifull meaſure thereof to him. And God did hold backe to conferre any further grace upon juſt cauſe. I. It was his pleaſure, that this fact ſhould bee an occaſion or way to exerciſe his mercy in the ſaving of the elect, and his juſtice in the deſerved condemnation of impenitent ſinners. And unleſſe Adam had fallen for himſelfe and others, there ſhould have beene found no miſerie in men, on whom God might take pitie in his Sonne, nor wickedneſſe which he might condemne; and therefore neither manifeſtation of juſtice, nor mercie. II. It was the will of God in part to forſake Adam, to make manifeſt the weakenes that is in the moſt excellent creature, without the ſpeciall and continuall aſſiſtance of God. III. There is a double libertie of will, one is to will good or euill; this belongs to the creature in this world, and therefore Adam received it. The other, is to will good alone. Thsi hee wanted, becauſe it is reſerved to the life to come: and though we knew no cauſe of this dealing of God, yet is it one ſteppe to the feare of God for us to hold that good and righteous which hee appointeth or willeth: and not to ſquare the works and judgements of God by our crooked reaſon. And yet to come to reaſon it ſelfe, who can here complaine of God? can the divell? but God did not cauſe him to tempt or deceive our firſt parents. Can Adam and Eve? but they fell freely without any motion or inſtigation from God, and their owne conſcience accuſed them for it. Can the poſterity of Adam: but the Elect receive more in Chriſt then they loſt in Adam: and the reprobate, overwhelmed with the burden of their owne ſins, and thereupon receiuing nothing but due and deſerved damnation, cannot find fault. But ſome may further reply and ſay, he that foreſeeth an evill and doth not prevent it, is a cauſe of it: but God did foreſee the fall of man, and did not prevent it. Anſw. The rule is generally true in man, that the foreſeer of an evill not preventing it, is in ſome ſort a doer of it: for it is the ſentence of the law of God, to which man is bound from the firſt Creation. But God is above all his lawes, and not bound to them: hee is an abſolute Lord and Law-giver, and therefore his actions are not within the compaſſe of morall lawes, as mens are. Whereupon it followes, that though he did foreſee mans defection, yet is hee free from all blame in not preventing it. For with him there bee good cauſes of permitting evill.

[b] Dedit Adamo poſſe perſeverare ſi vellet, non & poſſe & velle.

And though God bee no cauſe of mans fall yet muſt wee not imagine that it came to paſſe by chance or fortune, whereas the leaſt things that are, come to paſſe with Gods providence. Neither was it by any bare permiſſiō without his his decree and will: for that is to make an idle providence: neither did it happen against the will of God; hee utterly nilling it, for then it could not have beene, unlesse we deny God to be omnipotent. It remaines therefore that this fall did so proceed of the voluntary motion of Adam, as that God did in part ordaine and will the permitting of it, not as it was a sinne against his commandement, but as it was further in the counsell of God a way to execute his justice and mercy. Aug. Euch. ad Laur. chap. 99.

Object. 1. Against this which I say, divers things are objected. First, that if Adam did that which God in any respect willed, then he did not sinne at all. Answ. Hee that willeth, and doth that which God willeth, for all that sinneth; unlesse hee will it in the same manner which God, and for the same end. Now in the permitting of this fact, God intended the manifesting of his glory: but our first parents intending no such thing, sought not only to be like, but also to bee equall with God.

2. Secondly, it is alleadged that Adam could not but fall necessarily, if God decreed it. Answ. Adams fall, that came not to passe without Gods decree, and therefore in that respect was necessary; was nevertheless in respect of Adams free-will contingent and not necessary: Gods decree not taking away the freedome of will, but only ordering it.

3. Lastly, it is alleadged, that Gods will is the cause of Adams will, and Adams will the cause of his fall, and that therefore Gods will shall bee the cause of the fall. Answ. It must needs be granted, that Gods will is a mooving cause of the wils of evill men; yet marke how; not as they are evill wils simply, but as they are wils: and therefore when God inclines the evill will of his creature to his good purpose, he is nothing at all intangled with the defect or evill of his will.

Time of Adams fall. Touching the time of the fall, the received opinion in former ages hath bin, that our first parents fell the same day in which they were created, and therefore Augustine writes that they stood but sixe houres. And though wee can not determine of the certaine time, yet in all likelihood it was very short. For Moses presently after that he had set downe the creation of man, without the interposition of any thing else, comes immediately to the fall. And considering the nature of the divell is without ceasing to shew his malice, no doubt he tooke the first occasion that possibly might bee had to bring man to the same damnation with himselfe. Iohn 8.44. And our Saviour Christ saith, that the divell was a man-slayer from the beginning, namely, from the beginning not of the creation of the world, or of time, but of man. Gen. 3.2. And Eve saith, Wee shall eate of the fruit of the trees of the Garden, it may be, insinuating that as yet she had not eaten when the divell tempted her.

Touching the greatnesse of mans fall, some have made a small matter of it, because it was the eating of an apple or some such fruit. But we must not measure the greatnesse or smalnesse of a sinne by the obiect or matter where-

A about it is occupied, but by the Commandement of God, and by the disobedience or offence of his infinite Majesty. And that this fact of Adam and Eve was no small fault, but a notorious crime and apostasie, in which they withdrew themselves from under the power of God, may reject and deny him, will evidently appeare, if we take a view of all the particular sinnes that be contained in it. The first, is unbelief, in that they doubted and distrusted of the truth of Gods Word which he spake to them. The second, is contempt of God, in that they beleeved the lyes of the divell rather then him. For when God saith, In the day that yee shall eate thereof, ye shall dye the death, it is as nothing with Eve: but when the devill comes and saith, Ye shall not dye at all, that she takes hold on. The third, is pride and ambition. For they did eate the forbidden fruit, that they might be as gods, namely, as the Father, the Sonne, the holy Ghost. The fourth, is unthankefulnesse. God had made them excellent creatures in his owne image: that is nothing with them to be like unto him, unlesse they may be equall with him. The fift, is curiosity, whereby they affected greater wisedome then God had given them in creation, and a greater measure of knowledge then God hath revealed to them. The sixth is reproachfull blasphemy, in that they subscribe to the saying of the divell, in which he charged God with lying and envy. The seventh, is murder: for by this meanes they bereave themselves and their posterity of the fellowship and graces of Gods spirit, and bring upon their owne heads the eternall wrath of God. The eight, is discontentation, in that they sought for an higher condition then that was, in which God had placed them. In a word, in this one single fact is comprised the breach of the whole law of God. And we should often thinke upon this, that we may learne to wonder at the just judgements of God in punishing this fall, and his unspeakeable goodnesse in receiving men to mercy after the same.

Particular sinnes in Adams fall. 1. 2. Gen. 3.4. 3. Gen. 3.5. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8.

And here wee must not omit to remember the largenesse of Adams fall. Sinnes are either personall or generall. Personall are such as are peculiar to one or some few persons, and make them alone guilty. Generall, that bee common to all men: and such is Adams fall. It is a sinne not onely of the person of one man but of the whole nature of man. And Adam must be considered not as a private man, but as a roote or head bearing in it all mankind; or as a publike person representing all his posterity, and therefore when he sinned, all his posterity sinned with him; as in a Parliament whatsoever is done by the Burgesse of the shiere, is done by every person in the shiere. As Paul saith, By one man sinne entred into the world, and so death went over al for as much as all have sinned. Rom. 5.12. And here lyes the difference betweene Adams fall and the sinnes of men, as Cains murder, which makes not the posterity of Cain guilty, because he was never appointed pointed by God to bee the roote of his poſterity, as Adam was: and therefore his ſinne is perſonall, whereas Adams is not. Yet this which I ſay, muſt not be underſtood of all the ſinnes of Adam, but onely of the firſt.

Originall ſinne.

From the fall of Adam ſpringeth originall ſinne, ſo commonly called not onely as a fruit thereof, but alſo as a juſt puniſhment of it. And after the foreſaid fall, it is in Adam and his poſterity, as the mother and roote of all other ſinne: yet with this diſtinction, that actuall ſinne was firſt in Adam, and then came originall; but in us, firſt is originall ſinne, and then after followes actuall.

Originall ſinne is tearmed diverſly in Scriptures, as the fleſh: the old man, becauſe it is in us before grace: concupiſcence, ſinne that is ready to compaſſe us about, the ſinning ſinne: and it is tearmed originall, becauſe it hath bin in mans nature ever ſince the fall, and becauſe it is in every man at the very inſtant of his conception and birth, as David plainely ſaith, Behold I was borne in iniquity, and in ſin hath my mother conceived mee: not meaning properly his parents ſinne (for he was borne in lawfull marriage) but his owne hereditary ſinne, whereof he was guilty in his mothers wombe.

Heb.12.1. Rom.7.13.

But let us a little ſearch the nature of it. Conſidering it hath place in man, it muſt bee either the ſubſtance of body or ſoule, or the faculties of the ſubſtance, or the corruption of the faculties. Now it cannot be the ſubſtance of man corrupted: for then our Saviour Chriſt in taking our nature upon him, ſhould alſo take upon him our ſinnes, and by that meanes ſhould as well have needs of a redeemer as other men: and againe the ſoules of men ſhould not be immortall. Neither is it any one of all the faculties of men. For every one of them, as namely, the underſtanding, wil, affections, and all other powers of body or ſoule were in man from the firſt creation; whereas ſinne was not before the Fall. Wherefore it remaines, that originall ſinne is nothing elſe, but a diſorder or evill diſpoſition in all the faculties and inclinations of man, whereby they are all carried inordinately againſt the Law of God.

The ſubject or place of this ſinne, is not any part of man, but the whole body and ſoule, For firſt of all, the naturall appetite to meate and drinke, and the power of nouriſhing is greatly corrupted, as appeares by diſeaſes, aches, ſurfets, but ſpecially by the abuſe of meate and drinke. Secondly, the outward ſenſes, are as corrupt, and that made David to pray, that God would turne his eyes from beholding of vanity: and Saint Iohn to ſay, Whatſoever is in the world, is the luſt of the fleſh, the luſt of the eye, and the pride of life. Thirdly, touching the underſtanding, the ſpirit of God ſaith, that the frame of the heart of man is onely evill continually: ſo us we are not able of our ſelves to thinke a good thought. And therefore withall, the will of man and his affections are anſwerably corrupt; and hereupon the doctrine of Chriſt is, that we muſt renounce our owne wils. Laſtly, all mens ſtrength to good things is nothing out of Chriſt. The propagation of this ſinne, is the deriving of it from Adam to all his poſterity, whereby it runneth as a leproſie over all mankind. But in what manner this propagation is made, it is hard to define. The common opinion of Divines is, that it may bee done two wayes. The firſt is this: God when he created Adam in the beginning, ſet downe this appointment and order touching the eſtate of man, that whatſoever Adam received of God, hee ſhould receive it not onely for himſelfe but for his poſterity, and whatſoever grace of God he loſt, he ſhould loſe not onely to himſelfe, but to all his poſterity: And hereupon Adam when he ſinned, hee deprived firſt of all himſelfe, and then ſecondly all his poſterity of the Image of God; becauſe all mankind was in his loynes when he ſinned. Now then upon the former appointment, when the ſoules of men are created and placed in the body, God forſakes them, not in reſpect of the ſubſtance of the ſoule or the faculties, but onely in reſpect of his owne image, wherof the ſoules are deprived; after which followes the defect or want of righteouſneſſe, which is originall ſin. And God in depriving man of that which Adam loſt, is not therefore to be thought to bee the author or maintainer of ſinne, but a judge. For this deprivation of the image of God, ſo farre forth as it is inflicted by him upon mankind, it muſt bee conceived as a deſerved puniſhment for the ſinne of Adam and all men in him, which puniſhment they pulled upon themſelves. The ſecond way is, that the corruption of nature is derived from the parents in generation by the body; for as a ſweet oyle powred into a fuſty veſſell, loſeth his pureneſſe, and is infected by the veſſell: ſo the ſoule created good, and put into the corrupt body, receives contagion thence. And this conjunction of the pure ſoule with the corrupt body, is not againſt the goodnes of God; becauſe it is a juſt puniſhment of the ſinne of all men in Adam. It may be this which hath beene ſaid will not ſatisfie the minds of all: yet if any will be curious to ſearch further into this point, let them know that there is an other matter which more concernes them to looke unto. When a mans houſe is on fire, there is no time then to inquire how, and which way, and whence the fire came, but our duty is with all ſpeed and expedition to uſe all good meanes to ſtay it. And ſo conſidering that our whole natures are really infected and poiſoned with the loathſome contagion of originall ſinne, which is a weight ſufficient to preſſe downe the ſoule to the gulfe of hell, it ſtands us in hand a thouſand fold more to uſe the meanes whereby it may be taken away, then to diſpute how it came.

Propagation of originall ſinne.

Rom.5.12.

Some may alleadge againſt the propagation of ſinne, that holy parents beget holy children, which are voyde of originall ſin: becauſe it ſtands not with reaſon, that parents ſhould con-

convey that to their childrē which they themſelves want, namely, the guilt & the puniſhment and the fault of ſinne in part. Anſw. 1. Men are not in this life perfectly holy. For ſanctification is but in part, and therfore they can not poſſibly beget children pure from all ſinne. Secondly, parents beget children as they are men, and not as they are holy men; and by generation they derive unto their children nature with the corruption thereof, and not grace, which is above nature. Take any corne, yea the fineſt wheat that ever was, winow it as clean as poſſibly may bee: afterward ſowe it, weede it alſo when it is ſowne, reape it in due time, and carrie it to the barne; when it is threſht, you ſhall finde as much chaffe in it as ever was before: and why? becauſe God hath ſet this order in the creation, that it ſhall ſpring and grow, ſo oft as it is ſowed, with the ſtalke, eare, blade, and all: ſo likewiſe though the parents be never ſo holy, the children as they come of them are conceived and borne wholly corrupt, becauſe God tooke this order in the creation, that whatſoever evill Adam procured, he ſhould bring it not only on himſelfe, but upon all his poſteritie: by vertue of which decree, the propagation of ſin is continued without any interruption, though parents themſelves bee borne anew by the ſpirit of God.

Greatneſſe of it.

And here wee muſt not omit to ſpeake of the quantitie or greatnes of originall ſinne, for the opening whereof wee muſt conſider three points. The firſt, that originall ſinne is not diverſe, but one and the ſame in kinde in every man, as the generall and common nature of man is one and the ſame in all men. The ſecond, that this ſinne is not in ſome men more, in ſome men leſſe, but in every man equally, as all men doe equally from Adam participate the nature of man, and are equally the children of wrath. Some, it may be, will ſay, that this can not be true, becauſe ſome men are of better natures then others are: ſome of diſpoſition cruell and ſeuere, ſome againe gentle and milde: ſome very licentious and diſordered, ſome very civill. Anſw. The differences that bee in men wanting the feare of God, ariſe not of this that they have more or leſſe originall corruption, but of the reſtraint and limitation of mans corruption. For in ſome, God bridleth ſin more then in others, and in them is found civilitie: and againe in ſome leſſe, and in ſuch the rebellion of nature breakes forth unto all miſdemeanour. And indeede, if God ſhould not keepe the untoward diſpoſition of men within compaſſe, otherwhiles more, otherwhiles leſſe, as ſhall ſeeme good unto his majeſty: impiety, cruelty, injuſtice, and all manner of ſins would breake out into ſuch a meaſure that there ſhould bee no quiet living for men in the world, and no place for Gods Church. And thus it is manifeſt, that although all men be not equall in the practiſe of wickednes, yet that is no hinderance but they may be equall in the corruption of nature it ſelfe. The third point is, that originall ſin is ſo huge and large every way, that it may truly bee tearmed the roote or ſeede, not of ſome few ſins, but of all ſinnes whatſoever, even of the very ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt. We muſt not imagine it to be an inclination or proneneſſe to one or two faults, but a proneneſſe to all and every ſinne that is practiſed in the world; and that in all perſons young and old, high and low, male and female. It is a moſt horrible villany for a man to kill his father or mother, or his childe: yet ſome there be that do ſo: at the hearing whereof we uſe to wonder, and to teſtifie our diſlike by ſaying, that the doers thereof were wicked and divelliſh perſons, and it is truly ſaid. Nevertheleſſe we muſt underſtand, that although we abſtaine from ſuch heinous practiſes, yet the very roote of ſuch ſinnes, that is, a diſpoſition vnto them, is found in us alſo. Iulian the Apoſtata both living and dying blaſphemed Chriſt. Herod, and Pontius Pilate, and the wicked Iewes crucified him, and Iudas betrayed him. Men uſe to ſay that if Chriſt were now alive, they would not doe ſo for all the world. But let us better conſider of the matter. The ſame naturall corruption of heart that was in them, is alſo in us, we being the children of Adam as well as they: and by force of this corruption, if Chriſt were now living on earth, thou wouldeſt if like occaſion were offered, either doe as Iudas did in betraying him, or as Pilate did, deliver him to bee crucified, or as the ſouldiers, thruſt him through with their ſpeares, or as Iulian, pierce him with all manner of blaſphemies, if God withhold his graces from thee, and leave thee to thy ſelfe. In a word, let men conceive in mind the moſt notorious treſpaſſe that can be, though they doe it not, nor intend to do it, and never doe it: yet the matter, beginning, and ſeed thereof is in themſelves. This made Ieremy ſay, The heart of man is deceitfull and wicked above all things, who can know it? It is like a huge ſea, the banks whereof cannot be ſeene, nor the bottome ſearched. In cōmon experience we ſee it come to paſſe, that men, Proteſtants, to day, to morrow Papiſts, of Chriſtians, hereticks; now friends, but preſētly after foes; this day honeſt & civil mē, the next day cruel murderers. Now what is the cauſe of this difference? ſurely the hidden corruption of the heart, that will thruſt a man forward to any ſin when occaſion is offered. This point muſt be remembred & often thought on.

Ier. 17. 9.

Actuall ſinne.

From Originall ſinne ſpringeth actuall, which is nothing elſe but the fruite of the corrupt heart, either in thought, word or deede.

Vſe of Mans fall. 1.

Thus much touching mans fall into ſinne by Gods juſt permiſſion. Now followes the good uſe which we muſt make thereof. Firſt, by this we learne to acknowledge and bewaile our owne frailty. For Adam in his innocencie being created perfectly righteous, when hee was once tempted by the divell fell away from God: what ſhall wee doe then in like caſe which are by nature ſolde under ſinne, and in our ſelves a thouſand times weaker then Adam was? Many men there bee that mingle themſelves withal companies; tell them of the danger thereof, they will preſently reply, that they have ſuch a ſtrong faith that no badde company can hurt them. But alas: ſilly people. Satan bewitcheth them, and makes them to beleeve falſhood to bee truth: they know not their miſerable eſtate. If Adam, ſaith Bernard, had a downfall in Paradiſe, what ſhal wee doe that are caſt forth to the dunghill? Let us therfore often come to a ſerious conſideration of our own weakeneſſe, and follow withal the practiſe of David, who being privie to himſelfe touching his owne corruption, praveth to God in this manner, Knit my heart to thee, O Lord, that I may feare thy name. Pſal. 86.11. Pſal. 86.11. Secondly, we 2. learne hereby abſolutely to ſubmit our ſelves to the authority of God, and ſimply to reſolve our ſelves, that whatſoever hee commandeth is right and juſt, though the reaſon of it be not knowne to us. For Eve condeſcended to liſten to the ſpeech of the Serpent, and without any calling ſhe reaſoned with it of a moſt waighty matter, and that in the abſence of Adam her head and husband, namely, of the truth and glory of God: and hereby was brought to 3. doubt of Gods word, & ſo overturned. Thirdly, if all men by Adams fall bee ſhut up under damnation, there is no cauſe why any of us ſhould ſtand upon his birth, riches, wiſedome, learning, or any other ſuch gifts of God: there is nothing in us that is more able to cover our vileneſſe and nakedneſſe, then fig-tree leaves were able to cover the offence of Adam from Gods eyes. We are under the wrath of God by nature, and cannot attaine to everlaſting life of our ſelves. Wherefore it doth ſtand every one of us in hand to abaſe our ſelves under the mighty hand of God, in that wee are become by our ſinnes the very baſeſt of all the creatures upon earth, yea utterly to deſpaire in reſpect of our ſelves, and with bleeding hearts to bewaile our owne caſe. There is no danger in this: it is the very way to grace: none can be a lively member of Chriſt till his conſcience condemne him, and make him quite out of heart in reſpect of himſelfe. And the want of this is the cauſe why ſo few perceive any ſweetneſſe or comfort in the Goſpel: and why it is ſo little loved and embraced now a dayes. Laſtly, if all mankinde be ſhut up under unbeliefe, the duty of every man is, to labour in uſing all good meanes whereby hee may bee delivered from this bondage, and to pray to God with David, Create in mee a cleane heart, O God, and renew a right ſpirit within me. Pſal. 51.10. And cry out with Paul, O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver mé from this body of death? Rom. 7.24. And we muſt never bee at reſt, till we have ſome aſſurance in conſcience, that in Chriſt wee have freedome from this bondage, and can with the Coloſsians give thanks that we are delivered from the power of darknes, and tranſlated into the kingdome of Chriſt. Col. 1.13. This ſhould be the affection

A of every man, becauſe the ſpirituall thraldome under ſin is of all miſeries moſt loathſome and burdenſome. And in this reſpect the day of death ſhould be unto us moſt welcome, becauſe it doth unlooſe us from this miſerable eſtate, in which we doe almoſt nothing but diſpleaſe God. For this is the greateſt griefe that can be to ſuch as are indeed the children of God, by their ſinnes to offend their mercifull father. As for thoſe which feele not the weight of their naturall guiltineſſe and corruption, but lye ſlumbering in the ſecurity of their own hearts, they are therefore the more miſerable, in that being plunged in the gulfe of all miſery, yet they feele no miſery.

B Thus much of the permiſsion of the fall of man. Now we come to the Covenant of grace: Which is nothing elſe, but a compact made betweene God and man touching reconciliation and life everlaſting by Chriſt. This covenant was firſt of all revealed and delivered to our firſt parents in the garden of Eden, immediatly after their fall by God himſelfe, in theſe words, The ſeed of the woman ſhal bruiſe the ſerpẽts head, & afterward it was cõtinued & renewed with a part of Adams poſteritie, as with Abraham, Iſaac, Iacob, David, &c. but it was moſt fully revealed & accõpliſhed at the cõming of Chriſt. Gen. 3.15.

Covenant of Grace.

In the Covenant I will conſider two things; the parties reconciled, between whom the covenant is made, and the foundation thereof.

C The parties are God and man. God is the principall, and he promiſeth righteouſnes and life eternall in Chriſt: Man againe binds himſelfe by Gods grace to beleeve and to reſt upon the promiſe. Here it may be demanded, why man is more in the covenant then Angels. Anſw. The will of God in this point is not revealed unleſſe it be becauſe angels fell of themſelves. not mooved by any other: but man did fall by them. Again, it may be asked, whether all mankind were ever in the covenant or no? Anſw. Wee cannot ſay that all and every man hath bin and now is in the covenant, but onely that little part of mankinde, which in all ages hath bin the Church of God, and hath by faith embraced the covenant: as Paul plainely avoucheth, The Scripture (ſaith he) hath concluded all under ſin: that the promiſe of the faith of Ieſus Chriſt ſhould be given [not unto all men] but to them that beleeve. Without faith no man can pleaſe God; and therefore God makes no covenant of reconciliation without faith. Againe, ſince the beginning of the world there hath bin alwaies a diſtinction betweene man and man. This appeares in the very tenour of the words of the covenant made with our firſt parents, where God ſaith he wil put difference betweene the ſeed of the woman and the ſeed of the Serpent: meaning by the ſeede of the woman, Chriſt with al the Elect whom the Father hath given unto him, who ſhall bruiſe the Serpents head, and tread Satan under their feet. Roman. 16. verſe 20. And by the ſeed of the Serpent hee meaneth wicked men that live and die in their

sinner, S. Iohn saith, 1 *Iohn.*3.8. He that committeth sinne is of the devell. And according to this distinction in times following was Abel received into the covenant, and Cain rejected; some were the sons of God in the dayes of Noe, Gen.6.2. some the sons of men: In Abrahams family, Gen.17.21. Ismael is cast out, and the covenant established in Isaac: Iacob is loved, Esau is hated. And this Rom.9.13. distinction in the families of Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob, Paul approveth, when he maketh some to be the children of the flesh, and some other the children of the promise, Rom.9.8. And againe, the Iewes a people of God in the covenant, the Gentiles no people. For Paul Rom.9.3,4. makes it a priviledge of the Iewes to have the adoption, and covenant, and the service of God, and the promises belonging unto them, whereas hee saith of the Ephesians, Eph.1.12. that they were aliens from the common wealth of Israel, and were strangers from the covenants of promise, and had no hope, and were without Christ, and without God in the world. And the same may be said of the whole body of the Gentiles excepting here and there a man, who were converted and became Proselytes. And this is manifest in that they wanted the word & the Sacraments, and teachers. And this saying of the Prophet Hosea, I will call them my people, which were not my people: and her beloved, which was not beloved, Rom.9.25. is alleadged by Paul to proove the calling of the Gentiles. Object. I. Some doe alleadge to the contrary, that when the covenant was made with our first parents, it was also in them made with all mankind, not one man excepted: and that the distinction and difference betweene man and man, ariseth of their unbeliefe and contempt of the covenant afterward. Ans. Indeed in the estate of innocency, Adam by creation received grace for himselfe and his posterity; and in his fall hee transgressed not onely for himselfe, but for all his posterity, but in receiving the covenant of grace it cannot be prooved that he received it for himselfe and for all mankind: nay the distinction betweene the seed of the woman and the seed of the Serpent, mentioned in the very first giving of the covenant, shewes the contrary; for if after the fall, all and every part of mankind were received into the covenant, then all men without restraint should bee the seed of the woman, bruising the Serpents head, and the Serpent should have no seed at all. And againe, all men cannot be charged with unbeliefe and contempt in respect of the Evangelicall covenant, but only such persons as have knowne it, or at the least heard of it. And therfore sundry heads of the nations may be charged with unbeliefe, as Cain, Cham, Iaphet, Ammon, Moab, Ismael, Esau, Madian, for they being neere to the fathers, heard the promises concerning Christ, offered sacrifices, and observed externall rites of the Church, but afterward fell away from the sincere worship of the true God to idolatry and all manner of wickednesse, and became enemies of God and his people. But we plainely deny, that there was or could bee the like unbeliefe and contempt of Gods grace in their posterity, which for the most part never so much as heard of any covenant; their ancestors indeavouring alwayes to bury and extinguish the memory of that which they hated. Object. II. It is objected againe, that the Covenant was made with Abraham and with all mankind after him, Because (saith the Lord) thou hast obeyed my voyce, in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed, Gen.22.18. Ans. Paul gives a double answer, first, that the place must bee understood of many nations: secondly, that it must be understood not of all nations in all ages, but of all nations of the last age of the world. For saith he, Gal. 3.8. The Scripture foreseeing that God would justifie the Gentiles through faith, preached before the Gospell unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all the nations bee blessed. Well, to conclude this point, in the making of the covenant there must be a mutual consent of the parties on both sides, and beside the promise on Gods part, there must be also a restipulation on mans part; otherwise the Covenant is not made. Now then, it must needs follow that all unbeleevers contemning grace offered in Christ, are out of the Covenant, as also such as never heard of it; for where there is no knowledge, there is no consent; and before the comming of Christ, the greatest part of the world never knew the Messias, nor heard of the Covenant, as Paul saith to the learned Athenians, Act. 17.30. The time of this ignorance God regarded not, but now he admonisheth al men every where to repent.

The foundation and ground-worke of the Covenant is Christ Iesus the Mediatour, in whom all the promises of God are yea and amen, and therefore he is called the angell of the covenant, and the covenant of the people to be made with all nations in the last age. Now then that we may proceed at large to open the substance of the Covenant, wee are in the next place to come to that part of the Creede, which concernes the second person in Trinity set downe in these words: And Iesus Christ his onely Sonne, &c. from which words to the very end of the Creed, such points onely are laid downe, as do notably unfold the benefits and the matter of the covenant. Now the second person is described to us by three things: first his titles: secondly, his incarnation: thirdly, his two-fold estate. His titles are in number foure. I. Iesus. II. Christ. III. his onely Sonne. IV. our Lord. His incarnation, and his twofold estate are set downe afterward.

The foundation of the Covenant. Mal.3.1. Esa.19.8.

To come to his Titles, the first is Iesus, to which if we adde the clause, I beleeve, on this manner, I beleeve in Iesus, &c. the article which we now have in hand will appeare to be most excellent; because it hath most notable promises annexed to it. When Peter confessed Christ to be the Sonne of the living God, hee answered, upon this rock wil I build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevaile against it. Mat.16.18.

1 Ioh. 4.15. And againe, He that confesseth that Christ is the Sonne of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God.
Act. 10.43. And againe, To him give all the Prophets witnesse, that through his name all that beleeve in him shall receive remission of sinnes. Paul Act. 16.31. saith, Beleeve in the Lord Iesus, and thou shalt be saved, and all thy houshold. Thus then the confession in which wee acknowledge that wee beleeve in Iesus Christ, hath a promise of fellowship with God, and of life everlasting. But it may be objected, that every spirit (as Saint Iohn
1 Ioh. 4. 2. saith) which confesseth, that, Iesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God. Now the divell, and all his angels and unbeleevers doe thus much: therefore why may not they also have the benefit of this confession? Ans. By spirit in that B place is neither meant angels nor men, nor any creature, but the doctrine which teacheth that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh; and it is of God, because it is holy and divine, and hath God to be the Author of it. As for the divell and his angels, they can indeed confesse that Christ the Sonne of God was made man, and a wicked man may teach the same; but unto the confession whereunto is annexed a promise of eternall life, is required true faith, whereby we doe not onely know and acknowledge this or that to be true in Christ, but also rest upon him: which neither Satan, nor wicked men can doe. And therefore by this confession, the Church of God is distinguished from all other companies of men in the world which beleeve not; as Paynims, Heretickes, Atheists, Turkes, Iewes, and all other infidels.

This name Iesus, was given to the Sonne of God by the Father, and brought from heaven by an Angell unto Ioseph and Mary; and on the day when he was to be circumcised as the manner was, this name was given unto him by his parents, as they were commanded from the Lord by the Angel Gabriel. And therefore the name was not given by chance, or by the alone will of the Parents, but by the most wise appointment of God himselfe.

Matth. 1.22 Luk. 1.31. The name in Hebrew is Iehoscua, and it is changed by the Grecians into Iesus, which signifieth a Saviour. And it may be called the proper name of Christ, signifying his office and both his natures, because he is both a perfect and absolute Saviour, as also the alone Saviour of man, because the work of salvation is wholly and only wrought by him, and no part thereof is reserved to any creature in heaven or in earth. As Peter saith, Act. 4.12 For among men there is no other name given under heaven whereby we may be saved but by the name of Iesus. And the author to the Hebrewes saith, Heb. 7. 25. That hee is able perfectly to save them that come unto God by him seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. If any shall object, that the promises of salvation are made to them which keep the Commandements: the answer is, that the Law of God doth exact most absolute and perfect obedience, which can be found in no man but in Christ, who never sinned; and therefore it is not given unto us now, that we might by our selves fulfill it, and worke out our own salvation, but that being condemned by it, wee might wholly depend on Christ for eternall life. If any further alleadge, that such as walke according to the Commandements of God, though their obedience be imperfect, yet they have the promises of this life and of the life to 1 Tim. 4.8. come. The answer is, that they have so indeed, yet not for their works, but according to their workes, which are the fruits of their faith, whereby they are joyned to Christ, for whose merits onely they stand righteous, and are acceptable before God. And whereas it is said by Peter, that baptisme saveth us, his meaning is 1 Pet. 3.1. not to signifie that there is any vertue in the water to wash away our sinnes and to sanctifie us, but that it serves visibly to represent and confirme unto us the inward washing of our soules by the blood of Christ. It may further Act. 7.45. be said, that others have beene Saviours beside Christ, as Ioshua the sonne of Nun, who Heb. 4.8. for that cause is called by the same name with Christ. Ans. Ioshua after the death of Moses was appointed by God to be a guide to the children of Israel, which might defend them from their enemies, and bring them to the land of Canaan: but this deliverance was only temporall, and that onely of one people. Now the Sonne of God is called Iesus, not because hee delivereth the people of the Iewes onely, or C because he saveth the bodies of men onely, but because he saveth both body and soule, not only of the Iewes, but also of the Gentils, from hell, death, and damnation. And whereas Pro- Obad. v. 21. phets and Ministers of the Word, are called 1 Tim. 4.16 Saviours; it is because they are the instruments of God to publish the doctrine of salvation which is powerfull in mens hearts, not by any vertue of theirs, but onely by the operation of the Spirit of Christ. Lastly, it may be objected, that the Father and the holy Ghost are Saviours, and therefore not onely the Sonne. Ans. True it is, that in the worke of salvation all the three persons must be joyned together, and in no wise to be severed: the Father saveth, the Sonne saveth, the holy Ghost saveth: yet must D we distinguish them in the manner of saving: the Father saveth by the Sonne, the Sonne saveth by paying the ransome and price of our salvation; the holy Ghost saveth by a particular applying of the ransome unto men. Now therefore whereas the Sonne payes the price of our redemption, and not the Father or the holy Ghost, therefore in this speciall respect he is called in Scriptures, and intituled by the name of Iesus, and none but he.

By this which hath beene said, the Papists are faulty two waies. First, that they give too much to the name of Iesus: for they write in plaine termes, that the bare name it selfe being used hath great power & doth drive away divels, though the parties that use it be void of good affection: whereas indeed it hath no more vertue then other titles of God or Christ. Secondly, Thyrr. de daemon. thes. 567. 569.

they are faulty that they give too little to the thing signified. For Christ must either be our alone and whole Saviour, or no Saviour. Now they make him but halfe a Saviour, and they joyne others with him as partners in the work of salvation, when they teach, that with Christs merits must be joyned our workes of grace in the matter of justification: and with Christs satisfaction for the wrath of God, our satisfaction for the temporall punishment; and when they adde to Christs intercession, the intercession and patronage of Saints, especially of the Virgin Mary, whom they call the Queene of heaven, the Mother of mercy, withall requesting her, that by the authoritie of a mother, shee would command her Sonne. If this doctrine of theirs may stand, Christ cannot be the only Saviour of mankind, but every man in part shall be Iesus to himselfe.

Officium B. Mariæ reform. à Pio 5. Pont. 6.

But let us goe on yet further to search the speciall reason of the name, which is notably set downe by the Angel, Mat. 1.21. Thou shalt (saith he) call his name Iesus, for he shall save his people from their sins. In which words we may consider three points: I. Whom the Sonne of God shall save. II. By what? III. From what? For the first, hee shall save his people, that is, the elect of the Iewes and Gentiles; and therefore he is called the Saviour of his body. We must not here imagine, that Christ is a Saviour of all and every man, for if that were true, then Christ should make satisfaction to Gods justice for all and every mans sinnes: and Gods justice being fully satisfied, he could not in justice condemne any man: nay, all men should be blessed, because satisfaction for sinne, and the pardon of sinne depend one upon another inseparably. Againe, if Christ bee an effectuall Saviour of all and every particular man, why is any man condemned? It will be said, because they will not beleeve; belike then mans will must over-rule Gods will; whereas the common rule of Divines is, that the first cause ordereth the second.

Eph. 5.23.

Actus primæ causæ ordinatactum secundæ causæ.

The meanes of salvation by Christ are two; his merit, and his efficacy. His merit, in that by his obedience to the law and by his passion, hee made a satisfaction for our sins, freed us from death, and reconciled us unto God. Some may object, that the obedience and passion of Christ being long agoe ended, cannot be able to save us now: because that which hee did 1600. yeares agoe, may seeme to be vanished and come to nothing at this day. Answer. If Christs obedience be considered as an action, & his passion as a bare suffering, they are both ended long agoe: yet the value and price of them before God is everlasting: as in Adams fall the action of eating the forbidden fruit is ended, but the guilt of his transgression goes all over mankinde, and continues still even to this houre, & shall do to the end of the world, in those which shall be borne hereafter. The efficacie of Christ, is in that he gives his spirit to mortifie the corruption of our natures, that we may die unto sinne, and live unto righteousnesse, and have true comfort in terrours of conscience, and in the pangs of death.

The evils from which we are saved, are our owne sinnes, in that Christ freeth us from the guilt and, the punishment and fault of them all, when we beleeve.

Thus much for the meaning of this title Iesus. Now follow the uses which arise of it. First of all, whereas we are taught to make confession that the Son of God is Iesus, that is a Saviour: hence it must needs follow that we are lost in our selves. And indeed before we can truely acknowledge that Christ is our Saviour, this confession must needs goe before, that we are in truth, and therewithall doe feele our selves to be miserable sinners under the wrath of God, utterly lost in regard of our selves: for Christ came to save that which was lost, Mat. 18.11. And when he talked with the woman of Canaan, he checked her and said, he was not sent, but to the lost sheepe of the house of Israel, Mat. 15.24. Christ Iesus came to poure oyle into our wounds: Christ came to set them at liberty which are in prison: and to place them in freedome that are in bondage. Now a man cannot poure oyle into a wound before there be a wound or before it be opened, be we feele the smart of it. And how can we be set at liberty by Christ, except we feele our selves to be in bondage, under hell, death, and damnation? When the Disciples of Christ were upon the sea in a great tempest, they cryed, Master, save us, we perish. So no man can heartily say, I beleeve Iesus Christ to be my Saviour, before he feele, that in himselfe he is utterly lost and cast away, without his help. But after that wee perceive our selves to be in danger, and to be over-whelmed in the sea of the wrath of God, then we cry out with the disciples, Lord Iesus save us, we perish. Many Protestants in these daies hold Christ to bee their Saviour, but it is onely formally from the teeth outward and no further: for they were never touched with the sense of their spirituall misery, that they might say with Daniel, Shame and confusion belongeth unto us: and with the Publican, I am a sinner, Lord be merciful to me. And therfore the conclusion is this, that if we will have Christ to be our Saviour, we must first beleeve that in our selves we are utterly lost; and so must that place be understood where Christ saith, hee is not sent, but to the lost sheepe of the house of Israel; that is, to those which in their owne sense and feeling are lost in themselves.

Mat. 8. 25.

Dan. 9.7. Luke 18.13

Mat. 15.24.

Secondly, if Christ be a Saviour, then we must acknowledge him to be so. But how shal we doe this? I answer, Thus: A man is taken to be a skilfull Physitian by this, that many patients come unto him and seeke for helpe at his hands. And so should it be with Christ. But alas, the case is otherwise. Every man can talke of Christ, but few acknowledge him to be a Saviour, by seeking to him for their salvation, because they judge themselves righteous and feele not themſelves to ſtand in need of the helpe of Chriſt. Nay, which is more, If a man be known that can cure ſtrange diſeaſes, men will ſeeke to him by ſea and land, and ſell both goods and lands to get helpe at his hands. Even ſo, if men were perſwaded that Chriſt were a perfect Saviour, and that they were ſick and utterly unable to be ſaved without him, they would never reſt nor be quiet, but ſeeke unto him for his helpe, and cry with Da-

Mat.9.20. vid, Pſal. 35.3. O Lord, ſay unto my ſoule, that thou art my ſalvation. The woman that was diſeaſed with an iſſue of blood, came behind our Saviour Chriſt, and when ſhe had but touched him, ſhe was healed. In the ſame manner, if we ſhall ſeeke to come to Chriſt, and do but touch his precious body and blood by the hand of B faith, the iſſue and the bleeding wounds of our ſoules ſhall be dryed up. When a man that had Ioh.5.7. been ſicke eight and thirty yeares was come to the poole of Bethesda, hee was faine to lie there uncured; becauſe when the Angel troubled the water, evermore ſome ſtept before him: but if we will ſeeke to Chriſt for the ſalvation of our ſoules, no man ſhall prevent us, or ſtep before us. And if we finde our ſelves to be ſo laden with the burden of our ſinnes, that we cannot draw neere unto him, let us then do
Mar.2.4. as the palſie man did: he got foure men to carry him on their ſhoulders to the place where Chriſt was: and when they could not by reaſon of the preſſe of the people enter into the houſe they opened the roofe, and let him down in his C bed by cords to Chriſt, that he might be healed. And ſo let us uſe the help of ſuch as be godly, that by their inſtructions & conſolatiõs, they may as it were put their ſhoulders, and by their prayers, as with cords, bring us to Chriſt that we may receive eternall ſalvation, being otherwiſe dead in ſin & ſubject to damnation.

Laſtly, whereas Ioſeph and Mary gave this name not at their owne pleaſure, but at the appointment of God himſelfe; this miniſters a good inſtruction to all parents touching the naming of their children when they are baptized, that they are with care and deliberation to give convenient names unto them, which may put them in mind of duties either to God or men. This is worthy our obſervation, for D many care not how they name their children, yea, it is at this day, and ever hath been, that ſome give ſuch names to them, as that at the very rehearſing thereof, laughter enſueth. But this ought not to be ſo; for the name is given unto children at the time of their baptiſme in the preſence of God, of his Church, and angels, even then when they are to be entred into the Church of God, and that in the Name of the Father, the Son, and the holy Ghoſt: therefore though we doe not place religion in titles or names, yet nevertheleſſe, a wiſe and godly choice in this matter is to bee had that the names impoſed may be in ſtead of inſtructions and admonitions to the parties named: and for this cauſe in the old Teſtament, names A are given by the propheticall inſtinct, or according to the event of things which came to paſſe about the time of the birth of children, or they were borrowed frõ the holy anceſtors, to put the poſterity in mind to follow their ſteps

And thus much of the duties: Now follow the conſolations that Gods Church and peo- Luke 1.59. ple reape from this, that the Son of God is our Saviour. When as all mankind was included under ſinne and condemnation, then the Lord had mercy upon us, and gave unto man the covenant of grace, in which he promiſed that his owne Sonne ſhould be our redeemer. This is a great and unſpeakable comfort, as may appeare in that the Angels ſo greatly rejoyced herein when Chriſt was borne, Luk.2.10,11. Behold, ſay they, I bring you tidings of great joy that ſhall be to all people, that is, that unto you is borne in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Chriſt the Lord. Now if they rejoyce thus exceedingly at Chriſts birth, who was not their Saviour, becauſe they ſtood not in need to bee redeemed; then much more ought the Church of God to rejoyce herein, whom it doth principally concerne: and no marvell; for if we had wanted this bleſſed Saviour, it had been better to have bin a bruit beaſt or any other creature then a man: for the death of a beaſt is the end of his woe, but the death of a man without a Saviour is the beginning of endleſſe miſerie. Satan and his angels are fallen and have no Saviour: but when man was fallen, God of his mercy dealt not ſo with him, but gave his own Son to reſtore him to a better eſtate, whereas he might as juſtly have damned all men for the fall of our firſt parents, as he did the wicked angels for theirs; for God is not bound to any creature. Behold then a matter of unſpeakeable joy: let us therefore receive and embrace Chriſt our Saviour, flie to him for the pardon of all our ſins, and praiſe his name therefore.

Now we come to the ſecond Title of the Sonne of God, whereby he is tearmed Chriſt: which title is as it were the ſurname of the ſecond perſon, as ſome doe thinke: yet according to the opinion of ſome others, it is no name at all, but onely a meere appellation, as when in the like caſe a particular man is called a Duke, or a King. It is all one with Meſſiah in Hebrew wherewith the redeemer was named in the old Teſtament and both ſignifie anointed.

Among the Iewes before the comming of Chriſt, three eſtates or orders of men were anointed with oyle: Firſt of all, Kings, as Saul, David, and the reſt of the Kings of Iuda. Secondly, the prieſts that ſerved in the Tabernacle and Temple before the Lord, when they were ordained, and as it were, inſtalled into the prieſthood, were anointed with oyle, as firſt of all, Aaron and his ſonnes, but afterward the high Prieſts alone. Thirdly, Prophets were thus anointed, as Eliſha. Tertul. contra Praxeam. Dan.9.25.

Now this legall anointing was a type and figure of the anointing of Chriſt: which was not with bodily oyle, but by the ſpirit, and it was more excellent then all other annointings were. For David saith, he was annointed with the oyle of gladnesse above all his fellowes, signifying, that neither King, Priest nor Prophet was ever annointed in the same manner as he was. Psal.45.7.

was

Christs annointing is according to both his natures; for in what nature he is a Mediator, in the same he is annointed: but according to both his natures joyntly he is a mediator: the Godhead is no mediator without the manhood, nor the manhood without the godhead: and therefore his annointing extends it selfe both to his godhead and to his manhood.

Christs annointing hath two parts, both of them figured by the annointing of the Iewes. The first is his consecration whereby he was set apart to doe the office of a Mediatour betweene God and man: and therefore to bee a King, a Priest, a Prophet: a King, to gather and withall to governe his Church and people: a Priest to make satisfaction and intercession for the sinnes of the elect: a Prophet, to reveale and teach his people the will of God his Father. And though it be true that Christ is set apart to the worke of mediation, as he is a mediator, or as he is man, yet as he is God he doth designe and set himselfe apart to the same worke. For to designe the mediator is a common action of the three persons, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost; and yet considering the Father is first in order, and therefore hath the beginning of the action: for this cause he is said especially to designe, as when Saint Iohn saith, Him hath God the Father sealed. Iohn 6.17.

The second part of Christs annointing, is the powring out of the fulnesse of the spirit or grace into the manhood of Christ: and it was particularly figured by the holy oyle. For first, that oyle had no man but God alone to bee the author of it: so the most excellent and unspeakeable graces of the manhood of Christ have their beginning from the Godhead of Christ. Againe, though the same oyle was most precious, yet was it compounded of earthly substances, as mirrhe, calamus, and Cassia, and such like; to signifie, that the spirituall oyle of grace, whereof the manhood of Christ was as it were a vessell or storehouse, did not consist of the essentiall properties of the Godhead, as Eutiches and his followers in these dayes imagine, but in certaine created gifts and qualities placed in his humaine nature: otherwise we should not have any participation of them. Thirdly, the sweet savour of the holy oyle figured, that the riches of all graces with the effect thereof in the obedience of Christ, doth take away the noysome sent of our loathsome sins from the nostrils of God, and withall doth make our persons, and all our actions acceptable to him as a sweet perfume, as Paul saith, we are unto God the sweet savour of Christ, &c. And Christs death is for this cause termed a sacrifice of a sweet smelling savor. Isai.61.1. Exo.30.23, 24. 2 Cor 2.16.

And we must further understand, that these gifts of Christs manhood are not conferred in small scantling or measure; for Iohn saith, God giveth him the spirit not by measure; because the graces which are in Christ are farre more both in number and degree, then all men or Angels have or shall have: though the good Angels and the Saints of God in heaven are very excellent creatures stored with manifold graces and gifts of God. For this cause Christ is called the head of man: because he is every way the most principall and glorious man that ever was. Yet for all this are not the gifts of Christs manhood infinite any way; because it is a creature and finite in nature, and therefore not capable of that which is infinite. Iohn 3.34. 1 Cor.11.4.

By Christs annointing the people of God reape great benefit and comfort, because they are to be partakers thereof. For this cause the oyle wherwith he was annointed is called the oyle of gladnesse, because the sweet savour of it gladdeth the hearts of all his members, and brings the peace of God which passeth all understanding. The holy oyle powred upon Aarons head, came downe to his beard, and to the very skirts of his garments: and it signified, that the spirituall oyle of grace was first of all powred upon our head Christ Iesus, and from thence consequently derived to all his members, that by this meanes he might be not onely annointed himselfe: but also our annointer. Psal.45.7. Psal.133.2.

Now the benefits which we receive by his annointing are two; the first is, that all the elect when they are called to the profession of the Gospell of Christ, are in and by him set apart and made spirituall Kings, Priests, and Prophets, as Saint Iohn saith; He hath made us Kings and Priests unto his Father. And Saint Peter out of Ioel, I will powre (saith the Lord) my spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and daughters shall prophesie. Apoc.1.6. Act.2.17.

The second benefit is, that all the faithfull receive the same oyle, that is, the same spirit of God in some little and convenient measure, which he received above measure, as S. Iohn saith, The annointing which yee received of him dwelleth in you, and teacheth you all things: where by annointing is meant the holy Ghost. And hence it is, that men are called Christians of the name of Christ, that is, annointed with the same oyle wherewith Christ was annointed. And the holy oyle might not be given to a stranger, to signifie, that to have the spirit of Christ, and to be guided by it, is peculiar to them that are Christs. Now then let us all lay these things to our hearts, and extoll the unspeakeable goodnesse of God, that hath advanced us to the dignity of Kings, Priests, Prophets before him, and hath given his Spirit unto us, to enable us to be so indeed. 1 Ioh.2.27. Psal.105.15. Exod.30.33

Now follow the duties which are to bee learned hence. And first, whereas all Christians receive anointing from the holy One Christ Iesus, to become Prophets in a sort, we must doe our indeavours, that the Word of God may dwell plentifully in us, and for that 1 Ioh. 2.20. Dan.9.24.

cauſe we muſt ſearch the Scriptures, even as hunters ſeeke for the game, and as men ſeeke gold in the very mines of the earth. There is nothing more unbeſeeming a man, then groſſe ignorance a Chriſtian. Therefore the author of the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes reproves them, that whereas for the time they ought to have bin teachers, they had need againe to be taught the firſt principles of the Word of God. Heb.5.12.

Againe, that portion of knowledge which we have received of God, is further to be applyed to the benefit and good of others: that is the moſt precious baulme, that on our parts ſhould never be wanting to the heads of men. And here every man that is ſet over others muſt remember, within the compaſſe of his calling and charge, to inſtruct thoſe that bee under him, ſo farre forth as poſsibly hee can. Governours of families muſt teach their children, and ſervants, and their whole houſhold, the doctrine of true religion, that they may know the true God, and walke in all his wayes in doing righteouſneſſe and judgement. If houſholders would make conſcience of this their duty, and in ſome ſort and meaſure prepare their families againſt they come to the publike congregation, the Miniſters of the Goſpell with greater comfort and farre more eaſe ſhould performe their duty: and ſee farre more fruit of their miniſtery then now they doe. But whereas they neglect their duty, falſly perſwading themſelves, that it doth not belong to them at all to inſtruct others; it is the cauſe of ignorance both in townes and families, in maſters themſelves, in ſervants and children, and all. Laſtly, by this wee are admoniſhed to take all occaſions that poſſibly can bee offered, mutually to edifie each other in knowledge, ſaying among our ſelves (as it was foretold of theſe times) Come let us goe up to the mountaine of the Lord, to the houſe of the God of Iacob, and he will teach us his wayes, and we will walke in his paths: and withall, we ſhould confirme each other, as Chriſt ſaith to Peter, When thou art converted, confirme thy brethren; and be ready at all times to render an account of our faith and religion 'even before our enemies, when we are juſtly called ſo to doe. Pſal.141.5. Iſai.2.3. Luk.22.32.

Secondly, becauſe we are ſet apart in Chriſt, to become ſpirituall prieſts unto God, we muſt therefore offer ſpirituall ſacrifices acceptable unto him: and they be in number ſeven. The firſt, is an affiance whereby we reſt upon God, as David ſaith, Offer the ſacrifice of righteouſneſſe and truſt in the Lord. The ſecond, is wholly to ſubject our ſelves to the miniſtery of the Goſpel, that wee may bee changed and converted by it, as Paul ſaith, That hee miniſtreth the Goſpel to the Gentiles, that the offering up of them might be acceptable, being ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt. The third, is all manner of prayers and ſupplications made unto God. Let my prayer, ſaith David, be directed in thy ſight, as incenſe, & the liſting up of my hands as an evening ſacrifice. The fourth, is prayſing and thankſgiving unto God. Let us by him offer the ſacrifice of praiſe alwayes to God, that is, the fruit of the lips which confeſſe his name. And in the Revelation, the golden vials full of odours, are the prayers of the Saints. The fift, is the releefe of our poore brethren according to our ability, as Paul ſaith, I was even filled, after that I had received of Epaphroditus that which came from you, an odour that ſmelleth ſweet, a ſacrifice pleaſant and acceptable to God. The ſixt, is the deniall of our ſelves with a contrite and broken heart. The ſeventh, is to reſigne our ſelves, bodies and ſoules wholly to the ſervice of God: Set your ſelves (ſaith Paul) to God, as they that are alive from the dead: and your members as weapons of righteouſneſſe unto God. In which words he alludes to the manner of the old Teſtament; when a man offered any ſacrifice for himſelfe, hee brought the beaſt into the temple or tabernacle, and ſet it before the altar, in token that hee did reſigne it unto God: and ſo we for our parts muſt not give our bodies and ſoules to become the inſtruments of ſin and Satan, but we muſt have them alwayes in readineſſe, freely preſenting them unto God, that hee may have the whole diſpoſition of them according to his good pleaſure, to the honour and glory of his name. Againe, in the whole burnt-offering all was conſumed and turned to ſmoake, no man having benefit of it, to ſignifie, that wee muſt give our ſelves not in part, but wholly to the ſervice of God, even to death if need be. If this be ſo, miſerable is the practiſe of ſuch that give up their bodies and ſoules to live in licentious wantonneſſe, in the pleaſures of their beaſtly ſinnes, in idleneſſe. For they offer themſelves a ſacrifice, not to God, but to the divell. Heb.13.15. Rev.5.7. 5. Phil.4.28. 6. Pſal.51.17. 7. Rom.6.13.

Thirdly, conſidering wee are annointed to be ſpirituall kings even in this life, wee muſt walke worthy ſo great a calling. That this may be ſo; firſt of all ſuch as are governours ſet over others, muſt rule not according to their wils and pleaſures, but in the Lord: withall, doing homage to their head and King Chriſt Ieſus himſelfe. Secondly, we muſt every one of us rule and beare ſway even as Kings over our owne thoughts, wils, affections, over-maſtering them as much as wee poſsibly can by Gods Word and Spirit: withall, maintaining and proclaiming continuall warre againſt our corrupt natures, the divell and the world. And truely hee which can beare rule over his owne heart, is a right King indeed: and having received ſome meaſure of grace to reigne over himſelfe in this life, hee ſhall reigne for ever with Chriſt in the life to come. As for ſuch as are caried away with the ſwing of their corruptions, having blindnes and ignorance to reigne in their mindes, rebellion in their wils and affections, looſeneſſe in their whole lives, they may carry the outward forme and ſhew of Chriſtians as long as they will, but indeed they are no ſpirituall Kings, but very boudmen: the ſtrong man Satan keeps as yet the hold of their hearts, and as Lord and King holds up his Scepter there. Laſtly, ſeeing Chriſt is anointed with moſt precious balme that ever was, & that for our ſakes, he muſt be ſweet & ſavory unto us, and all other things muſt be as unſavory droſſe & dung in regard of him. We muſt in this caſe endevour to ſay as the Spouſe of Chriſt doth: Cant. 1. Becauſe of the ſavour of thy good oyntments, thy name is an ointment powred out: therefore the virgins love thee. Iſa. 11. 3. O that we could ſavour in the feare of God, that we might feele how all his garments ſmell of myrrhe, aloes, and Caſſia, comming forth of the Ivorie pallaces unto us. Pſal. 46. 8.

And becauſe the holy oyntment of Chriſt is powred forth upon all his members to make them ſavory and ſweet in the preſence of God, let us make conſcience of all manner of ſinne, leſt by the poyſon and ſtinke thereof we infect not onely our ſelves, but all the creatures of God which we uſe, yea heaven and earth it ſelfe. It ſtands not with equity, that after we have beene embalmed and ſweetned by the precious merits of Chriſt, wee ſhould make our ſelves two-footed ſwine, to returne to the mire of our old ſinnes.

The coupling and combining of theſe two former titles together, containes the principall queſtion of the whole Bible, which is, whether Ieſus the Son of Mary be Chriſt or no: as S. Iohn ſaith, Theſe things are written that yee might beleeve, that Ieſus is the Chriſt the Son of God, and that in beleeving yee might have life everlaſting. Ioh. 20. 31. Act. 18. 5. This concluſion was denied by the Iewes, but avouched and confirmed both by Chriſt and by his Apoſtles: and their principall argument was framed thus. Hee which hath the true notes of Chriſt, is the Meſſias or Chriſt indeed: but Ieſus the Sonne of Mary hath the true notes of Chriſt: therefore Ieſus is Chriſt. The propoſition is opened at large in the propheſies of the old Teſtament: the aſſumption is confirmed in the writings of the new Teſtament: and the principall reaſons of the confirmation are touched in the Articles which concerne the ſecond perſon. The concluſion followes, and it is ſet downe, as I have ſaid, in the knitting together of the titles: Ieſus and Chriſt.

Thus much of the ſecond title, now followes the third, his onely Sonne: that is, the onely Sonne of the firſt Perſon the Father. In this title we muſt conſider two things: the firſt, that he is the Sonne of God: the ſecond, that hee is the onely Son of God. Touching the firſt, Chriſt is called the Sonne of God, becauſe hee was begotten of the Father. Now for the opening of this eternall generation, wee muſt conſider three points: the thing begotten, the manner of begetting, and the time. For the thing it ſelfe, it is Chriſt; who muſt be conſidered two wayes, as he is a Sonne, and as hee is God. As he is a ſonne, he is not of himſelfe; but the ſonne of the father, begotten of him: nevertheleſſe as he is God, hee is of himſelfe: neither begotten, or proceeding; for the eſſence or godhead of the Father is of it ſelfe without all beginning, but the godhead of the ſonne is one and the ſame with the godhead of the Father: becauſe by what godhead the Father is God, by the ſame and no other the Sonne is God: therefore the Sonne, as hee is God, he is God of himſelfe without beginning even as the Father. Whereupon it followes, that the Sonne is begotten of the Father as he is a Sonne, but not as he is God.

Non dorſum, tamen dorſum.

The manner of this generation is this. The Sonne is begotten of the ſubſtance of the Father not by any fluxe, as when water is derived from the head of the Spring to the chanel; nor by deciſion, as when a thing is cut in pieces: nor by propagation, as when a grift is tranſplanted into a new ſtocke: but by an unſpeakable communication of the whole eſſence or godhead from the Father to the Sonne: in receiving whereof the Sonne doth no more diminiſh the majeſtie or godhead of the Father, then the light of one candle doth the light of the other from which it is taken. Whereupon the Councell of Nice hath ſaid well, that the ſonne is of the father as light of light, not proceeding but begotten.

The time of this generation hath neither beginning, middle, or end: and therefore it is eternall before all worlds: and it is a thing to be wondered at, that the father begetting and the ſonne begotten are coeternall, and therefore equall in time. Wiſedome in the Proverbes (which with one conſent of all divines is ſaid to be Chriſt) affirmeth that ſhe was before the world was created, that is, from eternity: for before the world was made there was nothing but eternity. Prov. 8. 24. But it may be alleadged to the contrary, that the ſaying of the Father, This day have I begotten thee, is expounded by Paul of the time of Chriſts Reſurrection. Pſal. 2. 7. Act. 13. 30, 33. Anſw. We muſt diſtinguiſh betweene generation it ſelfe, and the manifeſtation of it: and of the ſecond muſt the place bee underſtood, which was indeede accompliſhed at the time of Chriſts reſurrection in which he was mightily declared to be the Sonne of God; Rom. 1. 4. and though this be ſo, yet the generation it ſelfe may be eternall. If any man alleadge further, that the perſon which begetteth muſt needes goe before the perſon begotten, the anſwer is, that there is a double priority: one of order, the other of time: now in the generation of creatures there is priority both of order and time: but in the generation of the ſecond perſon in Trinity there is priority of order alone: the father being firſt, the ſonne ſecond, without priority of time: becauſe they both in that reſpect are equall, and neither is before or after other: becauſe the beeing or ſubſiſting of the perſons is not meaſured by time.

Hence it followeth neceſſarily, that Ieſus Chriſt is true God: and the whole tenour of the Scriptures confirme it ſufficiently. I. He is made equal to God the Father, who being in the forme of God, thought it no robbery to be equall with God: againe, All things that the father hath Phil. 2. 6. Ioh. 16. 15. Num. 14. 26. 27.

1 Ioh. 5. 20. name called God; Ieſus Chriſt is very God and life eternall. III. The properties of the Godhead are aſcribed unto him. He is eternall, becauſe he was then when there was no creature.
Ioh. 1. 1. and 8. 58. Mat. 18. 20. and 26. In the beginning was the Word: and before Abraham was, I am. He is omnipreſent, where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the middeſt amongſt them. Laſtly, he is Ioel 5. 17. omnipotent, Whatſoever things the Father doth, the ſame doth the Sonne alſo. IV. The workes of creation and preſervation are as wel aſcribed to the Son as the Father. By him the father made the world; and he beareth up all things by his mighty power; and miracles, which are workes either above or againſt the order of nature peculiar to God, were done by Chriſt. V. Divine worſhip is given to him: for he is adored, invocated, and beleeved in, as God the Father. To him is given a name at which every knee doth bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth.

As for the reaſons which bee alleadged to the contrary, they are of no moment. I. Object. The Word of God cannot bee God: the Sonne is the Word of the Father: therefore he is not God. An. The Word is taken two waies: Firſt, for a ſounding word, ſtanding of letters and ſyllables uttered either by God or by the creatures: now on this manner Chriſt is not the word of God. Secondly, there is a ſubſtantiall word, which is of the ſubſtance of him whoſe word it is. And thus Chriſt is the word of God the Father. And he is ſo tearmed. I. In reſpect of the Father: for as reaſon and ſpeech hath its beginning from the minde, without any paſſion in the mind, ſo hath hee beginning from the Father. And as the ſpeech is in the mind, and the mind in the ſpeech, ſo the Father is in the Sonne, and the Sonne in the Father. II.
Phil. 2. 10. Ioh. 1. 1. Heb. 1. 3. 2 Cor. 13. 3. Iohn 17. In reſpect of all creatures. The Father doth all things by the Son: by whoſe powerfull word the world was made, is now preſerved, & ſhal be aboliſhed. III. In reſpect of the Church. For the Father by him ſpeakes unto us both in the outward miniſtery of the word, and by the inward operation of the ſpirit: and againe, we by him ſpeake to the Father.

II. It may be objected thus: God hath no beginning from any other; Chriſt hath beginning from the Father: therefore hee is not God. Anſw. Chriſt muſt be conſidered both in regard of his Godhead, and in regard of his perſon: in regard of his Godhead, he came not of any but is of himſelfe, as well as the Father is: yet in regard of his perſon hee is from the Mat. 28. 19. Principium ordinis & originis. Father, who is a beginning to the reſt of the perſons, both in reſpect of order (for the Scripture ſaith not the holy Ghoſt, the Sonne, the Father: but the Father, the Sonne, the holy Ghoſt) as alſo in reſpect of the communication of the Godhead. And where it is ſaid that God is of himſelfe: if the name of God be taken for the Godhead it ſelfe abſolutely conſidered, it is true: but if it be taken for any particular perſon in the Godhead, it is falſe. III. Object. None is greater then God: but the Father is greater then Chriſt, for ſo he ſaith, The Father is greater then I. Anſ. Chriſt there Ioh. 14. 28 ſpeakes of himſelfe as he was a man abaſed in the forme of a ſervant: in which reſpect he is leſſe then the father, who was never incarnate and abaſed in our nature. And though Chriſt in reſpect of his nature aſſumed, be inferiour to the Father, yet doth it not hinder but that he may be equall to him, as he is the ſecond perſon in Trinity, or as he is God by one and the ſame Godhead with the Father. IV. Object. He that is made of God, this or that, is not God: but Chriſt is made of God, as Paul ſaith, Chriſt is made unto us wiſdome, righteouſnes, &c. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Anſw. Chriſt is ſaid to be made not becauſe there was any beginning of his Godhead, or any change or alteration in his perſon: but becauſe in the eternall counſell of the Father, he was ſet apart before all times to execute the office of a Mediatour, and was withall in time called, and as it were conſecrated and ordained thereunto in his baptiſme: hee is made therefore in reſpect of his office, but not in reſpect of his perſon, or nature. V. Object. God hath no head, Chriſt hath an head, as Paul ſaith; God is Chriſts head. Anſw. God, that is, the Father, is head of Chriſt, not as he is God ſimply, but as he is God incarnate, or made manifeſt in the fleſh, and in reſpect of the office to which he willingly abaſed himſelfe. VI. Object. He which gives up his kingdome is not God, Chriſt gives up his kingdome. Then, ſaith Paul, ſhall be the end, when he hath delivered up his kingdome to God even the Father. Anſ. Chriſt 1 Cor. 15. 24. is king two waies, as he is God, as he is Mediatour: as he is God, he reignes eternally with the Father, and the holy Ghoſt: but as he is Mediatour, in the end of the world, when all the company of the elect are gathered, his kingdome ſhall ceaſe, not ſimply, but in reſpect of the outward manner of adminiſtration: for the execution of civill and Eccleſiaſticall functions ſhall ceaſe. And whereas in the ſame place, it is ſaid that Chriſt ſhall be ſubject unto verſe 28. God eternally after the end, it muſt be underſtood partly in regard of the aſſumed manhood, partly in reſpect of his myſticall body the Church moſt neerely joyned unto him in heaven. VII. Object. The firſt-borne of every creature, and of many brethren, is a creature, and Rom. 8. 29. Col. 1. 15. not God: but Chriſt is the firſt-borne of every creature, and of many brethren. Anſw. Hee is called the firſt-borne by reſemblance or alluſion to the firſt born in the old Teſtament: for as Gen. 49. 3. Deut. 21. 16. they were principall heires, having double portions allowed them; and the chiefe or governours of the family: ſo Chriſt is made heire of the world; and the head of Gods family which is his Church, elected and adopted in him him. And againe he is called the first borne of every creature, because he was begotten of the substance of his Father before any creature was made, and therefore it is not here said that he was first created, but first begotten.

By the reasons which have beene alleadged, as also by the sufficiency of the contrary arguments, it is more then manifest against all heretiks, that Christ is very God. Yet to stop the mouthes of all Atheists, and to satisfie all wavering and doubting mindes, I will adde one reason further. The Gospell of Saint Iohn was cheifely penned for this end, to prove the Deity of Christ: and among other arguments alleadged, this is one, that Christ gave a resolute and a constant testimony of himselfe, that he was the Sonne of God, and very God. Now if any man shall say, that sundry persons since the beginning of the world have taken upon them and that falsely, to be Gods: I answer, that never any creature tooke this Title and honour upon him to bee called God, but the fearefull judgements of God were upon him for it. In the estate of mans innocency, the divell told our first parents, that by eating the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evill: they should be as gods knowing good and evill: now, they beleeved him, and affected divine honour: but what came of it? surely Adam with all his posterity is shut up for this very cause under eternall damnation. Herod likewise arayed in royall apparell, and sitting on the judgement seate, made an oration to the men of Tyre & Sidon, who gave a showt, saying, The voyce of God, and not of man. Now because he tooke the glory of God to himselfe, and did not returne it to him to whom it was due, immediately the Angell of the Lord smote him. And so, if Christ had beene but a meere man, and not very God, as he avouched, undoubtedly the hand of God would have beene upon him likewise for his confusion: but when he suffered for us, and bare the punishment due for our sins, he most triumphed. And the judgements of God were upon Herod, Pontius Pilate, Caiaphas, and upon all those that were enemies to him, and to his Church afterward, and that partly in life, partly in death. Wherefore considering God cannot abide that his glory should be given to any creature, and seeing for that cause he takes revenge on all those that exalt themselves to be gods, it remaines that the testimony which Christ gave of himselfe that he was God, is unfallibly true, and without all question to be beleeved of us. And to conclude, I would have all the divels in hell, with the cursed orders of Lucians, Porphyrians, and Atheists whatsoever to answer this one point, how it could come to passe, that Christ by publishing the doctrine of the Gospell, that is as contrary to mans reason, will, and affection, as water to fire, should winne almost the whole world to become his disciples, and to give their lives for him, unlesse hee were God indeed, as he professed himselfe to bee?

Act. 12. 22, 23.

There be sundry speciall reasons wherefore it was necessary that Christ should bee God. I. There is none which can be a Saviour of body and soule but God. I even I am the Lord, and besides mee there is no Saviour. And, I am the Lord thy God from the land of Egypt, and thou shalt know no God but me: for there is no Saviour beside me. II. There must be a proportion betweene the sinne of man and the punishment of sinne: now the sinne of man in respect of the offence of the majesty of God is infinite, in that he is infinitely displeased with man for the breach of his law: therfore the punishment of sin must be infinite: and hence it followeth, that he which suffereth the punishment being man, must withall be God, that the manhood by the power of the Godhead may be supported, that in suffering it may vanquish death, and make a sufficient satisfaction. III. Hee that must be a Saviour, must be able first to deliver men from the bondage of their spirituall enemies, namely, sinne and Satan: secondly, to restore the Image of God, lost by the fall of Adam, and to conferre righteousnesse and life everlasting; thirdly, to defend them from hell, death, damnation, the flesh, the divell, the world: fourthly, to give them full redemption from all their miseries both in body and soule, and to place them in eternall happinesse; all which none can doe, but he which is very God. IV. It was the pleasure of God to shew his incomprehensible goodnesse in this, that his grace should not onely be equall to our sin, but also by many degrees goe beyond it. And therefore the first Adam being but a meer man the second Adam must be both God and man: that as the second was more excellent then the first, so our comfort might be greater in our redemption by the second, then our misery and discomfort was by the fall of the first.

Isa. 43. 11. Ose. 13. 4.

Hitherto we have shewed, that Christ is the Sonne of God: now let us come to the second point, namely, that he is the onely Sonne of God. And he is so tearmed, because he is the Sonne of the Father, in a speciall manner, so as nothing can be the Son of God as he is. Angels indeed are tearmed the sonnes of God, but that is onely in respect of their creation; and all that beleeve in Christ are Sonnes of God by adoption, being received into the family of God, which is his Church, by the merite of Christ, whereas by nature they were the children of wrath. Christ also as he is man (I say not his manhood which is a nature and no person) is the Sonne of God by the grace of personall union, and not by nature or adoption. Lastly, Christ as he is the second person in Trinity, the eternall word of the Father coeternall and consubstantiall with him, is also the sonne of God. But how? neither by creation, nor adoption, nor by the vertue of personall union, but by nature; as he was begotten of the very substance of the Father before all worlds: and therefore he is called the proper

Iohn 1.14. Rom.8.32. and onely begotten Sonne of God. It may be objected on this manner: if the Father beget the Sonne, he doth it either willingly, or against his will; if willingly, then the ſon is begotten by the free-will of the Father, and no ſonne by nature. Anſ. The Father did communicate to the Son his whole Godhead willingly without conſtraint, yet not by his will, and therefore he is the Son of the Father by nature, not by will. It may be further ſaid, that if Chriſt bee the Sonne of God by nature, as he is the eſſentiall Word of the Father, and by perſonall union as he is man, then he is not one but two ſonnes. Anſ. As he is but one perſon, ſo is he but one ſonne: yet not in one, but in two reſpects: two reſpects make not two things, whereas one and the ſame thing not altered, but ſtill remaining one, may admit ſundry reſpects.

Thus much of the meaning of the third title: now follow the comforts which may be gathered hence. Whereas Chriſt Ieſus is the Son of God, it ſerves as a meanes to make miſerable and wretched ſinners, that are by nature the children of wrath and damnation, to Iohn 1.12. be the ſonnes of God by adoption: as S. Iohn teſtifieth. Now what a benefit this is to be the Child of God, no tongue can expreſſe. Chriſt Matth.5.7. ſaith, Bleſſed are the peace-makers: but why are they bleſſed? for (ſaith he) they ſhall be called the ſonnes of God. Whereby he teſtifieth, that the right of adoption is a moſt excellent priviledge; and not without cauſe. For he which is the Child of God, is ſpiritually allyed to Chriſt and to all the Saints and Servants of God, both in heaven and earth, having his owne Redeemer for his elder brother, and all his members as his brethren and ſiſters; yea, if we be Gods Rom.8.17. adopted children, wee are alſo heires, even heires of God, and heires annexed with Chriſt. Well, how great ſoever this prerogative is, yet few there be that rightly weigh it, and conſider of it. Children of Noble men and Princes heires are had in account and reputation of all men; they are the very ſpeech and wonder of the world. But it is a matter of no account to be the Sonne of God, and fellow-heire with Chriſt. The deareſt ſervants of God have bin eſteemed but as the off-ſcouring of the world. And no marvell, for they which are after the fleſh, ſavour the things of the fleſh. Few men have their underſtandings inlightened to diſcerne of ſuch ſpirituall things as theſe are, and therefore they are little or nothing regarded. A blind man never ſeeing the Sunne, is not brought to wonder at it: and earthly minded men neither ſeeing nor feeling what an excellent thing it is to be the Child of God, cannot be brought to ſeeke after it. But let all ſuch as feare God, enter into a ſerious conſideration of the unſpeakeable goodneſſe of God, conforting themſelves in this, that God the Father hath vouchſafed by his owne Sonne to make them, of the vaſſals of Satan, to bee his owne deare children.

Now follow the duties which are two: firſt we beleeve that Ieſus Chriſt who was to bee the Saviour of mankind, muſt needs be God: what is the reaſon hereof? ſurely becauſe no creature, no not all the creatures in heaven and earth were able to ſave one man; ſo vile, wretched, and miſerable is our eſtate by Adams fall. And therefore the Son of God himſelfe pittied our eſtate, and being King of heaven and earth, was faine to come from heaven, and lay downe his crowne and become a ſervant, and taking upon him our nature, was alſo faine to take upon him our caſe and condition, and ſuffer death for our ſins, which otherwiſe every one of us ſhould have ſuffered both in body and ſoule world without end. To make this more plaine, let us ſuppoſe ſome one that hath committed an offence againſt a Prince; and the treſpaſſe to be ſo grievous, that no man can appeaſe the Kings wrath, ſave onely the Kings onely ſon; and which is more, the Kings ſonne himſelfe cannot releaſe him, unleſſe hee ſuffer the puniſhment for him in his owne perſon, which is due unto the malefactor. Now what is to be thought of this mans eſtate? ſurely all men will ſay, that he is in a moſt miſerable taking, and that his treſpaſſe is notorious, and ſo it is with every one of us by nature, whatſoever we are. No man could ſave our ſoules, no not all the Angels of heaven, unles the King of heaven and earth, the onely Son of God, had come downe from heaven and ſuffered for us, bearing our puniſhment. Now the conſideration of this muſt humble us, and make us to caſt downe our ſelves under the hand of God, for our ſins, and pray continually, that the Lord would ſend ſome Moſes or other, which might ſmite the rockes of our hearts, that ſome teares of ſorrow and repentance might guſh out for this our woefull miſery.

Secondly, whereas God the Father of Chriſt gave his onely Son to be our Saviour, as wee muſt be thankful to God for all things, ſo eſpecially for this great and unſpeakeable benefit. Common bleſſings of God, as meate, drinke, health, wealth, and liberty, muſt at all times move us to be thankefull, but this that Chriſt Ieſus the onely Sonne of God, redeemed us being utterly loſt, this I ſay, muſt be the maine point of our thankefulneſſe; but alas, mens hearts are ſo frozen in the dregs of their ſinnes, that this duty comes little in practiſe now adayes. When our Saviour Chriſt cleanſed ten lepers, there was but one of them that returned to give him thankes: and this is as true in the leproſie of the ſoule, for though ſalvation by Chriſt bee offered unto us daily by Gods Miniſters, yet not one of ten, nay ſcarce one of a thouſand gives praiſe & thanks to God for it, becauſe men take no delight in things which concerne the Kingdome of heaven, they thinke not that they have need of ſalvation, neither doe they feele any want of a Saviour. But we for our parts muſt learne to ſay with David, Pſal.116.12. What ſhall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits? yea we are to practiſe that which Salomon ſaith,

Prov.23.26. saith, My Son give me thy heart: for we should give unto God both body and soule in token of our thankfulnesse for this wonderfull blessing, that he hath given his onely Sonne to bee our Saviour; and we are to hold this for truth, that they which are not thankfull for it, let them say what they will, they have no soundnesse of grace or power of religion at the heart.

And thus much of the third title. The fourth and last title, is in these words, Our Lord. Christ Iesus the onely Sonne of God is our Lord, three wayes: first, by creation, in that he made us of nothing when wee were not. Secondly, he is our Lord in the right of redemption. In former times the custome hath beene, when one is taken prisoner in the field, he that payes his ransome shall become alwayes after his Lord: so Christ when we were bondslaves under hell, death, and condemnation, payed the ransome of our redemption, and freed us from the bondage of sin and Satan, and therefore in that respect he is our Lord. Thirdly, he is the head of the Church (as the husband is the wives head) to rule and governe the same by his Word and Spirit. And therefore in that respect also Christ is our Lord.

And thus much for the meaning. Now follow the duties: and first of all, if Christ be our Soveraigne Lord, we must performe absolute obedience unto him, that is, whatsoever hee commands us, that must we doe. And I say, absolute obedience, because Magistrates, Masters, Rulers, and Fathers may command, and must be obeyed, yet not simply, but so far forth as that which they command doth agree with the Word and Commandement of God: but Christs Will and Word is righteousnesse it selfe, and therefore it is a rule and direction of all our actions whatsoever: and for this cause he must be absolutely obeyed. Thus he requires the obedience of the morall law: but why? because he is the Lord our God. And in Malachy he saith, If I be your Lord, where is my feare? And againe, wee must resigne both body and soule, heart, mind, will, affections, and the course of our whole lives to bee ruled by the Will of Christ. He is Lord not onely of the body, but of the spirit and soule of man: he must therefore have homage of both. As we adore him by the knee of the body, so must the thoughts and the affections of our hearts have their knees also to worship him, and to shew their subjection to his Commandements. As for such as doe hold him for their Lord in Word, but in the meane season will not indeavour to shew their loyalty in all manner of obedience, they are indeed no better then starke rebels. Secondly, when by the hand of Christ strange judgements shall come to passe, as it is usuall in all places continually; wee must stay our selves without murmuring or finding fault because he is an absolute Lord over all his creatures; all things are in his hands, and he may doe with his owne whatsoever he will; and therefore wee must rather feare and tremble

Exod.20.2. Mal.1.6.

A whensoever wee see or heare of them: so David saith, I was dumbe and opened not my mouth, because thou didst it. And againe, My flesh trembles for feare of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgements. Thirdly, before we use any of Gods creatures or ordinances, we must sanctifie them by the direction of his Word and by prayer: the reason is this, because he is Lord over all, and therefore from his Word we must fetch direction to teach us, whether we may use them or not, and when and how they are to be used: and secondly, we must pray to him that he would give us liberty and grace to use them aright in a holy manner. Also wee are so to use the creatures and ordinances of God, as being alwayes ready to give an account of our

B doings at the day of judgment: for we use that which is the Lords, not our owne; we are but stewards over them, and we must come to a reckoning for the stewardship. Hast thou learning? then imploy it to the glory of God, and the good of the Church: boast not of it as though it were thine owne. Hast thou any other gift or blessing of God, be it wisedome, strength, riches, honor, favor, or whatsoever? then looke thou use it so, as thou maist be alwayes ready to make a good account thereof unto Christ: lastly, every one must in such manner lead his life in this world, that at the day of death, he may with cheerefulnesse surrender and give up his soule into the hands of his

C Lord, and say with Steven, Lord Iesus receive my soule. For consider this with thy selfe, that thy soule is none of thine owne, but his who hath bought it with a price, and therefore thou must so order and keep it as that thou maist in good manner restore it into the hands of God at the end of thy life. If a man should borrow a thing of his neighbour, and afterward hurt it, and make a spoile of it, he would be ashamed to bring it againe to the owner in that manner, and if he doe, the owner himselfe will not receive it. Vngodly men in this life doe so staine their soules with sinne, that they can never bee able willingly to give them up into the hands of God at the day of death: and if they would, yet God accepts them not, but casts them quite

D away. We must therefore labour so to live in the world, that with a joyfull heart at the day of death, we may commend our soules into the hands of our Lord Christ Iesus, who gave them unto us. This is a hard thing to be done, and he that will do it truly, must first be assured of the pardon of his owne sins, which a man can never have without true and unfained faith and repentance: wherefore while we have time, let us purge and cleanse our soules and bodies, that they may come home againe to God in good plight. And here all governours must be put in mind that they have an higher Lord that they may not oppresse or deale hardly with their inferiors. This is Pauls reason. Ephes. 6.9. Ye masters, saith he, doe the same things unto your servants, putting away threatning: and know that even your master is also in heaven, neither is there respect of persons with him. Inferiours againe must remember to submit themselves to the authority of their governours, especially of Magistrates. For they are set over us by our soveraigne Lord and King Christ Iesus: as Paul saith, Rom. 13.1. Let every soule be subject to the higher powers: for there is no power but of God, and the powers that be, are ordained of God. And again, Eph. 6.5. Servants be obedient to your masters according to the flesh, with feare & trembling, in singlenesse of your hearts, as unto Christ.

The comfort which Gods Church may reape hence, is very great: for if Christ be the Lord of lords, and our Lord especially whom he hath created and redeemed, we need not to feare what the divell or wicked men can doe unto us. If Christ be on our side, who can be against us? we need not feare them that can destroy the body and doe no more; but we must cast our feare on him that is Lord of body & soule, & can cast both to hel. Mat. 10.28.

Thus much of the fourth title. Now follows Christs Incarnation, in these words, Conceived by the holy Ghost, borne of the Virgin Mary. And they containe in them one of the most principall points of the doctrine of godlinesse, as Paul saith, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Without controversie great is the mystery of godlinesse, which is, God is made manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, &c. And that wee may proceed in order in handling them, I will first speake of the Incarnation generally, and then after come to the parts thereof. In generall we are to propound three questions, the answering whereof will be very needfull to the better understanding of the doctrine following.

The first question is, Who was incarnate, or, made man? Answ. The second person in Trinity, the Sonne of God alone, as it is set downe in this first Article according to the Scripture. S. Iohn saith, Ioh. 1.14. The Word was made flesh: and the Angel saith, Luk. 1.35. The holy One which shall be borne of thee, shall be called the Sonne of the most high. And Paul saith, Rom. 1.3. That Christ Iesus our Lord was made of the seed of Abraham according to the flesh. And there be sundry reasons, why the second person should rather be incarnate then any other. I. By whom the Father created all things, and man especially; by Him, man being falne is to be redeemed, and as I may say re-created: now man was at the first created of the Father by the Sonne: and therefore to bee redeemed by him. II. It was most convenient, that that which is the essentiall Image of the Father, should take mans nature that he might restore the image of God, lost and defaced in man; but the second person is the essentiall image of the Father, and therefore he alone must take mans nature. III. It was requisite that that person which was by nature the Sonne of God, should be made the son of men, that we which are the sonnes of man, yea the sonnes of wrath, should againe by grace be made the sons of God: now the second person alone is the Sonne of God by nature, not the Father, nor the holy Ghost.

Heb. 1.3. Col. 1.15.

As for the Father, he could not be incarnate. For to take flesh is to be sent of an other, but the Father cannot be sent of any person, because he is from none. Againe, if the Father were incarnate, hee should be Father to him which is by nature God, and the Sonne of a creature, namely the Virgin Mary, which things cannot well stand.

And the holy Ghost could not be incarnate: for then there should bee more Sonnes then one in the Trinity, namely, the second person the Sonne of the Father, and the third person the holy Ghost, the Sonne of the Virgin Mary.

It may be objected to the contrary on this manner; The whole divine essence is incarnate, every person in Trinity is the whole divine essence, therefore every person is incarnate. Ans. The whole Godhead indeed is incarnate, yet not as it is absolutely considered, but so farre forth as it is restrained and limited to the person of the Sonne; and to speake properly, the Godhead it selfe is not incarnate, but the very person of the Sonne subsisting in the Godhead. And though all the persons bee one and the same essence, yet doe they really differ each from other in regard of the peculiar manner of subsisting: and therefore mans nature may be assumed of the second person, and be not assumed either of the Father or of the holy Ghost; as in the like case, the soule of man is wholly in the head and wholly in the feete, yea wholly in every part: and yet the soule cannot be said to use reason in the feete or in any other part, but onely in the head.

Againe, it may be alleadged, that the incarnation being an outward action of God to the creature is not proper to the Son. For the rule is, that all outward actions of God are common to all the persons in Trinity equally. Ans. [a] The incarnation stands of two actions, the first, is the framing and creating of that manhood which was to be assumed by the Sonne, or Word of the Father: and this action is common to all the three persons equally: the second, is the limiting or the receiving of it into the unity of any person, and in respect of this action, the worke of incarnation is peculiar to the Sonne. To this purpose Augustine speaks, That creature (saith he) which the Virgin conceived and brought forth, though it appertaine to the person of the Son alone, yet was it made by the whole Trinity: as when three men weave one and the same Garment, and the second onely weares it.

Augustin. in Ench. ad Lau. c. 38.

The second question is, What manner of man the Sonne of God was made? Answ. He was made a proper or particular man, and a perfect or a very man. I say that he was a particular man, to shew that he tooke not unto him the generall forme or idea of mans nature conceived onely in mind, nor the common nature of man as it is existing in every man: but the whole nature of man, that is, both a body and a reasonable soule, existing in one [b] particular subject. I say further that he was and is a true and perfect man, being in every thing that concernes mans nature, like to Adam, Abraham, David, and all other men, saving onely in sinne. For first of all, he had the substance of a true body, and of a reasonable soule: Secondly, the properties of body and soule: in the body, length, breadth, thicknesse, circumscription, &c. in the soule, the faculties of understanding, both simple and compound: will, & affections, as love, hatred, desire, joy, feare, &c. the powers also of hearing, feeling, seeing, smelling, tasting, mooving, growing, eating, digesting, sleeping, &c. Thirdly, hee tooke unto him the infirmities of mans nature, which are certaine naturall effects or passions of body or minde, as to bee hungry, thirsty, wearie, sadde and sorrowfull, (c) ignorant of some things, angry, to increase in stature, and wisedom, and knowledge, &c. yet this which I say must be understood with two caveats. The first is, that infirmities be either certaine unblameable passions, or else such defects as are sinnes in themselves: now Christ taketh the first onely, and not the second. Secondly, infirmities be either generall, or personall; generall, which appertaine to the whole nature of man, and are to be found in every man that commeth of Adam: as to bee borne unlearned, and subject to naturall affections, as sorrow, anger, &c. Personall, are such as appertain to some particular men, and not to all, and arise of some private causes and particular judgements of God, as to be borne a foole, to be sicke of an ague, consumption, dropsie, plurisie, and such like diseases. Now, the first sort be in Christ, & not the second: for as he tooke not the person of any man, but onely mans nature, so was it sufficient for him to take unto him the infirmities of mans nature, though hee tooke not the private infirmities of any mans person. And the reason why Christ would put on, not onely the substance and faculties of a true man, but also his infirmities, was; that he might shew himselfe to be very man indeed, also that he might suffer for us both in body and soule, and that hee might give us an example of patience in bearing all manner of evill for Gods glory, and the good of our neighbour.

Now, the things which may be alleadged to the contrary for the infringing of the truth of Christs manhood, are of no moment. As first, because Christ appeared in the forme of a man in the Old Testament, beeing no man: therfore he did so at his comming in the New Testament: but the reason is not like. For Christ in the Old Testament, Gen. 18. 9, 13. as the Angel of his Father in some speciall affairs, tooke unto him the body of a man for some space of time; but hee did not receive it into the unity of his person, but laid it down when the businesse which hee enterprised with men was ended. Now in the fulnesse of time hee came from heaven as the Angel of the Covenant, and for that cause he was to unite into his owne person the nature of man, which thing was never done before. And when as Paul saith, Rom. 8. 3. that Christ came in the similitude of sinfull flesh, his meaning is not to signifie, that he was a man only in resemblance and shew; but to testifie, that being a true man which was indeed void of sinne, he was content to abase himselfe to that condition, in which he became like to a miserable sinner in bearing the punishment for our sinne: For Paul doth not say that he tooke upon him the similitude of flesh simply as it is flesh, but of the flesh of sinne, or sinfull.

The third question is, Why the Sonne of God must become man? Answ. There bee sundry reasons of this point, and the most principall are these: First of all, it is a thing 1 that greatly stands with the justice of God, that in that nature in which God was offended, in the same should a satisfaction be made to God for sinne: now sinne was committed in mans nature: Adam sinned first, and in him all his posterity: therefore it was necessary that in mans nature there should be a satisfaction made to Gods justice, and for this cause the Sonne of God must needes abase himselfe and become man for our sakes. Secondly, 2 by the right of creation, every man is bound in conscience to fulfill even the very rigour and extremity of the morall law. But considering man is now fallen from his first estate and condition, therefore it was requisite, that the Sonne of God should become man, that in mans nature he might fulfill all righteousnesse which the law doth exact at our hands. Thirdly, 3 he that is our Redeemer, must die for our sinnes: for there is no remission of sinnes without shedding of blood: but Christ as he is God cannot die: for no passion can befall the Godhead. Therefore it was needfull, that he should become man, that in mans nature he might die, and fully satisfie Gods justice for mans offence. Lastly, he that must make reconciliation between God & man, must be such an 4 one as may make request or speake both to God and man. For a mediatour is as it were a middle person making intercession between two other persons; the one offended, the other offending. Therefore it is necessary that Christ should not onely be God, to speake unto the Father for us, and to present our prayers unto him; but also man, that God might speake to us, and we to God by Christ. For howsoever before the fall, man could speake to God even face to face, yet since the fall, such feare possesseth mans corrupt nature, that he cannot bide the presence of God, but flyeth from it.

Now whereas I say, that it was necessary that the Sonne of God, for the causes before alleadged, must become man: the necessitie must be understood in respect of Gods will, and not in respect of his absolute power. For if it had so pleased God, hee was able to have laide downe another kinde of way of mans redemption, then by the Incarnation of the Sonne of God: and hee appointed no other way becauſe he would not.

Duties. 1

Thus much of the Incarnation in generall. Now follow the duties which ariſe of it. And firſt, we are taught hereby to come to Chriſt by faith, and with all our hearts to cleave unto him. Great is the deadneſſe and ſluggiſhneſſe of mans nature: for ſcarce one of a thouſand care for him, or ſeeke to him for righteouſneſſe and life everlaſting. But we ſhould excite our ſelves every way to draw neare to him as much as poſſible we may: for when he was incarnate, hee came neere unto us by taking our nature upon him, that we againe, whatſoever we are, might come neere unto him by taking unto us his Divine nature. Again, when Chriſt was incarnate, he was made bone of our bone, and fleſh of our fleſh, and therefore proportionally we muſt labour to become bone of his bone, and fleſh of his fleſh: which we ſhall be, when we are myſtically united unto him by faith, and borne a new by his ſpirit. Moreover, Chriſt by his Incarnation came downe from heaven to us, that we being partakers of his grace, might aſcend up to heaven by him. And thus we ſee how the meditation of Chriſts incarnation ſhould be a ſpurre to pricke us forward ſtill more and more to come to Chriſt.

Secondly, Chriſts Incarnation muſt be a pattern unto us of a moſt wonderfull and ſtrange humility. For, as Paul ſaith, Phil. 2. 6, 7. Being in the forme of God, and thinking it no robbery to be equall with God, he made himſelfe of no reputation: and tooke on him the forme of a ſervant: and humbled himſelfe, and became obedient to death, even to the death of the croſſe. Yea, ſo far forth he abaſed himſelfe, that as David ſaith, Pſal. 22. 6. was a worme and no man. And this teacheth us to lay aſide all ſelfe-love and pride of heart, and to practiſe the duties of humility, as the Apoſtle exhorts the Philippians in the ſame place: and that ſhall we doe, when we begin to caſt off that high opinion which every man by nature conceives of himſelfe, and become vile and baſe in our own eyes. Secure and drowſie Proteſtants thinke themſelves bleſſed, and ſay in their hearts as the Angel of the Church of Rev. 3. 17. Laodicea ſaid, I am rich & increaſed with goods, and have need of nothing; whereas indeed they are moſt miſerable, and wretched, and poore, & naked, and blind. And the ſame fond opinion poſſeſſeth the mindes of our ignorant people, who chant it in the very ſame tune, ſaying, that God loves them, and that they love God with all their hearts, and their neighbours as themſelves; that they have perfect faith in Chriſt, and ever had, not once ſo much as doubting of their ſalvation; that all is well with them, and that they are paſt all danger whatſoever, in the matter of their ſalvation, and therefore need not take ſo much care for it. Thus yee may ſee how men are commonly carried away with vaine and fond conceits of their own excellency. And truely, ſo long as this over-weening of our own righteouſneſſe reignes in our hearts, let Preachers ſpeake and ſay what they will, we can never become followers of Chriſt in the practice of humility. Some will ſay, peradventure, that they never had any ſuch opinion of their own righteouſneſſe: but I anſwer againe, that there was never yet any man deſcended of Adam, ſave Chriſt, but he had this proud phantaſie ruling and reigning in him till ſuch time as God gave grace to change and alter his heart: and this inward pride, the leſſe we diſcerne it, the more it is; and the more we diſcerne it, the leſſe it is. Therefore though as yet thou ſee it not in thy ſelfe, yet labour both to ſee and to feele it, and to ſtrive againſt it, caſting downe thy ſelfe for thy own miſery, after Chriſts own example, who being God, abaſed himſelfe to the condition of a miſerable man. For thou ſhalt never be filled with the good things of God, till thou be emptied of ſelf-love and ſelf-liking. For this cauſe let us purge and empty our ſelves of all conceit of our own righteouſneſſe, that God may fill our hearts with his grace.

Furthermore, the Incarnation of Chriſt is the ground and foundation of all our comfort, as the names of Chriſt ſerving to expreſſe the ſame doe teſtifie. Iacob in his laſt Teſtament ſaith, that the ſcepter ſhal not depart from Iudah, til Shilo, that is, Meſſias come; now, the name Shilo ſignifieth the tunicle or skinne that lappeth the infant in the mothers wombe, called by the Phyſicians the ſecundine: and by a kind of figure it is put for the Sonne of God in the wombe of the Virgin, made man. And Iob to comfort himſelfe in his affliction ſaith, I know that my redeemer liveth. Now the word which hee uſeth to ſignifie his redeemer by, is very emphaticall, for it ſignifieth a kinſman neere allied unto him of his owne fleſh that will reſtore him to life. And the Lord by the Prophet Eſay calleth Chriſt Immanuel, that is, God with vs: which name importeth very much, namely, that whereas by nature we have loſt our fellowſhip with God, becauſe our ſinnes are a wall of partition ſevering us from him: yet nevertheleſſe the ſame is reſtored to all that beleeve, by the Mediatour Chriſt Ieſus: becauſe his divine nature is coupled to mans nature, and ſo the Word is made fleſh. And this ſtrait coniunctiõ of two natures into one perſon, joynes God to men, and men to God: yea by Chriſt wee are brought to God, and have free acceſſe unto him; and again in him we apprehend God, and are made one with him.

Gen. 49. 10. P. Gallat. de occultis cath. veritat. l. 04. Goel Iob 19. 25. Iſa. 7. 14. Iſa. 59. 2. Col. 1. 2. 11.

And further, whereas Chriſt beſide our nature tooke our infirmities alſo, it is a wonderful comfort to Gods Church, for it ſhewes that he is not onely a Saviour, but alſo a very compaſsionate and pittifull Saviour. As the holy Ghoſt ſaith, In all things it became Chriſt to be like unto his brethren, that he might be mercifull and a faithfull high Prieſt in things concerning God. Let a man be ſicke of a grievous diſeaſe, and let a friend come that hath beene Heb. 2. 17.

troubled with the very ſame diſeaſe, he will preſently ſhew more compaſſion then twenty others; and ſo Chriſt having felt in his owne ſoule and body the anguiſh and the manifold perplexities that wee feele in our temptations and afflictions, hath his bowels as it were yearning towards us, evermore being preſt and ready to releeve us in all our miſeries. In the dayes of his fleſh, hee wept over Ieruſalem when he ſaw it afarre off, becauſe ſhe continued in her old ſinnes, and did not know the time of her viſitation: and no doubt, though now he be exalted in glory in heaven, yet his compaſſion to his poore members upon earth is no whit diminiſhed.

Now we come to ſpeake of the Incarnation more particularly: and the Creed yet further expreſſeth it by two parts; the firſt, is the conception of Chriſt in theſe words, Conceived by the holy Ghoſt: the ſecond, is his birth, in the words following, Borne of the Virgin Mary.

The conception of Chriſt is ſet down with his efficient cauſe, the holy Ghoſt, as the Angel ſaid to Ioſeph, Feare not to take Mary for thy wife, for that which is conceived in her, is of the holy Ghoſt. Here it may be demanded, why the conception of Chriſt ſhould be aſcribed to the holy Ghoſt alone, which is common to all the perſons in Trinity, as all other ſuch actions are? Anſ. It is not done to exclude the Father or the Sonne himſelfe from this worke; but to ſignifie that it comes of the free gift and grace of God (which commonly is tearmed by the Holy Ghoſt) that the manhood of Chriſt being but a creature, ſhould be advanced to this dignity, that it ſhould become a part of the Sonne of God. And againe, the holy Ghoſt is the author of his conception in a ſpeciall manner: for the Father and the Son did cauſe it by the holy Ghoſt from them both immediately.

In the conception of Chriſt wee muſt obſerve and conſider three things: The framing of the manhood, the ſanctifying of it, and the perſonall Vnion of the manhood with the Godhead. And howſoever I diſtinguiſh theſe three for orders ſake, yee muſt we know and remember, that they are all wrought at one and the ſame inſtant of time. For when the holy Ghoſt frames and ſanctifies the manhood in the wombe of the Virgin; at the very ſame moment it is received into the unity of the ſecond perſon.

In the framing of Chriſts manhood two things muſt be conſidered, the matter, and the manner. The matter of his body was the very fleſh and blood of the Virgin Mary, otherwiſe hee could not have beene the ſonne of David, of Abraham, and Adam according to the fleſh. As for his ſoule, it was not derived from the ſoule of the Virgin Mary as a part thereof, but it was made as the ſoules of all other men be; that is, of nothing by the very power of God, and placed in the body: both of them from the firſt moment of their being, having their ſubſtance in the perſon of the Son. And here we muſt take heed of two opinions: the firſt, is of the Anabaptiſts which hold that the fleſh of Chriſt came downe from heaven, and paſſed through the Virgin Mary as through a pipe, without taking any ſubſtance from her: the places which they alleadge for the purpoſe, are manifeſtly abuſed. For whereas Chriſt ſaith of himſelfe, Ioh.3.13. that hee deſcended from heaven, his ſpeech muſt bee underſtood in reſpect of his godhead, which may be ſaid in ſome ſort to deſcend, in that it was made manifeſt in the manhood heere upon earth. And whereas Paul calleth him heavenly, and the Lord from heaven, it is not in reſpect of the ſubſtance of his body, but in reſpect of his glorious qualities which he received after his reſurrection. The other opinion is of the Papiſts, that hold the bread in the Sacrament to bee turned ſubſtantially into the body of Chriſt: which thing if it be true, then the body of Chriſt is made of bread kneaded and tempered by the hand of the baker, and not of the ſubſtance of the Virgin Mary.

1 Cor.15. 47, 48.

As for the manner of the making and framing of the humane nature of Chriſt, it was miraculous; not by generation according to the ordinary courſe of nature; but by an extraordinary operation of the holy Ghoſt above nature: and for this cauſe, it is not within the compaſſe of mans reaſon, either to conceive or to expreſſe the manner and order of this conception. The Angel aſcribes two actions to the holy Ghoſt in this great worke, the one to come upon the Virgin Mary, the other to overſhadow her: by the firſt is ſignified the extraordinary worke of the holy Ghoſt, in faſhioning the humane nature of Chriſt, for ſo much the phraſe [a] elſewhere importeth. The ſecond ſignifieth, that the holy Ghoſt did as it were [b] caſt a cloud over her, to teach us, that we ſhould not ſearch overmuch into the myſtery of the Incarnation.

Luk.1.35.

[a] Iud.14.6.

[b] Act.1.8. Luk.24.4.

It may be objected againſt this which hath bin ſaid, that if Chriſt be in this manner conceived by the holy Ghoſt, then the holy Ghoſt ſhall be Father to Chriſt, and Chriſt his Sonne. Anſ. The reaſon is not good: for he that is a father, is not a bare efficient cauſe, but one which in the effecting of any thing conferres the matter unto it from himſelfe, whereof it ſhall be made. Now the holy Ghoſt did not miniſter any matter unto Chriſt from his own ſubſtance, but did onely as it were, take the maſſe and lump of mans nature from the body of the Virgin Mary, and without ordinary generation made it the body of Chriſt, as Baſil ſaith, Chriſt was conceived not of the ſubſtance, but of the power, not by any generation, but by the appointment and benediction of the holy Ghoſt.

Sermon. de S.nativit.

The ſecond point in the conception, is the ſanctifying of that maſſe or lumpe which was to be the manhood of Chriſt. And that was done upon ſpeciall cauſe: firſt, that it might be joyned to the perſon of the Son, which could not have beene, if it had bin defiled with ſin.

Secondly, Chriſt was a Saviour as he is both God and man: now then beeing man, if hee had beene ſinnefull himſelfe, he could not have ſaved others, but ſhould have ſtood in need of a Saviour himſelfe.

This ſanctification hath two parts: the firſt, is the ſtay and ſtoppage of the propagation of orignall ſinne, and of the guilt of Adams ſinne; which was on this manner: God in the beginning ſet downe this order touching man, that what evill or defect ſoever hee brought upon himſelfe, hee ſhould derive the ſame to every one of his poſterity begotten of him: and hereupon when any father begets his child, he is in the roome of Adam, and conveyes unto it beſide the nature of man, the very guilt and corruption of nature. Now for the preventing of this evill in Chriſt, God in great wiſedome appointed, that he ſhould be conceived by the holy Ghoſt without any manner of generation by man. And by this meanes hee takes ſubſtance from the Virgin without the guilt and corruption of the ſubſtance. But it may further be objected thus: All that bee in Adam have ſinned in him; but Chriſt was in Adam as he is man: therefore he ſinned in him. Anſ. The propoſition is falſe, unleſſe it be expounded on this manner: All that were in Adam have ſinned in him, ſo be it they come of him by generation. Paul ſaith not, out of one man, but, by one man ſin entred into the world, to ſhew, that man propagates his corruption to no more then he begets. Againe, Chriſt is in Adam not ſimply as other men are, but in ſome part: namely, in reſpect of ſubſtance which he tooke from him, and not in reſpect of the propagation of the ſubſtance by ordinary generation: other men are both from Adam and by Adam. But Chriſt is from him alone and not by him as a begetter or procreant cauſe. The ſecond part of ſanctification is the infuſion of all pureneſſe and holineſſe into the manhood of Chriſt, ſo farre forth as was meete for the nature of a redeemer.

Rom. 5. 12.

The duties to bee learned hence are theſe: Firſt, whereas Chriſt was ſanctified in the wombe of the Virgin Mary, we likewiſe muſt labour to be ſanctified in our ſelves, following the Commandement of God, 1 Pet. 1. 16. Be ye holy as I am holy. S. Iohn ſaith, that he which hath hope to be with Chriſt in glory in heaven, purifieth himſelfe even as he is pure: no doubt ſetting before himſelfe the example of Chriſt as a patterne to follow in all his wayes. And becauſe our hearts are as it were ſeas of corruptions, we muſt daily cleanſe our ſelves of them by little and little, following the practiſe of the poore begger that is alwayes peecing and mending, and day by day puls away ſome rags and puts better cloath in the roome. And if wee ſhall continually endeavour our ſelves to caſt off the remnants of corruption that hang ſo faſt on, and make a ſupply thereof by ſome new portions of Gods heavenly grace; we ſhall be veſſels of honor ſanctified and meet for the Lord, and prepared unto every good worke. Chriſt could not have beene a fit Saviour for us, unleſſe he had firſt of all beene ſanctified, neither can we bee fit members unto him, unleſſe we be purged of our ſinnes, and in ſome meaſure truely ſanctified.

The comfort which Gods people may reape of the ſanctification of Chriſts manhood is great. For why was he ſanctified? ſurely if we marke it well, we ſhall find it was for the good and benefit of his elect. For Adam and Chriſt be two rootes, as hath beene ſhewed. Adam by creation firſt received Gods image, and after loſt the ſame for himſelfe and his poſterity. Now Chriſt to remoove the ſinne of man is made the ſecond Adam, and the roote and very head of all the elect. His manhood was filled with holineſſe above meaſure: that from thence as from a ſtore-houſe it might be derived to all his members. And therefore by his moſt holy conception, our ſinnefull birth and conception is ſanctified, and his holineſſe ſerves as a cover to hide our manifold corruptions from the eyes of God. Yea it ſerves as a buckler to award the temptations of the divell: for when hee ſhall ſay to our hearts on this manner; no uncleane thing can enter into the Kingdome of heaven; but thou by reaſon of the remnants of originall ſinne art uncleane, therefore thou canſt not enter into the Kingdome of heaven; we returne our anſwer, ſaying, that Chriſts righteouſneſſe is our righteouſneſſe, ſerving to make us ſtand without blame or ſpot before God. And as Iacob put on Eſaus garments that hee might get his fathers bleſſing: ſo if by faith we doe put on the white garment of righteouſneſſe of our elder brother Chriſt Ieſus, and preſent our ſelves in it unto our heavenly Father, we ſhall obtaine his bleſſing, which is eternall happineſſe.

Now remaines the third and laſt part of the conception, which the Vnion of the Godhead and the manhood: concerning which, many points are particularly to be handled. The firſt is, what kind of Vnion this is? Anſ. In the Trinity there be two ſorts of unions: union in nature, and union in perſon. Vnion in nature, is when two or more things are joyned and united into one nature; as the Father, the Sonne, the holy Ghoſt, being and remaining three diſtinct perſons, are one and the ſame in nature or Godhead. Vnion in perſon, is when two things are in that manner united, that they make but one perſon or ſubſtance: as a body created by God, and a reaſonable ſoule joyned both together make one particular man, as Peter, Paul, Iohn, &c. And this ſecond, is the union wherof we intreat in this place: by which the ſecond perſon in Trinity the Sonne of God did unite unto himſelfe the humane nature, that is, the body and ſoule of man: ſo as the Godhead of the Sonne and the manhood concurring together, made but one perſon.

The ſecond point is, In what thing this union doth conſiſt? Anſ. It conſiſts in this, that the ſecond perſon the Sonne of God doth aſſume unto it a manhood in ſuch order, that it being void of all perſonall beeing in it ſelfe, doth wholly and onely ſubſiſt in the ſame per-

ſon. As the plant called Miſſell or Miſſelto ha-Viſcus Matthiol. uing no roote of his owne, both growes and lives in the ſtocke or body of the Oke or ſome other tree: ſo the humane nature having no proper ſubſiſtance, is, as it were, ingraffed into the perſon of the Sonne, and is wholly ſuppor-ted and ſuſtained by it ſo, as it ſhould not bee at all, if it were not ſuſtained in that manner.
And for the better underſtanding of this point we muſt conſider, that there be foure degrees of the preſence of God in his creatures. The firſt is his generall preſence, and it may be called the preſence of his providence, whereby hee preſerveth the ſubſtances of all creatures, and giveth unto them to live, move, and have be-
Act. 17. 28. ing; and this extendeth it ſelfe to all creatures good and bad. The ſecond degree, is the pre-ſence of grace, wherby he doth not onely pre-ſerve the ſubſtances of all his creatures, but alſo giveth grace unto it: and this agreeth to the Church and people of God upon earth.
The third degree, is the preſence of glory, peculiar to the Saints and Angels in heaven: and this ſtands in three things: for God not onely preſerves their ſubſtances, and gives them plentie of his grace, but alſo admits them into his glorious preſence, ſo as they may behold his majeſtie face to face. The fourth and laſt, is that, whereby the Godhead of the Son is preſent, and dwels with and in the manhood giving unto it in ſome part his own ſubſiſtance Whereby it comes to paſſe, that this manhood aſſumed is proper to the Son, & cannot be the manhood of the Father, or of the H. Ghoſt, or of any creature whatſoever. And this is a thing ſo admirable and ſo unſpeakeable, that among all the workes of God there cannot be found another example hereof in all the world.

Hence it follows neceſſarily, that the manhood of Chriſt conſiſting of body and reaſo-nable ſoule, is a nature onely and not a perſon:
becauſe it doth not ſubſiſt alone, as other men,
Peter, Paul, John doe: but wholly depends on the perſon of the word, into the vnity whereof it is received.

The third point, is in what order the divine and humane nature of Chriſt are united together. Anſw. The common conſent of Divines is, that, albeit all the parts of the manhood and Damaſ. l. 3. cap. 6. Cypr. in Symbol. the godhead of Chriſt bee united at one inſtant; yet in reſpect of order he unites unto himſelfe firſt and immediately the ſoule, & by the ſoule the body. And it ſeemes unmeet, that God being a moſt ſimple eſſence, ſhould immediately be joyned to a compound body:
and therefore it may well be ſaid that hee is united unto it by the more ſimple part of man, which is the ſoule. Againe, the manhood of Chriſt is firſt and immediately joyned to the perſon of the Sonne himſelfe, and by the perſon to the Godhead of the Sonne.

The fourth point is, whether there remaine any difference or diverſitie of the two natures after that the union is made. Anſ. The two natures concurring make not the perſon of the Sonne to be compounded properly, but onely by analogie, for as body and ſoule make one man, ſo God and man make one Chriſt: neither are they turned one into another, the Godhead into the manhood, or the manhood into the Godhead, as water was turned into wine at Cana in Galile: neither are they con-fuſed and mingled together as meates in the ſtomacke: but they now are, and ſo remaine without compoſition, converſion, or confuſion, really diſtinct, and that in three reſpects.
First, in regard of eſſence. For the Godhead of Chriſt is the Godhead, and cannot be the manhood: and againe, the manhood of Chriſt is the manhood, and not the Godhead. Secondly, they are diſtinguiſhed in proprieties: the Godhead is moſt wiſe, juſt, mercifull, omnipotent: yea, wiſedome, juſtice, mercy, and power it ſelfe: and ſo is not the manhood, neither can it be. Againe, Chriſt as he is God hath his will eternall and uncreated, which is all one with the will of the Father and the Holy Ghoſt.
And as he is man he hath another will created in time, and placed in his reaſonable ſoule, and this Chriſt ſignifieth when he ſaith, Not my Luk. 22. 42.
will, but thy will be done. Thirdly, they are diſtinct in their actions or operations; which though they goe together inſeparably in the worke of redemption; yet they muſt in no wiſe be confounded, but diſtinguiſhed as the natures themſelves are, Chriſt ſaith of him- Ioh. 10. 18.
ſelfe; I have power to lay downe my life, and I have power to take it up againe: and hereby hee ſhewes the diſtinctions of operatiõ in his two natures. For to lay downe his life is an action of the manhood, becauſe the Godhead cannot die: and to take it up againe is the worke of the Godhead alone, which reunites the ſoul to the body after death.

The fifth and laſt point is, What ariſeth of this union? Anſ. By reaſon of this hypoſtaticall union, though the Godhead receive nothing from the manhood, yet the manhood it ſelfe which is aſſumed, is therby perfected and enriched with unſpeakeable dignity. For firſt of all, it is exalted above all creatures whatſoe-ver, even Angels themſelves, in that it hath ſubſiſtance in the ſecond perſon in Trinity.
Secondly, together with the Godhead of the Sonne, it is adored & worſhipped with divine honour, as in like caſe the honour done to the King himſelfe, redounds to the crowne on his head. Thirdly, by reaſon of this union, the Godhead of Chriſt workes all things in the matter of our redemption, in and by the manhood. And hereupon the fleſh of Chriſt though it profit nothing of it ſelfe, yet by the vertue wch it receiveth from that perſon to which it Ioh. 6. 35.
is joyned it is quickning fleſh, & the bread of life.
Againe, from this union of two natures into one perſon, ariſeth a kinde of ſpeech or phraſe peculiar to the Scripture, called the communication of proprieties, when the propertie of one nature is attributed to the whole perſon, or to the other nature; as when Paul ſaith, that God ſhed his blood, that the Lord of glorie was crucifi-

Act.20.28. 1 Cor.2.8. ed, And when Chriſt ſaith, that he talking with Ioh.3.13. Nicodemus, was then in heaven.

Vſe. The uſe of the perſonall union is threefold.
1 First, it ſerves to ſhew the hainouſneſſe of our ſinnes, and the greatneſſe of our miſery. For it had not been poſſible to make a ſatisfaction to Gods juſtice in mans nature for the leaſt offence; unles the ſame nature had firſt of all bin nearely joyned to the Godhead of the Sonne: that thereby it might be ſo farre forth ſupported and ſuſtained, that it might overcome the
B 2 wrath of God. Secondly, it ſets forth unto us the endleſſe love of God to man. For whereas by reaſon of Adams fall we were become the vileſt of all creatures, except the divell and his angels: by this myſticall conjunction, our nature is exalted to ſuch an eſtate and condition, as is farre above all creatures, even the Angels
3 themſelves. Thirdly, it is as it were the key of all our comfort: for all ſound comfort ſtands in happineſſe, all happineſſe is in fellowſhip with God, all fellowſhip with God is by Chriſt who for this cauſe being very God, became very man, that he might reconcile man to God, and God to man.

Thus much of the conception of Chriſt: now followes his birth: whereby in the ordinary time of travaile, according to the C courſe of nature, he was brought forth into Luk.2.6. the world by the Virgin Mary. And it was the will of God, that Chriſt ſhould not onely bee conceived; but alſo borne, and that after the manner of men, that he might be known to be very man indeed. In the birth we may conſider foure things; the time, the place, the manner, the manifeſtation of it.

Iſa.2.2. Dan.9.24. The time, was in the laſt dayes, toward the end of the 70 weekes of Daniel, which are to be accounted from the end of the captivity of Babylon, and make in all 490. yeares: or more plainely 3900. yeares and more from the beginning of the world, and as Paul ſaith, in the Gal.4.4. fulnes of time. And the Evangeliſts have noted
D of purpoſe the time to have been when Luk.2.1. Auguſtus Ceſar taxed the Iewes and all nations under his dominion; to ſignifie that Chriſt was borne at the very time foretold by Iacob, when the crowne and ſcepter was taken from Iuda: and withall to ſhew that his kingdome was not of this world. And it was the good pleaſure of God that Chriſt ſhould not bee borne either later or ſooner, but ſo many ages frō the beginning of the world: And this conſideration of the very time it ſelf, ſerves greatly for the confirmation of our faith. For thus may we reaſon with our ſelves: If God who in the beginning made a promiſe to our firſt parents concerning the ſeed of the woman, deferred it almoſt 4000 yeares, and yet at length accompliſhed the ſame to the very full: then
A no doubt God having promiſed the reſurrection of the dead and life everlaſting, will in his good time bring them to paſſe, though as yet we ſee them not. And thus by the accompliſhment of all things paſt, ſhould wee confirme our hopes concerning things to come.

The place was not at Ieruſalem, nor Nazareth, nor any other city, but onely a village of Iuda called Bethlehem, that the propheſie of Micha might be fulfilled, Thou Bethlehem Ephrata art little to be among the thouſands of Iu- Mich.5.2.
da, yet out of thee ſhal he come forth unto me, that ſhall be ruler in Iſrael. And here we may obſerve a memorable example of Gods providence wch overruleth the proceedings of cruel tyrants, to the accompliſhing of his own will, they themſelves for their parts intending nothing leſſe. Auguſtus not ſo much as dreaming of the birth of the Meſſias, gave commandement that every man ſhould goe to his owne citie to be taxed: and hereupon Ioſeph and Mary take their journey from Nazareth to Bethlehem: which journey God himſelfe appointed and diſpoſed to this end, that the Meſſias might be borne in the place which he preordained and foretold by his Prophets.

The manner of Chriſts birth was very baſe and poore: for the place where he was borne was a ſtable, and the cradle where he lay was a cratch. And he willingly tooke upon him this poverty for ſundry cauſes. I. That the Scripture might be fulfilled, which ſaith, that hee
C ſhould be the ſhame and contempt of the people: Pſal.22.6. Iſa.53.2.
and that he ſhall grow up as a roote out of a dry ground, and have neither forme nor beauty. II. That he might afterward from this baſe condition be exalted even in his manhood to that rich and glorious eſtate in which hee ſhould manifeſt himſelfe to be Lord of heaven and earth. III. He was borne in exceeding poverty, that he might ſhame the wiſe men of this world, who exceedingly eſteeme of their riches, power & glory, perſwading themſelves that without ſuch means nothing can be done. And yet for all this they cannot ſo much as reconcile one man to God by all their might and wealth; whereas Chriſt himſelfe hath done the ſame both in poverty and weakneſſe; and can enlarge & preſerve his kingdome without earthly helpes. When he hung upon the croſſe, the ſouldiers ſtript him of his garments; and beeing naked hee brought that to paſſe, which all the Monarches of the earth in all their royalties could never have performed. And whether Chriſt lie in the manger betweene the Oxe and the Aſſe, or in the pallace of the king, it matters not in regard of our ſalvation. IV. He came in this manner, that there might be a difference betweene his firſt comming in the fleſh, and his laſt comming to judgement. In the firſt he came onely for this end, not to make any outward alterations in the world, but to change the conſcience, and to put in execution the worke of our ſpirituall redemption: and therefore he hath reſerved

the overturning of all earthly eſtates, with the manifeſtation of his owne glory, to the latter.
V. Laſtly, he was borne in a poore eſtate, that hee might procure true riches for us in heaven; and withall ſanctifie unto us our poverty upon earth: As Paul ſaith, Ye know the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that he being rich, for your ſakes became poore, that yee through his poverty might be made rich. He was content to lye in the manger, that we might reſt in heaven. 2 Cor. 8. 9.

This ſerves to teach us to bee content to beare any meane condition that the Lord ſhall ſend upon us: for this is the very eſtate of the Sonne of God himſelfe. And if for our cauſe he did not refuſe the baſeſt condition that ever was, why ſhould we murmure at the ſame? for what are the beſt of us but miſerable ſinners, and therefore utterly unworthy either to goe or lye upon the bare earth? and though we fare and lye better then our Lord himſelfe, yet ſuch is our daintineſſe, we are not pleaſed therwith: whereas he for his part diſdained not the manger of the Oxe. And if the Lord of heaven and earth comming into the world, finde ſo little entertainement or favour, wee for our parts being his members, ſhould willingly prepare our ſelves to take as hard meaſure at the hands of men.

The laſt point is the manifeſtation of Chriſts birth, that it may bee knowne to the world. Where conſider two circumſtances: the firſt, to whom? namely, to poore ſhepheards tending their flockes by night. and not to great or mighty men, lovers of this world, not to the Prieſts at Ieruſalem, contemners of Gods grace; and that for two cauſes: one, becauſe the ſhepheards were the fitteſt perſons to publiſh the ſame at Bethlehem; the other, it was Gods pleaſure to manifeſt that in the birth of Chriſt, which Paul ſaith, Not many wiſe men after the fleſh, not many mighty, not many noble are called: but God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the world to confound the wiſe. The ſecond is, by whom? by the Angels of the Lord appearing in great glory unto the ſhepheards. For the Prieſts of Ieruſalem, and the rulers of the Synagogues, to whom this office did belong, held their peace: being blinded in their manifold errours and wicked wayes. Luk. 2. 8, 9. 1 Cor. 1. 27.

The duties to bee learned from the birth of Chriſt, are theſe: Firſt, we are admoniſhed hereby to magnifie and praiſe the name of God, ſaying with Mary, My ſoule doth magnifie the Lord, and my ſpirit rejoyceth in God my Saviour. And with Zachary, Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, for he hath viſited and redeemed his people. And with the Angels of heaven, Glory to God in the higheſt heavens. For in this birth is made manifeſt the wiſedome, the truth, the juſtice, mercy, and goodneſſe of God towards us, more then ever it was before; yea as Chriſt God and Man, is more excellent then the firſt Adam created according to Gods own image; and as the ſpirituall life is better then the naturall life; and as the eternall and moſt holy marriage of Chriſt the husband and his ſpouſe the Church, ariſing as it were out of the blood that trickled out of his ſide, is more wonderfull then the creation of Eve of the rib of Adam: laſtly, as it is a farre greater matter by death to overcome death, and to turne it unto eternall life, then to command that to exiſt and be, which was not before: ſo is the worke of redemption, begun in the birth of Chriſt, more unſpeakeable and admirable then the firſt creation of man. Hereupon not ſixe Cherubims, as in the viſion of Iſaiah, not 24. elders, as in the Apocalyps, but a great multitude of Angels like armies, were heard to praiſe God at the birth of Chriſt; and no doubt the like ſight was not ſeene ſince the beginning of the world. And the Angels by their example put us in minde to conſider aright of this benefit, and to praiſe God for it. But alas, this practice is very rare in this fruitleſſe and barren age of the world: where ſinne and iniquity abounds, as may be ſeene by experience; for by an old cuſtome we retaine ſtill in the Church the feaſt of the nativity of Chriſt, ſo commonly called; which nevertheleſſe is not ſpent in praiſing the name of God, who hath ſent his Sonne from his owne boſome to be our redeemer, but contrariwiſe in rifling, dicing, carding, masking, mumming, and in all licencious liberty for the moſt part, as though it were ſome heathen feaſt of Ceres or Bacchus.

Secondly, Chriſt was conceived and borne in bodily manner, that there might bee a ſpirituall conception and birth of him in our hearts, as Paul ſaith; My little children of whom I travell till Chriſt be formed in you: and that is, when wee are made new creatures by Chriſt, and performe obedience to our Creator. When the people ſaid to Chriſt, that his mother and his brethren ſought him, he anſwered, He that doth the Will of God, is my brother, my ſiſter, and mother. Therefore let us goe with the ſhepheards to Bethlehem, and finding our bleſſed Saviour ſwadled and lying in the cratch, let us bring him thence, and make our owne hearts to be his cradle: that wee may bee able to ſay, that wee live not, but Chriſt lives in us: and let us preſent unto him our ſelves, our bodies, and ſoules, as the beſt gold, myrrhe, and frankincenſe that may be: and thus conceiving him by faith, he remaining without change, wee ſhall be changed into him, and made bone of his bone, and fleſh of his fleſh. The world, I know, never ſo much as dreameth of this kind of conception and birth: For as David ſaith, Men travell with wickedneſſe, conceive miſchiefe, and bring forth a lye. And S. Iames ſaith, Men are drawne away by their owne concupiſcence, which when it hath conceived, bringeth forth ſinne. And theſe are the ugly and monſtrous births of theſe dayes. But let us, I pray you, contrariwiſe waile and mourne for the barrenneſſe of our hearts, that doe ſo little conceive the grace of Chriſt in heart, and bring it forth in action. The Mother of Chriſt undoubtedly was a Gal. 4. 19. Mark 3. 35. Pſal. 7. 12. Iam. 1. 14, 15.

bleſſed woman: but if ſhe had not as well conceived Chriſt in her heart, as ſhee did in her wombe, ſhe had not bin ſaved; and no more can we, unleſſe we doe the ſame.

The birth of Chriſt, to them that have touched hearts, is the comfort of comforts, & the ſweeteſt balme of confection that ever was. Luk.2.10. Behold, ſay the Angels to the ſhepheards, wee bring tidings of great joy that ſhall be to all people: but wherein ſtands the joy? They adde further, verſe 11. Vnto you this day is borne in the City of David a Saviour, which is Chriſt the Lord. And no marvell: for in that birth is manifeſted the good will of God to man, and by it we have peace, firſt, with God; ſecondly, with our ſelves in conſcience: thirdly, with the good Angels of God: fourthly, with our enemies: laſtly, with all the Creatures. For this cauſe the Angels verſe 14. ſang, Peace on earth, good will towards men.

In the laſt place the Creede notes unto us the parent or Mother of Chriſt, the Virgin Mary. And here at the very firſt it may bee demanded, how he could have either father or mother; becauſe he was figured by Melchiſedech Heb.7.3. who had neither father nor mother? Anſ. Melchiſedech is ſaid to be without Father and mother, not becauſe hee had none at all: for according to the ancient and received opinion, it is very likely that hee was Sem the ſonne of Noe; but becauſe where he is mentioned under this name of Melchiſedech in the Hier. ep. ad Evagr. 14. Chapter of Geneſis, there is no mention made of father or mother: and ſo Chriſt in ſome ſort is without father or mother: as he is Man, he hath no father; as he is God, he hath Matth.13. 15. no mother. And whereas Chriſt is called the Sonne of Ioſeph, it was not becauſe he was begotten of him, but becauſe Ioſeph was his reputed father: or which is more, becauſe hee was a legall father, namely, according to the Iewes: in that (as ſundry Divines thinke) he was the next of his kinne, and therefore to ſucceed him as his lawfull heire.

Mary became the mother of Chriſt, by a kind of calling thereto, which was by an extraordinary meſſage of an Angel concerning the conception and birth of Chriſt in and by her: to which calling and meſſage ſhee condeſcended, ſaying, Luk.1.38. Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy Word. And hereupon ſhe conceived by the holy Ghoſt. This being ſo, it is more then ſenſleſſe folly to turne the ſaltuation of the Angel, Haile freely beloved, &c. into a prayer. For it is as much as if we ſhould ſtill call her to become a mother of a Chriſt.

And ſhe muſt be held to bee the mother of whole Chriſt God and man: and therefore the ancient Church hath called her the Mother of God, yet not the mother of the Godhead.

Furthermore, the mother of Chriſt is deſcribed by her quality; a Virgin: and by her name, Mary. Shee was a Virgin, firſt, that Chriſt might be conceived without ſin and be a perfect Saviour: ſecondly, that the ſaying of Iſai.7.14. the Prophet Iſaiah might be fulfilled, Behold, a Virgin ſhall conceive and beare a Sonne: according as it was foretold by God in the firſt giving of the promiſe, The ſeed of the woman, not Gen.3.15. the ſeed of the man, ſhall bruiſe the Serpents head. Now, the Iewes to elude the moſt pregnant teſtimony of the Prophet, ſay, that Alma ſignifies not a Virgin, but a young woman which hath knowne a man. But this is indeed a forgery. For Iſaiah there ſpeakes of an extraordinary worke of God above nature, whereas for a woman having knowne man, to conceive, is no wonder. And the Word Alma, Gen.24.16. through the whole Bible is taken for a Virgin, Exod.2.5. as by a particular ſearch will appeare.

As Mary conceived a Virgin, ſo it may bee well thought that ſhee continued a Virgin to the end, though we make it no article of our faith. When Chriſt was upon the croſſe, hee commended his mother to the cuſtody of Iohn; which probably argueth, that ſhe had no Ioh.19.27. child to whoſe care and keeping ſhe might bee commended. And though Chriſt bee called her firſt-borne, yet doth it not follow that ſhe had any children after him: for as that is called laſt, after which there is none; ſo that is called the firſt, before which there were none. And as for Ioſeph, when hee was eſpouſed to Epiph. l. 2. to 1. Mary, he was a man of eighty yeeres old.

And here we have an occaſion to praiſe the wiſedome of God, in the forming of man. The firſt man Adam was borne of no man; but immediately created of God: the ſecond, that is, Eve, is formed not of a woman, but of a man alone: the third and all after, begotten both of woman and man: the fourth, that is Chriſt, God and man, not of no man as Adam, not of no woman as Eve; nor of man and woman as we: but after a new manner, of a woman without a man he is conceived and borne.

And hereupon our duty is not to deſpiſe, but highly to reverence the Virgin Mary, as being the mother of the Sonne of God, [a] Luk.1.48. a Propheteſſe upon earth, a Saint in heaven. And we doe willingly condeſcend to give her honour three wayes; firſt, by thankſgiving to God for her; ſecondly, by a reverent eſtimation of her: thirdly, by imitation of her excellent vertues: yet farre be it from us to adore her with divine honour, by prayer to call upon her, as though ſhe knew our hearts, and heard our requeſts, and to place her in heaven as a Queene above the Sonne of God.

The name of the mother of Chriſt is added, to ſhew that he came of the linage of David, and that therefore he was the true Meſſias before ſpoken of. It may be objected, that both Matthew and Luke ſet downe the genealogy of Ioſeph, of whom Chriſt was not. Anſw. Matthew ſets downe indeed in Chriſts genealogy, the naturall deſcent of Ioſeph the husband of Mary, having Iacob for his naturall father: but Luke taking another courſe, propounds the naturall deſcent of Mary the mother of Chriſt: and when he ſaith that Ioſeph was the ſonne of Eli, hee meanes of a legall ſonne. For ſonnes and daughters in law, are called ſonnes and daughters to their fathers and mothers in law: Mary her ſelfe and not Ioſeph beeing the naturall daughter of Eli. And whereas Luke doth plainely ſay, that Mary was the daughter of Eli, but puts Ioſeph the ſon in law in her roome, the reaſon hereof may bee, becauſe it was the manner of the Iewes to account and continue their genealogies in the male and not in the female ſexe, the man being the head of the family, and not the woman. And though Ruth, and Rahab, and other women be mentioned by Matthew, yet that is onely by the way: for they make no degrees herein. Againe, it may be further demanded, how Chriſt could come of David by Salomon, as Matthew ſaith, and by Nathan, as Luke ſaith; they twaine being two diſtinct ſonnes of David. Anſw. By vertue of the law, whereby the brother was bound to raiſe up ſeed to his brother, there was a double deſcent in uſe among the Iewes, the one was naturall, the other legall. Naturall, when one man deſcended of another by generation, as the childe from the naturall father: Legall, when a man not begotten of another, yet did ſucceed him in his inheritance: and thus Salathiel is the naturall ſonne of Neri, and the legall ſonne of Ieconias. Now Saint Luke ſets downe a naturall deſcent of Chriſt from David by Nathan, and Saint Matthew the other deſcent which is legall, by Salomon; whom Chriſt ſucceeded in the right of the kingdome, being borne the king of the Iewes: none that could poſſibly bee named, having more right to it then he.

Aphric. apud Euſeb. Damaſ. lib. 4. c. 15.

Deut. 25. 5, 6.

Mat. 1. 12. and Luk. 3. 27.

By this deſcent of Chriſt we have occaſion to conſider, that Chriſt was even in his birth the moſt excellent and noble man that ever was, deſcending of the eternall Father as he is the Son of God, and as he is man, deſcending of the Patriarkes, and of the renowned Kings of Iuda. And this his nobility he conveyes in part to his members, in that hee makes them the ſonnes of God, a royall prieſthood, and a peculiar people to himſelfe: inriching them alſo with the revenewes of the whole world, and with title and right to the Kingdome of glory in heaven, as their inheritance.

And withall, Chriſt being the lively patterne of true nobilitie, by his example men of blood are taught not to ſtand ſo much on their pedigree, and their anceſtours, as though Nobility ſtood in this, that man deſcends of man: but to labour withall that they may bee the ſonnes and daughters of God by regeneration in Chriſt. This indeed is the ornament of the blood, the beſt part in the Noblemans skutcheon, and the fineſt flower in his garland. And though a man be never ſo noble or great in eſtate, yet if he be not a repentant ſinner, hee is baſe and vile, and his nobilitie ſtinkes in the noſtrils of God. Chriſt in his genealogie doth not ſo much as vouchſafe to name thoſe his anceſtors that ruled wickedly; and hereupon Saint Matthew omitteth three kings of Iudah, Achaziah, Ioas, and Amaziah: whereas nevertheleſſe hainous offenders that repented are mentioned, as Ruth and Thamar, and Bathſheba.

Thus much of the Incarnation of Chriſt; now followeth the third and laſt point which is to bee conſidered in the deſcription of Chriſt; namely, the eſtate of Chriſt after his birth, which is two-fold, the eſtate of humiliation, and the eſtate of exaltation.

The eſtate of humiliation, is the condition of Chriſt the Mediatour, in which hee abaſed himſelfe even to the death of the croſſe, that by that meanes he might performe the office of a Prieſt in making ſatisfaction to the juſtice of his Father.

This eſtate agrees to the whole perſon of Chriſt according to both natures. For firſt of all his manhood was abaſed and humbled, in that it was made ſubject to the infirmities of mans nature, as alſo to the miſeries and puniſhments which were due unto man for ſin. Secondly, his Godhead was abaſed; not as it is conſidered in it ſelfe: for ſo it admits no alteration or change: but in reſpect of the fleſh or manhood aſſumed; under the which, as under a vaile, the Godhead lay hid from the firſt moment of the Incarnation to the time of his Reſurrection, without any great manifeſtation of his power and Majeſtie therein.

The order of theſe two eſtates muſt be marked. The firſt is the eſtate of humiliation, and then in the ſecond place followes the eſtate of exaltation. As Chriſt ſaith of himſelfe, O fooles, and ſlow of heart to beleeve, &c ought not Chriſt to have ſuffered theſe things, and to enter into his glory? And here we for our parts muſt learne a leſſon. The ſame which was true in Chriſt the head, muſt be verified in all his members; they muſt all have their two-fold eſtate: firſt in this life the eſtate of humiliation: ſecondly, after this life the eſtate of glory. And as Chriſt firſt entred into the eſtate of his humiliation, and then into glory: ſo it is with his members, firſt they muſt be abaſed in this life, and ſecondly, exalted in the world to come. Hee that will raigne with Chriſt and be exalted, muſt firſt ſuffer with him, and be humbled: he that will weare the crowne of glory, muſt weare firſt a crowne of thorns: they that will have all teares wiped from their eyes, muſt here firſt in this life ſhed them. And the children of God before they can ſing the ſong of Moſes, and of the ſervants of God, and of the lambe, muſt firſt ſwim through the Sea of burning glaſſe: whereby is ſignified, that thoſe which after this life would ſing ſongs of praiſes to Chriſt, muſt in this life be caſt into a ſea of miſery. And if this be true, then we may heere learne, that it is a wretched caſe for a man in this life to have perpetuall eaſe, reſt, and quietneſſe both in body and ſoule, goods, and good name: for we ſee by Chriſts example, that thorough adverſitie wee muſt come to happineſſe: and if a man would have reſt and peace in the life to come, then in this life he muſt look for trouble, perſecution, and ſorrow. Indeed in the judgement of the world, they are bleſſed that alwayes live at reſt; but before God they are moſt miſerable, and (as oxen which are made fatte in the beſt paſture) ready for the ſlaughter-houſe every day. Secondly, here is an excellent conſolation for thoſe which profeſſe the Goſpel of Chriſt; in the time of trouble and perſecution they muſt rejoyce, becauſe the ſtate of humiliation in this life is a ſigne that they are in the plaine and right way to ſalvation and glory. A man is to take his journey into a farre countrey, and inquiring for the way, it is told him that there are many plaine wayes, but the ſtraight and right way is by woods, and hils, and mountaines, and great dangers: now when hee is travelling, and comes into thoſe places, he gathereth certainly that he is in the right way: ſo the child of God that is going to the kingdome of heaven, though there be many wayes to walke in, yet he knowes that there is but one right way; which is very ſtraight and narrow, ful of trouble, ſorrow and perſecution: full of all manner of croſſes and afflictions: and when in this life he is perſecuted and afflicted for good cauſes, whether in body or in minde, if he be content to beare his croſſe, it argueth plainely that hee is in the right way to ſalvation: for through many afflictions we muſt enter into the Kingdome of heaven.

Act. 14. 22.

The humiliation of Chriſt is firſt of all ſet downe in the Creede generally; and ſecondly, by its parts or degrees. Generally, in theſe words: ſuffered under Pontius Pilate. Where we muſt conſider two things; the Paſſion it ſelfe, & under whom it was. For the firſt, that we may the better conceive the paſſion in its owne nature, ſeven ſpeciall points muſt be opened. I. The cauſe efficient. The principall cauſe of the Paſſion, as it is the price of our redemption, was the decree and providence of God; as Peter ſaith expreſly, that Chriſt was delivered by the determinate counſell and foreknowledge of God.

Act. 2. 23.

The impulſive cauſe that moved God to worke our ſalvation by this meanes was nothing in man (for all mankind was ſhut up under unbeleefe, and therefore unable to procure the leaſt favour at Gods hands) but the will and good pleaſure of God within himſelfe. The inſtrument which the Lord uſed in this buſineſſe, were the wicked Iewes and Gentiles, and the divell himſelfe, by whom he brought to paſſe the moſt admirable worke of redemption, even then when they according to their kinde did nothing elſe but practiſe wickedneſſe and malice againſt Chriſt. II. The matter of the paſſion, is the whole malediction or curſe of the Law, containing in it all manner of adverſities and miſeries both of body and minde. All which may be reduced to three heads; the temptations of Chriſt, his ignominies and ſlanders, his manifold ſorrowes and griefes, eſpecially thoſe which ſtand in the apprehenſion of the unſupportable wrath of God. III. The forme of the paſſion, is that excellent and meritorious ſatisfaction which in ſuffering, Chriſt made unto his Father for mans ſinne. We doe not rightly conſider of the paſſion, if we conceive it to bee a bare and naked ſuffering of puniſhment, but withall we muſt conceive it as a propitiation or a meanes ſatisfactorie to Gods juſtice. The paſſion conſidered as a paſſion, miniſters no comfort: but all our joy and rejoycing ſtands in this, that by faith wee apprehend it as it is a ſatisfaction or a meanes of reconciliation for our offences. In this very point ſtands the dignity of the paſſion, whereby it differs from all other ſufferings of men whatſoever. Therfore moſt damnable and wicked is the opinion of the Papiſts, who beſides the alone paſſion of Chriſt, maintaine workes of ſatisfaction, partly of their owne, and partly of the Saints departed: which they adde to the paſſion as an appendance thereof. IV. The end of the paſſion, is that God might bring to paſſe a work in which he might more fully manifeſt his juſtice and mercy, then he did in the creation, and that is, the reconciliation betweene God and man. And here remember with the paſſion to joyne the active obedience of Chriſt in fulfilling the law; for Chriſt in ſuffering obeyed, and in obeying ſuffered. And they muſt bee joyntly conceived together for this cauſe. In reconciliation with God, two things are required: the remooving of ſinne in regard of the guilt, of the fault, and the puniſhment; and the conferring or giving of righteouſneſſe. Now the paſſion of Chriſt conſidered apart from his legall obedience, onely takes away the guilt and puniſhment, frees man from death, and makes him of a ſinner to be no ſinner: and that hee may be fully reconciled to God, and accepted as righteous to life everlaſting, the legall obedience of Chriſt muſt alſo be imputed. And therefore in the Scriptures, where all our redemption is aſcribed to the death and paſſion of Chriſt, this very obedience which ſtands in the perfect love of God and man muſt bee included and not excluded. V. The time of the paſſion was from the very birth of Chriſt to his reſurrection; yet ſo, as the beginning onely of his ſufferings were in the courſe of his life, and the accompliſhment thereof to the very full, upon the croſſe. VI. The perſon that ſuffered was the Sonne of God himſelfe: concerning whom in this caſe two queſtions muſt be reſolved. The firſt, how can it ſtand with Gods juſtice to lay puniſhment upon the moſt righteous man that ever was, and that for grievous ſinners: conſidering that tyrants themſelves will not doe ſo. Anſw. In the paſſion, Chriſt muſt not be conſidered as a private perſon: for then it could not ſtand with equitie that hee ſhould bee plagued and puniſhed for our offences, but as one in the

eternall counsell of God set apart to be a publike surety or pledge for us, to suffer and performe those things which we in our own persons should have suffered and performed. For this cause God the Father is said to give his Sonne unto us, and the Sonne againe to give his life for his friends, Ioh. 3.16. & 15.13. The second question is, how by the short and temporary death of the Sonne of God, any man can possibly bee freed from eternall death and damnation which is due unto him for the least sinne. Answ. When we say that the Sonne of God suffered, it must be understood with distinction of the natures of Christ, not in respect of the Godhead, but in respect of the assumed manhood: yet nevertheless the passion is to bee ascribed to the whole person of Christ God and man: and from the dignity of the person which suffered, ariseth the dignity and excellency of the passion, whereby it is made in value and price, to countervaile everlasting damnation. For when as the Son of God suffered the curse for a short time, it is more then if all men and angels had suffered the same for ever. VII. The difference of the passion of Christ, and the sufferings of Martyrs: and that stands in two things. First, Christs passion was a cursed punishment; the sufferings of the Martyrs are no curses, but either chastisements or tryals. Secondly, the passion of Christ is meritorious for us even before God, because he became our Mediatour and surety in the Covenant of grace: but the sufferings of Martyrs are not of value to merit for us at Gods hand; because in suffering they were but private men, and therefore they nothing appertaine to us. By this it appeares, that the Treasury of the Church of Rome, which is as it were a common chest containing the overplus of the merits of Saints, mingled with the merits of Christ, kept and disposed by the Pope himselfe, is nothing else but a senselesse dotage of mans braine. And whereas they say, that Christ by his death did merit, that Saints might merit both for themselves and others, it is as much as if they should say, the Son of God became Iesus, to make every one Iesus. And it is a manifest untruth which they say. For the very manhood of Christ considred apart from the godhead, cannot merit properly: considering whatsoever it is, hath, or doth; it is, hath, and doth the same, wholly and only by grace: whereas therefore Christ merits for us, it is by reason hee is both God and man in one person. For this cause it is not possible, that one meere man should merit for another.

Heb. 7. 22.

Lud. Gran.

The use of the passion followeth. It is the manner of Fryers and Iesuits in the Church of Rome, to use the consideration of the passion of Christ, as a meanes to stirre up compassion in themselves, partly towards Christ, who suffered grievous torments, and partly towards the Virgin Mary, who for the torments of her deere Son was exceedingly troubled, and with all to kindle in their hearts an indignation towards the Iewes that put Christ to death. But indeed this kind of use is meere humane, and may in like manner be made by reading of any humane history. But the proper and speciall use of the passion indeed is this: first of all, wee must set it before our eyes as a looking-glasse, in which we may cleerely behold the horribleneſſe of our sins, that could not be pardoned without the passion of the Son of God; and the unspeakable love of Christ that dyed for us, and therefore loved his owne enemies more then his owne life; and lastly, our endlesse peace with God and happinesse: in that, considering the person of our redeemer, who suffered the pangs of hell, we may after a sort find our paradise even in the midst of hell.

Secondly, the meditation of Christs passion serves as a most worthy meanes to begin and to confirme grace, specially when it is mingled with faith, & that two waies. For first, it serves to breed in our hearts a godly sorrow for our sins past, when we do seriously with our selves consider, that our owne sinnes were the cause of all the paines and sorrowes and calamities which he suffered in life and death, Levit. 4.4. 29. When any man had sinned under the law, he brought unto the Temple or Tabernacle some kind of beast for an offering, according as he was prescribed, laying his hand upon the head of it, and afterward slaying it before the Lord. Now by the ceremony of laying on the hand, he testified that he for his part had deserved death, and not the beast; and that it being slaine and sacrificed, was a signe unto him of the sacrifice of Christ offered upon the crosse for his sins. And hereby we are taught, that so oft as wee remember the passion of Christ, we should lay our hands as it were upon our owne heads, utterly accusing and condemning our selves, evermore keeping this in our hearts, that Christ suffered not for himselfe, but for our offences, which were the proper cause of all his woe and misery. And as Christs passion was grievous and bitter unto him, so should our sins likewise be grievous and bitter unto us: let us alwayes remember this; otherwise we shall never reap any sound benefit by the passion of Christ.

Againe, the passion of Christ is a notable meanes to stirre up in our hearts a purpose and a care to reforme our selves, and live in holinesse and newnes of life, on this manner. Hath the Sonne of God so mercifully dealt with me, as to suffer the curse of the whole law for my manifold iniquities, and to deliver mee from just and deserved damnation? yea, no doubt, he hath, I am resolved of it: if I should goe on in mine old course, I should be the most ingratefull of all creatures to this my loving Saviour: I will therefore by his grace returne and reforme my life. And in this very point of reformation, the passion of Christ is set before us as a most lively pattern and example to follow. For as much (saith S. Peter, 1 Pet. 4.1.) as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arme your ſelves likewiſe with the ſame minde, which is, that he which hath ſuffered in the fleſh, hath ceaſed frō ſin. Where he teacheth, that there muſt bee in us a ſpirituall paſſion anſwerable to the paſſion of Chriſt. For as his enemies did lade him with miſeries even to the death of the croſſe; ſo ſhould we lade our owne fleſh, that is, the corruption of our natures, with all ſuch means as may ſubdue and weaken, crucifie and kill it. To the doing of this, three things eſpecially are required. Firſt, we muſt conſider that the corruption of our rebellious natures is like the great and mightie Goliah, and the grace of God which we receive, like young & little Dauid: and therefore if wee deſire that grace ſhould prevaile againſt corruption, wee muſt diſarme the ſtrong man, and ſtrip him of all his weapons: which is done, by giving all the members of our bodies to bee inſtruments of the ſervice of God in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe. Secondly, we muſt endeavour to keepe in the corruption of nature as it were choking and ſmothering it in the heart; that by it neither the world nor the divell prevaile againſt us. And this muſt be done by having a narrow regard unto all the powers and faculties of body and ſoule, ſetting a watch before our eyes, eares, lips, and all other parts of the body, that are in any action the inſtruments of the ſoule, and above all, as Salomon ſaith, By countergarding the heart with all diligence. By the outward ſenſes of the body, as through open windowes the divell creepes into the heart; and therefore our dutie is, to ſtop all ſuch waies of entrance. Thirdly, when originall corruption begins to rebell either in the mind, will, or any of the affections, then muſt we draw out the ſword of the ſpirit which is the word of God, & encoūter with that hideous gyant, laying load upon him by the judgements and threatnings of the law, and as it were beating him downe with clubs, as Paul ſpeaketh. And if it fall out, that concupiſcence begin to conceive and bring forth any ſin, we muſt bruiſe it in the head, and daſh it againſt the ground, as a bird in the ſhell, leſt it growe up to our utter confuſion. Theſe are the duties which we ſhould learne by the paſſion of Chriſt. But lamentable are our daies, in which all for the moſt part goes contrarie: for commonly men are ſo farre from killing and ſubduing the rebellion of the naturall concupiſcence, that all their ſtudie and care is, how they may feed and cheriſh it, and make it ſtronger then the mightie Goliah. But let us for our parts be conformable to Chriſt in his paſſion, ſuffering in our fleſh as he ſuffered in body and ſoule for us. And let us daily more and more by the hand of faith, apprehend and apply to our hearts & conſciences the paſſion of Chriſt, that it may as a fretting corroſive eate out the poyſon of our ſinfull natures and conſume it.

1 Cor.4. 27. ὑπωπιάζω.

Now followes the ſecond point concerning the paſſion of Chriſt, which is under whom he ſuffered, namely under Pontius Pilate. And Chriſt may be ſaid to ſuffer under him in two reſpects. Firſt, becauſe he was then the preſident of Iurie. For a little before the birth of Chriſt, the kingdome of the Iewes was taken away by the Roman Emperour, and reduced into a Province, and Pontius Pilate was placed over the Iewes, not as king, but as the Roman Emperours deputie. And this circumſtance is noted in the hiſtorie of the Goſpell, and here ſpecified in the Creede, to ſhew that the Meſſias was exhibited in the time fore-told by the Prophets. Iacob fore-told that Shilo muſt bee borne after the ſcepter is remooved from Iudah: Iſaiah ſaith, that the family of Iſhai ſhall be worne as it were to the roote, before Chriſt as a branch ſhall ſpring out of it. Againe, Chriſt ſuffered under Pontius Pilate as he was a judge: whereby wee are given to underſtand of a wonder; namely, that Chriſt the Sonne of God, King of heaven and earth, was arraigned at the barre of an earthly judge, and there condemned. For thus much the words in meaning import, that Pontius Pilate ſate as a judge upō Chriſt, to examine him, to arraigne him, and give ſentence againſt him. Wherefore before wee come to ſpeake of the degrees of the Paſſion of Chriſt, we muſt needs intreat of his arraignment upon earth. In handling wherof we muſt generally conſider theſe points: Firſt, that when he was arraigned before Pilate, he was not as a private man, but as a pledge and ſuretie that ſtood in the place and ſtead of us miſerable ſinners, as the Prophet Iſaiah ſaith, He bare our iniquities, and carried our ſorrowes: and withall in him was mankind arraigned before God. Secondly, this arraignment was made not privately in a corner, but openly in the publike court, and that in a great feaſt of the Iewes, as it were in the hearing of the whole world. Thirdly, though Pilate in citing, examining, and condemning Chriſt, intended not to worke any part of mans redemption, yet was this wholly ſet down, in the coūſell and good pleaſure of God, in whoſe roome Pilate ſate, and whoſe judgement he exerciſed.

Luk.3.1. Gen.49. 10. Iſa.11.1. Heb.7.22 Iſa.53.4. 2 Chron. 19.6.

The generall uſe of Chriſts arraignment, is two-fold. Firſt, it is a terrour to all impenitent ſinners: for there is no freedome or protection from the judgement of God, but by the arraignement of Chriſt: and therefore ſuch as in this life receive not him by faith, muſt at the end of this world bee brought out to the moſt terrible barre of the laſt judgement, there to bee arraigned before the King of heaven and earth. And marke the equitie hereof. Chriſt himſelfe could not have beene our Saviour and Redeemer, unleſſe hee had bin brought out to the barre of an earthly judge, & arraigned as a guiltie malefactor: and there is no man upon earth that lives and dies out of Chriſt, but hee muſt whether he wil or no, hold up his hand at the bar of the great Iudge of al mankind, where hee ſhall ſee hell underneath him burning red hot, and opening it ſelfe wide to ſwallow him up: & on the right hand of God ſtāding all the Prophets, Apoſtles, and Saints of God, giving judgement against him: on the left hand, the divel and all his angels accusing him; & within him a guiltie conscience condemning him. And thus one day shall the arraignment of those persons bee, that with full purpose of heart cleave not to Christ; and yet alas, huge & infinite is the number of those which make more account of transitorie and earthly matters, even of their pigges with the Gaderens, then of him and his benefits: and such persons should rather be pitied then despised of us all, considering their estate is such, that every day they are going as traitours pinioned to their owne judgement, that they may goe thence to eternall execution.

Secondly, Christs arraignment is a comfort to the godly. For he was arraigned before Pilate, that all such as truely beleeve in him, might not bee arraigned before God at the day of the last judgement: he was accused before an earthly judge, that they might be cleared and excused before the heavenly Iudge: lastly, he was here condemned on earth, that we might receive the sentence of absolution, and be eternally saved in heaven.

The arraignment of Christ hath three parts: his apprehension, his accusation, his condemnation. In the apprehension wee must consider two things: the dealing of Christ: and the dealing of Iudas and the Iewes. The dealing and proceeding of Christ was this: when hee saw that the time of his apprehension and death was neere, hee solemnly prepared himselfe thereto. And his example must teach every one of us who know not the shortnesse of our daies, every houre to prepare our selves against the day of death, that then wee may be found ready of the Lord. What? shall the Sonne of God himselfe make preparation to his owne death, & shall not wee most miserable sinners doe the same, who stand in neede of a thousand preparations more then hee? wherefore let us continually thinke with our selves that every present day is the last day of our life, that so we may addresse our selves to death against the next day.

The first thing which Christ doth in this peeparation, is to make choice of the place, in which he was to be apprehended, as will appeare by conferring the Evangelists together. S. Matthew saith, Mat. 26. 36. He went to the place called Gethsemane: S. Luke saith, Luk. 22. 39. he went to the mount of Olives as he was accustomed. And that we might not imagine that Christ did this that he might escape and hide himselfe from the Iewes, Saint Iohn saith, Ioh. 18. 2. That Iudas which betraied him knew the place, because oftentimes he resorted thither with his Disciples: whereas if he had feared apprehension, he would have rather gon aside to some other secret & unwonted place. This then is the first point to be considered, that Christ knowing the time of his owne death to be at hand, doth willingly of his owne accord resort to such a place, in which his enemies in all likelihood might easily find him, and have fit oportunitie to attach him. For if hee should have still remained in Ierusalem, the Scribes and Pharisies durst not have enterprised his apprehension, because of the people whom they feared: but out of the citie in the gardē all occasion of feare is cut off. By this it is manifest, that Christ yeelded himselfe to death willingly, & not of constraint: & unlesse his sufferings had bin voluntary on his part, they could never have bin a satisfaction to Gods justice for our sins. Here a question offers it selfe to be considered, whether a man may lawfully flie in danger & persecution, seeing Christ himselfe doth not. Ans. When good meanes of flying & just occasion is offered, it is lawfull to flie. When the Iewes sought to kill Paul at Damascus, the Disciples tooke him by night, and put him through the wall, and let him downe in a basket to escape their hands. Act. 9. 25. Whē Moses was called by God to deliver the Israelites, after he had slaine the Egyptian, and the fact was knowne, & Pharaoh sought to kill him for it, he fled to the land of Madian. Exo. 2. 15. And our Saviour Christ sundry times whē he was to be stoned, and otherwaies hurt by the Iewes, withdrew himselfe from among thē. Ioh. 8. 59. & 10. 31. 39. Ioh. 11. 54. It is lawfull thē to flie in persecution, these caveats observed: I. If a man find not himself sufficiently strengthned to beare the crosse. II. his departure must be agreeable to the general calling of a christian, serving to the glory of God, and the good of his brethren, & the hurt of none. III. There must be freedome at the least for a time from the bond of a mans particular calling. If he be a Magistrate, he must be freed from ruling: If a Minister, from preaching & teaching, otherwise he may not flie. And in this respect Christ, who withdrew himself at othertimes, would not flie at this time; because the houre of his suffering was come, wherin he intended most willingly to submit himself to the good pleasure & wil of his father. Ioh. 18. 4.

The second part of the preparation, is the prayer which Christ made unto his Father in the garden. And heerein his example doth teach us earnestly to pray unto God against the danger of imminent death, and the temptations which are to come. And if Christ who was without sin, and had the spirit above measure, had need to pray, then much more have we need to be watchful in all kind of prayers, who are laden with the burthen of sinne, and compassed about with manifold impediments and dangerous enemies.

In this prayer sundry points worthy our marking are to be considered. The first, who prayed? Ans. Christ the Sonne of God: but still we must remember the distinction of natures and of their operations in one and the same Christ; he prayes not in his Godhead, but according to his manhood. The second, is, for whom he prayeth. Ans. Some have thought that this and all other his prayers were made for his mysticall body the Church; but the truth is, he now praies for himselfe, yet not as hee was God, for the godhead feeles no want; but as hee was a man abaſed in the forme of a ſervant; and that for two cauſes. Firſt, in that he was a man, he was a creature, and in that reſpect was to performe homage to God the Creator. Secondly, as he was man, hee put on the infirmities of our nature, and thereupon prayed that he might have ſtrength, and power in his manhood to ſupport him in bearing the whole brunt of the paſſion to come.

The third point, is to whom he praied? Anſ. To the Father: neither muſt this trouble us, as though Chriſt in praying to the Father, ſhould pray to himſelfe, becauſe he is one & the ſame God with him. For though in eſſence they admit no diſtinction, yet in perſon or in the proper manner of ſubſiſting they doe. The Father is one perſon, the Sonne another: therefore as the Father ſaying from heaven, This is my well beloved Sonne ſpake not to himſelfe, but to the Sonne: ſo againe the Sonne when he prayeth, he praies not to himſelfe, but to the Father.

The fourth point, what was the particular cauſe of his prayer. Anſ. His agony, in which his ſoule was heavie unto death: not becauſe he feared bodily death, but becauſe the malediction of the law, even the very heate of the furie & indignation of God was poured forth upon him, wherewith he was affected & troubled, as if he had bin defiled with the ſinnes of the whole world: and this appeares, firſt, by the words whereby the Evangeliſts expreſſe the agonie of Chriſt, which ſignifie exceeding great ſorrow and griefe: ſecondly, his dolefull complaint to his Diſciples in the garden; My ſoule is heavie unto the death: thirdly, by his fervent prayer thrice repeated, full of dolefull paſſions: fourthly, by the cõming of an angel to comfort him: fiftly, by his bloody ſweat, the like whereof was never heard. And herein lies the difference betweene Chriſts agony, & the death of Martyrs: he put on the guilt of all our ſinnes, they in death are freed from the ſame: he was left to himſelfe void of comfort, they in the midſt of their afflictions feele the unſpeakable comfort of the holy Ghoſt: and therefore wee neede not marvell why Chriſt ſhould pray againſt death, which nevertheleſſe his members have received and borne moſt joyfully. Againe, this moſt bitter agony of Chriſt is the ground of all our rejoycing, and the cauſe why Paul bids all the faithfull in the perſon of the Philippians, to rejoyce alwaies in the Lord, & againe to rejoyce. And here wee are further taught, that when we are plunged into a ſea of moſt grievous afflictions, & overwhelmed with the gulfes of moſt dreadfull temptations, even then, then I ſay, we ſhould not be diſcouraged, but lift up our hearts by fervent prayer to God. Thus did Chriſt when in the garden he was about to drink the cup of the wrath of God, & to ſuck up the very dregs of it: and Davids faith, that out of the deepes he called on the name of the Lord, and was heard.

Matt. 26. 37. ἀδημονῖν,

Pſal. 130.1

The fift point, what is the matter and forme of this prayer? Anſ. Chriſt prayes to be delivered from the death & paſſion which was to come, ſaying on this manner, Mar. 14. 35, 36. Father let this cup paſſe frõme: yet with two clauſes added thereto, If it be poſſible, and, Not my wil, but thy wil be done. But it may be demanded, how it could be, that Chriſt knowing that it was his Fathers will and counſell that hee ſhould ſuffer death for man, and alſo comming into the world for that end, ſhould make ſuch a requeſt to his Father without ſinne. Anſ. The requeſt proceeds only of a weakneſſe or infirmitie in Chriſts manhood without ſin, which appeares thus: Wee muſt ſtill conſider, that when hee made his prayer to his Father, the whole wrath of God, and the very dolours & pangs of hell ſeazed upon him: whereby the ſenſes and powers of his mind were aſtonied, and wholly bent to releeve nature in his agony. For as whẽ the heart is ſmitten with grief, all the blood in the body flows thither to comfort it: ſo when Chriſt was in this aſtoniſhmẽt, the underſtanding and memorie, and all the parts of his humane nature (as it were for a time ſuſpending their owne proper actions) concurred to ſuſtaine & ſupport the ſpirit and life of Chriſt, as much as poſſibly might bee. Now Chriſt being in the midſt of this perplexed eſtate, praies on this manner, Father, if it bee poſſible, let this cup paſſe. And theſe words proceede not from any ſin or diſobedience to his Fathers will, but only from a meere perturbation of minde, cauſed onely by an outward means, namely, the apprehenſion of Gods anger; which neither blinded his underſtanding nor tooke away his memorie, ſo as hee forgot his Fathers wil, but only ſtopped & ſtayed the act of reaſoning and remembring for a little time: even as in the moſt perfect clock that is, the motion may be ſtayed by the ayre, or by mans hand, or by ſome outward cauſe without any defect or breach, made in any part of it. It may be objected, that Chriſts will is flat contrary to the will of his Father. Anſ. Chriſts wil as he is man, & the will of his Father in this agony, were not contrary, but only diverſe, and that without any contradiction or contrarietie. Now a man may will a diverſe thing from that which God willeth, and that without ſin. Paul deſired to preach the word of God in Aſia and Bithynia, but he was hindred by the ſpirit. For all this, there is no contrariety between Paul and the ſpirit of God; but in ſhew of diſcord great conſent. For that which Paul willeth well, the ſpirit of God willeth not, by a better wil: though the reaſon hereof be ſecret, and the reaſon of Pauls will manifeſt. Againe, the miniſter in charity reputing the whole cõgregation to be elect, in holy manner ſeekes & wils the ſalvation of every one, which nevertheleſſe the Lord in his eternall counſell wils not. Now betweene both theſe wils there may be and is a difference without contrarietie. For one good thing as it is good may differ from another, but it cannot be cõtrary unto it. It may further be alleadged, that in this prayer there seemes to be a combate and fight in the minde, will, and affections of Christ, and therfore sin. Ans. There bee three kinds of combates: the one between reason and appetite, and this fight is alwaies sinfull, and was not in Christ: the second, is betweene the flesh and the spirit, and this may be in Gods child, who is but in part regenerate; but it did not befall Christ who was perfectly holy: the third, is the combat of divers desires, upon sundry respects drawing a man to and fro. This may be in mans nature without fault: and was in Christ, in whom the desire of doing his Fathers will, striving and strugling with another desire, whereby nature seekes to preserve it selfe, caused him to pray in this manner.

Ioh. 12. 27.

Act. 16. 6, 7.

The sixt point is, in what manner Christ prayed. Ans. He prayed to his Father partly kneeling, partly lying on his face, & that with strong cries & tears, sweating water & blood, and all this hee did for our sinnes. Here then behold the agony of Christ, as a cleere cristall, in which we may fully see the exceeding greatnesse of our sinnes, as also the hardnesse of our hearts. We goe vaunting with our heads to heaven as though it were nothing to sinne against God, whereas the horror of the wrath of God for our rebellions, brought downe even the Sonne of God himselfe, and laid him groveling upon the earth. And wee cannot so much almost as shed one teare for our iniquities, whereas he sweats blood for us. Oh let us therefore learne to abase our selves, & to carry about us contrite and bleeding hearts, and bee confounded in our selves for our sins past.

The last point, is the event of the prayer, which is to be heard, as the author to the Hebrewes saith, Heb.5.7. Christ Iesus in the daies of his flesh, did offer up unto his Father prayers and supplications, with strong crying and teares, unto him, that was able to save him: and was also heard in that thing which he feared. But some will say, how was Christ heard, seing he suffered death and bare the pangs of hell and the full wrath of God? if he had beene heard, he should have beene delivered from all this. Answer. Wee must know that God heares our prayers two waies: I. When hee directly grants our requests. II. When knowing what is good for us, he gives not us our requests directly, but a thing answerable thereunto. And thus was Christ heard: for hee was not delivered from suffering; but yet hee had strength and power given him, whereby his manhood was made able to beare the brunt of Gods wrath. And in the same manner God heareth the prayers of his servants upon earth. Paul prayed to bee delivered from the angel of Satan that buffeted him: but the Lord answered that it should not so be, because his grace wherby he was inabled to resist his temptation, was sufficient: & Paul finding the fruit of his prayers on this manner, protests hereupon that he will rejoyce in his infirmities. Others pray for temporall blessings, as health, life, libertie, &c. which notwithstanding God holds backe, and gives in stead thereof spirituall graces, patience, faith, contentation of mind. Augustine saith, God heares not our prayers alwaies according to our wils, and desires, but according as the things asked, shall be for our salvation. He is like the Physitian, who goes on to launce the wound, and heares not the patient though hee cry never so, till the cure be ended.

Now followeth the second thing to be considered in Christs apprehension, namely, the dealing of the Iewes: wherein we must consider foure things: I. How they consult together concerning Christs apprehension. II. How they came to the place & met him. III. How they laid hands on him. IV. How they bound him and tooke him away. For the first, before they enterprised this matter, they did wisely and warily lay their heads together, to consult of the time and place: and also of the manner of apprehending him. So St. Matthew saith, Mat. 26.3,4,5. There assembled together the chiefe Priests & the Scribes, and the Elders of the people into the Hall of the chiefe Priest called Caiphas: and consulted how they might take Iesus by subtiltie. Whence we learne two good instructions: first, the Iewes having a quarrell against Christ, could never be at rest till they had his blood: and therefore they consult how they might take him; but God did so order the matter, and dispose of their purposes and consultations, that even thereby hee did confound them, and their whole nation. For by reason of this hainous sinne against Christ, came the just wrath of God upon them, and so remaineth unto this day. Whereby we see, that the Lord will overthrow such in their owne wisedome, that wil be wise without the direction of Gods Word, and against Christ. And thus it was with Achitophel, who for wisedome was as the Oracle of God: yet because hee rebelled against the Lords annointed, God confounded him in his owne wisedome. For when his counsell which hee gave against David was not followed, hee thought himselfe despised, as the text saith, 2 Sam. 17. 23. and sadled his Asse, and rose and went home into his citie, and put his household in order, and hanged himselfe: and in this action he shewed himselfe more senselesse then a bruite beast. And in our daies, the Leagures that have bound themselves by oath to root out the Church of God; by his most wonderfull providence turne their swords against themselves, and destroy each other. Therefore if we would be wise, we must learne to be wise in Christ: for else our counsell wil be our own confusion. Secondly, hence we learne, that if any shall live in stubbornnes and rebellion against Christ, the Lord will so carry and order those men, or that people, that in the end they shall bee the very causes of their own perditiō. This we see most plainly in the example of these Iewes: for they evermore envied Christ, & now they go on to take counsell against him; but God so disposed thereof, that even by this meanes they brought destruction upon themselves and their country. This must teach thee to take heede how thou livest in thy sins: for if thou doe so, the Lord hath many waies to worke thy confusion: as, thy conscience to condemn e thee; thy friends to forsake thee; the divell and his angels to torment & molest thee; and his creatures to annoy thee: Yea, the Lord can leave all these, and make thine owne selfe to bee the direct meanes of working thine owne confusion both in body and soule eternally: and that even then when thou art most warie and wise in thine owne behalfe: and this is the reward of all those that walke on in their evill wayes without any true conversion.

Heb.5.7.

2 Cor.12. 9.

Having consulted, in the next place they come to the garden, where Christ was to bee apprehended. And here wee are to consider who they were that came, namely, the Scribes and Pharisies, the high Priests and their servants, a band of souldiers, and the servants of Pontius Pilate, and the Elders of the Iewes: all which came with one consent to the place where Christ was, that they might attach him. Where we learn a good lesson, that all sorts of wicked men disagreeing among themselves, can agree against Christ. The Scribes and Pharisies were two contrary sects, and at discord one with another in matters of religion: and Iudas was one of Christs disciples: the Elders differed from them all: the souldiers were Gentiles: all these were at variance among themselves, and could not one brooke another. So also wee reade that Herod and Pontius Pilate were not friends: but at the same time when Christ was apprehended, Pilate sent him to Herod, and they were made friends. Now as these wicked men did conspire against Christ; so doe the wicked ones of this world in all countries and kingdomes band themselves against the Church of Christ at this day. And howsoever such bee at discord among themselves, yet they doe all joyne hand in hand to persecute Christ in his members. And the reason is plaine; because Christ and his religion is as flat opposite to the corrupt disposition of all men, as light is to darkenesse.

Mat. 26. 47. Luk. 22. 47. Ioh. 18. 3.

Luk. 23. 12.

Again, whereas we see so many sorts of men so amiably consenting to take Christ; we may note how all men naturally doe hate and abhorre him, and his religion. And looke as then it was with Christ, so hath it beene with all his members, and will be to the end of the world. They are accounted as the off-scouring of the world, men not worthy to live on the face of the earth: as Christ told his Disciples, saying: Ye shall be hated of all nations for my names sake.

Mat. 24. 9

Let us also marke how all these came furnished to apprehend Christ: the text saith, They came with clubs and staves as unto a theife. All the whole nation of the Iewes knew right well, that Christ was no man of violence, but meek and lowly: and yet they came armed to

Luk 22. 52.

A apprehend him; as though hee had beene some mightie potentate that would not have beene apprehended, but have resisted them. Where we see the propertie of an evill conscience, which is to feare where there is no cause at all. This causeth some to bee afraid of their owne shadowes: and if they see but a worme peepe out of the ground, they are at their wits end; and as Salomon saith, Pro. 28. 1. The wicked flee when none pursueth them.

After that they are now come to Christ, we are to consider two things in their meetings: I. Christs communication with them. II. The treason of Iudas. Concerning their conference, it is said: Iesus knowing all things that should come B unto him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seeke ye? They answered him, Iesus of Nazareth: Iesus answered, I am he. Now so soone as he had said, I am hee, the stoutest of them fell to the ground, as being astonished at the majestie of his word. Where note, that the Word of God is a word of power. The same power was in his word when he raised up Lazarus: for when he had lien in the grave, and had entred into some degrees of corruption, hee did no more, but said, Lazarus come forth. And hence wee may also marke what a wonderful might & power is in the Word preached: for it is the very word of Christ, and therefore being preached by his Ministers lawfully called by him thereunto, hath the same power and force in it, which Christ himselfe shewed when he spake on earth. It is the savour of life unto life, to save C those that heare it: or the savour of death unto death. It is like to a vapour or perfume in the ayre, which in some mens nostrils is savorie & pleasant, and doth revive them; and others againe it striketh dead. And therefore every one that either now, or heretofore hath heard this word preached, shall find it to be unto thē either a word of power to save their soules, or through their corruption the ministry of death and condemnation. Againe, if a word spoken by Christ, being in a base or low estate, be able to overthrow his enemies, then at the last day when he shall come in glorie, and power, and majestie to judge both the quick and the dead, what power shall his words have, Go you cursed D of my Father into everlasting fire, which was prepared for the divell & his angels. The consideration of this, that the word of Christ shall even be as powerfull at that day, must bee a motive to every one of us to cause us to come unto him: and while we have time in these daies of grace and mercie to seeke to be reconciled unto him for all our sinnes, lest at the day wee heare that dreadfull voice of Christ sounding against us, Go ye cursed into everlasting fire, &c.

Ioh. 18. 4, 5, 6.

Ioh. 11. 43.

2 Cor. 2. 16.

Mat. 25. 41.

And thus much for the communication. Now followeth Iudas his treason: wherein we are to observe these things: I. The qualities and conditions of the man that did the treason. He was by calling a disciple chosen to be an Apostle, which is the chiefest in Ecclesiastical callings, and among the disciples he was in

in ſome account; becauſe he was as it were a ſteward in Chriſts family, and bare the bag: but yet he was a traytor, and did more againſt Chriſt then all the Iewes did. For he brought them to the place where they might apprehend him: and when they were come, did point him out unto them, and delivered him into their hands: nay, he gave them a ſigne and token, ſaying, Whom I kiſſe, he it is: take him and leade him away warily. Here we ſee the cauſe why Chriſt called Iudas a divell: for he ſaid: Have I not choſen you twelve, and one of you is a divell? He became to be a divell and a traitor by nouriſhing a wicked and covetous heart. And here we are taught, that the Miniſters of the word, if they make no conſcience of ſinne, by the juſt judgement of God doe proove divels incarnate: this example of Iudas doth manifeſt the ſame: and the reaſon is plaine, for the more knowledge a man hath, the more wicked he is, if he want grace. They are like in this caſe unto a man that hath meate and drinke enough, but no ſtomacke to digeſt meate: whereby the more he eateth, the more it turneth to his hurt. This I ſpeake not to deface the callings of Miniſters, but that thoſe which preach Gods Word, ſhould not doe it with impenitent hearts, living in their owne ſinnes. For it is a fearefull thing for a man to ſpeake unto the people, of the pardon of their ſinnes, and yet himſelfe not to apprehend the ſame by faith. A lumpe of waxe if you keepe it from heate, or from the fire, it keepes his owne forme ſtill, but if it be held to the fire, it melts and runnes abroad: ſo Miniſters who by reaſon of their callings come neere God, if they be lumps of iniquitie and live in their ſinnes, they ſhall finde that the corruptions of their hearts will melt abroad as waxe at the fire. And therefore every one that is deſigned to this calling, muſt firſt purge himſelfe of his owne ſinne, or elſe Gods judgements ſhall fall upon him, as they did on Iudas that betrayed Chriſt.

Mark. 14. 45.

Ioh. 6. 80.

Ier. 15. 19.

Iſa. 6. 5. Act. 20. 28.

Secondly, let us conſider what mooved Iudas to betray his Maſter: namely, the deſire of wealth and gaine: and this covetouſnes, which is an inſatiable deſire of money, is the root of all ſinne: not that all ſinnes came of it, but becauſe where it is, there all other ſinnes are preſerved, and doe get ſtrength. The deſire of thirtie peeces of ſilver cauſed Iudas to make an agreement with the Iewes to betray his maſter. Some man will haply ſay, that this practice of Iudas was very ſtrange, and that no man now living would doe the like for any money. Anſw. Iudas is dead indeed, but his practice is yet alive: for in the high and weightie calling of the miniſtery, he that hath charge of ſoules, and either cannot teach, and feed his flocke, or elſe will not, though he betray not Chriſt in his owne perſon, yet he betraies the members of Chriſt unto the divell. If a nource ſhould take a mans child to bring up, and yet ſeldome or never give it milke; in ſo much that the childe pineth away for very hunger, is not ſhe the very cauſe of the death of it? yes verily. And ſo it is with him that taketh upon him the charge of Gods people, and never feeds them with the milke of Gods word, or elſe ſo ſeldome that their ſoules doe famiſh: he is the murtherer of them, and hath betrayed them into the hands of their enemies: and ſhall bee condemned for them as a traitour unto God unleſſe he repent. Beſides thoſe that live by traffique in buying and ſelling, make gaine by lying, ſwearing, and breaking the Lords Sabbath; even they alſo are very Iudaſſes: for they chop away their ſoules with the divell for a little gaine. And more lamentable is their caſe becauſe it is hard to finde one of a hundred in the world that makes conſcience of a lie, or of any bad dealing; if any gaine at all may come thereby. Men uſe to cry out on Iudas for betraying Chriſt: and they doe well; yet they themſelves for a little worldly pelfe betray their owne ſoules. If ſuch would not be counted Iudaſſes, they muſt leave off ſinne, and keepe a good conſcience in Gods worſhip, and the works of their callings.

1 Tim. 6. 10.

Thirdly, let us conſider what courſe Iudas tooke in betraying Chriſt, he was very ſubmiſſe, ſaying. Haile, Maſter, and kiſſed him. Why did he ſo? herein he plaied the moſt palpable hypocrite: for having gotten a peece of money, hee thought that neither Chriſt, nor any of his fellow diſciples ſhould have known of it, (though Chriſt knew it well enough) and therefore hee comes in this manner to him, thinking that Chriſt would have conveyed himſelf from amongſt them at the very pinch as he had done ſometimes before. And this practice alſo of Iudas is common in the world: Iudas an enemy unto Chriſt ſpeaks him faire, and ſalutes him: and ſo doe moſt of our ſecure and drowſie proteſtants in England: they ſalute Chriſt, both by hearing his Word and receiving his Sacraments: and as the Prophet ſaith, They honour God with their lips, but their hearts are farre from him. We may ſee daily experience of this: every man will ſay, Lord, Lord, but in their lives and converſations, few there bee that deny him not, both in their duties which they owe unto God, as alſo in their duties towards their brethren. Many come to heare Gods Word becauſe they are compelled by the Magiſtrates lawes: but when they are come, they worſhip not God in their hearts, which is plainely ſeene by the breach of Gods holy Sabbath in every place: and that they make more account of a meſſe of pottage with Eſau, then of their birth-right: and of thirty peeces of ſilver, then of Chriſt himſelfe.

Luk. 22. 47.

Iſa. 29. 13

The third point to bee handled in Chriſts apprehenſion, is that they lay hold on him: wherein we muſt conſider two things. I. the reſiſtance made by Chriſts diſciples. II. their flight. For the firſt, Chriſts diſciples reſiſted, and ſpecially Peter drawing his ſword, ſtroke one of the high Prieſts ſervants, and cut off his eare.

Mat. 26. 51.

This fact our Saviour Chriſt reprooves: and that for theſe cauſes. Firſt, becauſe his diſciples were private men; and they that came to apprehend him were Magiſtrates. Secondly, he was to worke the worke of mans redemption: now Peter by this fact did what he could to hinder him. And from this practice of Peter we may learne, that nothing in the world is ſo hard to a man, as to take up his croſſe and follow Chriſt. One would thinke it ſhould be a hard matter for him to encounter with his enemies, eſpecially they being ſtronger then hee; but Peter ſtoutly reſiſting makes nothing of it: whereas a little before when Chriſt told him and the reſt concerning his paſſion, they were ſo heavie with griefe that they could not hold up their heads: ſo hard a thing it is to beare the croſſe; and for this very cauſe afterward when Chriſt reprooved him for ſtriking, both he and all the reſt of the diſciples fled away. Secondly, Peter in all mans reaſon was to bee commended, becauſe hee ſtrake in the defence of his maſter; but Chriſt reprooves him for it. Whence we learne, that if a man be zealous for Chriſt, he muſt be zealous within the compaſſe of his calling: and not be zealous firſt, and then looke for a calling, but firſt looke for a calling, and then be zealous. Which thing if Peter had marked, he had not dealt ſo raſhly; for being without the compaſſe of his calling hee could not but doe amiſſe. Here it may be demanded, whether Chriſt and his religion may not bee maintained by the ſword? I anſwer, that the Magiſtrate, which is the Vicegerent of the Lord, is the keeper of both tables: and therefore is to maintaine religion with the ſword: and ſo may put to death Atheiſts, which hold there is no God, of which ſort there are many in theſe daies: and heretikes, which maliciouſly maintaine, and hold any thing that overthrowes the foundation of religion in the Churches whereof they are members. But ſome object, that in the parable of the field, the ſervants are commanded not to plucke up the tares from the wheat, but to ſuffer both to grow till harveſt? and that therefore there muſt be no ſeparation of heretikes and true Chriſtians before the laſt day of judgement. Anſw. The ſcope of that place is not to forbid the execution of heretikes; but it ſpeakes onely of the finall ſeparation which muſt be in the end of the world. For there the maſter of the family doth ſignifie God himſelfe, and the field, the Church Militant ſpread over the face of the whole earth: and by tares is meant not onely heretikes, but alſo thoſe that are forth of the Church: the ſervants are Gods holy Angels, and the harveſt is the laſt judgement. Here further it may be demanded, who may uſe the ſword? Anſw. All men may uſe the ſword to ſtrike and to kill, into whoſe hands God putteth the ſword. Now God putteth it into the hand; firſt and principally of the publike Magiſtrate, who when juſt occaſion ſerves, may

Matth. 13. 30.

A draw it out. And againe, it is put into a private mans hand ſometime. A private man when he is aſſailed of his enemy, may take the ſword in way of his owne defence, and may kill his enemy therewith (if there be no other helpe) not doing it upon malice, but becauſe he can no otherwiſe eſcape, and ſave his own life: and ſo for want of a Magiſtrate, he is a Magiſtrate unto himſelfe.

In the flight of the Diſciples we may conſider two things: the time, and the qualitie of the perſons. The time, was at the apprehenſion of our Lord and Saviour. And this came to paſſe not without the ſpeciall providence of God: that it might be knowne that Chriſt had

B no helper or fellow in the accompliſhment of the worke of our redemption: and that, whereas we for our ſinnes deſerved to be forſaken of all creatures, he being our pledge and ſuretie might be forſaken for us. As for the qualitie of the perſons that flie, they were the choſen diſciples of Chriſt, ſuch as had beleeved in him, confeſſed him, and preached in his name. And this ſerveth to teach us, that GOD will otherwhiles forſake his owne children and ſervants, and leave them to themſelves in ſome part, that they may feele their wants and miſeries, and their weakeneſſe in themſelves, and by that meanes be humbled thoroughly, and be touched with an hungring deſire after Chriſt. As a mother ſets downe her childe and hides her ſelfe ſuffering it to cry, fall, and breake the

C face, not becauſe ſhee hates it, but that ſhee may teach it to depend upon her, and love her; ſo God giveth grace to his children, and yet againe ſometime he doth in part withdraw it from them, and then they faile in their duties ſundry wayes: and this he doth to make them aſhamed of themſelves, and to cauſe them to put all their confidence out of themſelves in the merits of Chriſt.

The fourth thing to bee conſidered in Chriſts apprehenſion, is their binding of him. In which action of theirs wee are to obſerve firſt of all the circumſtance of time, when this binding was. When our Saviour Chriſt had ſaid unto them, I am he, they being aſtoniſhed

D fell to the ground: and withall, when Peter had ſmitten off Malchus eare with the ſword, Chriſt healed the ſame miraculouſly. Yet for all this, though they had ſeene his wonderfull power both in word and deed, they proceed in malice againſt him; and lay hands on him, and binde him as a malefactor. In this we note what a fearefull ſinne hardneſſe of heart is: the danger whereof appeareth in this, that if a man bee overtaken with it, there is nothing that can ſtay or daunt him in his wicked proceedings: no not the powerfull words & deeds of Chriſt himſelfe. And indeed among Gods judgements there is none more fearefull then this: and yet (how fearefull ſoever it be) it is a rife ſinne among us in theſe our daies. For it is very evident by common experience, that the more men are taught the doctrine of the law, and of the Gospel, the more hard and senseleſſe are their hearts: like unto the ſtithy; which, the more it is beaten upon with the yron hammer, the harder it is. And againe, it is hard to finde men that ſorrow for their ſinnes, and feele the want of Chriſt: which argueth the exceeding deadneſſe of ſpirit. And let us be reſolved that it is a moſt terrible judgement of God, the rather to bee feared, becauſe it is like a pleaſant ſleepe, into which when a man is falne, hee feeles neither paine nor griefe. And therefore wee for our parts muſt looke unto it with feare and trembling, leſt it take ſuch hold of us that we be paſt all hope of recovery.

Furthermore, this binding of Chriſt was prefigured unto us in the ſacrifices of the old Teſtament: for the beaſt that was to be ſacrificed, was tyed with cords, and bound, and ſo brought to the altar. And whereas Chriſt was bound, wee muſt not conſider him in his owne perſon: but as he ſtanding in our roome and ſtead, beares the perſon of all ſinners: and therefore whereas he is thus taken captive by his enemies, to be brought before a mortall judge, there to be arraigned for us; hence wee learne two good inſtructions. Firſt, here is a comfort to all the people of God: Chriſt was bound by his enemies, that they might be unlooſed from the bondage of Satan, ſinne, and their owne corruptions (under which they lie bound by nature) and might have free libertie in and by him. Secondly, all impenitent ſinners are taught hereby to reforme and amend their hearts and lives. For what exceeding madneſſe is this, that they by Chriſts bonds being ſet at libertie, will yet live and die in their ſinnes, and take pleaſure to lie bound hand and foote under the power of ſinne and Satan. And indeed this ſhewes unto us the fearefull and dangerous eſtate of all thoſe that goe on ſtill in their ſinnes. For what can they ſay for themſelves at the day of judgement, when as now they have freedome offered, and will not accept of it?

Thus much of Chriſts apprehenſion: now followeth the inditement. For they proceed againſt him judicially, after the cuſtome of the Iewes. Chriſts inditement was two-fold. One before Caiphas the high prieſt in the great Councell at Ieruſalem; the ſecond before the civill Iudge Pontius Pilate, as is plainly ſet forth by all the Evangeliſts. And Chriſts arraignment before Caiphas was a preparation to the ſecond before Pontius Pilate, that the Iewes might throughly proceed againſt him. In the firſt we are to conſider theſe points: I. The time, in which Chriſt was indited. II. The end of his inditement. III. The whole tenour and proceeding thereof. For the firſt: Chriſt was indited earely in the morning at the breake of the day: for he was apprehended in the night, and withall haſt brought into Caiphas hall, where they kept him all night: and at the breake of the day Caiphas the high prieſt Math. 26. 57. Mark. 14. 53. Luke 22. 66. Ioh. 18. 19.

A and the Elders with the Scribes and Phariſees, held a ſolemne councell againſt him: and there they received accuſations and condemned him before morning, at which time they ſent him to the common Hall, as Saint Matthew ſaith, When the morning was come, all the chiefe Prieſts and Elders of the people tooke counſell againſt Ieſus to put him to death: and led him away bound, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate. In which action of theirs we are to marke two points. Firſt, the diligence of ungodly men, and the quickneſſe of their nature to practiſe ſin and wickedneſſe: as it was ſaid of the old Iewes, their feet runne to evill, and they make haſte to ſhed blood. When the Iſraelites would ſacrifice to the golden calfe which they had made, it is ſaid they roſe up earely in the morning. Hence it appeares, that if God leave us to our ſelves, we are as ready to practiſe any miſchiefe as the fire is to burne without delay, and that with much violence. Now the conſideration of this muſt moove every one of us to take heed of all occaſions and provocations to ſinne whatſoever they be, that the corruption of our nature breake not forth any way. Secondly, in the circumſtance of the time of this Councell, we may marke the raſhneſſe of this ſolemne aſſembly in judiciall proceedings: whereas they examine him both of his doctrine, and alſo of his Diſciples, omitting ſuch circumſtances as ſhould have beene uſed, as the ſerious examining of witneſſes, and the weighing of his contrary anſwers: for he is taken and brought before the Iudge and condemned on the ſudden. Now as this was the practice of the Councell, ſo on the contrary the common complaint of theſe times is of the ſlow diſpatch of matters in law, and of the long delay: in ſo much that ſome be almoſt undone before their ſuits be ended; whereas judiciall proceedings were ordained by God, not for mens undoing, but for the maintaining of the common peace, and libertie, and wealth. And therefore juſtice ought to be diſpatched with ſuch ſpeed, as men thereby might be furthered and not hindered.

Math. 27. 1, 2.

Iſa. 59. 7.

Exod. 32. 6.

D The end of Chriſts inditement was directly to kill him, and to put him to death. Here is no indifferent proceeding to bee looked for, but plotting on every hand for the very blood of Chriſt. Where note, that in the hearts of all wicked men, there is an ingrafted hatred of Chriſt, and as it were bred in the bone: and the ſame affection the world carryeth to the members of Chriſt. This hatred is manifeſt in the firſt giving the promiſe, I will put enmity betweene thee and the woman, betweene thy ſeed and her ſeed, It appeares in the hatred that Cain bare to his brother Abel; Iſmael towards Iſaac; Eſau towards Iacob: and the Gentiles that were without the covenant, towards the Church of God at all times. And to come neere to our ſelves, this ingrafted hatred that is in the heart of the wicked againſt Chriſt and his members, is as plentifull and as evident as ever it was, even in these our daies. For among all men none are more maligned and hated then those that professe Christ: and for none other cause, but because they professe Christ. And hereupon the very profession of religion is laden with nicke-names and reprochfull tearmes by all sorts of men.

Math. 26. 59. Math. 14. 55.

Gen. 3. 15.

And thus much of the end and intent of their Councell. The proceeding in judgement stands in these points. I. They examine Christ II. They bring witnesses against him. III. They adjure him to tell them who hee is: of these in order. First, they examine our Saviour Christ of his doctrine, suspecting him to be a false prophet: secondarily, of his disciples, as suspecting him sediciously to raise up a new sect unto himselfe, to make a faction amongst the Iewes. Now to this examination let us marke Christs answer, in which he saith nothing at all concerning his disciples: whereas notwithstanding he might have said, that one of them betraied him, another denied him, and the rest fled away: whereby we note that it is not our duty at all times, and in all places, to speake of the faults & wants that we know by others. Secondly, the answer which he makes is only concerning his doctrine: whereby the Ministers of God and all men else are taught, that beeing called before their enemies, to give a reason of their doctrine; they are (as Saint Peter saith) to be alwaies ready to give an account of the hope that is in them. And further we are to consider the wisedome that Christ useth in answering, for he saith nothing of his doctrine in particular, but said, I spake openly in the world, I ever taught in the Synagogue, & in the Temple whither the Iewes resorted: in secret have I taught nothing: aske them therefore what I said which heard me: behold they can tell you what I said. Now the reason why he answered thus sparingly in generall tearmes; is because their examination served onely to intangle him, and out of his words to gather matter of accusation. After whose example we may learne, that being called to make answer of our faith and doctrine before our enemies, we are to doe it so, as thereby we doe not intangle our selves, nor give any advantage unto our enemies: and hereof we have a notable example in the Apostle Paul, Act. 23.6. Againe, in the words of Christs answer we must observe two things. First; that the place where Christ taught was publike. Now hence it may bee demanded, whether Ministers may handle the Word of God privately or no? Ans. The state of Gods Church is two-fold: peaceable, or troublesome. In the time of peace, Ministers must preach the word publikely: but in time of persecution, for the safetie and preservation of the Church of God, they may with good warrant preach privately: and indeede at such times the assemblies of the Church make private places publike. And hence we learne, that in time of peace all those that are called to the office of the ministery, must (if it be possible) spend their labours publikely, so as they may doe most good. Secondly, whereas Christ saith, hee preached in their Synagogues and Temple, which at that time were places full of disorder; insomuch as he called the Temple a den of theeves: and the Scribes and Pharisees had corrupted the doctrine of the law, transgressing the commandements of God by their owne traditions: and they taught justification by the works of the law, as Paul saith, They being ignorant of the righteousnesse of God, and going about to establish their owne righteousnesse, which is by works, had not submitted themselves to the righteousnesse of God. Besides all this, they were loose and wicked men in their lives and conversations: and therefore Christ commanded the people that they should observe, and doe whatsoever the Scribes and Pharisees bid them, sitting in Moses chaire: but after their workes they must not doe; because they say and doe not. Now although these corruptions and deformities were in the Iewish Church, yet our Saviour Christ made no separation from it, but came and preached both in their Temple and Synagogues, where these seducers and false teachers were. And hence we gather, that the practice of all those men in our Church, which separate themselves from all assemblies for the wants thereof, holding that our Church is no Church; that the grace which is wrought by the preaching of the word among us, is nothing else but a sathanicall illusion; that Sacraments are no sacraments; I say, that their practice is condemned by our Saviours Christs conversing among the Iewes. For if Christ should have followed their opinion, he ought to have fled from amongst the Iewes, and not so much as once to have come into the Temple, or taught in their Synagogues; but contrariwise he joyned himselfe with them: and therefore wee cannot in good conscience disjoyne our selves from the Church of England. The second thing to bee observed in Christs answer, is that he referres Caiphas to the judgement of his hearers, being resolved of the truth of his owne doctrine; though sundry of them were his utter enemies. Behold then a good example for all the Ministers of Gods word to follow; teaching them to deliver Gods word so purely and sincerely, that if they be called into question about the same, they may be bold to appeale to the consciences of their hearers although they be wicked men.

Now after this answer, one of the servants of Caiphas smites Christ with a rod; in whom the saying is verified, Like master, like servant: that is, if the masters bee wicked, servants commonly wil be wicked also; if the master be an enemy to Christ, his servant will be Christs enemy also. And this is the cause why there are so many lewd apprentises and servants, because there are so many lewd masters. Many masters complain of servants now adaies; but there is more cause why they should complaine of themſelves: for uſually ſervants will not become obedient to their maſters, till their maſters firſt become obedient unto Chriſt: therefore let maſters learne to obey God, and then their ſervants will obey them alſo.

Further, Chriſt being ſmitten, makes this anſwer, If I have evill ſpoken, beare witneſſe of the evill: but if I have well ſpoken, why ſmiteſt thou me? making complaint of an injury done unto him. Now hereupon ſcoffing Iulian the Apoſtata ſaith, Chriſt keepes not his owne lawes, but goes againſt his owne precept; when as he ſaid, If one ſtrike thee on the one cheeke, turne to him the other alſo. But we muſt know, that in theſe words Chriſts meaning is, that a man muſt rather ſuffer a double wrong, then ſeeke a private revenge. And therefore Chriſt ſpake in his owne defence, which a man may lawfully doe, and not ſeeke any revenge: for it is one thing to defend his owne cauſe, and another to ſeeke revenge.

Ioh. 18. 23.

Matth. 5. 39.

Now followes the ſecond point in their proceeding, which is, the producing of falſe witneſſes againſt him; as Saint Matthew ſaith, The whole Councell ſought falſe witneſſe againſt him, and though many came, yet found they none: for they could not agree together, becauſe they alleadged falſe things againſt him; which they could not proove. And thus the members of Chriſt have often ſuch enemies as make no bones ſhamefully to avouch that againſt them, which they cannot be able to juſtifie. The ten perſecutions which were in the firſt 300. yeeres after Chriſt, aroſe oftentimes of ſhameleſſe reports that men gave out, which ſaid that. 1. Chriſtians lived on mans fleſh: and therefore ſlue their owne children: 2. that they lived on raw fleſh: 3. that they committed inceſt one with an other in their aſſemblies: 4. that they worſhipped the head of an aſſe: 5. that they worſhipped the Sunne and Moone: 6. that they were traytours, and ſought to undermine the Romane Empire: and laſtly, whereſoever was thunder or earth-quakes, ſeditions or tumults, or any diſquietnes or trouble, Chriſtians were accuſed as the authors thereof. Such enemies have they had in all ages: and in theſe our dayes the ſame is practiſed, and will be to the worlds end. Now when the firſt witneſſes could not agree among themſelves, then two other falſe witneſſes came forth, which avouched that Chriſt ſaid, I will deſtroy this Temple made with hands, and within three dayes will build an other made without hands. Indeed Chriſt ſaid ſome ſuch words; for ſaith he, Deſtroy this Temple, & within three dayes I will build it up againe. But he ſpake this of the temple of his body: whereas they maliciouſly did interpret him to have ſpoken of the temple in Ieruſalem. And againe, they change the words, for Chriſt ſaid, Deſtroy this temple, &c. but theſe witneſſes affirme he ſaid, I will deſtroy this temple made with hands, &c. And thus they change both words and meaning: and therefore the holy Ghoſt called them falſe witneſſes. By this we muſt be adverti-ſed to take heed how we report mens words: for if we change the meaning, though in part we retaine the words, we may ſoone become ſlanderers and falſe witneſſes: and as this duty muſt be performed towards all men, ſo eſpecially towards the miniſters of the Goſpel: and the neglect of this dutie procureth many ſlanders to them in this our Church; whereof indeed the reporters are the cauſe, and not the miniſters themſelves.

Mark. 14. 58.

Iohn 2. 19. Verſe 21.

Now at this falſe accuſation Chriſt was ſilent, ſo as Caiphas asked him, why he anſwered nothing. Herein wee are to conſider many things: I. Why Chriſt was ſilent. The cauſes be two: firſt, he was to ſhew himſelf a patterne of true humilitie and patience; therefore even then would he be ſilent, when hee was moſt falſely accuſed of his adverſaries. Secondly, he is ſilent, that ſtanding before the judge to be condemned, the ſentence might proceed againſt him, and he might ſuffer the death appointed, which was due unto us, and ſo become our redeemer. And in Chriſts example wee muſt note, that it is a ſpeciall dutie to know when to ſpeake, and when to be ſilent. The ordering of the tongue is a rare gift, and few attaine unto it. Some will peradventure aske, what rule wee have to direct us herein? Anſw. The generall rule for the ordering of the tongue, is the law of God. Wee are commanded to ſeeke the glory of God in the firſt table; and in the ſecond, the good of our neighbour: when thy ſpeech therefore will ſerve either for Gods glory, or the good of thy neighbour, then thou muſt ſpeake: if it ſerve for neither, then be ſilent. Againe, if thy ſilence be either for Gods glory, or the good of thy neighbour then be ſilent: if it will not, then ſpeake. And becauſe it is hard for a man to know when his ſpeech or ſilence will ſerve for theſe two ends: therefore we muſt pray unto God that he will teach and direct us herein: as David doth, Set a watch (ſaith he) O Lord, before my mouth, and keepe the doore of my lips: and againe, Open thou my lips, O Lord, and my mouth ſhall ſhew forth thy praiſe.

Mark. 14. 60, 61.

Pſal. 51. 15.

Thus much for the falſe witneſſes produced. Now followeth the third point, which is, the adjuring of Chriſt: for Caiphas the high Prieſt charged him to tel him whether he were the Chriſt the ſonne of God or no. To adjure a man, is to charge and command him in the name of God, to declare a truth, not onely becauſe God is witneſſe thereof, but alſo becauſe hee is a judge to revenge, if he ſpeake not the truth. Thus Paul adjureth the Theſſalonians, charging them in the Lord, that his epiſtle ſhould bee read unto all the brethren the Saints. And the like doth Caiphas to Chriſt. And here is a thing to be wondered at, Caiphas the high prieſt adjureth him in the name of God, who is very God, even the Son of God. And this ſhews what a ſmall account he made of the name of God; for he did it onely to get advantage on Christs words: and so doe many now adaies, who for a little profit or gaine make a matter of nothing to abuse the name of God a thousand waies.

Christ being thus adjured, though silent before, yet now in reverence to Gods majestie, answered and said: first, Thou hast said it: and in Saint Marke, I am he. In this answer, appeares the wonderfull providence of God. For though Caiphas take hence the occasion of condemning Christ, yet he hath withal drawn from him a most excellent confession, that hee is the Son of God, and our alone Saviour. And by this meanes hee proceeds to shut heaven against himselfe, and to open the same for us.

Matth. 26.64. Mar. 14. 62. Ioh. 19.7.

Thus wee have ended the first inditement of Christ before Caiphas. Now followeth the second, which was before Pontius Pilate, in the common hall at Ierusalem. The historie of it is set downe at large in all the Evangelists. In the second inditement of Christ (that wee may referre every matter to his place) we are to observe foure things: I. The accusation of Christ before Pilate. II. His examination. III. Pilates policie to save Christ. IV. Pilates absolving of him; and then the condemnation of Christ in both courts, Ecclesiasticall and Civill: of these in order. In Christs accusation, wee must consider many points. The first is, who were his accusers, namely, the high Priests, the Scribes, and Pharisies, and Elders of the people, and the common people: all these conspired together to accuse him. The cause that mooved the Pharisies, and Elders of the people hereunto, is noted by S. Matthew, who saith, of envie they delivered him. Envie is nothing but a sadnes in a mans heart, at the prosperitie of his better. And it reigned in the Scribes and Pharisies, and the occasion was this. Christ had taught most heavenly doctrine, and confirmed the same by most wonderfull miracles, and did greatly exceede them all, and was in more account among the people: and for this cause the Scribes and Pharisies and high Priests, repined and grudged at him. Now their example serves to admonish us to take heed of this sinne, as being the mother of many mischiefs. And we must rather follow the example of Moses, who when Iosuah desired him to forbid Eldad and Medad to prophesie, answered, Envieſt thou for my sake? yea I would to God all the Lords people were prophets. And wee must bee of the same mind with Iohn Baptist, who hearing by his disciples, that the people left him and followed Christ, said, his joy was fulfilled, for Christ must increase, and he must decrease. And so wee must be glad and content when we see the prosperitie of our neighbours any way. Now the cause why the common people joyne with them, was because the chiefe Priests and the Scribes and Elders had perswaded them to a bad conceit of Christ. Hence it appeares, that it is most requisite for any people, bee they never so good, to have good Magistrates, and godly

A rulers to governe them by wise & godly counsell. The necessitie hereof was well knowne to Iethro Moses father in law, though he were a heathen man: For hee biddeth Moses to provide among all the people men of courage, fearing God, men dealing truly, hating covetousnesse, and appoint them to be rulers over the people. Teaching us, that if covetous, malicious, and ungodly men, not fearing God, goe before the people, they also shall in all likelihood be carried into the like sinnes by their example.

Exod. 18. 21.

The next point concernes the place where they accuse him, which was at the doore of the common Hall: for having brought him before the Councill at Ierusalem, and there condemned him of blasphemie, afterward they bring him into the common hall where Pilate sate Iudge. Yet did they not enter in, but stayed without at the doore, lest they should be defiled, and bee made unfit to eate the Passeover. In which practice of theirs, wee are to marke an example of most notable both superstition, and most grosse hypocrisie. For they make no bones to accuse and arraigne a man most just and innocent, and yet are very strict and curious in an outward ceremonie. And in like manner they make no conscience to give thirtie peeces of silver to betray Christ: but to cast the same into the treasurie, they make it a great and heinous offence. And for this cause Christ pronounceth a woe unto the Scribes and Pharisies, calling them hypocrites: for saith he, you tithe mint, annyse, and commin, and leave the waighтie matters of the law, as judgement, and mercy. And the very same thing wee see practised of the Church of Rome at this day, and of sundry Papists that live amongst us: they will not eate flesh in Lent, or upon any of the Popes fasting dayes for any thing; and yet the same men make no conscience of seeking the blood of the Lords annointed, and their dread Soveraigne. And in this wee see the most palpable, and most grosse hypocrisie of those that be of that Church. But shall we think that our owne Church is free from such men? no assuredly: for take a view of the profession that is used among the people of England, and it will appeare, that they place their whole religion for the most part in the observation of certaine ceremonies. The manner of the most men is to come to the place of assemblies, where God is worshipped, and there mumble up the Lords prayer, the Commandements, and the Beleefe in stead of prayers, which being done, God is wel served thinke they: whereas in the meane season they neglect to learne and practise such things as are taught them for their salvation by the Ministers of Gods Word. At the Feast of Easter, every man will be full of devotion and charity, and come to receive the Lords supper, as though hee were the holiest man in the world; but when the time is past, all generally turne to their old byas againe: and all the yeare after live as they list, making no conscience of lying, slandering, fraude, and deceit in their affaires among men. But wee must know, that there is no soundnesse of religion, but grosse hypocrisie in all such men: they worship God with their lips, but there is no power of godlinesse in their hearts. Mark.15.1.

Ioh. 18. 28.

Mark. 7.6. Matth. 23 23.

The third point is, concerning the partie to whom they make this accusation against Christ, namely, not to a Iew, but to a Gentile: for having condemned them in their Ecclesiasticall court before Caiphas the high Priest, they bring him to Pontius Pilate, the Deputy of Tiberius Cæsar in Iudea. Where we must observe the wonderful providence of God, in that not onely the Iewes, but the Gentiles also had a stroke in the arraignement of Christ, that that might bee true which the Apostle saith, *Rom.*11.32. God shut up all under sinne, that he might have mercy upon all. B

The fourth point is, the matter of their accusation: they accuse our Saviour Christ of three things. I. That he seduced the people. II. That he forbad to pay tribute to Cæsar. Luk.23.2. III. That he said he was a King. Let us well consider these accusations, especially the two last, because they are flat contrary both to Christs preaching, & to his practise. For when the people would have made him a King, after he had wrought the miracle of the five loaves and two fishes, the text saith, he departed from among them, Ioh.6.15. unto a mountaine himselfe alone. Secondly, when tribute was demanded of him for Cæsar, though he were the Kings sonne, and C therefore was freed; yet saith he to Peter, Mat. 17.27. Lest we should offend them, goe to the sea, and cast in an angle, and take the first fish that commeth up, & when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find a peece of twenty pence, that take, and give unto them for thee and me. And when he was called to be a judge to divide the inheritance betweene two brethren, he refused to doe it, saying, *Lu.*12.14. Who made me a judge between you? Therefore in these two things they did most falsly accuse him. Whereby we learne, that nothing is so false and untrue, but the slanderer dare lay it to the charge of the innocent: the tongues of the slanderers are sharpe swords, Psal.120.4. and 5.9. and venemous arrowes, to wound their enemies: their throats are open sepulchres, D the poyson of aspes is under their lips. If a man speake gracious words, his tongue is touched with the fire of Gods Spirit: but as Saint Iames saith, Iam. 3.6. the tongue of the wicked is fire, yea, a world of wickednesse, and it is set on fire with the fire of hell: therefore let this example be a caveat to us all, to teach us to take heed of slandering, for the divell then speaks by us, and kindles our tongues with the fire of hell.

The fifth point, is the manner of their accusation, which is diligently to be marked: for they do not onely charge him with a manifest untruth, but they beseech Pilate to put him to death, crying, * Crucifie him, crucifie him: in so much that Pontius Pilate was afraid of them: where we see how these shamelesse Iewes goe beyond their compasse, and the

* Injustice: for a blasphemer by their law should be stoned, and not crucified. Mat.27.22.23.

A bounds of al accusers, whose duty is to testifie onely what they know. Now in the matter of this their accusation, appeares their wonderfull inconstancy. For a little before when Christ came to Ierusalem riding upon an asse, shewing some signes of his kingly authority, they cut downe branches from the trees, and strewed them in the wayes, crying, Hosanna, Blessed is hee that comes in the name of the Lord: but now they sing another song, and in stead of Hosanna, they cry, Crucifie him, crucifie him. And the like inconstancie is to be found in the people of these our times. They use to receive any religion that is offered unto them: for in the dayes of King Ed. the fixt, the people of England received the Gospel of Christ: but shortly after in Queene Maries time, the same people received the wretched and abominable doctrine of the Church of Rome. And not many yeares after, when it pleased God to bring againe the light of his glorious Gospel by our gracious Prince, the same people turned from Popery, & imbraced the true religion againe. And thus with the Iewes one while they cry Hosanna to Christ, & receive his Gospel, and shortly after they cry, Crucifie him, crucifie him, by imbracing idolatrous Popery. Let us therfore learn in the feare of God, by the ficklenes of the Iewes, that sing two contrary songs in so short a space, to acknowledge our inconstancy and weakenesse in the matter of religion: wherby if God leave us but a little to our selves, wee shall straightway forsake Christ, his Gospell, and all.

Thus much of the accusation. Now followes Christs examination before Pontius Pilate for when the Iewes had thus falsely accused him, then Pontius Pilate tooke him and brought him into the common hall, and asked him this question, *Art thou the king of the Iewes? Lu.*23 3. Now Christ being thus examined, made as Paul also testifieth a good confession 1 Tim.6.13 Ioh.18.33, 37. The sum thereof stands in foure heads. The first is, that he confesseth himselfe to be a King; not such an one as they accused him to bee, yet a true King. Whence wee may learne divers instructions: first, that every Christian man in the midst of his miserie and affliction, hath one that is most sufficient every way to defend him against al his enemies, the world, the flesh, and the divell. For this King can do whatsoever he will: and therefore when the legion of divels would enter into a heard of swine, they could not without his leave. And when the Centurions daughter was dead, hee but spake the word & she arose. And whē Lazarus was dead, and had lien in the grave foure dayes, he but said, Lazarus come forth, & he came forth bound hand and foot. Yea, even hell and death give place to his word, and nothing can resist his power. And therefore hee that is a true member of Christ, needs not to feare any enemies be they never so great and many. And againe, as Christ is able, so is he ready and willing to save & defend all that beleeve in him. Mar.8.31. Mar.5.41, 42. Ioh.11.43, 44.

For he it is that gave his life for his ſubjects, which no King would do, and ſhed his blood for their redemption: which he would never have done, if he had not deſired their ſalvation. Secondly, whereas Chriſt is a mighty King, which can do whatſoever he wil, let all ſuch among us that have hitherto lived in ignorance and by reaſon of ignorance live in their ſinnes, at length begin to come unto him, and do him homage, and with penitent hearts fall downe before him: otherwiſe if they continue in their old rebellions, let thē know whatſoever they be, high or low, that he hath a rod of iron in his hand to bruiſe them in pieces; their ſoules ſhall ſmart for it: as both Pilate, Caiphas, and the reſt of the Iewes were with a full cup rewarded for crucifying the Lord of life. And if Chriſt cannot draw thee in this life from thy crooked wayes, be ſure at the houre of death he will breake thee in pieces like a potters veſſell. This muſt we learne in regard of the firſt point, that he ſaid plainly; He was a King.

Pſal. 2. 9. & 110. 2.

Now followes the ſecond part of his confeſſion, namely, that his kingdome was not of this world. Where hee ſets downe what kinde of King he is; he is no earthly King, his kingdome ſtands not in the power of men, nor in earthly and outward government; but his kingdome is ſpirituall, and his government is in the very hearts and conſciences of men. His kingdome is not outward to be ſeene of men, but inward in the heart and ſoule; and therefore it is only begun in this life, and is continued and accompliſhed in the world to come in the kingdome of glory: where Chriſt ſhall be all in all in the hearts and conſciences of all the Elect. Now then, if this be ſo, howſoever Satan have heretofore reigned in us, and made our hearts as it were his pallaces, yet now let us prepare a roome for Chriſt that he may come and dwell in us: let him rule our hearts, wils, and affections, that they may become conformable to his will: let us reſigne our ſelves wholly to be ruled by him, that his ſpirituall kingdome may be in us. This kingdome in the heart and conſcience, is the pearle and hidde treaſure, which when a man findeth, he ſelleth all hee hath, and buyeth it. Let us therefore in the feare of God, eſteeme it as the moſt precious thing that may be, and ſo live in this world, as that Chriſt may rule inwardly in us, by his word and ſpirit. And againe, ſeeing this regiment of Chriſt is heavenly, and the full manifeſtation of it is reſerved till the life to come: we muſt therfore uſe this world, and all things in it, as honour, wealth, eaſe, and liberty, as though wee uſed them not. As a traveller uſeth his ſtaffe in his journey; as long as it doth further him, ſo long he will carry it with him: but when it hinders him, thē he caſts it away: ſo muſt we uſe the things of this life, namely, as long as they are helpes to further and make us fit for the kindome of heaven; but if they be any hinderance to this ſpirituall regiment of Chriſt, we muſt renounce them and caſt them away, be they never ſo precious to us.

Ioh. 18. 36.

Mat. 13. 46.

1 Cor. 7. 31.

The third part of Chriſts confeſſion is, concerning the meanes whereby he governeth his kingdome: I came (ſaith he, Ioh. 18. 37.) into this world to bear witneſſe of the truth, that is, to preach the Goſpel and doctrine of ſalvation: and hereby he teacheth that the outward adminiſtration of his kingdome, ſtands ſpecially in the preaching of the word, which is a principall ordinance of his, ſerving to gather his Church from the beginning of the world to the end thereof. And for this cauſe hee hath in all ages ſet apart choſen miniſters for the publiſhing of the doctrine of the Goſpel. And hence it is manifeſt, that the gift of prophecie, is the greateſt gift that God beſtowes on his Church for the building thereof. And therefore it ought to be moſt highly eſteemed, as a moſt precious jewell. And for this cauſe alſo the ſchooles of learning are to be reverenced and maintained, and all other meanes uſed for the furthering of them; becauſe they are under God the fountaines and wel-ſprings of this gift of prophecie.

The laſt point, is concerning the ſubjects of Chriſts kingdome, expreſſed in theſe words, They which are of the truth heare my voyce. In which he ſets down the true marke of his ſervants and ſubjects, that they are hearers of that heavenly and ſaving word which he revealed from the boſome of his Father. It may be alleadged, the moſt wicked men upon earth, yea, the divels themſelves may bee hearers of the truth of Chriſt. Anſw. There be two kinds of hearers: one, which heareth only the outward ſound of the word with his bodily eares, and he having eares to heare doth not heare: the ſecond, is he that doth not onely receive the doctrine that is taught with his eares, but alſo hath his heart opened to feele the power of it, and to obey the ſame in the courſe of his life. This diſtinction is notably ſet forth by David ſaying, Sacrifice and burnt offering thou wouldſt not have: but my eares haſt thou pierced: whereby he inſinuates as it were two kinds of eares: one that is deafe and cannot heare: and thus are the eares of all men by nature in hearing the doctrine of ſalvation: the other is a new eare pierced and boared by the hand of God, which cauſes a mans heart to heare the ſound and operation of the word, and the life to expreſſe the truth of it. Now the ſubjects of Chriſts kingdome are ſuch, as w^th^ the outward hearing of the word, have an inward hearing of the ſoule, & grace alſo to obey: and therfore all thoſe that make no conſcience of obedience to the word of God preached unto them are no leſſe then rebels to Chriſt. We may perſwade our ſelves that we are good ſubjects, becauſe we heare the word & receive the Sacraments, but if our lives abound with ſinne, and if our hearts bee not pierced thorow by the ſword of Gods Spirit, whether we be high or low, rich or poore, let us be what wee will bee, wee are no right ſubjects indeede, but rebels and traytours unto the everlasting God. It may be hereafter God will give further grace; but as yet all impenitent persons, though living in the midst of Gods Church, are no obedient and faithfull subjects: and therfore while we have time, let us labour to performe indeed what we doe in word professe.

Thus much of the examination & confession of Christ. Now followeth the third point, concerning the policies which Pilate used to save Christ: and they are three. First, when he heard that Christ was of Galile, he tooke occasion to send him to Herod, thinking thereby to shift his hands of him, and not to shed his blood. In which policy, though he seeme unwilling to put Christ to death, yet herein he is a most unjust judge: for having given testimonie of Christ, that he is innocent, he ought to have acquitted him, and not have sent him to Herod for further judgement. In Herods dealing wth Christ, we may observe these points: The first, that hee is wonderfully glad of his comming. Why so? the text saith, because he was desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him, & trusted to have seene some signe done by him, Luk. 23. 8. Here marke how he rejoyced, not in Christ because he was Christ, that is, his Messias & redeemer, but because he wrought miracles, signes, and wonders. And so it is among us at this day: it is a rare thing to finde a man that loves Christ, because he is Christ: some love Christ for honour, some for wealth, and others for praise: that is, because they get honour, wealth, and praise by confessing his name. Againe, many professe Christ, onely because it is the law and custome of their nation. But we must learne to be of this minde, to love Christ, because he is Christ, even for himselfe; not for any other sinister respect: and we must rejoyce in Christ, even for himself, though we never have profit nor pleasure, neither honour, nor wealth by him. And if we love him for wealth or pleasure, or for any other end but for himselfe alone, when these things are taken away, then we shall utterly forsake Christ in like manner. The second point is, that Herod desires Christ to worke a miracle. He can be content to see the workes of Christ: but he cannot abide to heare his word, & to beare his yoake. Like to him are many in these dayes, which gladly desire to heare the Gospel of Christ preached, only because they would heare speech of some strange things, laying aside all care and conscience to obey that which they heare. Yea many in England delight to reade the strange histories of the Bible: and therefore can rehearse the most part of it, (and it were to be wished that all could doe the like:) yet come to the practise of it, the same persons are commonly found as bad in life & conversation, yea rather worse then others. Let us therefore labour, that with our knowledge we may joyn obedience, & practice with our learning, and as well to be affected with the word of Christ, as with his workes. The third point is, that Herod derides Christ, and sends him away cloathed in a white garment. This is that Herod whom Christ called a foxe; who also when he heard Iohn Baptist preach, did many things, and heard him gladly, Luke 13. 32. How then comes Herod to this outrage of wickednesse, thus to abuse Christ? Ans. Wee must know, that although Herod at the first heard Iohn preach, yet withall he followed his owne affections, and sought how to fulfill the lusts of his flesh. For when Iohn told him that it was not lawful for him to have his brother Philips wife, he cast him in prison, and afterward cut off his head for it: after which offence hee is grown to this height of impiety, that he now despiseth Christ, & cannot abide to heare him. Where we learne, that as wee are willing to heare Gods word preached, so withal we must take heede, that we practise no manner of sin; but make conscience of every thing that may displease God. Thou mayest, I grant, be one that feareth and favoureth Iohn Baptist for a time, wallowing in thy old sinnes; but after a while, yeelding to the swinge of thy corrupt heart, thou wilt neither heare Iohn, nor Christ himselfe, but hate and despise them both. This is the cause why some which have beene professours of religion heretofore, and have had great measure of knowledge, are now become very loose persons, and cannot abide to heare the word preached vnto them; the reason is, because they could not abide to leave their sins. Therefore that we may begin in the spirit & not end in the flesh, let every one that cals on the name of the Lord depart frō iniquitie.

Now followes the second policie of Pilate. For when he saw the first would not prevaile, then he tooke a new course: for he tooke Iesus into the common hall, and scourged him, and the souldiers platted a crowne of thornes, and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple garment, and said, Haile King of the Iewes, and smote him with their rods. And thus he brought him forth before the Iewes, perswading himselfe that when they saw him so abased, and so ignominiously abused, they would be content therewith, & exact no greater punishment at his hands thinking thus to have pacified the rage of the Iewes, and so to haue delivered Christ from death, by inflicting upon him some lesser punishment. This policie is as it were a looking-glasse, in which we may behold of what nature and condition al plots and policies of men are, which are devised and practised without the direction of Gods word. In it we may observe two things: the first is the ground thereof; which is a most silly, simple, or rather senslesse argument. For he reasoneth thus, I finde no fault in this man therfore I wil chastise him, & let him goe. A man would hardly have thought, that one having but common sense, would haue made such a reason, much lesse a great Iudge sitting in the roome of God. But in him we may behold and ſee the ground of all humane policy, which is beſide the word of God, namely, the fooliſh and blinde reaſon of men. The ſecond thing to be conſidered, is the proceeding and iſſue of this policie. Pilate muſt either whippe Chriſt being innocent; or put him to death: which are both ſinnes and great offences. Now he maketh choice of the leſſer, which is to whip him, and is perſwaded that he ought to do ſo: whereas of two ſins or evils, a man ought to do neither. And in doing this, Pilate begin to make a breach in his conſcience: and that is the fruit that all politicks reape of their devices, which proceed by the light of their owne reaſon, without the word of God. By this example we are admoniſhed of two things: firſt that before we enterpriſe any buſineſſe, wee muſt rectifie our judgements by Gods word. David was a moſt wiſe king, & no doubt had withall a grave & wiſe councel, but yet he preferred the word of God before all, ſaying, Pſa. 119.24. Thy teſtimonies are my counſellors. Secondly, in our proceedings we muſt keepe an upright, pure, and unblameable conſcience, as 1 Tim.3.9. Paul exhorteth Timothy, to have the myſtery of faith in a pure conſcience; giving us thereby to underſtand, that a good conſcience is as it were a cheſt or cupboard in which we are to keepe and locke up our religion, and all other graces of God, as the moſt precious jewels that can be: and that if we ſuffer this cheſt to be broken up, all our riches and jewels are gone.

But let us yet view the dealing of Pilate more particularly: he whippes Chriſt, puts on him a purple garment, puts a reed in his hand ſets a crowne of thornes upon his head, and cauſes the ſouldiers to mocke him, and ſpit in his face. Now in this that Chriſt ſtanding in our roome, was thus ſhamefully abuſed, we muſt conſider what was due unto every one of us for our ſinnes, namely, ſhame, and reproach in this life, and in the life to come endleſſe confuſion. And we ſee the confeſſion of Chriſt to be true which he made to Pilate, that his Ioh.18.36. kingdome was not of this world; for if it had been ſo, they would have put a crowne of gold upon his head, and not a crowne of thornes, which nothing at all beſeemed an earthly king: and in ſtead of a reed they would have put a ſcepter into his hand: and in ſtead of buffetting and ſpitting on him, they would have adored him and fallen downe before him. Againe, whereas Chriſt our head in this world, ware no other crowne but one made of thornes, it ſerveth to teach all thoſe that are the members of Chriſt, that they muſt not look for a crown of glory in this life: becauſe that is reſerved for the life to come. And if we would then weare the crown of glory with Chriſt, we muſt here in this life weare a crown of thornes, as he did:
2 Tim.2.12 for as Paul ſaith, If we ſuffer wᵗʰ Chriſt, we ſhal alſo reigne with him: and that which was fully verified in Chriſt the head, muſt in ſome ſort be verified in every true member of Chriſt.

Pilates third policie was this; when hee ſaw that neither of the two former would prevail, he comes forth unto the Iewes and makes an oratiõ to this effect; that now was the feaſt of the paſſe-over, & that they had a cuſtome that the Governour ſhould then deliver unto the people a priſoner whom they would: therfore hee asked them whether hee ſhould let looſe unto them Barabas, or Ieſus which is called Chriſt: this Barrabas was a notable malefactour, that with inſurrection had committed murther. And thus Pilate cunningly matches Chriſt with Barrbas, thinking that the Iewes would rather chooſe him then Barrabas beeing a notorious malefactour, nor worthy to live on the face of the earth: and by this means hee thought to have delivered Chriſt from death, though otherwiſe he accounted him as a malefactour. The ground of this policy (as we ſee) is an old cuſtome of the Iewes that a priſoner ſhould be let looſe at Eaſter. And it may be the end of this cuſtom was, to increaſe the ſolemnity of the feaſt. But whatſoever in truth the end was, the fact it ſelf was but prophanation of the time, and an abomination before the Lord: for Solomon ſaith, Pro.17.15. He that juſtifieth the wicked, and condemneth the juſt, even they both are abomination before the Lord. The like practiſe take place with many in theſe daies, who think the Lords day never well ſpent unleſſe they may adde ſolemnity thereunto, by revell and riot, by frequenting of tavernes and ale-houſes. And furthermore, Mat.27.21. where Pilate matcheth Chriſt being innocent with Barrabas, and the people preferre him before Chriſt, having liberty to chooſe either; it ſhewes that God in his providence had appointed that Chriſt ſhould not ſtand in his owne roome before Pilate, but in our roome and ſtead, as a Mediatour between God and us. And in this fact of the people, we ſee how ſin by degrees takes hold of men, and that ſpeedily. Who would haue thought that theſe Iewes, who a little before cried Hoſanna, and ſpread their garments before Chriſt in the way, would ever have preferred a murtherer before him? But it was the doing of the high prieſts, the Scribes, and Phariſies, who did animate and ſtirre them up to this wickednes: and hereupon when they had yeelded firſt to attach him, and then to accuſe him, they are carried to an higher degree of impiety, namely, to ſeeke his blood: and then leſt he ſhould eſcape their hands, they plunge themſelves deeper yet, preferring a wretched murtherer, even ſeditious Barrabas before him. This muſt teach every one of us to take heede of the beginnings even of the leaſt ſinnes; for the divell is cunning, he will not plunge a man into the greateſt ſinnes at the firſt: but his manner is, by little and little to creepe into the heart: and having once poſſeſſion thereof, by ſteps to bring men to the height of ſinne, and that with ſpeed. We muſt therefore in the feare of God prevent ſin betimes, and at the firſt motion cut off all occaſions

2 Tim. 2. 17 hereof: that which Paul ſaith of hereſie, comparing it to a canker or gangren, may be ſaid of all ſinne. The nature of the gangren is to run from one joynt to another, from the toe to the foote, from the foote to the leg, and from the legge to the thigh, till it have waſted and deſtroyed the life of the body: ſo give any ſinne but an entrance, and it will ſoone overſpead the whole man: and if the divell may be ſuffered but to put one talon into thy heart, he will preſently winde himſelfe into thee, his head, his body and all. The Pſalmiſt ſaith, that Pſal. 137. 9. he is bleſſed that takes the children of the Babylonians, and daſheth them againſt the ſtones; and as truely it may be ſaid, bleſſed is the man that daſheth the head of his ſinnes againſt the ground while they are young, before they get ſtrength to over-maſter him.

Thus have we ſeene the policies of Pilate, now followeth the abſolution of Chriſt: for when Pilate had uſed many meanes to deliver Mat. 27. 23, 24. Luk. 23. 14. 22. Mar. 15. 14. Joh. 18. 38. & 19. 4. him, & none would prevaile, then he abſolves him, by giving divers teſtimonies of his innocency: for he came forth three times and bare witneſſe; and laſt of all he teſtified the ſame by waſhing of his hands: which rite ſignifieth properly the defiling of the hands before, but as yet Pilate had not defiled his hands, & therfore he uſed it as a token to ſhew that Chriſt was innocent, and that he would not defile his owne hands with innocent blood. There were three cauſes that moved Pilate to abſolve Chriſt. Firſt, he ſaw that he was a juſt man, as S. Matthew noteth, Mat. 27. 19. 20. and that the high Prieſts and people had delivered him up of envie, as S. Marke ſaith, Mar. 15. 10. By this it is plaine, that a very pagan or infidell may in ſome things goe beyond ſuch as bee in Gods Church, having better conſcience, and dealing more juſtly then they. Pontius Pilate was a heathen man, and a Gentile, the Iewes were the Church & people of the living God: yet he ſees plainly, that Chriſt was a juſt man, and therupon is moved to abſolve him; whereas the Iewes which ſhould be men of conſcience & religion ſeek his death. And thus a very pagan may otherwhiles ſee more into a matter thē they that be reputed of the Church. And this muſt admoniſh all ſuch as profeſſe the Goſpel, to looke unto their proceedings, that they doe all things with upright conſcience: for if we deale unjuſtly in our proceedings, we may have neighbours, men of no religion, that will looke through us, and ſee the groſſe hypocriſie of our profeſſion, which alſo would be loth to doe thoſe things which wee do. The ſecond cauſe that moved Pilate to abſolve Chriſt, was his wives dreame: for when he was ſet downe upon the judgement ſeate, ſhe ſent unto him, ſaying, Mat. 27. 19. Have thou nothing to do with that juſt man: for I have ſuffered many things in a dreame by reaſon of him. Dreames are of three ſorts: naturall, riſing from the conſtitution of the body: diabolicall, ſuch as come by the ſuggeſtion of the divell: divine, wch are from God. Some have thought that this dreame was of the divell: as though hee had laboured thereby to hinder the death of Chriſt, and conſequently our ſalvation; but I rather thinke it was occaſioned by the things which ſhe had heard before of Chriſt, or that it was immediately from God, as the dreames of Pharaoh and Nebuchadnezzar, and ſerved for a further manifeſtation of Chriſts innocency. Here it may be asked, whether we may regard our dreames now, as Pilates wife did, or no? Anſ. We have the books of the old and new Teſtament to be our direction, as Eſay ſaith, to the law and to the teſtimony, they muſt Iſa. 8. 20. be our rule and guide. In theſe dayes we muſt not look to be taught by viſions and dreames: yet ſhall it not be amiſſe to obſerve this caveat concerning dreames, that by them wee may gueſſe at the conſtitution of our bodies, & oftentimes at the ſins wherunto we are inclined. The laſt motive which cauſed Pilate to abſolve Chriſt was a ſpeech of the Iewes; for they ſaid, that Chriſt ought to die by their law becauſe he ſaid he was the Son of God. And the Ioh. 19. 7, 8. text ſaith, when Pilate heard that, he was afraid. Marke how a poore Paynim that knew not Gods word, at the hearing of the name of the Son of God is ſtricken with fear. No doubt he ſhal riſe in judgment againſt many amongſt us that without all fear rend the name of God in pieces by ſwearing, blaſpheming, curſed ſpeaking. But let all thoſe that feare the Lord learne to tremble and be affraid at his bleſſed name.

Thus much for the cauſes that moved Pilato to abſolve Chriſt: as alſo for the ſecond part of Chriſts araignment, namely, his accuſation. Now followes the third part, which is his condemnation: and that is two-folde. The firſt, by the Eccleſiaſticall aſſembly and councel of the Iewes at Ieruſalem, in the high prieſts hall before Caiphas. The tenour of his condemnation was this, He hath blaſphemed, what Mat. 26. 66. have we any more need of witneſſes? he is worthy to die. The cauſe why they ſay not he ſhal die, Deut. 17. 7, 8, 9. but he is worthy to die, is this: The Iewes had 2 juriſdictions, the one Eccleſiaſticall, the other Civill, both preſcribed and diſtinctly executed by the commandement of God, till the time of the Macchabees, in which both joyntly together came into the hands of the prieſts: but afterward about the dayes of Herod the Great the Romane Emperour tooke away both juriſdictions from the Iewes, and made their Kingdome a province, ſo as they could doe no more but apprehend, accuſe, and impriſon: as doth appeare by the example of Saul, who gat letters from the high prieſt to Damaſcus, that Act. 9. 2. if he found any either man or woman that beleeved in Chriſt, hee might bring them bound to Ieruſalem, and impriſon them: but kill or condemne they could not.

By the fact of this Councell we learne ſundry points: firſt, that generall Councels, and the Pope himſelfe ſitting judicially in his conſiſtory may erre. If there were any viſible Church of God at the time of Chriſts arraignment upon the face of the whole world; it was no doubt the Church of the Iewes. For Caiphas the high prieſt was a figure of Chriſt, the Scribes & Phariſes ſate in Moſes chaire, and Ieruſalem is called by Chriſt the holy Citie, Mat. 4.5. & 27.53. Yet for all this, that which was fore-told is now verified, namely, that the chiefe corner-ſtone ſhould be rejected of maſter builders. For by the generall conſent of the councell at Ieruſalem, Chriſt the head of the Catholike Church, and the Redeemer of mankind, is accuſed of blaſphemy, & condemned as worthy of death. Wherfore it is meere dotage of mans braine to avouch that the Pope cannot poſſibly erre in giving of definitive ſentence in matters either of faith or maners. Neither can the Church of Rome pleade priviledge, for Ieruſalem had as many prerogatives as any people in the world could have. Rom.9.3.

Againe, by this we ſee, there is no reaſon why we ſhould aſcribe to any man or to œcumenicall Councels themſelves, abſolute and ſoveraigne power to determine & give jugdment in matters of religion, conſidering they are in danger to bee overtaken with notable ſlips and errours. And therefore the ſoveraigntie of judgement is peculiar to the Sonne of God, who is the onely Doctor and Law-giver of the Church: and he puts the ſame in execution in and by the written word. As for the ſpeech of the Papiſts, calling the Scriptures a dumbe judge, it is little to be regarded: for the Scriptures are, as it were, a letter of the living God, ſent from heaven to his Church upon earth: and therefore they ſpeake as plainly and as ſufficiently unto us of all matters of faith, as a man can ſpeake unto his friend by letter, ſo be it, we have the gift of diſcerning. Yet do wee not barre the Church of God from all judgement. For the miniſteriall power of giving judgement both publikely and privately is granted unto it of God: and that is to determine and give ſentence of matters in queſtion according to the word, as the Lawyer gives judgement, not according as he will, but according to the tenour of the law. Mat.23.10.

Thirdly, we learne, that perſonall ſucceſſion is no infallible marke of the true faith, and of true Paſtours; unleſſe withall bee joyned ſucceſſion in the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles. For Caiphas held his office by ſucceſſion from Aaron: and yet in publike aſſembly condemned the Meſſias ſpoken of by Moſes and the Prophets. Therefore the ſucceſſion of Biſhops of Rome from Peter is of no moment, unleſſe they can proove that their religion is the religion of Peter, which they can never doe.

And thus much of Chriſts firſt condemnation. The ſecond was by Pontius Pilate, who ſate in another court as a civill judge, and the tenor of his ſentence was, that the Iews ſhold take him and crucifie him. Here we muſt conſider the reſons that moved Pilate to determine thus: the firſt, was the impatiencie of the Iewes: he for his part was loth to defile his hands with innocent blood, but the Iewes cryed his blood be upon us, and our children: which according to their wiſh came upon them with in few yeeres after, and ſo remaineth ſtill unto this day. By which we are taught, to take heed of imprecations againſt our ſelves, our children, our ſervants, or any other creatures: for God heareth mens praiers two waies; either in mercy, or in his wrath or anger. If thou curſe thy ſelfe or any other, except thou turne unto the Lord by ſpeedy repentance, hee may heare thy prayer in his wrath, and verifie thy curſe upon thee to thy utter confuſion. The ſecond reaſon that moved Pilate to condemne Chriſt was, becauſe he feared men more then God: for beeing deputy under Tiberius Cæſar, over the Province of Iudea, for feare of loſing his office, and of diſpleaſing the Iewes, hee condemned Chriſt after he had abſolved him: whereby we ſee, that it is a grievous ſinne to feare duſt and aſhes more then the living God. And therefore S. Iohn ſaith, Revel. 21.8. That the fearefull ſhall have their portiõ in the burning lake: that is, ſuch as are more afraid of men then God. And this ſinne in Pilate wanted not his juſt reward: for not long after he loſt his deputiſhip, and Cæſars favour, and fled to Vienna: where living in baniſhment he killed himſelfe. And thus God meetes with them that feare the creature more then the Creator. That we may therefore avoyd the heavie hand of God, let us learne to feare God above all: elſe we ſhall diſhonour God, and ſhame the religion which we profeſſe. Mat.27.25. Ioh.19.12, 13. Euſeb.hiſt. lib.2.c.7.

The proper end of Chriſts condemnation ſet downe though not in Pilates will, yet in Gods eternall counſell was, that he might bee the cauſe of abſolution at the barre of Gods juſtice unto all thoſe whatſoever they are which ſhall come to life eternall. For we muſt ſtill remember, that when Chriſt was condemned by mortall judges hee ſtood in our place, and in him were all our ſinnes condemned before God. Therefore to conclude this point; if this were the end of the counſell of God, to have his owne Sonne condemned by Pontius Pilate a mortall judge, that we might not be condemned, but abſolved before Gods judgement ſeat: let us all labour to have this abſolution ſealed up in our hearts by the teſtimony of Gods Spirit. For one day we muſt come to the barre of Gods judgement: and if wee have not an abſolution by Chriſts condemnation at Pilates earthly barre, let us looke for nothing elſe but the fearefull ſentence of condemnation at the celeſtiall barre of Gods juſtice, to be uttered at the day of the laſt judgement. If a man ſhould commit ſuch an hainous offence, as that hee could no otherwiſe eſcape death but by the Princes pardon, hee neither would, nor could be at reſt, till by one meanes or other he had obtained the ſame, and had gotten it written and ſealed: which done, Luk.23.24.

he would carry it home, locke it up safe and sound, and many times looke upon it with great joy and gladnesse. Well, this is the case of every one of us: by nature we are rebels and traytors against God, and have by our sins deserved ten thousand deaths. Now our onely stay and refuge is, that Christ the Son of God was condemned for us: and therefore in Christ wee must sue for pardon at Gods hands, and never rest till we have the assurance thereof sealed up in our hearts and consciences: alwayes remembring, that ever after, we leade a new life, and never commit the like sinnes against God any more. It were a blessed thing if this would enter into our hearts: but alas, we are as dead in our sinnes as a dead carkasse is in the grave. The Ministers of God may teach this often unto us, and we may also heare the same: but Satan doth so possesse mens hearts, that they seldome or never begin to beleeve or receive it till it bee too late. Every one can say, God is mercifull, but that is not enough: for Christ being most righteous was condemned, that thou being a wretched sinner mightest bee saved: and therefore thou must labour for thy selfe to have some testimony of thine absolution by Christs condemnation, sealed up in thine owne conscience, that thou mayest more assuredly say, God is, and will be mercifull unto thee.

Having spoken of the whole arraignement of Christ, and of his passion in generall, now let us proceed to the parts of the passion, which are three: Christs Execution, his Buriall, and his Descending into hell. This being withall remembred, that these three parts are likewise three degrees of Christs humiliation.

Christs execution is that part of his passion, which hee bare upon the crosse, expressed in the words of the Creed, he was crucified, & dyed. In handling of it, wee must observe five things; I. the person that suffered. II. The place where he suffered. III. the time when he suffered. IV. the manner how he suffered. V. The excellency of his passion. For the first, the person that suffered was Christ the just, as Peter saith, Christ also hath once suffered for sinnes: the just for the unjust: and againe, Christ Iesus the just (saith S. Iohn) is the reconciliation for our sinnes. And in his execution, we shall have manifest declarations of his righteousnesse and justice, consisting in two most worthy points. First, when hee was upon the crosse, and the souldiers were nailing his hands and feete thereunto, and racking his body most cruelly, he prayed, Father forgive them, they know not what they doe. These souldiers were by all likelihood the very same that apprehended him and brought him before Caiphas, and from thence to Pontius Pilate, and there platted a crowne of thornes, and set it on his head, and buffetted him, and spitefully intreated him as we have heard: and yet Christ speaks no word of revenge unto them, but with all patience in the very extremity of their malice and injury, he prayeth unto his Father to forgive them. Hence we are taught, that when injuries are done unto us, we ought to abstaine from all affections of revenge, and not so much as manifest the same either in word or deede. It is indeed a hard lesson to learne and practise: but it is our parts to endeavour to doe it: and not onely so, but to be ready for evill to doe good: yea, even at that instant, when other men are doing us wrong, even then (I say) wee must bee ready, if it be possible, to doe them good. When as Christs enemies were practising against him all the treachery they could, even then he performeth the worke of a Mediatour, and prayeth for them unto his Father, and seeketh their salvation. Againe, whereas Christ prayeth thus, Father, forgive them, we gather, that the most principall thing of all, that man ought to seeke after in this life, is the forgivenesse of his sinnes. Some thinke that happinesse consisteth in honour, some in wealth, some in pleasure, some in this, some in that: but indeed the thing that we should most labour for, is reconciliation with God in Christ; that we may have the free remission of all our sinnes. Yea, this is blessednesse it selfe, as David saith, Blessed is hee whose iniquitie is forgiven, and whose sinne is covered. Here then behold the madnesse of the men of this word, that either seeke for this blessing in the last place, or not at all.

The second testimony of Christs righteousnesse given in the middest of his passion was, that he beheld his mother standing by, and commended her to the custody of Iohn his disciple: whereby he gave an example of most holy obedience unto the fifth commandement, which prescribeth honour to father and mother. and this his fact sheweth that the observing of this commandement standeth not in outward shew and reverence onely; but in a godly recompence, in procuring unto parents all the good we can, both concerning this and a better life. It often fals out that children be as it were Chams to father & mother; some raile on them, some fight with them; others see them pine away and starve, and not releeve them. But all dutifull children must here learne, that as their parents have done many duties unto them, and brought them up: so they againe must in all reverence performe obedience unto them both in word and deed: and when occasion is offered, releeve them, yea, in all they can, doe good unto them. Again, in this we may see what a wretched state is that which the Church of Rome calleth the state of perfection; namely, to live apart from the company of men, in fasting and praying all the dayes of a mans life; hereby the bond of nature is broken, and a man cannot doe that duty unto his parents which Gods law requireth, and Christ here himselfe practiseth; nor the duties of a member of Christ, which are to be done to the whole Church, and to the rest of the members thereof.

The place where Christ ſuffered is called Calvary or Golgotha, that is, the place of dead mens ſkuls, without the wals of Ieruſalem. Concerning the reaſon of this name, men be of divers opinions. Some ſay it was ſo called, becauſe Adam was buried there, and that his ſkull being there found, gave the name to the place. And this is the very opinion of ſome ancient divines, that Chriſt was there crucified where Adam was buried; but becauſe it hath no certaine ground, * I leave it as uncertaine. Others thinke it was called Calvary, becauſe the Iewes were wont to carry out the bones of the dead men, and there to heape them together, as in times paſt the manner was in the vaults of ſundry Churches in this land. And ſome others thinke it was called Golgotha or Calvary, becauſe theeves and murtherers, and malefactors were there executed, ſtoned, burned: whereby it came to paſſe that many ſkuls and bones of dead men were found there.

The time when Chriſt was executed, was at the Iewes Paſſeover, when not onely the Iewes, but alſo many Proſelytes of many countries and nations were aſſembled: and therfore this execution was not in a private corner, but openly in the view of the world. For as he was a Saviour not to the Iewes onely, but alſo to the Gentiles: ſo it was very requiſite that his death ſhould be publike before all men both Iewes and Gentiles. As for the houre of the day, in which he ſuffered, there is ſome difficulty in the Evangeliſts: for Saint Iohn ſaith, that he was condemned about the ſixt houre of the day: and Saint Marke ſaith, he was crucified the third houre. Hence it may be demanded, how both theſe can ſtand together. Anſ. Howſoever the Iewes naturall day began at evening, yet the artificiall day began at Sunne riſing, and ended at Sunne ſetting: and it was divided two wayes. Firſt, into twelve parts called twelve houres, whether the dayes were longer or ſhorter. Secondly, into foure parts or quarters, and every part contained three houres: as from the firſt houre to the third, was one part called morning: from the third houre to the ſixt, another part called the ſixt houre: from the ſixt houre to the ninth, the third part called the ninth houre: and from the ninth houre to the twelfth, the fourth part called evening. Now when Saint Iohn ſaith, Chriſt was condemned about the ſixt houre, it muſt bee underſtood of the ſecond quarter of the day called the ſixt houre: and whereas Saint Marke ſaith, he was crucified the third houre of the day, hee ſpeakes of the leſſer houres, twelve whereof made the whole day: and thus they both agree, for the third houre of the day, and the beginning of the ſecond quarter follow each other immediately. Againe, it may bee anſwered, that Chriſt was condemned at ſixe of the clocke after the Romane account, which begins the day at mid-night; and crucified at three (which is nine of the clocke in the morning with us) after the Iewes account who begin their artificiall day, as I ſaid, at the Sunne-riſing.

The fourth and laſt point, is the order and whole proceeding of Chriſts execution, which may be reduced to foure heads: the I. his going to execution, the II. his crucifying, the III. his death, the IV. the conſequents of his death. Againe, in his going to execution wee may conſider many points.

The firſt, that he is brought out of Ieruſalem as a malefactour. For the old and ancient cuſtome of the Iewes was to put thoſe whom they judged to be notorious offenders to death without their tents when they wandered in the wilderneſſe, & without the wals of Ieruſalem, leſt they ſhould any way be defiled with their blood. And this fell out by the ſpeciall providence of God, that that might be fulfilled in Chriſt which was prefigured in the ſacrifices of the Old Teſtament, when the bodies of beaſts were not eaten of the Prieſts, but burnt without the campe: therefore (ſaith the holy Ghoſt) even Ieſus that he might ſanctifie the people with his own blood ſuffered without the gates.

Ioſ.7.24. Lev.21.14. Act.7.58.

Heb.13.12.

Hence may all Chriſtians learne to know their owne eſtate and condition: firſt, in this world they muſt looke to bee account the offſcouring of the earth, and the filth of the world, as the Apoſtle ſaith, and wee muſt all prepare our ſelves to beare this eſtate. They that will be Gods children muſt not looke to be better accepted of in the world then Chriſt was. Secondly, by this every one of us muſt learne to be content to uſe this world, as ſtrangers and pilgrimes: being every day and houre ready to leave the ſame. For if Chriſt the Sonne of God himſelfe was brought out of Ieruſalem, as not being worthy to have his abead there, then muſt every Chriſtian man looke much more for the like extremity. And therefore it is not for us, to have our hearts tyed to the world, and to ſeeke alwayes to be approoved of the ſame: for that argueth that we are not like to Chriſt: but we muſt rather doe as poore pilgrimes in ſtrange countries; and that is, only to looke for ſafe conduct thorow the miſeries in this world, having in the meane ſeaſon our hearts, wils, and affections ſet on the Kingdome which is in heaven. The ſecond thing is, that Chriſt was made to beare his owne croſſe, for ſo it ſeemes the manner of the Romanes was to deale with malefactors. And this muſt put us in minde of that notable leſſon which Chriſt himſelfe taught his Diſciples; namely, that if any man will be his Diſciple, he muſt deny himſelfe, take up his owne croſſe daily, and follow him: where by the croſſe we muſt underſtand, that portion of affliction, which God hath allotted to every one of his children: for there is no child of God, to whom he hath not meaſured out as it were ſome bitter cup of miſery in this life. And therefore Paul ſaith: Now rejoyce I in my ſufferings for you, and fulfill the reſt of the ſufferings of Chriſt in my fleſh. By Chriſts ſufferings,

ſufferings hee meaneth not the paſſion of Chriſt, but the ſufferings of the body of Chriſt, that is, the Church whereof Chriſt is the head. Moreover we muſt ſuffer as he did, and that daily; becauſe as one day followeth another, ſo one croſſe comes in the necke of another. And whereas Chriſt beares the croſſe that was laid on him by the hands of the ſouldiers, it muſt teach us not to pull croſſes upon our ſelves, but waite till God lay them on us; when that time comes we muſt willingly bend our ſhoulders, ſtoope downe, and take them up; whether they be in body or in ſoule: and that every day, if it be Gods will, ſo long as we live: and by this ſhall we moſt notably reſemble our Saviour Chriſt.

Thirdly, when Chriſt had carried his croſſe ſo long till he could carry it no longer, by reaſon of the faintneſſe of his body, which came by buffets, whippings, and manifold other injuries, then the ſouldiers meeting with one Simon of Cyrene a ſtranger, made him to beare the croſſe: where we are put in mind, that if we faint in the way, and be wearied with the burden of our afflictions, God will give good iſſue, and ſend as it were ſome Simon of Cyrene to helpe us, and to be our comforter.

Luke 23.26.

Mat.11.28.

The fourth point is, that when Chriſt was carrying his owne croſſe, and was now paſſing on towards Golgotha, certaine women met him, and pittying his caſe wept for him: but Chriſt anſwered them, and ſaid, Daughters of Ieruſalem, weepe not for me, but weepe for your ſelves, and your children, &c. By this we are firſt of all taught to pity the ſtate of thoſe that bee the children of God: as the Apoſtle exhorteth us, ſaying, Remember them that are in bonds as though you were bound with them: and them that are in affliction, as though you were afflicted with them. In this land by Gods eſpeciall bleſſing we have enjoyed the Goſpell of Chriſt with peace a long time, whereas other countries and Churches are in great diſtreſſe: ſome wallow in palpable ignorance and ſuperſtition: others have liberty to injoy the Goſpell, and want teachers: and ſome have both the Word and teachers, and yet want peace, and are in continuall perſecution. Now when we that have the Goſpel with peace doe heare of theſe miſeries in our neighbour Churches, we ought to bee mooved with compaſſion towards them, as though we our ſelves were in the ſame afflictions. Secondly, where Chriſt ſaith, Weepe not for me, but for your ſelves, he doth teach us to take occaſion by other mens miſeries to bewaile our owne eſtate: to turne our worldly griefes into godly ſorrow for our ſinnes, which cauſeth us rather to weepe for our offences, then for our friends, although even this may alſo be done in godly manner. When a man bleeding at the noſe is brought in danger of his life, the Phyſitian lets him blood in another place, as in the arme, and turnes the courſe of the blood another way to ſave his life; and ſo muſt we turne our worldly ſorrowes for loſſe of goods or friends, to a godly ſorrow for our offences againſt God: for ſo S. Paul ſaith, Godly ſorrow cauſeth repentance unto ſalvation, not to be repented of: but worldly ſorrow cauſeth death.

2 Cor.7,10.

The fifth point is, that when Chriſt was brought to the place of execution, they gave him vineger to drinke, mingled with mirrhe and gall: ſome ſay, it was to intoxicate his braine, and to take away his ſenſes and memory. If this be true, we may heere behold in the Iewes a moſt wicked part, that at the point of death, when they were to take away the life of Chriſt, they for their parts had no care of his ſoule. For this is a duty to bee obſerved of all Magiſtrates, that when they are to execute malefactors, they muſt have a ſpeciall regard to the good and ſalvation of their ſoules. But ſome thinke rather that this potion was to ſhorten and end his torments quickly. Some of us may peradventure thinke hardly of the Iewes, for giving ſo bitter a portion to Chriſt at the time of his death: but the ſame doth every ſinner that repenteth not. For whenſoever we ſinne, we doe as much as temper a cup of gall, or the poyſon of aſpes, and as it were give it God to drinke: for ſo God himſelfe compareth the ſinne of the wicked Iewes to poyſon, ſaying, Their vine is of the vine of Sodome, and of the vines of Gomorrha, their grapes are grapes of gall, their cluſters be bitter: their wine is the poyſon of Dragons, and the cruell gall of Aſpes. And for this cauſe we ought to think as hardly of our ſelves as of the Iewes, becauſe ſo oft as we commit any offence againſt God, we doe as much as mingle ranke poyſon, and bring it to Chriſt to drinke. Now afterward, when this cup was given him, he taſted of it; but dranke not, becauſe he was willing to ſuffer all things that his Father had appointed him to ſuffer on the croſſe, without any ſhortning or leſſening of his paine.

Mark.15.23.

Deut.32.32, 33.

Thus wee ſee in what manner Chriſt was brought forth to the place of execution: now followeth his crucifying. Chriſt in the providence of God was to be crucified for two cauſes: one, that the figures of the old teſtament might be accompliſhed and verified. For the heave-offering lifted up and ſhaken from the right hand to the left, and the braſen Serpent erected upon a pole in the wilderneſſe, prefigured the exalting of Chriſt upon the croſſe. The ſecond, that wee might in conſcience be reſolved, that Chriſt became under the law, and ſuffered the curſe thereof for us, and bare in his owne body and ſoule the extremity of the wrath of God for our offences. And though other kinds of puniſhments were notes of the curſe of God, as ſtoning, and ſuch like; yet was the death of the croſſe in ſpeciall manner above the reſt accurſed, not by the nature of the puniſhment, not by the opinions of men, not by the civill lawes of countries and kingdomes, but by the vertue of a particular Commandement of God, foreſeeing what manner of death Chriſt our Redeemer ſhould dye. And hereupon among the Iewes in all ages this kind of punishment hath beene branded with speciall ignomy, as Paul signifieth when hee saith, He abased himselfe to the death, even to the death of the crosse: and it hath bin alotted as a most grievous punishment to most notorious malefactors. If it be said, that the repentant theefe upon the Crosse dyed the same death with Christ, and yet was not accursed: the answer is, that in regard of his offences he deserved the curse, and was actually accursed, and the signe of this was the death which he suffered, and that in his owne confession; but because he repented, his sinnes were pardoned, and the curse removed. It may further be said, that crucifying was not knowne in Moses dayes, and therefore not accursed by any speciall commandement of God in Deuteronomy. Ans. Moses indeed speakes nothing in particular of crucifying, yet nevertheless hee doth include the same under the generall. For if every one which hangs upon a tree bee accursed, then he also which is crucified; for crucifying is a particular kind of hanging on a tree. Lastly, it may be alleadged, that Christ in his death could not be accursed by the law of Moses, because he was no malefactor. Ans. Though in regard of himselfe he was no sinner, yet as he was our surety hee became sinne for us, and consequently the curse of the law for us, in that the curse every way due unto us, by imputation and application was made his.

Gal.3.13.

Phil.2.8. Num.25.4. 2 Sam.21.6.

Furthermore, Christ was crucified not after the manner of the Iewes, who used to hang malefactors upon a tree, binding them thereto with cords, and that when they were dead, but after the usuall manner of the Romans; his body being partly nailed to the crosse, and partly in the nailing extreamely racked, otherwise I see not but that a man might remaine many dayes together alive upon the crosse. And here we have occasion to remember, that the Papists who are so devout and zealous towards crucifixes, are farre deceived in the making of them. For first of all, the crosse was made of three peeces of wood, one fastened upright in the ground, to whichthe body and backe leaned, the second fastened towards the top of the first overthwart, to which the hands were nailed: the third, fastened towards the bottome of the first, on which the feet were set and nailed: whereas contrariwise popish carvers, and painters fasten both the feete of Christ to the first: secondly, the feet of Christ were nailed a sunder with two distinct nailes, and not nailed one upon another with one naile alone, as Papists imagine, and that to the very body of the crosse: for then the souldiers could not have broken both the legges of the theeves, but onely the outmost, because one of them lay upon the other.

Psal.22.17.

Author lib. de Passione inter opera Cypriani.

Let us now come to the use which may be made of the crucifying of Christ. First of all here we learne with bitternesse to bewaile our sinnes: for Christ was thus cruelly nailed on the crosse, and there suffered the whole wrath of God, not for any offence that ever hee committed, but being our pledge and surety unto God, he suffered all for us: and therefore just cause have wee to mourne for our offences, which brought our Saviour Christ to this low estate. If a man should be so farre in debt that he could not bee freed, unlesse the surety should be cast into prison for his sake; nay, which is more, be cruelly put to death for his debt, it would make him at his wits end, and his very heart to bleed. And so is the case with us by reason of our sinnes; we are Gods debters, yea bankrupts before him, yet have wee gotten a good surety, even the Sonne of God himselfe, who to recover us to our former liberty, was crucified for the discharge of our debt. And therefore good cause have wee to bewaile our estate every day, as by the Prophet it is said, They shall looke on him whom they have pierced, they shall lament for him as one mourneth for his owne sonne: they shall be sorry for him as one is sorry for his first borne. Looke as the blood followed the nailes that were stricken through the blessed hands and feete of Christ, so should the meditation of the crosse and passion of our Redeemer bee as it were nailes and speares to pierce us, that our hearts might bleed for our sinnes: and we are not to thinke more hardly of the Iewes for crucifying him then of our selves, because even by our sins we also crucifie him. These are the very nayles which pierce his hands and feete, and these are the speares which pierce through his side. For the losse of a little worldly pelfe, oh how are we grieved! but seeing our transgressions are the weapons whereby the Sonne of God was crucified, let us (I say it againe and againe) learne to be grieved for them above all things, and with bleeding and melting hearts bow and buckle under them, as under the crosse.

Math.6.12.

Zach.12.10

Secondly, Christ saith of himselfe, As Moses lift up the Serpent in the wildernes so must the sonne of man be lifted up: the comparison is excellent and worthy the marking. In the wilderneſse of Arabia the people of Israel rebelled against God, and thereupon he sent fiery serpents among them, which stung many of them to death: now when they repented, Moses was commanded to make a brasen Serpent, and to set it upon a pole, that as many as were stung might looke unto it and recover: and if they could but cast a glaunce of the eye on the brasen Serpent, when they were stung even to death, they were restored to health and life. Now every man that liveth, is in the same case with the Israelites; Satan hath stung us at the heart, and given us many a deadly wound, if we could feele it; and Christ who was prefigured by the brasen Serpent, was likewise exalted on the crosse, to conferre righteousnesse and life eternall to every one of us: therefore if we will escape eternall death, we must renounce our selves, and lift up the eyes of our faith to Christ crucified, and pray for the pardon of our ſinnes: and then ſhall our hearts and conſciences bee healed of the wounds and gripes of the divell: and untill ſuch time as we have grace to doe this, we ſhall never be cured, but ſtill lye wounded with the ſtings of Satan, and bleeding to death even at the very heart, although we feele no paine, or griefe at all. But ſome may aske how any man can ſee him crucified now after his death? Anſ. Whereſoever the Word of God is preached, there Gal.3.1. Chriſt is crucified, as Paul ſaith, O fooliſh Galathians, who hath bewitched you, that yee ſhould not obey the truth, to whom before Ieſus Chriſt was deſcribed in your ſight, and among you crucified? Meaning, that he was lively preached among them. Wee need not goe to woodden croſſes, or to golden crucifixes to ſeeke for him; but where the Goſpel is preached, thither muſt we goe, and there lift up our eyes of faith to Chriſt, as he is revealed unto us in the Word; reſting on him and his merits with all our hearts, and with a godly ſorrow confeſſe and bewaile our ſins, craving at his hands mercy and pardon for the ſame. For till ſuch time as we doe this, wee are grievouſly ſtung by Satan, and are every moment even at deaths doore. And if we can thus behold Chriſt by faith, the benefits whith come hereby ſhall be Rom.6.6. great: for as Paul ſaith, the old man, that is, the corruption of our nature, and the body of ſin that reigneth in us, ſhall bee crucified with him: for when Chriſt was nailed on the croſſe, all our ſinnes were layed upon him; therefore if thou doeſt unfainedly beleeve, all thy ſinnes are crucified with him, and the corruption of thy nature languiſheth and dyeth, as hee languiſhed and dyed upon the croſſe.

Thirdly, wee muſt learne to imitate Chriſt: as he ſuffered himſelfe to be nailed to the croſſe for our ſinnes, ſo anſwerably muſt every one of us learne to crucifie our fleſh, and the corruption of our nature, and the wickedneſſe of our Gal.5.24. own hearts, as Paul ſaith, They that are Chriſts, have crucified the fleſh with luſts and affections thereof. And this we ſhall doe, if for our ſins paſt, we waile and mourne with bitterneſſe, and prevent the ſins to come, into which we may fall by reaſon of the corruption of our natures, by uſing all good meanes, as prayer, faſting, and the Word of God preached, and by flying all occaſions of offence. We are not to deſtroy our bodies, or to kill our ſelves, but to kill and crucifie ſinne that liveth in us, and to mortifie the corruption of our nature that rebels againſt the ſpirit. Chriſtianity ſtands not in this, to heare the Word of God, and outwardly to profeſſe the ſame, and in the meane ſeaſon ſtill to live in our ſinnes, and to pamper our owne rebellious fleſh; but it teacheth us alwayes to have in readineſſe ſome ſpeare or other to wound ſinne, and the ſword of the ſpirit to cut downe corruption in us, that thereby we may ſhew our ſelves to be lively followers of Chriſt indeed.

Fourthly, by this we may learne, that the A wrath of God againſt ſin is wonderfull great, becauſe his owne Sonne bearing our perſon, and being in our place, was not onely crucified, and racked moſt cruelly, but alſo bare the whole wrath of God in his ſoule: and therefore wee muſt leave off to make ſo little account of ſinne as commonly we doe.

Fifthly, whereas the perſon crucified was the Sonne of God, it ſheweth that the love of God which he bare unto us in our redemption is endleſſe; like a Sea without a banke or bottome, it cannot be ſearched into, and if we ſhall not acknowledge it to bee ſo, our condemnation will be the greater.

Sixthly, in this that Chriſt bare the curſe of B the law upon the Croſſe; we learne that thoſe that be the children of God, when they ſuffer any judgement, croſſe, or calamity, either in body, or in mind, or both, doe not beare them as the curſes of God, but as the chaſtiſements of a loving father. For it doth not ſtand with the juſtice of God to puniſh one fault twice: and therefore when any man that putteth his whole confidence in God, ſhall either in his owne perſon, in his good name, or in his goods feele the heavy hand of God, God doth not as a judge curſe him, but as a Father correct him. Here then is condemned the opinion of the Church of Rome, which hold, that we by our ſufferings doe in ſome part ſatisfie the juſtice of God; but this cannot ſtand, becauſe C Chriſt did make a perfect ſatisfaction to the juſtice of his Father for all puniſhment. And therefore ſatisfaction to God made by man for temporall puniſhment is needleſſe, and much derogates from Chriſts paſſion.

In the crucifying of Chriſt, two things ſpecially muſt be conſidered: The manner of the doing of it, and his continuance alive upon the croſſe. Touching the manner, the Spirit of God hath noted two things. The firſt, that Chriſt was crucified betweene two theeves, the one upon his left hand, the other upon his right: in which action is verified the ſaying of the Prophet Iſaiah: He was numbred among the wicked: Iſai.53.12. and the Iewes for their parts doe hereby teſtifie, that they eſteemed him to bee, not ſome D common wicked man, but even the captaine and ringleader of all theeves and malefactors whatſoever. Now whereas Chriſt ſtanding upon the croſſe in our roome and ſtead, is reputed the head and prince of all ſinners, it ſerveth to teach every one of us that beleeve in him, to judge our ſelves moſt vile and miſerable ſinners, and to ſay of our ſelves with Paul, That we are the chiefe of all ſinners. The ſecond 1 Tim.1.15. thing is, that Chriſt was crucified naked; becauſe he was ſtripped of his Garments by the ſoldiers when he was to be crucified. The cauſes why he ſuffered naked are theſe. Firſt, Adam by his fall brought upon all mankind death both of body and ſoule: and alſo the curſes of God which befall man in this life; among which this was one, that the nakedneſſe of the body ſhould bee ignominious; and hereupon when

Adam had ſinned, and ſaw himſelfe naked, he fled from the preſence of God, and hid himſelfe even for very ſhame. Chriſt therefore was ſtripped of his garments, and ſuffered naked, that hee might beare all the puniſhment and ignominy that was due unto man for ſinne. Secondly, this came to paſſe by the goodneſſe of God, that we might have a remedy for our ſpirituall nakedneſſe; which is, when a man hath his ſinnes lying open before Gods eyes: and by reaſon thereof hee himſelfe lyeth open to all Gods judgements. Hereof Chriſt ſpeaketh to the Angel of Laodicea, ſaying, Thou ſayeſt, I am rich, and increaſed with goods, and have need of nothing, and knoweſt not how thou art wretched, miſerable, blind, and naked. So when the Iſraelites had committed idolatry by the golden calfe, Moſes telleth them that they were naked, not onely becauſe they had ſpoyled themſelves of their earings, but eſpecially becauſe they were deſtitute of Gods favour, and lay open and naked to all his judgements for that ſinne. And Salomon ſaith, Where there is no viſion, there the people are made naked, that is, their ſinnes lye open before God; and by reaſon thereof they themſelves are ſubject to his wrath and indignation. Now Chriſt was crucified naked, that he might take away from us this ſpirituall nakedneſſe; and alſo give unto us meete garments to cloath us withall in the preſence of God, called white rayment, as Chriſt ſaith, I counſell thee to buy of me white rayment, that thou mayſt be cloathed, and that thy filthy nakedneſſe doe not appeare: and long white robes dipped in the blood of the Lambe, which ſerve to hide the nakedneſſe of our ſoules. What theſe garments are, the Apoſtle ſheweth when he ſaith, All that are baptized into Chriſt, have put on Chriſt. And Put on the new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſſe, and true holineſſe. Our nakedneſſe maketh us more vile in the ſight of God, then the moſt loathſome creature that is, can bee unto us; untill we have put on the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt to cover the deformity of our ſoules, that we may appeare holy, and without ſpot before God. Thirdly, Paul ſaith, We know if our earthly houſe of this Tabernacle bee deſtroyed, we have a building given of God, &c: For therefore we ſigh, deſiring to be cloathed with our houſe which is from heaven, becauſe if we be cloathed we ſhall not be found naked. Where it is like that the Apoſtle alludeth to the nakedneſſe of Adam after his fall: and therefore giveth us an other reaſon why Chriſt was crucified naked, namely, that after this life hee might cloath all his members with eternall glory.

Gen.3.7,8. Reve.3.17. Exod.32.25. Prov.29.18. Rev.3.18. Rev.7.14. Gal.3.27. Eph.4.24. 2 Cor.5.1, 2,3.

If this bee ſo, that a part of our rejoycing ſtands in the glorious nakedneſſe of Chriſt crucified, there is no reaſon why wee ſhould be puffed up with the vanity of our apparell. It ſhould rather bee an occaſion to make us aſhamed, then to make us proud. The theefe may as well brag of the brand in his hand, or of the fetters on his heeles, as we may of our attire; becauſe it is but the covering of our ſhame: and therefore ſhould put us in mind of our ſinne and ſhameſull nakedneſſe.

A

The aboad of Chriſt upon the croſſe, was about the ſpace of ſixe houres. For the death of the Croſſe was no ſuddaine, but a [a] lingring death. And in this ſpace of time there fell out five notable events. The firſt, that the ſoldiers having ſtripped Chriſt of his Garments, divided them into foure parts, and caſt lots for his Coate, becauſe it was woven without ſeame. And by this appeares the great love of Chriſt to man, who was not onely content to ſuffer, but alſo to loſe all that ever he had, even to the Garments on his backe to redeeme us; teaching us anſwerably, that if it pleaſe God to call us to any triall hereafter, we muſt bee content to part with all for his ſake, that we may winne him. Againe, in theſe ſouldiers we may behold a picture of this world: when they had nailed Chriſt to the croſſe, they will not loſe ſo much as his garments, but they come and devide them, and caſt lots for them: as for Chriſt himſelfe, the Saviour and redeemer of mankinde, they regard him not. And thus fareth the world; it is a hard thing to find a man to accept of Chriſt, becauſe he is Chriſt his redeemer: but when gaine comes by Chriſt, then hee is welcome. Eſau that eſteemed nothing of his Fathers bleſſing, made great account of his brothers pottage. The Gadarens made more account of their ſwine, then of Chriſt, for when they heard that they were drowned, they beſeech him to depart out of their coaſts. Nay ſo bad is this age, that ſuch as will be taken to be the ſpeciall members of Chriſt, doe not onely with the ſouldiers ſtrip Chriſt of his Garments, but more then this, they bereave him of his natures and offices. The Church of Rome by their tranſubſtantiation ſtrip him of his manhood: and by making other prieſts after the ſame order with him, which doe properly forgive ſinnes, ſtrip him of his Prieſthood: and of his Kingly office, by joyning with him a Vicar on earth, and head of the Catholike Church, and that in his preſence: whereas all deputy-ſhips and Commiſſions ceaſe in the preſence of the principall. And when they have done all this, then they further loade him with a number of beggerly ceremonies: and ſo doe nothing elſe but make a [b] fained Chriſt, in ſtead of the true and alone Meſſias.

D

The ſecond event was, that Chriſt was mocked of all ſorts of men. Firſt they ſet up the cauſe written why he was crucified, namely, This is the King of the Iewes: then the people that paſſed by reviled him, wagging their heads at him, and ſaid, Thou that deſtroyeſt the temple and buildſt it in three dayes, ſave thy ſelfe, &c. Likewiſe the high Prieſts mocking him, with the Scribes and Phariſees and the Elders, ſaid, He ſaved others, let him ſave himſelfe. The ſame alſo did one of the theeves that was crucified with him, caſt in his teeth. Behold here the wonderfull ſtrange dealing of the Iewes:

they ſee an innocent man thus pittifully and grievouſly racked, and nailed to the croſſe, and his blood diſtilling downe from hands & feete: and yet are they without all pitty, and compaſſion, and doe make but a mocke and a ſcoffe at him. And in this wee may plainely ſee how dangerous and fearefull their caſe is, who are wholly given up to the hardneſſe of their own hearts: and wee are further admoniſhed, to take heede how we give our ſelves to jeſting or mocking of others. And if any think it to bee a light ſinne, let them conſider what befell the Iewes for mocking Chriſt. The hand of God was upon them within a while after, and ſo remaineth to this day. Little children wickedly brought up, whē they ſaw Eliſha the man of God comming, they mocked him, and ſaid, 2 King. 2.23,24. Come up thou balde pate, come up thou balde pate: but Eliſha looked backe on them, and curſed them in the name of the Lord, and two wild Beares came out of the forreſt, and did teare in pieces two and fortie of them. Iulian, once a Chriſtian Emperour, but after an Apoſtata, did nothing elſe but mocke Chriſt & his doctrine, and made jeſts of ſundry places of Scripture: but being in fight againſt the Perſians, was wounded with a dart (no man knowing how) & died ſcoffing and blaſpheming. And ſuch like are the judgements of God, which befall mockers and ſcorners. Let us therefore in the feare of God learne to eſchew and avoide this ſinne.

Furthermore, if we ſhall indifferently conſider all the mockes and ſcornings of the Iewes, we ſhall finde that they cannot truly convince him of the leaſt ſinne; which ſerveth to cleare Chriſt, and to prove that he was a moſt innocent man, in whoſe waies was no wickednes, and in whoſe mouth was found no guile: and therefore hee was fitted to ſtand in our roome, and ſuffer for us which were moſt vile & ſinfull. And here by the way a queſtion offereth it ſelfe to be ſcanned. S. Matthew ſaith, Matth. 27.44. The theeves which were crucified with him caſt the ſame in his teeth, which the Scribes and Phariſes did. S. Luke ſaith, Luke 23. 39. that one of the theeves mocked him. Now it may be demanded, how both theſe can bee true? Anſ. Some reconcile the places thus: that the ſcripture ſpeaking generally of any thing, by a figure doth attribute that to the whole, which is proper to ſome part onely; and ſo here doth aſcribe that to both the theeves which agreeeth but to one. Others anſwer it thus: that at the firſt both of the evill doers did mocke Chriſt, and of that time ſpeakes Matthew: but afterwards one of them was miraculouſly cōverted; then the other alone mocked him, and of that time ſpeakes S. Luke. And this I rather take to be the truth. But what was the behaviour of Chriſt, when he was thus laded with reproch? In wonderfull patience he replies not, but puts up all in ſilēce. Where we are taught, that when a man ſhall raile on us wrongfully, we muſt not returne rebuke for rebuke, nor taunt for taunt: but we muſt either be ſilent, or els ſpeake no more then ſhall ſerve for our juſt defence. This was the practice of the Iſraelites, by the appointment of Hezechias, when Rabſhekah reviled the Iewes, and blaſphemed the name of God; the people held their peace, and anſwered him not a word, for the kings commandement was, Anſwer him not, 2 Kin. 18.36. So Hannah being troubled in minde prayed unto the Lord, and Hely marked her mouth, for ſhe ſpake in her heart, and her lippes did moove onely, but her voice was not heard, therefore Hely thought ſhee had bin drunken, & ſaid, How long wilt thou be drunken? put away thy drunkennеſſe from thee. Such a ſpeech would have mooved many a one to very hard words: but ſhee ſaid, 1 Sam. 1.14. Nay my Lord, but I am a woman troubled in ſpirit, I have drunke neither wine nor ſtrong drinke; but I have poured out my ſoule before the Lord. This is a hard leſſon for men to learne; but wee muſt endeavour our ſelves to practiſe it, if we will be followers of Chriſt, and overcome evill with good.

The third thing that fell out in the time of Chriſts crucifying, was the pitifull complaint, in which he cryed with a loud voice, Mat. 27. 46. Eli, Eli, lamaſabacthani, that is, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? In the opening of this complaint many points muſt be skanned. The firſt is, what was the cauſe that mooved Chriſt to complaine? Anſ. It was not any impatience or diſcontentation of mind, or any deſpaire, or any diſſembling, as ſome would have it: but it was an apprehenſion and a feeling of the whole wrath of God, which ſeazed upon him both in body & ſoule. The ſecond, what was the thing whereof hee doth complaine? Anſ. That hee is forſaken of God the Father. And from this point ariſeth another queſtion. How Chriſt being God, can be forſaken of God? for the Father, the Sonne & the holy Ghoſt are all three but one and the ſame God. Anſ. By God we muſt underſtand God the Father the firſt perſon. According to the common rule, when God is cōpared with the Sonne or the holy Ghoſt, then the Father is meant by this title, God; as in this place: not that the Father is more God then the Sonne, for in dignitie all the three perſons are equall: but they are diſtinguiſhed in order onely, and the Father is firſt. And againe, whereas Chriſt complaineth that he was forſaken, it muſt be underſtood in regard of his humaine nature, not of his Godhead. And Chriſts manhood was forſaken, not that his Godhead and manhood were ſevered, for they were ever joyned together from the firſt moment of the incarnation: but the Godhead of Chriſt, and ſo the Godhead of the Father did not ſhew forth his power in the manhood, but did as it were lye aſleep for a time, that the manhood might ſuffer: When a man ſleepeth, the ſoule is not ſevered from the body, but lieth as it were dead, & exerciſeth not it ſelfe: even ſo the Godhead lay ſtill, and did not manifeſt his power in the manhood, and thus the manhood seemed to be forsaken. The third poine is, the manner of this complaint, My God, my God, saith he: these words are words of faith, I say not of justifying faith whereof Christ stood not in neede but he had such a faith or hope, whereby he did put his confidence in God. The last words, why hast thou forsaken me? seeme at the first to be words of distrust. How then (will some say) can these words stand with the former? for faith and distrust are flat contraries. Answ. Christ did not utter any speech of distrust, but onely make his mone and complaint by reason of the greatnesse of his punishment: and yet still relied himselfe on the assistance of his Father. Hence we learne first, that religion doth not stand in feeling but in faith, which faith we must have in Christ, though we have no feeling at all: for God oftentimes doth withdraw his grace and favour from his children, that hee may teach them to beleeve in his mercy in Christ, then, when they feele nothing lesse then his mercy. And faith and feeling cannot alwaies stand together, because faith is a subsisting of things which are not seene, & the ground of things hoped for, & we must live by faith, and not by feeling. Though feeling of Gods mercy bee a good thing, yet God doth not alwaies vouchsafe to give it unto his children: and therefore in the extremity of afflictions & temptations, we must alwaies trust and relie on God by faith in Christ; as Christ himselfe doth when hee is as it were plunged into the sea of the wrath of God. Secondly, here we may see how God deales with his children: for Christ in the sence & feeling of his humane nature was forsaken, yet had he sure trust and confidence in God, that caused him to say, My God, my God. God will oftentimes cast his deere children into huge gulfes of woe & misery, where they shall see neither banke nor bottom, nor any way to get out: yet men in this case must not despaire, but remember still that that which befell Christ the head, doth also befall his members. Though Christ himselfe at his death did beare the wrath of God in such measure, as that in the sence and feeling of his humane nature he was forsaken: yet for all this he was the Sonne of God, and had the spirit of his Father, crying, My God, my God. And therefore though we be wonderfully afflicted either in body or in minde, so as wee have no sence or feeling of Gods mercy at all, yet must we not despaire & thinke that we are cast-awaies, but still labour to trust and relie on God in Christ, and build upon him that we are his children, though we feele nothing but his wrath upon us; against mercy cleaving to his mercy. This was Davids practice: In the day of trouble (saith he) I sought the Lord: my sore ranne and ceased not in the night: my soule refused comfort. I did thinke upon God and was troubled: my soule was full of anguish, Psal. 77. 2, 3. and so he continueth on saying, vers. 10, 11, 12. &c. Will the Lord absent himselfe for ever, and will he shew no more favour? hath God forgotten to be mercifull? but in the end he recovered himselfe out of this gulfe of temptation, saying, Yet I remember the yeeres of the right hand of the most high: I remember the worke of the Lord, certainly I remember the wonders of old. Wherefore this practice of Christ in his passion, must then be remembred of us all, when God shall humble us either in body or soule, or both.

The fourth thing which fell out when Christ was on the crosse was this: after Christ knew that all things were performed, and that the scriptures were fulfilled, he said, Ioh. 19. 28, 29, 30. I thirst, and then there standing a vessel full of vineger, one ran and filled a sponge therewith and put it about an hyssope stalke, and put it to his mouth: which when hee had received, he said, It is finished. The points here to be considered, are foure. The first, that Christ thirsted. And we must know that this thirst was a part of his passion; and indeede it was no small paine, as we may see by this: when Sisera was overcome by Israel, and had fled from his enemies to Iaels tent, Iudg. 4. 19. hee called for a little water to drinke, beeing more troubled with thirst, then with the feare of death at the hand of his enemies. And indeed thirst was as grievous to men in the East countrey, as any torment else. And hereupon Sampson was more grieved with thirst, then with feare of many thousand Philistims. Iudg. 15. 18.

Againe, whereas Christ complaineth that he thirsteth, it was not for his owne sake, but for our offences: and therefore answerably wee must thirst after Christ and his benefits, as the dry and thirsty land, where no water is, doth after raine: and as the Hart brayeth after the rivers of water, so must we say with David, My soule panteth after thee, O Lord, and the benefits of thy death. Psal. 143. 6. Psal. 42. 1.

The second, that a sponge full of vineger tied upon an Hyssope stalke, was reached to Christ upon the crosse. Now it may be demanded, how this could be, considering the stalke of the hyssope is not past a foot long. Ans. As the tree of Musterd-seed with the Iewes is far greater & taller then with us, in so much that the birds of heaven build their nests in it; so it may be that Hyssope groweth much longer in those countries then with us. Or as I take it rather, the Hyssop stalke was put upon a reed, and by that meanes the sponge was put to the mouth of Christ. Mar. 13. 36.

The third point is, that Christ drinketh the vineger offered: but when? Not before all things were finished that were to be done on the crosse. And by this he sheweth his exceeding care for our salvation. He laid aside all things that would turne to his owne ease, that he might fully worke our redemption, and fulfill the will of his Father who sent him into the world for that end. The like care must every one of us have to walke dutifully, and as it were to goe thorow-ſtitch in our particular callings, that God might bee glorified by us. When Abrahams ſervant came to Bethuel to get a wife for Iſaac, meate was ſet before him, but he ſaid, Gen. 24. 33. I will not eate before I have ſaid my meſſage: ſo likewiſe we muſt firſt ſee Gods glory procured in out affaires, and thē in the ſecond place, if commodity or praiſe redound to us, we muſt afterward take it.

The laſt point is, that when Chriſt had drunke the vineger, he ſaid, It is finiſhed. Which words may have a double ſenſe: one, that ſuch things as were figured by the ſacrifices of the old Teſtament are accompliſhed; the other, that now upon the croſſe he had finiſhed his ſatisfaction to the juſtice of his Father for mans ſinne. And this of the twaine I rather thinke to be his meaning. If it be ſaid, that the buriall & reſurrection, & aſcenſion of Chriſt, &c. which are neceſſary to mans redemption, were not yet begun: the anſwer is, that the workes of Chriſts prieſthood which follow his death, ſerve not to make any ſatisfaction to Gods juſtice for ſinne, but only to confirme or apply it, after it is made and accompliſhed on the croſſe. And if this be ſo, that Chriſt in his owne perſon accompliſhed the worke of redemption, and made a full and perfect ſatisfaction for us, as theſe words import; It is finiſhed, then humane ſatisfaction to Gods juſtice for ſinne are altogether ſuperfluous.

The fifth event that fell out when Chriſt was upon the croſſe was, that he cried with a loud voice, and ſaid. Luk. 23. 49. Father, into thy hand I lay downe my ſpirit, that is, I commend my ſoule, as beeing the moſt precious thing which I have in this world, into thy cuſtodie, who art a moſt faithfull keeper thereof. Theſe words are taken by Chriſt out of the Pſalmes: for when David was in danger of his life by reaſon of Saul, and had no friend to truſt, hee makes choice of God to be his keeper, and ſaid, Pſal. 31. 5. Into thy hands, O Lord, doe I commend my ſpirit. Now our Saviour Chriſt being in the like diſtreſſe, both by reaſon of the Iewes, who every way ſought his finall deſtruction and confuſion, & eſpecially becauſe hee felt the full wrath of God ſeazing upon him, doth make choice of Davids words, and apply them to himſelfe in his diſtreſſe. And by his example we are taught, not onely to reade the generall hiſtory of the Bible, but alſo to obſerve the things commanded and forbidden, and to apply the ſame unto our ſelves, and to our particular eſtates & dealings whatſoever: thus the Prophet David ſaith, Pſal. 40. 7. In the roll of the booke it is written of me, that I ſhould doe thy will, O my God. How can this be? for no part of Scripture penned before the daies of David, ſaith this of him. True indeed: but as I take it, Davids meaning is, that he read the booke of the Law, and found generall precepts & cōmandements given to Kings and Princes, that they ſhould keepe all the ordinances and commandements of God: which he being a King applies particularly to his owne perſon, and thereupon ſaith: In the volume of the booke it is written of me, &c. And this duty is well practiſed by the people of God at this day: For the Pſalmes of David were penned according to the eſtate of the church in his time: & in theſe daies the Church of God doth ſing the ſame with the ſame ſpirit that David did, and doth apply their ſeverall eſtates and conditions.

Now in that Chriſt commends his ſoule into the hands of his Father, he doth it to teſtifie that he died not by conſtraint, but willingly: and by his owne practice hee doth teach us to do the like, namely, to give up our own ſoules into the hands of God: and becauſe this dutie is of ſome difficultie, wee muſt obſerve three motives or preparatives which may induce us to the better doing of it. The firſt is, to conſider that God the Father of Chriſt, is the creator of our ſoules, and therefore he is called the father of ſpirits. And if he be a creator of them, then is he alſo a faithfull preſerver of them. For ſure it is, that God wil preſerve his own workmanſhip. Who is or can bee ſo carefull for the ornament & preſervation of any worke as the crafts-maſter? and ſhall not God bee more carefull then man? Wherefore S Peter exhorteth us to commit our ſoules unto God, as unto a faithfull Creator. The ſecond motive is this: we muſt looke to be reſolved in our conſciences, that God the Father of Chriſt is our Father: every man for himſelfe muſt labour to have the aſſurance of the pardon of his owne ſinnes, and that the corruption of his ſoule be waſhed away in the blood of Chriſt, that he may ſay, I am juſtified, ſanctified, and adopted by Chriſt. And when any man can ſay thus, he ſhall bee moſt deſirous and willing to commit his ſoule into the hands of God. This was the reaſon which mooved Chriſt to lay downe his ſoule into the hands of God, becauſe he is his Father. 1 Pet. 4. 19

The third motive or preparative is, a continuall experience & obſervation of Gods love and favour towards us, in keeping and preſerving him; as appeares by Davids example, Into thy hands (ſaith he) I commend my ſoule: for thou haſt redeemed me, O thou God of truth. Pſal. 31. 5.

The time when wee are ſpecially to commend our ſoules into the hands of God, is firſt of all in the time of any affliction or danger. This was the time when David commended his ſoule into the hands of God in the Pſalme before named. We know that in any common danger or perill, as the ſacking of a Citie, or burning of an houſe, if a man have any precious Iewell therein, he will firſt fetch that out, and make choiſe of a faithfull friend, to whoſe cuſtodie he will commit the ſame: even ſo, in common perils and dangers wee muſt alwaies remember to commit our ſoules as a moſt precious jewel into the hands of God, who is a faithfull Creator. Another more ſpeciall and neceſſary time of practiſing this duty, is the houre of death, as here Chriſt doth, and Steven, who when the Iewes ſtoned him to death called on God, and ſaid, Act.7.59. Lord Ieſus receive my ſpirit. And as this duty is very requiſite and neceſſary at all times, ſo moſt eſpecially in the houre of death; becauſe the danger is great, by reaſon that Satan will then chiefly aſſault us, and the guilt of ſinne will eſpecially then wound the conſcience. Laſtly, at at all times wee muſt commit our ſoules into Gods hands: for though we bee not alwaies in affliction, yet we are alwaies in great danger: and when a man lyeth downe to reſt, he knoweth not whether he ſhall riſe againe or no: and when he ariſeth, he knoweth not whether hee ſhall lye downe againe: yea at this very houre we know not what will befall the next.

And great are the comforts which ariſe by the practice of this duty. When Dauid was in great danger of his life, and his owne people would have ſtoned him, becauſe their hearts were vexed for their ſons & daughters which the Amalekites had taken, it is ſaid, 1 Sam.30. 6. he comforted himſelfe in the Lord his God. And the practice of Paul in this caſe is moſt excellent: For the which cauſe (ſaith he) I ſuffer thoſe things, but I am not aſhamed: for I know whom I have beleeved, and am perſwaded that hee is able to keepe that which I have committed unto him againſt that day, 2 Tim.1.12. This worthy ſervant of God had committed his life and ſoule into Gods hand: and therefore he ſaith, In all my ſufferings I am not aſhamed: where wee ſee, that if a man have grace in his life time to commit his ſoule into Gods hand, it will make him bold even at the point of death. And this muſt be a motive to cauſe every man daily and hourely to lay downe his ſoule into the hands of God, although by the courſe of nature hee may live twenty or forty yeares longer. But howſoever this duty bee both neceſſarie and comfortable, yet few there be that practice the ſame. Men that have children are very carefull and diligent to bring them up under ſome mans tuition; and if they have cattell, ſheepe, or oxen, they provide keepers to tend them: but in the meane ſeaſon for their owne ſoules they have no care; they may ſinke or ſwimme or doe what they will. This ſhewes the wonderfull blindneſſe or rather madneſſe of men in the world, that have more care for their cattel, then for their own ſoules: but as Chriſt hath taught us by his example, ſo let every one of us in the feare of God, learne to commit our ſoules into the hand of God.

Againe, in that Chriſt laies downe his owne ſoule, and withall the ſoules of all the faithfull into the hands of the Father, we further learne three things. The firſt, that the ſoule of man doth not vaniſh away as the ſoules of beaſts and other creatures: there is great difference betweene them: for when the beaſt dyeth, his ſoule dyeth alſo: but the ſoule of man is immortall. The conſideration whereof muſt moove every man above all things in this world to be carefull for his ſoule: if it were to vaniſh away at the day of death as the ſoules A of beaſts do, the neglect wherof were no great matter: but ſeeing it muſt live for euer either in eternall joy, or elſe in endleſſe paines & torments, it ſtands us upon every man for himſelfe, ſo to provide for his ſoule in this life, that at the day of death when it ſhall depart from his body, it may live in eternall joy and happineſſe. The ſecond, that there is an eſpeciall & particular providence of God, becauſe the particular ſoule of Chriſt is committed into the hands of his Father, and ſo anſwerably the ſoules of every one of the faithfull are. The third, that every one which beleeves himſelfe to be a member of Chriſt, muſt bee willing to die when God ſhall call him thereunto. For when we die in Chriſt, the body is but laid a- B ſleepe, & the ſoule is received into the hands of a moſt loving God and mercifull father, as the ſoule of Chriſt was. Laſtly, whereas Chriſt ſurrendring his ſoule into his Fathers hands, cals it a ſpirit, wee note, that the ſoule of man is a ſpirit, that is, a ſpirituall, inviſible, ſimple eſſence without compoſition, created as the angels of God are. The queſtion whether the ſoule of a child come from the ſoule of the parents, as the body doth come from their bodies, may eaſily bee reſolved. For the ſoule of man being a ſpirit, cannot beget another ſpirit: as the angels being ſpirituall doe not beget angels: for one ſpirit begetteth not another. Nay which is more, one ſimple element begetteth not another, as the water begetteth not water, nor aire begetteth aire: and there- C fore much leſſe can one ſoule beget another. Againe, if the ſoule of the child come from the ſoule of the parents, then there is a propagation of the whole ſoule of the parent or of ſome part thereof. If it be ſaid, that the whole ſoule of the parents is propagated, then the parents ſhould want their own ſoules & could not live. If it be ſaid, that a part of the parents ſoule is propagated: I anſwer, that the ſoule being a ſpirit or a ſimple ſubſtances, cannot bee parted: & therefore it is the ſafeſt to conclude, that the body indeed is of the body of the parents, & that the ſoule of man while the body is in making, is created of nothing: and for this very cauſe God is called the father of ſpirits. Heb.12.9

Thus much of the crucifying of Chriſt: now D followeth his death. For having laid downe his ſoule into the hands of his Father, the holy Ghoſt ſaith, Luk.23.46. He gave up the ghoſt: to give us to underſtand, that his death was no fantaſticall, but a reall death, in that his body and ſoule were ſevered as truly as when any of us dye. Intreating of Chriſts death wee muſt conſider many points. The firſt, that it was needfull that he ſhould dye, and that for two cauſes. Firſt, to ſatisfie Gods juſtice: for ſin is ſo odious a thing in Gods ſight, that he will puniſh it with an extreame puniſhment: therfore Chriſt ſtanding in our roome muſt not onely ſuffer the miſeries of this life, but alſo dye on the Croſſe, that the very extremity of puniſhment which wee ſhould have borne, might be laid on him: and ſo we in Chriſt, might fully ſatisfie Gods juſtice: for the wages of ſinne is death. Secondly, Chriſt died that he might fulfill the truth of Gods word which had ſaid, that man for eating the forbidden fruite ſhould die the death. The properties of Chriſts death are two: the firſt, that it was a voluntary and willing death: the ſecond, that it was a curſed death. For the firſt, whereas I ſay Chriſts death was voluntary, I meane that Chriſt died willingly, & of his owne free accord gave up himſelfe to ſuffer upon the croſſe. Howſoever the Iewes did arraigne, & condemne, and crucifie him, yet if he had not willed his own death, & of his free accord given himſelfe to die: not the Iewes, nor al the whole world could ever have taken away his life from him. He died not by conſtraint or compulſion, but moſt willingly: and therefore hee ſaith Ioh. 10.18. No man taketh my life from me, but I (ſaith he) lay it down of my ſelfe: I have power to lay it down, & have power to take it againe. And our Saviour Chriſt gave evident tokens hereof in his death, for then Ieſus cryed with a loud voice, and gave up the Ghoſt. Ordinarily men that die on the Croſſe, lāguiſh away by little and little, and before they come to yeeld up their lives they loſe their ſpeech, & only rattle or make a noiſe in the throat: but Chriſt at that very inſtant whē he was to give up the Ghoſt, cried with a loud voice: which ſheweth plainly, taht he in his death was more then a conquerour over death. And therefore to give all men a token of his power, and to ſhew that he died voluntarily, it pleaſed him to crie with a loud voice. And this made the Centurion to ſay that hee was the Son of God. Againe, Chriſt died not as other men doe; becauſe they firſt give up the Ghoſt, and then lay their heads aſide: but he in token that his death was voluntary, firſt laies his head aſide after the manner of a dead man, & then afterward gives up the Ghoſt. Laſtly, Chriſt died ſooner then men are woont to doe upon the croſſe, and this was the cauſe that made Pilate wonder that he was ſo ſoone dead. Now this came to paſſe, not becauſe he was loath to ſuffer the extremity of death: but becauſe hee would make it manifeſt to all men, that he had power to die, or not to die. And indeed this is our comfort, that Chriſt died not for us by conſtraint, but willingly of his owne accord.

And as Chriſts death was voluntary, ſo was it alſo an accurſed death, and therefore it is called the death of the croſſe. And it containeth the firſt and the ſecond death: the firſt, is the ſeparation of the body from the ſoule: the ſecond is the ſeparation of body and ſoule from God: and both were in Chriſt: for beſide the bodily death, he did in ſoule apprehend the wrath of God due to mans ſin: and that made him crie, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

And here wee muſt not omit a neceſſarie point, namely, how farre forth Chriſt ſuffered death. Anſw. Some thinke that hee ſuffered onely a bodily death, and ſuch paines as follow the diſſolution of nature: but they no doubt, come too ſhort: for why ſhould Chriſt have feared death ſo greatly, if it had bin nothing but the diſſolution of nature? Some againe thinke that he died, not onely the firſt, but alſo the ſecond death; but it may be they goe too farre: for if to die the firſt death, bee to ſuffer a totall ſeparation of body and ſoule, then alſo to die the ſecond death, is wholly and euery way to be ſevered from al favour of God, and at the leaſt for a time to bee oppreſſed of the ſame death as the damned are. Now this never befell Chriſt, no not in the midſt of his ſufferings, conſidering that even then he was able to call God his God. Therefore the ſafeſt is to follow the meane, namely, that Chriſt died the firſt death, in that his body and ſoule were really and wholly ſevered, yet without ſuffering any corruption in his body, which is the effect and fruit of the ſame: and that withall hee further ſuffered the extreame horrours and pangs of the ſecond death, not dying the ſame death, nor being forſaken of God, more then in his owne apprehenſion or feeling. For in the very midſt of his ſufferings the Father was well pleaſed with him. And this which I ſay doth not any whit leſſen the ſufficiency of the merit of Chriſt: for whereas hee ſuffered truly the very wrath of God, and the very torments of the damned in his ſoule, it is as much as if all the men in the world had died the ſecond death, and had bin wholly cut off from God for ever and ever. And no doubt Chriſt died the firſt death, only ſuffering the pangs of the ſecond; that the firſt death might bee an entrance not to the ſecond death, which is eternall damnation, but a paſſage to life eternal.

The benefits and comforts which ariſe by the death of Chriſt, are eſpecially foure. The firſt is the change of our naturall death, I ſay not the taking of it away, for we muſt all die: but whereas by nature death is a curſe of God upon man for eating the forbidden fruite, by the death of Chriſt it is changed from a curſe into a bleſſing, and is made as it were a middle way and entrance to convey men out of this world into the kingdome of glory in heaven: and therefore it is ſaid, Chriſt by his death hath delivered them from the feare of death, which all the daies of their lives were ſubject to bondage. Hebr. 2.15. A man that is to encounter with a ſcorpion, if he know that hee hath a ſting, he may be diſmaied; but being aſſured that the ſting is taken away, hee need not feare to encounter therewith. Now death in his owne nature conſidered, is this ſcorpion armed with a ſting: but Chriſt our Saviour by his death hath pulled out the ſting of our death, and on the croſſe triumphantly ſaith, 1 Cor. 15. 55. O death where is thy ſting! O grave where is thy victorie! and therefore even then when we feele the pangs of death approach, wee ſhould not feare but conceive hope, conſidering that our death is altered and changed by the vertue of the death of Chriſt. Secondly, the death of Chriſt hath quite taken away the ſecond death from thoſe that are in Chriſt: as Paul ſaith, Rom. 8.1. There is no condemnation to thē which are in Chriſt Ieſus, which walke not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirit. Thirdly, the death of Chriſt is a meanes to ratifie his laſt Wil & Teſtament. For this cauſe was Chriſt the Mediatour of the new Teſtament, that through death (which was for the redemption of the tranſgreſſions which were in the former Teſtamēt) they which were called might receive the promiſe of the eternall inheritance. For where a Teſtament is, there muſt be the death of him that made the Teſtament: for the Teſtament is confirmed when men are dead: for it is yet of no force ſo long as he is alive that made it. Heb. 9. 15,16,17 And therefore the death of Chriſt doth make his laſt will & teſtament which is the covenāt of grace, authenticall unto us. Fourthly, the death of Chriſt doth ſerve to aboliſh the originall corruption of our ſinfull hearts. As a ſtrong corraline laid to a ſore, eates out all the rotten & dead fleſh: even ſo Chriſts death being applied to the heart of a penitent ſinner by faith, weakens & conſumes the ſin that cleaves ſo faſt unto our natures and dwels within us. Some will ſay, how can Chriſts death which now is not, becauſe it is long ago paſt & ended, kill ſinne in us now? Anſ. Indeed if we regard the act of Chriſts death, it is paſt, but the vertue and power thereof endureth for ever. And the power of Chriſts death is nothing elſe, but the power of his Godhead, which enabled him in his death to overcome hel, the grave, death, and condemnation, and to disburthen himſelfe of our ſins. Now when wee have grace to deny our ſelves, and to put our truſt in Chriſt, and by faith are joyned to him, then as Chriſt himſelfe by the power of his Godhead overcame death, hell, and damnation in himſelfe; ſo ſhall we by the ſame power of his Godhead kill and crucifie ſinne and corruption in our ſelves. Therefore ſeeing wee reape ſuch benefit by the death of Chriſt, if wee will ſhew our ſelves to be Chriſtians, let us rejoyce in the death of Chriſt: and if the queſtion bee, what is the chiefeſt thing wherein wee rejoyce in this world? wee may anſwer, the very croſſe of Chriſt, yea the very leaſt droppe of his blood.

The duties to bee learned by the death of Chriſt are two: the firſt concernes all ignorant and impenitent ſinners. Such men whatſoever they be, by the death of Chriſt upon the croſſe, muſt bee mooved to turne from their ſins: and if the conſideration hereof will not moove them, nothing in the world wil. By nature every man is a vaſſall of ſin, and a bond-ſlāve of Satan: the divell reignes & rules in all men by nature, and we our ſelves can doe nothing but ſerve and obey him. Nay, which is more, we live under the fearefull curſe of God for the leaſt ſin. Well now, ſee the love of the Sonne of God, that gave himſelfe willingly to death upon the croſſe for thee, that hee might free thee from this moſt fearefull bondage.

A Wherefore let all thoſe that live in ſinne and ignorance reaſon thus with themſelves: Hath Chriſt the Sonne of God done this for us, and ſhall we yet live in our ſins? hath hee ſet open as it were the very gates of hell, & ſhall we yet lie weltring in our damnable wales and in the ſhadow of death? In the feare of God let the death of Chriſt bee a meanes to turne us to Chriſt: if it cannot move us, let us be reſolved that our caſe is dangerous. To goe further in this point, every one of us is by nature a ſicke man, wounded at the very heart by Satan: though we feele it not, yet we are deadly ſick: and behold, Chriſt is the good Phyſitian of the ſoule, & none in heaven or earth, neither Saint, Angel, nor man can heale this our ſpirituall B wound, but he alone: who though hee were equall with the Father, yet he came down from his boſome and became man, and lived here many yeares in miſerie and contempt: and when no herbe nor plaiſter could cure this our deadly wound or deſperate ſickneſſe, hee was cōtent to make a plaiſter with his own blood: the paine he tooke in making it, cauſed him to ſweate water and blood: nay the making of it for us coſt him his life, in that hee was content by his owne death to free us from death: which if it bee true, as it is moſt true, then woful and wretched is our caſe, if we wil ſtill live in ſinne, and will not uſe meanes to lay this plaiſter to our hearts. And after this plaiſter is applied to the ſoule, we ſhould doe as a man that hath beene grievouſly ſicke, who C when he is on the mending hand, gets ſtrength by little and little. And ſo ſhould we become new creatures, going on from grace to grace, & ſhew the ſame by living godlily, righteouſly, and ſoberly, that the world may ſee that we are cured of our ſpirituall diſeaſe. O happie, yea thrice happy are they that have grace from God to doe this. The ſecond duty concernes them which are repentant ſinners. Hath Chriſt given himſelfe for thee, and is thy conſcience ſetled in this? Then thou muſt anſwerably beare this minde, that if thy life would ſerve for the glory of God and the good of the Church, thou wouldeſt then give it moſt willingly if thou be called thereto. Secondly, if Chriſt for thy good hath given his life, then D thou muſt in like manner bee content to dye for thy brethren in Chriſt, if neede be. He (ſaith S. Iohn) laid downe his life for us, therefore wee ought to lay downe our lives for our brethren. 1. Iohn 3.16. Thirdly, if Chriſt was content to ſhed his own heart-blood not for himſelfe, but for the ſins of every one of us, then we muſt be thus affected, that rather then by ſinning we would willingly offend God, we ſhould be cōtent to have our own blood ſhed: yea, if theſe two things were put to our choiſe, either to do that which might diſpleaſe God, or elſe to ſuffer death, we muſt rather die then do the ſame. Of this mind have bin all the Martyrs of God, who rather thē they would yeeld to Idolatry, were content to ſuffer moſt bitter torments &

cruell death. Yea, every good Chriſtian is ſo affected, that hee had rather chooſe to dye then to live, not mooved by impatience in reſpect of the miſeries of this life: but becauſe he wold ceaſe to offend ſo loving a Father. To ſinne is meate and drink to the world, but to a touched and repentant heart there is no torment ſo grievous as this is, to ſinne againſt God, if once he be perſwaded that Chriſt dyed for him.

Thus much for Chriſts death: now follow thoſe things which befell Chriſt when he was newly dead; and they are two eſpecially. The firſt, that his legges were not broken as the legges of the two theeves were. Of the firſt, S. Iohn rendreth a reaſon, namely, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, which ſaith, Not a bone of him ſhall be broken: which words were ſpoken by Moſes of the paſchall Lambe, and are here applyed to Chriſt, as being typically figured thereby. And hence wee obſerve theſe two things. Firſt, that Chriſt crucified is the true paſchall Lamb, as S. Paul ſaith, Chriſt our paſſeover is ſacrificed: and S. Iohn ſaith, Behold the Lambe of God, diſtinguiſhing him thereby from the typicall Lambe. In this that Chriſt crucified is the true paſchall Lambe, the Child of God hath wonderfull matter of comfort. The Iſraelites did eate the Paſſeover in Egypt, and ſprinkled the blood of the Lambe on the poſts of their doores, that when the Angel of God came to deſtroy the firſt borne of Man and Beaſt, and ſaw the blood upon their houſes, he might paſſe over them, that the plague ſhould not be upon them to deſtruction. So likewiſe if thou doeſt feed on the Lambe of God, and by a lively faith ſprinkle the doore of thine heart with his blood, the judgement of God in this life, and the terrible curſe of death, with the fearefull ſentence of condemnation at the day of judgment, and all puniſhments due unto thy ſins ſhall paſſe over thee, and not ſo much as touch thee. And whereas the legs of our Saviour Chriſt were not broken by the ſouldiers, who ſought by all meanes poſſible to work againſt him all the miſchiefe they could: we may note, that the enemies of Chriſt and his Church, let them intend to ſhew never ſo much malice againſt him, they can not goe beyond that libertie which God giveth them, they can doe no more for their lives then that which GOD willeth. The Medes and Perſians are called the Lords ſanctified ones: Cyrus is called the Man of Gods counſell, becauſe whatſoever they intended againſt the people of God, yet in all their proceedings they did nothing but that which God had determined before to bee done. And when Senacherib came againſt the Iewes as a wild beaſt out of his denne, the Lord telleth Hezekiah concerning Aſſur, that he will put his hooke in his noſtrils, and his bridle in his lips, and bring him backe againe the ſame way that he came, that is, he will ſo rule him, that he ſhall not doe the leaſt hurt unto the Iewes, more then God will. This is a matter of great comfort to Gods Church oppreſſed with manifold enemies, Papiſts, Iewes, Turkes, and all infidels, maliciouſly bent againſt it for Chriſts ſake. For though they intend and practiſe miſchiefe, yet more then Gods will and counſell is, they cannot doe: becauſe he hath his ring in their noſtrils and his bridle in their lips to rule them as he liſteth.

The ſecond thing which fell out immediatly upon the death of Chriſt, is that the ſouldiers pierced his ſide with a ſpeare, & thence iſſued water and blood. The uſe which ariſeth of this point is two-fold: firſt it ſerves to prouve that Chriſt died truly, and not in ſhew, or a fained death: for there is about the heart a filme or skin like unto a purſe, wherein is contained cleare water to coole the heat of the heart; and therfore when water and blood iſſued out after piercing of the ſide, it is very likely that [a] that very skin was pierced: for elſe in reaſon we can not conjecture whence this water ſhold come. S. Iohn an eye-witneſſe of this thing, being about to proove that Ieſus the Sonne of Mary was the true Meſſias, bringeth in ſixe witneſſes: three in heaven, The Father, the Word, and the holy Ghoſt: and three in earth, the water, the Spirit, and the blood: where no doubt he alludeth to the water and blood that iſſued out of the ſide of Chriſt: by ſpirit, we may underſtand the efficacy and operation of Gods ſpirit, making men to bring forth the fruits of the ſame, as love, peace, joy, &c. And the ſecond witnes, namely water, hath relation to the water that came forth of Chriſts ſide, which ſignifieth the inward waſhing away of ſin, and the purging of the heart by Chriſts blood: which alſo is, and was ſignified by the outward waſhing of the body with water in baptiſme. The third witneſſe hee calles blood, alluding to the blood that iſſued out of Chriſts ſide: whereby is ſignified the expiation or ſatisfaction made to Gods juſtice for mans ſinne. The ſame uſe had the ceremoniall ſprinkling, in the old Teſtament, typically ſignifying the ſprinkling of Chriſts blood. Now theſe three witneſſes are not to bee ſought for in heaven, but every Chriſtianman muſt ſearch for them in his own heart & conſcience, and there ſhal he find them in ſome meaſure. And this water and blood flowing out of the ſide of Chriſt beeing now dead, ſignifieth that he is our juſtification and ſanctification, even after his death; and that out of his death ſprings our life: & therfore as Eve was made of a rib taken out of the ſide of Adam: ſo ſprings the Church out of the blood that flowes out of the ſide of the ſecond Adam.

Having thus intreated of Chriſts execution, let us now come to the laſt point, namely, the excellency of Chriſts paſſion, conſiſting in theſe two points: I. a Sacrifice. II. a Triumph. For the firſt, when Chriſt dyed hee offered a propitiatory and reall ſacrifice to his Father; and herein his death and paſſion differeth from the ſufferings and deaths of all men whatſoever. In this ſacrifice we muſt conſider foure things. I. who was the Prieſt. II. what was the ſacrifice. III. What was the altar. IV. The time wherein this ſacrifice was offered. The Prieſt was Chriſt himſelfe, as the author of the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes prooves at large from the third chap. to the ninth and of him we are to conſider theſe foure points. The firſt, what is the office of Chriſts prieſthood? Anſ. The office of Chriſts prieſthood ſtands in three things: I. To teach doctrine, and therefore he is called the high prieſt of our profeſſion, Heb.3.1. that is, of the Goſpel which we profeſſe, becauſe hee is the Author and Doctor of the ſame. II. To offer up himſelfe unto his Father in the behalfe of man, for the appeaſing of his wrath for ſinne. III. To make requeſt or interceſſion to God the Father, that hee would accept the ſacrifice which hee offered on the croſſe for us. The ſecond point is, According to which nature hee was a prieſt: whether in his manhood, or in his godhead, or both together? Anſw. The office of his prieſthood is performed by him according to both his natures: and therefore hee is a Prieſt not as the Papiſts would have him, according to his manhood onely, but as hee is both God and man: for as he is a Mediatour, ſo is he a Prieſt: but Chriſt is a Mediatour according to both natures: each nature doing that which is peculiar to it, and conferring ſomething to the worke of redemption: and therefore he is a Prieſt as hee is both God and man. The third point, after what order hee is a Prieſt? Anſ. The Scripture mentioneth two orders of Prieſts: the order of Levi, and the order of Melchiſedech. Chriſt was not a Prieſt after the order of Aaron: and yet notwithſtanding in that Prieſthood were many notable rites whereby the Prieſthood of our Saviour Chriſt was reſembled, and we may note five eſpecially. Firſt, in the annointing of the high Prieſt: as of Aaron, Exod.29.7. and his ſonnes after him, oyle was poured on his head, and it ranne downe to the very Pſal.133.2. edge of his garments, whereby was ſignified that Chriſt the true high Prieſt was annointed Pſal.45.7 with the oyle of gladneſſe above his fellowes; that is, that his manhood was filled with the gifts and graces of God, both in meaſure, number, and degree above all men and Angels. Secondly, the ſumptuous and glorious apparell which Exod.28.2. the high Prieſt put on, when hee came into the Sanctuary, was a ſigne of the rich and glorious Robe of Chriſts righteouſneſſe, which is the purity and integrity of his humane nature, and of his life. Thirdly, the ſpeciall parts of Exod.28.12. the high Prieſts attire were firſt the Ephod, the two ſhoulders whereof had two onyx ſtones, whereon were engraven the Names of the twelve tribes of Iſrael: ſixe names on the one ſtone, and ſixe on the other, as ſtones of remembrance of the children of Iſrael to Godward: Secondly, the breſt-plate of judgement Verſ.15.21. like the worke of the Ephod, wherein were ſet twelve ſtones according to the Names of the children of Iſrael, graven as ſignets every one after his name. Now by theſe two ornaments

A were figured two things in Chriſt: by the firſt that he carries all the Elect on his ſhoulders, and ſupports them by his ſpirit ſo long as they are in the world, againſt the world, the fleſh & the divell. By the ſecond, that Chriſt our high Prieſt being now in his ſanctuary in Heaven, hath in memory all the Elect, and their very names are written as it were in tables of gold before his face: and he hath an eſpeciall love unto them and care over them. Vpon this ground the Church in the Canticles prayes on this manner: Set me as a ſeale on thy heart, and as a ſignet upon thy arme, Can.8.6. And indeed this is a matter of comfort unto us all, that Chriſt hath our ſeverall names written in precious B ſtones before his face: though he bee now in heaven and we on earth: and that the particular eſtate of every one of us is both knowne and regarded of him. Againe, God gave to Moſes Exod.28.30. the Vrim and Thummim, which was put on the breaſt-plate of the high Prieſt, when he was to aske counſell from God of things unknowne, before the mercy-ſeat, whence God gave anſwer. What the Vrim and Thummim was, it is not knowne: and it is like it was not made by any art of man, but given by God; and how it was uſed we cannot tell: but yet the ſignification of the words affordeth matter of meditation. Vrim ſignifies lights, and Thummim ſignifies perfections. And by this a further matter was prefigured in Chriſt, who hath the perfit C Vrim and Thummim in his breaſt: firſt, becauſe in him are hid all the treaſures of wiſedome and knowledge: Col.2.3. ſecondly, becauſe hee reveales to his Church out of his Word ſuch things as none can know but the children of God: as David ſaith, The ſecret of the Lord is revealed to them that feare him. Pſal.25.14. And for this cauſe the Spirit of Chriſt is called the ſpirit of wiſdome and revelation: Eph.1.17. and the ſpirit of God, whereby we know the things that are given unto us of God: 1 Cor.2.12. as namely, our election, vocation, juſtification, & ſanctification in this life, and our eternall glorification after this life: yea to every member of Chriſt within his Church he gives a ſpeciall ſpirit of revelation out of the word, whereby he may know that God the Father is his father; the Sonne the redeemer, his redeemer; D and the holy Ghoſt his ſanctifier and comforter. Laſtly, the high Prieſt had a plate on his forehead, and therein was engraven the holineſſe of Iehovah: Exod.28.36. this ſignified the holineſſe of Chriſt: for as he is God, he is holineſſe it ſelfe: and as he is man, he is moſt holy, being ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt for this end, that hee might cover our ſinnes and unrighteouſneſſe, with his righteouſneſſe and holy obedience.

The ſecond order of prieſthood is the order of Melchiſedech of which order Chriſt was, as David ſaith, Thou art a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedech: Heb.7. and that in two ſpeciall reſpects. I. Melchiſedech was both a Prieſt and a King: ſo was Chriſt. II. Melchiſedech had neither father, nor mother, becauſe his hiſtorie is ſet downe with mention of neither: ſo likewise Christ as he is God, had no mother; and as he is man, hee had no father. The Papists avouch Christ to be a priest of this order in a new respect, in that as Melchisedeck offered bread and wine, when Abraham came from the slaughter of the Kings: so (say they) Christ in his last supper did offer his owne body and blood under the formes of bread and wine. But this is a frivolous device of theirs: for if we reade Heb.7. where this point is handled, there is no comparison at all made of their two sacrifices, but the resemblances before named are set downe, in which, person is compared with person. Againe, it is not said in Genesis that Melchisedeck offered sacrifice; but that he brought forth bread and wine, & made a feast to Abraham and his company. And if Christ should bee of the order of Melchisedeck, in regard of the offering of bread and wine, yet would this make much against the Papists. For Melchisedeck brought forth true bread and true wine; but in the sacrifice of the masse there is no true bread nor true wine: but (as they say) the reall body and blood of Christ, under the forme of bread and wine.

Protulit, non obtulit.

The fourth point is, whether there bee any more reall priests of the new Testament beside Christ or no? Ans. In the old Testament there were many Priests one following another in continuall succession, but of the new Testament there is one onely reall Priest, Christ Iesus God and man, and no more: as the author of the Hebrewes saith, because hee endureth for ever, hee hath an everlasting priesthood: and the word translated [everlasting] signifieth such a priesthood, which cannot passe from him to any other, as the priesthood of Aaron did. And therefore the priesthood of Christ is so tyed to his owne person, that none can have the same but he; neither man, nor angel, nor any other creature, no not the Father, nor the holy Ghost. But the factors of the Church of Rome will say, that Christ may have men to be his deputies in his stead to offer sacrifice. Ans. We must consider Christ two wayes. I. as he is God. II. as he is Mediator. As he is God with the Father and with the holy Ghost, hee hath Kings and Magistrates to be his deputies on earth: and therefore they are called Elohim, that is, gods. But as he is Mediator, and so consequently a Priest and a King, he hath neither deputie nor vicegerent, neither King to rule in his stead over his Church, nor priests to offer sacrifice for him: nay he hath no Prophet to be his deputy, as he is the Doctor of the Church. And therefore he saith to his disciples: be not called doctors, for one is your Doctor. Indeed he hath his Ministers to teach men his will: but a deputy to offer sacrifice in his stead he hath not. And therefore we may with good conscience abhorre the massing priesthood of the Church of Rome, as a thing fetched from the bottome of hell: and their massing priests as instruments of Satan; holding this for a very truth, that we have but one onely Priest even Christ himself God and man. Indeed all Christians are priests to offer up spirituall sacrifice: but it is the property of Christ alone to offer an outward and reall sacrifice unto God now in the new Testament.

Thus much of the first point, who is the Priest. The second followeth, what is the sacrifice. Ans. The sacrifice is Christ, as he is man, or the manhood of Christ crucified. As the priest is both God and man: so the sacrifice is man * not God. So it is said, we are sanctified by the offering of the body of Iesus Christ. Touching this sacrifice, sundry questions are to be skanned. The first, what kind of sacrifice it was? Answ. In the old Testament there were two kinds of sacrifices: one, propitiatory which served to satisfie for sinne: the other, eucharisticall for praise and thanksgiving. Now the sacrifice of Christ was a sacrifice propitiatory especially prefigured by the typicall sacrifice called the whole burnt offering; for it was all consumed to ashes upon the altar, and turned into smoak, so the fire of Gods wrath did seaze upon Christ on the crosse, and did consume him as it were to nothing, to make us something. Secondly, when Noe offered an whole burnt offering after the flood, it is said, God smelled a savour of rest: not because he was delighted with the smell of the sacrifice, but because he approoved his faith in Christ. And hereby was figured, that Christ upon the crosse was an offering, and a sacrifice of a sweet smelling savour unto God: because God was well pleased therewith. Now when as Christ was content wholly to offer up himself to appease the wrath of his Father for us: it must teach us to give our bodies and soules, as holy, living, and acceptable sacrifices, wholly dedicating them to the service of God.

* Or the godhead. Heb. 10. 10.

Gen. 8. 20. Iob 1. 8.

Gen. 8. 21.

Eph. 5. 2.

The second question is, how oft Christ offered himself? Answ. Once onely and no more. This must be held as a principle of divinitie: Which once offering hath he consecrated for ever, them that are sanctified: and againe, Christ was once offered to take away the sins of many. And it serveth to overthrow the abhominable sacrifice of the Masse, in which the true bodie and blood of Christ is offered under the formes of bread and wine, really and substantially (as they say) for the remission of the sinnes of the quick and the dead, and that continually: but if this unbloody sacrifice of Christ be good, then is it either the continuing of that which was begun on the crosse by Christ himselfe, or the iteration of it by the masse priest. Now let Papists chuse whether of these two they will, if they say it is the continuing of the sacrifice of Christ, then they speak outragious blasphemy: for it is in effect to say that Christs sacrifice was not perfect, but onely begun on the crosse, and must be accomplished by the masse priest to the end of the world. If they affirme the second, that it is an iteration of Christs sacrifice, then also they speake blasphemy: for hereby they make it

Heb. 10. 14. Heb. 9. 28.

also an imperfect sacrifice, because it is repeated and iterated: for upon this ground doth the author to the Hebrewes proove, that the sacrifices of the old Testament were imperfect, because they were daily offered. And whereas they say there be two kinds of sacrifices, one bloody once onely offered upon the crosse: the other unbloody, which is daily offered: I answer, that this distinction hath no ground out of Gods word: neither was it knowne to the holy Ghost who saith, that without blood there is no remission of sinnes. Heb.9.22.

The third question is, what is the fruit of this sacrifice. Ans. The whole effect thereof is contained in these foure things: I. the oblation of Christ purgeth the beleever from all his sinnes, whether they be originall or actuall: so it is said, If we walk in the light, we have fellowship one with another: and the blood of Iesus Christ his Sonne purgeth us from all sinne: whether they be sinnes of omission in regard of our duties, or of commission in doing evill. II. the oblation serveth for the justifying of a sinner before God, as Paul saith, We are justified by his blood, and are reconciled to God by his death. 1 Ioh.1.7. Rom.5.10.

This being here remembred, that in the passion of Christ we include his legall obedience, whereby he fulfilled the law for us. III. the oblation of Christ serves to purge mens consciences from dead workes; How much more then shall the blood of Christ, which through the eternall spirit offered himselfe without spot to God, purge your consciences from dead workes to serve the living God? IV. The oblation of Christ procures us liberty to enter into heaven, By the blood of Christ Iesus wee may be bold to enter into the holy place, by the new and living way which he hath prepared for us through the veile, that is, his flesh. By our sinnes there is a partition-wall made betweene God and us: but Christ by offering himselfe upon the crosse, hath beaten downe this wall, opened heaven, and as it were, trained the way with his owne blood, whereby wee may enter into the Kingdome of God, and without the which we cannot enter in at all. Heb.9.14. Heb.10.20.

The last question is, how this sacrifice may be applyed to us. Ans. The meanes of applying this sacrifice be two. I. the hand of God which offereth. II. the hand of the beleever that receiveth the sacrifice offered. The hand of God whereby he offereth unto us this benefit, is the preaching of the Word, and the administration of the Sacraments, baptisme, and the Lords Supper: and wheresoever these his holy ordinances are rightly administred and put in practise, there the Lord puts forth his hand unto us, and offereth most freely the vertue and benefit of the death of Christ. And then in the next place commeth the hand of the beleever which is faith in the heart; which when God offereth, doth apprehend and receive the thing offered, and make it ours.

The third thing to be spoken of is, the altar whereon Christ offered himselfe. The altar was not the crosse, but rather the godhead of Christ. He was both the priest, the sacrifice, and the altar: the sacrifice, as he is man; the Priest, as he is both God and man; the altar as he is God. The property of an altar, is to sanctifie the sacrifice: as Christ saith, Te fooles and blind whether is greater the offering, or the altar that sanctifieth the offering? Now Christ as he is God, sanctifieth himselfe as he was man: and therefore (saith he) for their sakes sanctifie I my selfe, by doing two things: I. by setting apart the manhood to be a sacrifice unto his Father for our sinnes. II. by giving to this sacrifice merit or efficacy to deserve at Gods hands remission of our sinnes: the manhood of Christ without the godhead hath no vertue nor efficacy in it selfe to bee a meritorious sacrifice: and therfore the dignity and excellency which it hath is derived thence. As for the chalky and stony altars of the Church of Rome, they are nothing else but the toyes of mans braine. Christ himselfe is the onely reall altar of the new Testament. And in stead of altars which were under the law, we have now the Lords Table whereon we celebrate the Sacrament of his body and blood, to shew forth his death till he come. Mat.23.19. Ioh.17.19.

The fourth point, is concerning the time of Christs oblation, which he himselfe calleth the acceptable yeare of the Lord: alluding unto another yeare under the law called the yeare of Iubile, which was every fifty yeare among the Iewes, in which at the sound of a trumpet all that had let or sold their possessions received them againe: all that were bondmen were then set at liberty. This Iubile was but a figure of that perfect deliverance which was to be obtained by Christs passion, which was not a temporary deliverance for every fifty yeare, but an eternall freedome from the bondage of sinne, hell, death, and condemnation. And the preaching of the word is the trumpet sounded which proclaimeth unto us freedome from the kingdome of darkenesse, and invites us to come and dwell in perfect peace with Christ himselfe. Well, if the yeare of perpetual Iubile be now come, in what a wretched estate are all our loose and blind people that esteeme nothing of that liberty which is offered to them, but choose rather to live in their sinnes, and in bondage under Satan and condemnation, then to be at freedome in Christ? Luk.4.19. Lev.25.10.

Now follow the uses which are to be made of the sacrifice of Christ. The Prophet Aggai saith, that the second temple built by Zorobabel was nothing in beautie unto the first which was built by Salomon: and the reason is plaine, for (as the Iewes write) it wanted five things which the first temple had: I. the appearing of the presence of God at the mercy seat betweene the two Cherubins. II. the Vrim and Thummim on the breast-plate of the high Priest. III. The inspiration of the holy Ghost upon extraordinary Prophets. IIII. The Arke of the Covenant: for that was lost in the captivitie. V. Fire from heaven to burne the sa- Agg.2.4.

crifices. Yet for all this, the Prophet afterward
Agg. 2. 10. saith; The glory of the last house, shall be greater then the first. Now it may be demanded, how both these sayings can stand together. Answ. We are to know, that the second temple was standing in the time when Christ was crucified for our sinnes; and it was the sacrifice of Christ which gave glory and dignity to the second Temple, though otherwise for building and outward ornaments it was farre inferior to the first. And by this we are taught, that if we would bring glory unto our owne selves, unto our houses and kindred, either before God or before men, we must labour to be partakers of the sacrifice of Christ, and the sprinkling of his blood to purge our hearts. This is the thing that brings renowne both to place and person, how base soever we be in the eyes of the world. Secondly, all oblations & meate offrings were sprinkled with salt, and every sacrifice of propitiation which was to be burned
Lev. 2. 13. Ezek. 43. 24. to ashes, was first salted: and hereby two things Ezek. 16. 4. are signified. The first, that every one of us our selves are loathsome or vile in the sight of God; like unto stinking carion or raw flesh kept long unpowdered. A dead and rotten carkesse is loathsome unto us: but we our selves are a thousand times more loathsome unto God. The second, that we are as it were salted and made savory and acceptable to God by the vertue of the sacrifice of Christ upon the crosse. Our duty then is to labour that we may feele in our selves the biting and sharpenesse of the oblation of Christ, to wast and consume the superfluities of sinne and the corruptions of our nature. And we must with all indeavor, that the whole course of our lives, and our speech it selfe be gracious and powdered with salt, least God at length spue us out of his
Col. 4. 6. Matth. 5. 13. mouth. To this end hath God appointed his ministers to bee the salt of the earth, that by their ministery they might apply the death of Christ, and season the people. And it hath pleased God to besprinkle this land with more plenty of this salt then hath beene heretofore. But, alas, small is the number of them that give any relish of their good seasoning. The more lamentable is their case. For as flesh that cannot be seasoned with salt, putrifies: so men, that cannot bee sweetned and changed by the sacrifice of Christ, doe rot and perish in their sinnes. The waters that issued from under Ezech. 47. 8. 11. * Mare mortuum. the threshold of the sanctuary, when they came into the * dead sea, the waters thereof were holesome, but myry places and marishes which could not be seasoned, were made saltpits. Now these waters are the preaching of the Gospel of Christ, which flowing through all the parts of this Isle, if it doe not season and change our nation, it shall make it as places of nettles and saltpits, and at length be an occasion of the eternall curse of God. Thirdly, Christs priesthood serves to make every one of us also to be priests. And being priests, we must likewise have our sacrifice and our altar:

A our sacrifice, is the cleane offering which is the
Mal. 1. 11. 1 Tim. 1. 8. lifting up of pure hands to God without wrath or doubting in our prayers: also our body, and soules, our hearts and affections, the workes of our lives, and the workes of our callings: all which must be dedicated to the service of God for his glory, and the good of his Church. The altar whereon we must offer our sacrifice, is Christ our Redeemer, both God and man, be-
Rev. 8. 3. Heb. 13. 10. cause by the vertue of his death, as with sweet odours, hee perfumes all our obedience, and makes it acceptable to God. The Ministers of the Gospel are also in this manner priests, as
Rom. 15. 16. Paul insinuateth when hee calleth the Gentiles his offering unto God. And the preaching of the
B Word is as it were a sacrificing knife, whereby the old Adam must bee killed in us; and wee made an holy and acceptable sweet smelling oblation unto God, sanctified by the holy Ghost. Therefore every one that heareth Gods Word preached and taught, must indeavour that by the profitable hearing thereof, his sinnes and whole nature may be subdued and killed, as the beast was slaine and sacrificed upon the altar by the hand of the Levite. Lastly, the exhortation of the holy Ghost must here be considered: Seeing (saith he) we have an high
Heb. 10. 21, 22. Priest, which is over the house of God, let us draw neere with a true heart in assurance of faith, sprinkled in our hearts from an evill conscience, & washed in our bodies with pure water. The meaning of
C the words is this, that if Christ have offered such a sacrifice of such a value and price, which procureth pardon of sinne, justification, sanctification, and redemption, then we must labour to be partakers of it; to have our bodies and soules purified and cleansed by his blood, and sanctified throughout by the holy Ghost, that thereby we may be made fit to doe sacrifice acceptable to God in Christ. This is the use which the Apostle maketh of the doctrine of Christs priesthood in that place, which also every man should apply unto himselfe: for why should we live in our sinnes and wicked waies, every houre incurring the danger of Gods judgements, seeing Christ hath offered such a sacrifice whereby wee may bee purged
D and cleansed, and at length freed from all woe and miserie?

Thus much of Christs sacrifice: now followes his Triumph upon the Crosse. That Christ did Triumph when hee was upon the crosse, it is plainly set downe by the Apostle Paul, where he saith, Col. 2. 14, 15. That putting out the hand writing of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, he even tooke it out of the way, and fastened it upon the crosse, and hath spoiled the principalities and powers, & hath made shew of them openly, and hath triumphed over them in the same crosse. This triumph is set forth by signes & testimonies of two sorts. I. By signes of his glory and Majestie. II. By signes of his victorie on the Crosse. The signes of his glory and majestie are principally seven. The first, is the title set over his head upon the crosse, Ioh. 19, 18. Iesus of Nazareth king of the Iewes. The end why titles were set over the heads of malefactors was, that the beholders might know the cause of the punishment, and be admonished to take heede of like offences, and be stirred up to a dislike of the parties executed for their offences. And therefore no doubt, Pilate wrote the title of Christ for the aggravating of his cause, & that with his own hand. Yet marke the strange event that followed: for when Pilate was about to write the superscription, God did so governe and overrule both his heart and hand, that in stead of noting some crime, he sets downe a most glorious and worthy title, calling him, Iesus of Nazareth King of the Iewes: which words containe the very summe and pith of the whole Gospel of Christ, delivered by the Patriarkes and Prophets from age to age. Wee must not thinke that Pilate did this of any good mind, or upon any love or favour that he bare to Christ; but onely as he was guided and over-ruled by the power of God for the advancement of the honour and glory of Christ. The like did Caiphas who though a sworne enemy to Christ, yet he uttered a prophecy of him, saying, Ioh. 11. 50. That it was necessary that one should dye for the people: not that he had any intent to prophesie: but because the Lord used him as an instrument to publish his truth. And when Balaam for the wages of unrighteousnesse would have cursed the Lords people, for his life hee could not; nay, all his cursings were turned into blessings. By this then it appeares, that it is not possible for any man, doe what he can, to stop the course of the Gospel of Christ: nay, (as we see) God can raise up the wicked sometime to spread abroad and to publish the truth, though they themselves intend the contrary. Furthermore let us marke that when the Iews did most of all intend to bring disgrace and ignominy upon our Saviour Christ; then did they most of all extoll and magnifie his name; they could not for their lives have given him a more renowned title then this, that hee was King of the Iewes. And the same is the case of all the members of Christ: for let a man walke in a good conscience before God and man, he shall find this to be true, that when he is most disgraced in the world, then commonly he is most honoured with God and men.

Further, Pilate wrote this superscription in three languages, Hebrew, Greeke, and Latine. And no doubt the end thereof in the providence of God was, that the passion of Christ, as also the publishing of his kingdome and Gospel might be spread over the whole world. This shewes the malice of the Church of Rome, which will not suffer the Word of God to be published but in the Latine tongue, least the people should bee entangled in errours.

Againe, when Pilate had thus written the superscription, the high Priests and Pharisees offended thereat, came to Pilate, willing him to change the title, saying, Write not the King of the Iewes, but that he said, I am the King of the Iewes: but Pilate answered them againe, That which I have written, I have written. Though Pilate had beene over-ruled before to condemne Christ to death, against his owne conscience, yet will hee not in any wise condescend to change the superscription. How comes this to passe? Surely, as he was ruled by the hand of God in penning it, so by the same hand of God was hee confirmed in not changing it. Hence we learne sundry instructions. First, that no man in the world, let him indeavour himselfe to the uttermost of his power, is able to stop the course of the Kingdome of God: it stands firme and sure, and all the world is not able to prevaile against it. Secondly, whereas Pilate being but a heathen man was thus constant, that he will not have his writing changed; we may note, how permanent and unchangeable the writings of the holy Word of God are. They are not the words of heathen men, but were spoken by the mouth of the Prophets and Apostles, as God gave them utterance. The booke of Scripture therefore is much more immutable, so as no creature shall be able to change the least part of it till it be fulfilled. Thirdly, by Pilates constancy, we learne to be constant in the practice and professions of the religion of Christ: this is a necessary lesson for these daies, wherein mens professions do fleete like water, and go & come with the tide. Many zealous professours to day, but to morrow as cold as water. And the complaint of the Lord touching times past, agrees to our dayes: Ose. 6. 4. O Ephraim, What shall I say to thee? thy righteousnesse is like the morning dew.

The second is, the conversion of the theefe: a most worthy argument of the God-head of Christ. For by it when he was upon the Crosse and in the very middest of his passion, he gives unto all the world a lively and notable experience of the vertue and power of his death, so as his very enemies might not onely behold the passion it selfe, but also at the same time acknowledge the admirable efficacie thereof. And therefore with the passion of Christ, we must joyne the conversion of the theefe: which is as it were a christall glasse wherein we may sensibly behold the endlesse merit & vertue of the obedience of Christ to his Father, even to the death of the crosse. And therefore I will briefely touch the speciall instructions which are to be learned by it. First, let us marke that both the theeves in every respect were equall, both wicked and lewd livers: & for their notorious faults both attached, condemned, & executed both on the crosse at the same time with Christ: yet for all this, the one repenting was saved, the other was not. And in their two examples we see the state of the whole world, whereof one part is chosen to life eternall: and thereupon attaines to faith and repentance in this life: the rest are rejected in the eternall counsell of God, for just causes known to himselfe, and such being left to themselves never repent at all. Secondly, we are taught hereby, that the whole worke of our conversion and salvation must be ascribed wholly to the meere mercy of God: of those two theeves the one was as deepely plunged in wickednes as the other, & yet the one is saved, the other condemned. The like was in Iacob & Esau, both borne at one time, & of the same parents, and neither of them had done good, nor evill, when they were borne: yet one was then loved, the other was hated: yea if we regard outward prerogatives, Esau was the first born, & yet was refused

Rom. 9.14.

Gen.25.23.

Furthermore, the thiefe on the crosse declareth his conversion, by manifest signes & fruits of repentance, as appeares by the words which he spake to his fellow, Fearest thou not God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? Though hands and feete were fast nailed on the crosse, yet heart and tongue are at liberty to give some tokens of his true repentance. The people of this our land heare the word, but for the most part are without either profit in knowledge, or amendment of life; yet for all this, they perswade themselves that they haue good hearts, & good meanings, though they cannot beare it away, & utter it so wel as others. But alas, poore soules, they are deluded by Satan: for a man that is converted cannot but expresse his conversion, and bring forth the fruit thereof. And therefore our Saviour Christ saith, If a man beleeve in me, out of his belly shal flow rivers of water of life. The grace (as Elihu saith) of God, is like new wine in a vessell which must have a vent; & therefore hee that sheweth no tokens of Gods grace in this life, is not as yet converted; let him thinke and say of himselfe what he will. Can a man have life, & never moove, nor take breath? and can he that brings forth no fruit of conversion, live unto God? well, let us now see what were the fruits of this thiefes repentance. They may bereduced to foure heads. First, he rebukes his fellow for mocking Christ, indeavouring thereby to bring him to the same condition with himselfe, if it were possible: whereby he discovers unto us the property of a true repentant sinner, which is to labour and strive, so much as in him lieth, to bring all men to the same state that he is in. Thus David having tried the great love and favour of God toward himselfe, breaketh forth & saith, Come children, hearkē unto me, & I will teach you the feare of the Lord: shewing his desire that the same benefits which it had pleased God to bestow on him, might also in like maner be conveied to others. Therefore it is a great shame to see men professing religion, carried away with every company, and with the vanities and fashions of the world, whereas they should rather draw even the worst men that be to the fellowshippe of those graces of God which they have received. That which the Lord spake to the Prophet Ieremy, must be applied to all men: Let them returne unto thee, but returne not thou unto them. In instruments of musicke the string out out of tune must be set up to the rest that bee in tune, and not the rest to it.

Againe, in that hee checkes his fellow, it shewes that those which bee touched for their owne sins, are also grieved when they see other men sin and offend God. But to goe further in this point, let us diligently and carefully marke the matter of his reproofe, Fearest thou not God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? In which words hee rippes up his lewdnesse even to the quicke, and gives him a worthy Item, telling him that the cause of all their former wickednes, had bin the want of the feare of God. And this point must every one of us marke with great diligence. For if we enter into our hearts and make a through search, wee shall finde that this is the roote & foundation of all our offences. We miserable men for the most part have not grace to consider that wee are alwaies before God; and to quake and tremble at the consideration of his presence: and this makes us so often to offend God in our lives as we doe. Abraham comming before Abimelech, shifting for himselfe said, that Sara was his sister: & being demanded why hee did so, answered, Because hee thought the feare of God was not in that place: insinuating that he which wants the feare of God, will not make conscience of any sinne whatsoever. Would wee then even from the bottome of our hearts turne to God, and become new creatures? then let us learne to feare God: which is nothing else but this, when a man is perswaded in his owne heart and conscience that wheresoever he be, he is in the presence and sight of God, and by reason therof is afraid to sin. This wee must have fully setled in our hearts, if wee desire to learne but the first lesson of true wisedome. But what reason useth the thiefe to draw his fellow to the feare of God? Thou art (saith he) in the same condemnation, that is, by thy sinnes & manifold transgressions, thou hast deserved death, & it is now most justly inflicted upon thee, wilt thou not yet feare God? Where wee are taught, that temporall punishments & crosses, ought to be a meanes to worke in us the feare of God; for that is one end why they are sent of God. It is good for me (saith David) that I have beene chastised, that I may learne thy statutes. And Paul saith, When we are chastised, we are nurtured of the Lord. And the Iewes are taught by the Prophet Micah to say, I will beare the wrath of the Lord, because I have sinned against him.

Gen.20.11.

Psal.119. 17.

1 Cor.11. 33.

Mich.7.9.

The second fruit of his conversion is, that he condemneth himselfe and his fellow for their sinnes, saying, Indeede we are righteously here, for we receive things worthy for that wee have done: that is, wee have wonderfully sinned against Gods majesty, and against our brethren: and therefore this grievous punishment which we beare, is most just and due unto us. This fruit of repentance springs and growes very thin among us, for few there bee which doe seriously condeme themselves for their owne sinnes, the maner of men is to condemne others, and to cry out that the world was never ſo bad; but bring them home to themſelves, and you ſhall finde that they have many excuſes and defences as plaiſter-worke to caſt over their foule and filthy ſinnes: and if they bee urged to ſpeake againſt themſelves, the worſt will be thus, God helpe vs, we are all ſinners, even the beſt of us. But certaine it is, that hee which is throughly touched in conſcience for his ſinnes, both can and will ſpeake more againſt himſelfe for his manifold offences, then all the world beſides. 1.Tim.1.15. Thus Paul when he was converted calles himſelfe the chiefe of all ſinners. And the prodigall childe confeſſed that hee had ſinned againſt heaven and againſt his father, and was not worthy to be called his childe.

The third fruit of his converſion is, that he excuſeth our Saviour Chriſt, and giveth teſtimony of his innocency, ſaying, But this man hath done nothing amiſſe. Marke here: Pilate condemned Chriſt, Herod mocked him, all the learned Scribes and Phariſes condemned him, and the people crie, Away with him, let him be crucified: and among his own diſciples Peter denied him, and the reſt ran away; there remaines onely this poore ſilly wretch upon the croſſe to give teſtimony of Chriſts innocency: whereby we learne, that God chooſeth the ſimple ones of this world, to overthrow the wiſedome of the wiſe: and therefore wee muſt take heed that we bee not offended at the Goſpel of Chriſt, by reaſon that for the moſt part ſimple and meane men in the world embrace it. Nay marke further, this one thiefe being converted had a better judgement in matters concerning Gods kingdome, then the whole body of the Iewes. And by this alſo ſtudents may learne, that if they deſire to have in themſelves upright judgements in matters of religion, firſt of all they muſt become repentant ſinners: and though a man have never ſo much learning, yet if he bee carried away with his own blind affections & luſts, they will corrupt and darken his judgewent. Men which worke in mines & cole-pits under the earth, are troubled with nothing ſo much as with damps, which make their candle burne darke, and ſometimes puts it quite out. Now every mans ſinnes are the dampes of his heart, which when they take place, doe dimme the light of his judgement, and caſt a miſt over the minde, and darken the underſtanding and reaſon: and therfore a needfull thing it is, that men in the firſt place ſhould provide for their own converſion.

The fourth fruit of his repentance is, that hee prayeth for mercy at Chriſts hands, Lord (ſaith he) remember me when thou commeſt into thy kingdome: in which prayer we may ſee what is the property of faith. This thiefe at this inſtant heard nothing of Chriſt but the ſcornings and mockings of the people, and hee ſaw nothing but a baſe eſtate full of ignominy and ſhame, and the curſed death of the croſſe, yet nevertheleſſe hee now beleeves in Chriſt, and therefore intreates for ſalvation at his hand.

A Hence we learne, that it is one thing to beleeve in Chriſt, and another to have feeling and experience: and that even then when wee have no ſenſe nor experience wee muſt beleeve: for Faith is the ſubſiſting ſo things which are not ſeene: and Abraham above hope did beleeue under hope: and Iob ſaith, though thou kill me, yet will I beleeve in thee. Heb.11.1. Rom.4.18. Iob 13.15. In Philoſophy a man begins by experience, after which comes knowledge and beliefe; as when a man hath put his hand to the fire, and feeles it to be hot, he comes to know thereby that fire burnes: but in divinity, wee muſt beleeve though we have no feeling: firſt comes faith, and after comes ſenſe and feeling. And the ground of our religion ſtands in this, to beleeve things neither ſeene nor felt, to hope a- B bove all hope, and without hope: in extremity of affliction to beleeve that God loveth us, when hee ſeemeth to bee our enemie, and to perſevere in the ſame to the end.

The anſwer which Chriſt made to his prayer was, This day ſhalt thou bee with me in Paradiſe. Luk.23.43. Whereby hee teſtifies in the midſt of his ſufferings the power which hee had over the ſoules of men: and verifies that gracious promiſe, Aske and ye ſhall receive, ſeeke and ye ſhall finde, knocke, & it ſhalbe opened unto you: & withall confutes the Popiſh purgatorie. For if any man ſhould have gone to that forged place of torment, then the thiefe upon the croſſe, who repenting at the laſt gaſpe wanted time to make ſatisfaction for the temporall puniſh- C ment of his ſinnes. And by this converſion of the thiefe we may learne, that if any of us would turne to God and repent, we muſt have three things. I. The knowledge of our owne ſinnes. II. From the bottome of our hearts wee muſt confeſſe and condemne our ſelves for them, and ſpeake the worſt that can bee of our ſelves, in regard of our ſins. III. We muſt earneſtly crave pardon for them, and call for mercy at Gods hands in Chriſt, withall reforming our lives for the time to come: if we do, we give tokens of repentance; if not, we may thinke what we will, but we deceive our ſelves and are not truely converted. And here wee muſt bee warned to take heede leſt wee abuſe, as many doe, the example of the theefe, to con- D clude thereby that wee may repent when wee will, becauſe the theefe on the croſſe was converted at the laſt gaſpe. For there is not a ſecond example like to this in all the whole Bible: it was alſo extraordinary. Indeed ſundry men are called at the eleventh houre, but it is a moſt rare thing to finde the converſion of a ſinner after the eleventh houre, and at the point of the twelfth. This mercy God vouchſafed this one theefe, that he might be a glaſſe in which wee might behold the efficacie of Chriſts death, but the like is not done to many men; no not to one of a 1000. Let us rather conſider the eſtate of the other thiefe, who neither by the dealing of his fellow, nor by any ſpeech of Chriſt could be brought to repentance. Let us not therefore deferre our repentance to the houre of death:

for then we ſhall have ſore enemies againſt us: the world, the fleſh, the divell, & a guiltie conſcience; & the beſt way is before-hand to prevent them. And experience ſhewes, that if a man defer repentance to the laſt gaſpe, often when he would repent he cannot. Let us take Salomons counſell, Remember thy Creator in the daies of thy youth, before the evil daies come. Ecc. 12. 1. If we will not heare the Lord when he cals us, he will not heare us when we call him.

The third ſigne was, the eclipſing or darkning of the Sunne from the ſixt houre to the ninth. And this eclipſe was miraculous. For by the courſe of nature the Sunne is never eclipſed, but in the new Moone: whereas contrariwiſe this eclipſe was about the time of the Paſſeover which was alwaies kept at the full Moone. Queſtion is made touching the largenes of it: ſome mooved by the words of Luke, who ſaith that darkeneſſe was upon the whole earth, have thought that the eclipſe was univerſal over the whole world: but I rather think that Saint Lukes meaning is, that it was over the whole Region or countrey of Iury. For if ſuch a wonder had happened over the whole world, all Hiſtoriographers Greeke & Latine, and Aſtronomers, diligent obſervers of all eclipſes, would have made ſpeciall mention thereof. And though ſome[a] writers ſay that it was over the whole earth, and that it was ſet down in Record both by the Romanes, and Grecians; yet all their writings prove no more but this, that it was over Iury and Galile, and the countries bordering neere unto.

Luk. 23. 44. ἐφ' ὅλην τὴν γῆν.

The uſes of this miracle are manifold. I. This darkning of the Sunne gives a checke to the Iewes for their crucifying of Chriſt: they were not aſhamed to apprehend, accuſe, and condemne him, yet this glorious creature the Sunne pulleth in his beames, being as it were aſhamed to behold that, which they were not aſhamed to do. II. It ſerves to ſignifie the great judgment of God to come upon the Iews. For as when Chriſt ſuffered, darkneſſe was over all the land of Iury, and all the world beſides had the light of the Sunne, ſo ſhortly after blindnes of mind was over the whole nation of the Iews and all the world beſides ſaw the Sun of righteouſneſſe ſhining unto them in preaching of the Goſpel. III. It ſerves to advertiſe us, that ſuch as carry themſelves towards Chriſt as the Iewes did, have nothing elſe in them but darknes, and that they ſit in the darknes and ſhadow of death; and therefore not able any whit better to ſee the way that leadeth unto life, then hee which is caſt into a darke dungeon can; who if they thus remaine, ſhall at length be caſt into utter darkeneſſe. This being the eſtate of all them that be forth of Chriſt, we muſt labour to be freed from this darkneſſe, that the day-ſtarre may riſe in our hearts, and ſhine upon us, and put life into us. IV. This miraculous and wonderfull darkening of the Sunne doth convince the Iewes, that Chriſt whom they crucified was the Lord of glory, and the Sauiour of the world: and it is very like, that this was the principall end of this miracle. For whereas neither his doctrine, nor his former miracles could moove them to acknowledge him for that Meſſias, yet this one worke of God doth as it were ſtrike the naile to the head, and ſtop all their mouthes. V. Beſides this, whereas at the very inſtant when Chriſt was about to make ſatisfaction to the juſtice of his Father for our ſins, the Sunne was thus darkened: it teacheth us firſt, to thinke of the paſſion of Chriſt, not as of a light matter, but as one of the greateſt wonders of the world, at the ſight whereof the very frame of nature was changed: ſecondly, to thinke of our owne ſins, as the vileſt things in the world, and that they deſerve the intolerable wrath of God: conſidering that at the time when they were to be aboliſhed, the courſe of nature even in the very heavens is turned upſide downe.

The fourth ſigne, is the rending of the vaile of the temple from the top to the bottome. The temple was divided into two parts; the more inward, into which no man might come but the high Prieſt, and that once a yeere; and it was called the holy of holies: the other was that where the people came and offered ſacrifices unto the Lord. Now that which parted the temple into theſe two parts was called the vaile, and at the time of Chriſts paſſion it was rent from the top to the very bottome. This hath divers uſes: I. The holy of holies ſignified the third heaven, where God ſheweth himſelf in glory and majeſty unto his Saints: and the rending of the vaile figureth unto us, that by the death of Chriſt, heaven which was otherwiſe ſhut by our ſins, is now ſet open & a way made to enter thereto. II. It ſignifieth, that by the death of Chriſt we have without impediment, free acceſſe to come unto God the Father by earneſt prayer in the name of Chriſt: which is a moſt unſpeakeable benefit. III. It ſignifieth, that by Chriſts death an end is put to all ceremonies, to ceremoniall worſhip, and the ſacrifices of the old Teſtament: and that therfore in the new Teſtament there remaines one only reall and outward ſacrifice, that is, Chriſt crucified on the croſſe: and the whole ſervice and worſhip of God for outward ceremonies moſt ſimple and plaine. IV. The temple was the chiefe and one of the moſt principall prerogatives that the Iewes had; it was their glory that they had ſuch a place wherein they might worſhip & do ſervice to the true God: and for the temples ſake, God often ſpared them, & therefore Daniel praies: O Lord heare the prayer of thy ſervant, and his ſupplication, and cauſe thy face to ſhine upō the Sanctuary that lyes waſt for the Lords ſake. Yet for al this, whē they began to crucifie the Lord of life, their prerogatives helpe them not, nay they are deprived thereof, & God even with his own hand rends the vaile of the tēple in ſunder, ſignifying unto them, that if they forſake him he will alſo forſake them. And ſo we may ſay of the Church of England, no doubt for the Gospels sake, we have outward peace and safetie, and many other blessings, and are in account with other nations: yet if we make no conscience to obey the Word of God, and if we have no love of Christ and his members, God will at length remoove his candlesticke from us, and utterly deprive us of this ornament of the Gospel, and make our land as odious unto all the world, as the land of the Iewes is at this day. Let us therefore with all care & diligence shew forth our love both to Christ himselfe, and to his members, and adorne the Gospel which wee professe, by bringing forth fruits worthy of it.

The fifth signe, is the earth-quake, whereby hard rocks were cloven asunder. And it serves very fitly to signifie further unto us, that the Mat.27.51. sin of the Iewes in putting Christ to death was so heavy a burden, that the earth could not beare it but tremble thereat, though the Iewes themselves made no bones of it. And it is a thing to be wondered at, that the earth doth not often in these daies tremble & quake at the monstrous blasphemies and fearefull oathes by the wounds, and blood, and heart of Christ, whereby his members are rent asunder, and he traiterously crucified againe. Secondly, the earth-quake shewes unto us the exceeding and wonderful hardnes of the hearts of the Iewes, and ours also: they crucified Christ, and were not touched with any remorse; & we can talke and heare of his death; yea, we can say, he was crucified for our sins, and yet we are nothing affected therewith, our hearts will not rend, whē as hard rocks cleave asunder. Thirdly, the mooving of the earth, and the rending of the rocks asunder, may be a signe unto us of the vertue of the doctrin of the Gospel of Christ; which is nothing else but the publishing of the passion of his death: which being preached, Agg.2.7. shall shake heaven & earth, sea and land. It shall moove the earthen, hard, and rocky hearts of men; and raise up of meere stones & rocks children unto Abraham. But the maine use & end of this point is, to prove that he that was crucified, was the true Messias the Sonne of God, and therefore had the power of heaven and earth, & could moove all things at his pleasure.

The sixt signe of the power of Christ, is that Matth. 27. 52, 53. graves did open and many bodies of the Saints which slept arose, and came out of their graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy citie, and appeared unto many. The use of this signe is this: it signifies unto us, that Christ by his death upon the crosse did vanquish death in the grave, and opened it, and thereby testified that he was the resurrection and the life: so that it shall not have everlasting dominion over us: but that he will raise us up from death to life, and to everlasting glory.

The seventh signe, is the testimony of the Centurion with his souldiers which stood by to see Christ executed. S. Marke saith, when Mar.15.39. hee saw that Christ thus crying gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this was the Sonne of God.

Thus we see it is an easie matter for Christ to defend his owne cause: let Iudas betray him, Peter deny him, and all the rest forsake him, yet he can, if it so please him, make the Centurion that standeth by to see him executed, to testifie his innocency. But what was the occasion that mooved him to give so worthy a testimony? S. Matthew saith, *Mat.*27.54. it was feare, and that feare was caused by hearing the loud cry of Christ, and by seeing the earthquake and things which were done. And this must put us in minde, not to passe by Gods judgements, which daily fall out in the world, but take knowledge of them, and as it were, to fixe both our eyes on them. For they are notable meanes to strike and astonish the rebellious heart of man, and to bring it in awe & subjection to God. After that the two first captaines with their fifties, commanding the Prophet Elias to come downe to king Achazias, were consumed with fire from heaven, the king sent his third captaine over fiftie with his fiftie to fetch him downe: but what doth he? it is said, he fell on his knees before Eliah, and besought him, saying: O man of God, I pray thee, let my life and the lives of these fiftie servants be precious in thine eyes. 2 King. 1. 13. But what was the cause why he praied thus? surely he observed what judgements of God fell upon his two former fellow captaines, Behold, saith he, there came down fire from heaven, & devoured the two former captains with their fifties: therefore let my life be precious now in thy sight. Vers. 14. Thus laying to his owne heart and making use of Gods judgements, he humbled himselfe, and was spared with his fiftie. And Habacuk saith, When I heard thy voice, namely, of Gods judgements, rottennesse entred into my bones, and I trembled in my selfe, that I might be safe in the day of the Lord. Hab.3.16. Now what this feare of the Centurion was, there is a further question, and it is very like, that it was but a sudden motion, or a certaine preparative to better things. For he was but an heathen man, & had as yet no knowledge of Christ, and whether he repented or not, it is uncertaine: and we must not marvell at this: for there are many sudden motions in shew very good, that upon like occasions rise in the hearts of naturall men. When God plagued the land of Egypt, then Pharaoh sent for Moses, and confessed that the Lord was righteous, but he and his people were wicked; and desired Moses to pray to God to take away the plague, who did so. Exod. 9. 27. and 34. but so soone as the hand of God was stayed, he returned to his old rebellion againe. And as a dogge that commeth out of the water shaketh his eares, and yet returneth into it againe: so is the manner of the world: when crosses and calamities befall men, as sicknesse, losse of friends or goods, then with Ahab they outwardly humble themselves, and go softly: they use to frequent that place where the word is preached, and Gods name called upon: but alas, common experience shewes, that those things are but fits arising of uncertaine and flittering motions in the heart. For ſo ſoone as the croſſe is remooved, they returne to their old byas againe, and become as bad and as backward as ever they were: being like to the tree that lyes in the water, which for a while is greene, but afterward withereth. And therefore we for our parts, when any good motions come into our hearts as the beginnings of further grace, we (I ſay) muſt not quench them, but cheriſh and preſerve them, remembring that the kingdome of heaven, is like a graine of muſterd-ſeed, which when it is ſowne, is the leaſt of all ſeeds: but afterward it groweth up into a tree, that the fowles of heaven may build their neſts in it: and like to this are the firſt motions of Gods ſpirit, and therefore they muſt be cheriſhed and maintained. Matth. 13. 31,32.

And thus much for the ſeven ſignes of the power of Chriſts Godhead. Now follows the ſecond part of the triumph of Chriſt, which containeth ſignes of his victory upon the croſſe, notably expreſſed by Paul when he ſaith, Col. 2.14,15. And putting out the hand writing of ordinances which was againſt us, which was contrary to us, he even tooke it out of the way, and faſtened it upon the croſſe, & hath ſpoiled the principalities & powers, & hath made a ſhew of them openly, and hath triumphed openly in the ſame. In which words he alludes to the manner of heathen triumphs: for it was the cuſtome of the heathen princes, when they had gotten the victory over their enemies, firſt to cauſe a pillar of ſtone, or ſome great Oake to be cut downe, and ſet up in the place of victory, upon which either the names of the chiefe enemies were ſet, or their heads were hanged, or words were written in the pillar to teſtifie the victory. This being done, there followed an open ſhew, in which firſt the conquerour prepares for himſelfe a chariot of victory, wherein he was himſelfe to ride, and then the chiefe of his enemies bound and pinnioned, were led openly after him. Now on the ſame manner upon the croſſe there was a pitched field; the conquerer on the one ſide was Chriſt; his enemies on the other ſide were the world, the fleſh, hell, death, damnation, the divell, and all his angels: all which, banding themſelves againſt him, were all ſubdued by him upon the ſame croſſe: and he himſelfe gave two ſignes of his Triumph, one was a monument of the victory, the other open ſhew of his conqueſt. Now the monument of Chriſts victory was the croſſe it ſelfe whereon hee nayled the obligation or bill which was againſt us; whereby Satan might have accuſed and condemned us before God. For we muſt conſider, that God the Father is a creditour and wee all debters unto him: hee hath a bill of our hands which is the law, in that it giveth teſtimony againſt us; firſt, by the legall waſhing, which did ſhew and ſignifie, that wee were altogether defiled and uncleane: ſecondly, by the ſacrifices that were daily offered for the propitiation of our ſins. Now Chriſt was our ſurety, and paid every jot A of the debt which we ſhould have payed, and requiring the acquittance, taketh the ceremoniall law, and the curſe of the morall law, and nailes them to the croſſe.

Furthermore, in the ſhew of conqueſt, the chariot is the croſſe likewiſe; for it was not only a monument of victory, but alſo a chariot of triumph. And the captives bound and pinioned which followed Chriſt, are the principalities and powers, that is, the Divell and his angels, hell, death, and condemnation: all which are as it were taken priſoners, their armour and weapons are taken from them, and they chained and bound each to other.

The meditation of this point ſerveth to admoniſh us to abandon all manner of ſinne, and to make conſcience of every good dutie, if we will aright profeſſe the Goſpel of Chriſt; for when we ſinne, we doe as it were pull Chriſt out of his chariot of triumph, and untie Satans bonds, and give him weapons, and (as much as we can) make him valiant and ſtrong againe. Now for any man to make Satan and ſin valiant and ſtrong againſt himſelfe, whereas Chriſt hath weakened him, and even bruiſed his head, is no better then to become an enemy to the croſſe of Chriſt. Againe, hereby wee are taught to pray unto God, that our blind eyes may be opened, that wee may diſcerne aright of the paſſion of Chriſt. It is a wonder to ſee how men are carried away with a liking of vaine ſhewes, games, & enterludes: how they ſpend even whole dayes in beholding them, and their money alſo that they may come to the places where they are: oh then how exceedingly ought our hearts to be raviſhed with this moſt admirable ſhew, in which the Son of God himſelfe rides moſt gloriouſly in his chariot of triumph, and leads his and our moſt curſed enemies captive, yea treads them under his foot! This triumph is ſet forth unto us in the preaching of the Goſpel, and may be ſeene of us all freely without money, or monyworth. What wretches then ſhall we be, if we ſuffer our hearts to be filled with earthly delights, and in the meane ſeaſon have little or no deſire to behold with the eyes of our minde this goodly ſpectacle that is to be ſeene in the paſſion of Chriſt, that ſerves to revive and refreſh our ſoules to life eternall? Phil. 3.18.

Thirdly, if Chriſt when he was moſt weak and baſe in the eyes of men, did moſt of all triumph upon the croſſe: then every one of us muſt learne to ſay with the Apoſtle Paul, God forbid that I ſhould rejoyce in any thing, but in the croſſe of Chriſt Ieſus our Lord. That we may ſay this truly, firſt of all wee muſt labour to have the benefit of the croſſe of Chriſt, not only in the remiſſion, but alſo in the mortification of our ſinnes: Secondly, we muſt not be diſcomforted but rather rejoyce and triumph therein. A Chriſtian man can never have greater honor then to ſuffer for the Goſpel of Chriſt, when Gods cals him thereunto; and therfore S. Paul ſetteth forth another moſt glorious ſhew Gal. 6.14. 1 Cor. 4.9.

which all those must make that suffer any thing for Gods cause. They must encounter with the world, the flesh, and the divel, and are placed as it were on a theater: and in this conflict the beholders are men and angels: yea the whole hoast of heaven and earth; the Vmpire or Iudge is God himselfe, who will give sentence of victory on their side, and so they shall overcome. We must not hereupon thrust our selves into danger: but when it shall please God to call us thereunto, we must thinke our selves highly honoured of him. As when God sendeth losse of friends, of substance, or good name, or any other calamity, we must not despaire, or be over grieved, but rather rejoyce and addresse our selves, then, with our Saviour Christ to make a triumph.

Thus much of Christs triumph, and the passion of his crosse. Now followeth the second degree of his humiliation, in these words, And buried. Where we must consider these points: I. Why it was needfull that Christ should be buried. II. Who was the author of his buriall. III. The manner or preparation to his buriall. IV. The place and time where and when he was buried. Of these in order. For the first, the causes are many, but especially foure, why Christ was to be buried. I. That the truth and certainty of his death might be confirmed unto us, and that no man might so much as imagine that his death was a phantasticall death, or his body a phantasticall body: for men use not to bury a living but a dead man; or a man in shew, but a true man. II. That his buriall might bee unto him a passage from the estate of humiliation to the estate of exaltation, which began in his resurrection: and hee could not have risen againe, if hee had not bin first buried. III. That the outward humiliation in the forme of a servant, which he took upon him, might bee continued upon him to the lowest degree of all: and therefore it was not sufficient that he should be crucified even to death, but being dead, he must also be buried. IV. Christ was buried, that hee might not onely vanquish death on the crosse, but even after the manner of conquerours, subdue him at his owne home, and as it were, plucke him out of his owne cabine or denne.

II. The authors of Christs buriall were Ioseph of Arimathea, & Nicodemus, who came to Iesus by night. Now concerning them and this their fact, there are many things worthy to be considered in this place. First of all, they were disciples of Christ, and the difference betweene them and the rest is to be considered. The other disciples though in number they were but few, yet in the feast before his passion they openly followed him: but when Christ was to be arraigned, and the persecution of the Church of the new Testament began in him, then Iudas betrayed him, Peter denyed him, and the rest fled away: yet even at the same instant these two secret disciples of our Saviour Christ, Ioseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus take courage to themselves, and in time of danger openly professe themselves to be Christs disciples by an honourable and solemne buriall; God no doubt opening their hearts and inabling them to doe so. The like is to be seene in all ages since the passion of Christ in the Church of God, in which men zealous for the Gospel in peace have bin timerous in persecution, whereas weake ones have stood out against their enemies even unto death it selfe. The reason is, because God will humble those his servants which are oftentimes indued with great measure of graces, and contrariwise exalt and strengthen the weake and feeble: and the same no doubt will be found true among us, if it should please God to send any new triall into the Church of England. This serves to teach us to thinke charitably of those which are as yet but weake among us: and withall in our profession to carry a low saile, & to thinke basely of our selves, and in the whole course of our lives creepe alow by the ground, running on in feare and trembling, because the Lord oftentimes humbles those that be strong, and gives courage and strength to weake ones boldly to confesse his name. Secondly, whereas these two disciples have such care of the buriall of Christ, we learne that it is our duty to be carefull also for the honest and solemne buriall of our brethren. The Lord himselfe hath cómanded it, Thou art dust, & to dust thou shalt returne. Also the bodies of men are the good creatures of God, yea the bodies of Gods children are the temples of the H. Ghost, and therfore there is good cause why they should bee honestly laid in the earth. And it was a curse and judgement of God upon Iehoiakim, that he must not be buried, but like a dead Asse be drawn and cast out of the gates of Ierusalem. And so the Lord threatens a curse upon the Moabites, because they did not bury the king of Edom, but burnt his bones into lime. And therefore it is a necessary duty, one neighbor & friend to looke to the honest buriall of another. Hence it followes, that the practise of Spaine and Italy and all the popish countries, which is to keepe the parts of mens bodies and such like reliques of Saints unburied, that they may be seene of men and worshipped, hath no warrant: dust they are, and to dust they ought to be returned.

Furthermore, the properties and vertues of both these men are severally to be considered. And first to begin with Ioseph, he was a Senatour, a man of great account, authoritie, and reputation among the Iewes. It may seeme a strange thing, that a man of such account would abase himself so much as to take down the body of Christ from the crosse. It might have bin an hindrance to him, & a disgrace to his estate and calling: as we see in these daies, it would be thought a base thing for a knight or lord to com to the place of execution, & take down a thief from the hand of the hangman to bury him: but this noble Senatour Ioseph for the love he bare to Christ made no account of his estate & calling, calling, neither did hee ſcorne to take upon him ſo baſe an office, conſidering it was for the honour of Chriſt: where we learne, that if we truely love Chriſt, and our hearts be ſet to beleeve in him, wee will never refuſe to performe the baſeſt ſervice that may bee for his honour; nothing ſhall hinder us. It is further ſaid, that he was a good man and a juſt, and alſo a rich man. And the firſt appeareth in this, that hee would neither conſent to the counſell nor fact of the Iewes in crucifying Chriſt. It is rare to finde the like man in theſe dayes. Luke 23. 50,51.

From this example we learne theſe Leſſons. I. That a rich man, remaining a rich man may bee a ſervant of God, and alſo be ſaved: for riches are the good bleſſings of God, and in themſelves do no whit hinder a man in comming to Chriſt. But ſome will ſay, Chriſt himſelfe ſaith, It is eaſier for a (b) cable to goe thorow the eye of a needle, then a rich man to enter into the kingdome of heaven. Anſ. It is to be underſtood of a rich man, ſo long as hee ſwelleth with a confidence in his wealth: but we know that if a cable bee untwiſted and drawne into ſmall threeds, it may bee drawne through the eie of a needle: ſo he that is rich let him denie himſelfe, abaſe himſelfe, and lay aſide all confidence in himſelfe, in his riches and honour, and be as it were, made ſmall as a twine threed, and with this good Senatour Ioſeph become the diſciple of Chriſt, he may enter into the kingdom of heaven. But Chriſt ſaith in the parable, that riches are thornes, which choake the grace of God. Anſw. It is true, they are thornes in that ſubject, or in that man that putteth his truſt in them; not in their owne nature, but by reaſon of the corruption of mans heart, who makes of them his God. S. Iohn ſaith further, that Ioſeph was a diſciple of Chriſt, but yet a cloſe diſciple for feare of the Iewes. And this ſhewes, that Chriſt is moſt ready to receive them that come unto him, though they come laden with manifold wants. I ſay not this, that any hereby ſhould take boldneſſe to live in their ſinnes, but my meaning is, that though men be weake in the faith, yet are they not to be diſmayed, but to come to Chriſt, who refuſeth none that come to him. Draw neere to God (ſaith Saint Iames) and he will draw neere to you. Chriſt doth not forſake any, till they forſake him firſt. Laſtly, the holy Ghoſt ſaith of him, that he waited for the kingdome of God, that is, hee did beleeve in the Meſſias to come, and therfore did waite daily till the time was come, when the Meſſias by his death and paſſion ſhould aboliſh the kingdome of ſin and Satan, and eſtabliſh his owne kingdome throughout the whole world. The ſame is ſaid of Simeon, that he was a good man, and feared God, and waited for the conſolation of Iſrael. This was the moſt principall vertue of all that Ioſeph had, and the very roote of all his goodnes and righteouſnes, that he waited for the kingdome of God. For it is the property of faith, wherby we have confidence in the Meſſias, to change our nature, and to purifie the heart, and to make it bring forth workes of righteouſneſſe. There bee many among us, that can talke of Chriſts kingdome, and of redemption by him, and yet make no conſcience of ſinne, and have little care to live according to the Goſpell which they profeſſe: and all is, becauſe they do not ſoundly beleeve in the Meſſias, and they wait not for the kingdome of heaven & therefore there is no change in them: but we for our parts muſt labour to have this affiance in the Meſſias with Ioſeph, & to waite for the ſecond appearance, that thereby we may be made new creatures, having the kingdome of Satan battered and beaten downe in us, and the kingdome of God erected in our hearts. b Matth. 19.24. Ioh. 19.38. Iam. 4.8.

Touching Nicodemus S. Iohn ſaith, that he came to Ieſus by night. Many men build upon this example, that it is lawfull to be preſent at the maſſe; ſo bee it, in the meane ſeaſon wee keepe our hearts to God: and indeede ſuch men are like Nicodemus, in that they labour to burie Chriſt as much as they can, though now after his reſurrection he ſhould not bee buried againe. But though Nicodemus durſt not openly at the firſt profeſſe the name of Chriſt, yet after his death when there is moſt danger, he doth: and by this meanes he reformeth his former action. Ioh. 19.39.

Thus much of the perſons that buried Chriſt. The third thing to be obſerved, is the manner of Chriſts buriall, which ſtandeth in theſe foure points. Firſt, they take downe his bodie from the croſſe: ſecondly, they winde it: thirdly, they lay it in a tombe: fourthly, the tombe is made ſure. Of theſe in order. Firſt, Ioſeph taketh downe the body of Chriſt from the croſſe wheron he was executed, but marke in what manner: hee doth it not on his owne head without leave, but he goeth to Pilate and beggeth the body of Chriſt and craveth libertie to take it downe, becauſe the diſpoſing of dead bodies was in Pilates hand, hee being deputie at that time: whereby wee learne, that in all our dealings and actions (though they have never ſo good an end) our dutie is to proceede as peaceably with all men as may bee, as Saint Iames ſaith: the wiſedome that is from above is firſt pure, then peaceable, gentle, &c. Againe, this teacheth us, that in all things which concerne the authoritie of the Magiſtrate, and belong unto him by the rule of Gods word, wee muſt attẽpt to do whatſoever we do by leave. And by this wee ſee what unadviſed courſes they take, that being private men in this our Church, will notwithſtanding take upon them to plant churches without the leave of the magiſtrate beeing a Chriſtian Prince. Having thus taken the body of Chriſt downe, they goe on to winde it. And Ioſeph for his part brought linnen cloathes, and Nicodemus a mixture of Mirrhe & Aloes to the quantitie of an hundred pounds for the honourable buriall of Chriſt. His winding was on this maner; they wrapped his bodie haſtily in linnen cloathes, ſweete Iam. 3.17. Ioh 19.39. Luke 24. 1.

odours put thereto. Besides all this, in the Iewes burials there was enbalming and washing of the body, but Christs body was not (a) enbalmed or washed, because they had no time to doe it, for the preparation of the Passeover drew neare. And whereas these two men burie Christ at their owne cost and charges, we are taught to bee like affected to the living members of Christ: when they want we must releeve and comfort them liberally and freely. It may here bee demanded, whether men may not bee at cost in making funerals, considering even Christ himselfe is with much cost buried. Answ. The bodies of all dead men are to be buried in seemely and honest manner, and if they bee honorable, they may be buried honourably: yet now there in no cause why mens bodies should be washed, annointed, and embalmed, as the vse was among the Iewes: for they vsed embalming as a pledge and signe of the resurrection; but now since Christs coming we have a more certaine pledge thereof, even the resurrection of Christ himselfe, and therfore it is not requisite that wee should use embalming and washing as the Iewes did. And the clause which is specified in Saint Matthew is not to bee omitted, that Ioseph wrapped Christs body in a cleane linnen cloath: whereby wee learne, that howsoever the strange fashions fetcht from Spaine and Italy are monstrous and to be abhorred, yet, seeing the body of a man is the creature of God, therefore it must bee arraied in cleanly manner, and in holy comelinesse. Paul requires that the minister of the Gospell in all things bee seemely or comely: and herein he ought to be a patterne of sobrietie unto all men. Thirdly, after they have wound the body of Christ, they lay it in a tombe: and lastly, they make it sure, closing it up with a stone rolled over the mouth of it. Also the Iewes request Pilate to seal it that none might presume to open it: besides they set a band of souldiers to watch the tombe, and to keepe it that his body bee not stollen away. Many reasons might be alleaged of this their dealing, but principally it came to passe by the providēce of God, that hereby hee might confirme the resurrection of Christ. For whereas the Iewes would neither be mooved by his doctrine, nor by his workes and miracles to beleeve, he causeth this to bee done, that by the certainetie of his resurrection, hee might convince them of hardnesse of heart, and prove that hee was the Sonne of God.

Thus much of the manner of his buriall. Now followes the place where Christ was buried. In the place we are to marke three things: First, that Christ was laid in Iosephs tombe, whereby wee may gather the greatnesse of Christs poverty, in that hee had not so much ground as to make himselfe a grave in: and this must bee a comfort to the members of Christ that are in povertie. And it teacheth them, if they have no more but foode and rayment, to bee therewith content, knowing that Christ their head and king hath consecrated this very estate unto them. Secondly, the tombe wherein Christ was laid was a new tombe wherein never any man lay before. And it was the speciall appointment of Gods providence that it should bee so, because if any man had beene buried there aforetime, the malitious Iewes would have pleaded that it was not Christ that rose againe, but some other. Thirdly, we must observe, that this tombe was in a garden, as the fall of man was in a garden and as the apprehension of Christ in a garden beyond the brooke Cedron. And here wee must note the practice of a good man: this garden was the place of Iosephs delight and holy recreation, wherein hee used to solace himselfe in beholding the good creatures of God: yet in the same place doth hee make his owne grave long before hee died: whereby it appeares, that his recreation was joyned with a meditation of his end: and his example must be followed of us. True it is, God hath given us his creatures not onely for necessity, but also for our lawfull delight; but yet our dutie is, to mingle therewith serious meditation and consideration of our last end. It is a brutish part to use the blessings and creatures of God, and not at all to be bettered in regard of our last end by a further vse thereof.

The time when Christ was buried was the evening, wherein the Sabbath was to begin according to the manner of the Iewes, which began their daies at Sunne setting, from evening to evening, according to that in Genesis: the evening and the morning was the first day. Now Ioseph commeth a little before evening and beggeth the body of Christ, and burieth it: where note, that howsoever we are not bound to keepe the Sabbath so strictly as the Iewes were, yet when we have any busines or worke to be done of our ordinary calling, wee must not take a part of the Lords Sabbath to doe it in, but prevent the time, and doe it either before, as Ioseph did, or rather after the Sabbath. This is little practised in the world. Men think, if they goe to Church before and after noone to heare Gods word, then all the day after they may doe what they list, and spend the rest of the time at their owne pleasure: but the whole day is the Lords, and therefore must bee spent wholy in his service, both by publike hearing of the word, and also by private reading and meditation on the same.

To conclude the doctrine of Christs buriall. Here it may be demanded, how he was alwaies after his incarnation both God and man, considering that hee was dead and buried, and therefore body and soule were sundred, and a dead man seemes to be no man. Answ. A dead man in his kinde is as true a man as a living man: for though body and soule be not united by the bond of life, yet are they united by a relation which the one hath to the other in the counsell and good pleasure of God; and that as truly as man and woman remaine coupled pled into one flesh by covenant of marriage, though afterward they be distant a thousand miles asunder. And by vertue of this relation every soule in the day of judgement shalbe reunited to his owne body, and every body to his owne soule. But there is yet a more straight bond betweene the body and soule of Christ in his death and buriall. For as when he was living, his soule was a meane or bond to unite his Godhead and his body together: so when hee was dead, his very Godhead was a meane or middle bond to unite the body and soule: and to say otherwise, is to dissolve the hypostaticall union, by vertue whereof Christs bodie and soule though severed each from other, yet both were still joyned to the Godhead of the Sonne.

Damas.

The use and profit which may bee made of Christs buriall is two-fold. I. It serveth to worke in us the buriall of all our sinnes. Know ye not (saith Paul) that all who have beene baptized into Christ, have been baptized into his death, and are buried with him by baptisme into his death? If any shall demand, how any man is buried into the death of Christ, the answer is this Every Christian man and woman are by faith mistically united unto Christ, & made all members of one body, whereof Christ is the head. Now therefore as Christ by the power of his Godhead when he was dead and buried, did overcome the grave and the power of death in his owne person; so by the very same power, by meanes of his spirituall conjunction doth he worke in all his members a spirituall death and buriall of sinne and naturall corruption. When the Israelites were in burying of a man, for feare of the souldiers of the Moabites, they cast him for haste into the sepulchre of Elisha. Now the dead man, so soone as he was downe, and had touched the body of Elisha, he revived and stood upon his feet: so let a man that is dead in sinne bee cast into the grave of Christ, that is, let him by faith but touch Christ dead and buried, it will come to passe by the vertue of Christs death and buriall, that hee shall bee raised from death and bondage of sinne to become a new man.

Rom. 6.3.

2. King. 13.21.

Secondly, the buriall of Christ serveth to be a sweete perfume of all our graves and burials: for the grave in it selfe is the house of perdition, but Christ by his buriall hath as it were consecrated & perfumed all our graves: and in stead of houses of perdition, hath made them chambers of rest and sleep, yea beds of downe: and therefore howsoever to the eye of man the beholding of a funerall is terrible, yet if we could then remember the buriall of Christ, and consider how he thereby hath changed the nature of the grave, even then it would make us to rejoyce. Lastly we must imitate Christs buriall in beeing continually occupied in the spirituall buriall of our sinnes.

Isa. 57.2.

Thus much of the buriall. Now followeth the third and last degree of Christs humiliation: He descended into hell. It seemes very likely that these words were not placed in the Creede at the first, or (as some thinke) that they crept in by negligence, because above threescore Creeds of the most ancient Councels and Fathers want this clause: and among the rest the Nicene Creede. But if the ancient and learned Fathers assembled in that Councell had bin perswaded, or at the least had imagined that these words had beene set downe at the first by the Apostles, no doubt they would not in any wise have left them out. And an ancient writer saith directly, that these words, He descended into hell, are not found in the Creede of the Romane Church, nor used in the Churches of the East, and if they bee, that then they signifie the buriall of Christ. And it must not seeme strange to any, that a word or twaine in processe of time should creepe into the Creed, considering that the originall copies of the bookes of the old and new testament have in them sundry (a) varieties of reading and (b) words otherwhiles, which from the margine have crept into the text. Nevertheless considering that this clause hath long continued in the Creede, and that by common consent of the Catholike Church of God, and it may carie a fit sense and exposition; it is not, as some would have it, to be put forth.

Therefore that we may come to speake of the meaning of it; we must know that it hath foure usuall expositions, which wee will rehearse in order, and then make choise of that which shalbe thought the fittest. The first is, that Christs soule after the passion upon the crosse, did really and locally descend into the place of the damned. But this seemes not to be true. The reasons are these. I. All the Evangelists, and among the rest S. Luke, intending to make an (c) exact narration of the life and death of Christ, hath set downe at large his passion, death, buriall, resurrection, and ascension, and withall they make rehearsall of small circumstances; therefore no doubt they would not have omitted Christs locall descent into the place of the damned, if there had beene any such thing. And the end why they penned this history was, that wee might beleeve that Iesus Christ is the Sonne of God; and beleeving we might have life everlasting. Now there could not have beene a greater matter for the confirmation of our faith then this, that Iesus the sonne of Mary who went downe to the place of the damned, returned thence to live in happinesse for ever. I I. If Christ did goe into the place of the damned, then either in soule or in bodie, or in his Godhead. But his Godhead could not descend, because it is every where, & his body was in the grave. And as for his soule it went not to hell; but presently after his death it went to paradise, that is, the third heaven, a place of joy and happinesse, Luke 23.43. This day shalt thou be with me in paradise: which words of Christ must bee understood of his manhood or soule, and not of his Godhead. For they are an answer to a demaund: and therefore unto it they muſt bee ſutable. Now the thiefe ſeeing that Chriſt was firſt of al crucified, and therefore in all likelihood ſhould firſt of all die, makes his requeſt to this effect: Lord, thou ſhalt ſhortly enter into thy kingdom, remember me then; to which Chriſts anſwer (as the very words import) is thus much: I ſhall enter into paradiſe this day, and there ſhalt thou bee with me. Now there is no entrance, but in regard of his ſoule or manhood. For the Godhead which is at all times in all places, cannot bee ſaid properly to enter into a place. Againe, when Chriſt ſaith, thou ſhalt be with me in Paradiſe, he doth intimate a reſemblance, which is betweene the firſt and ſecond Adam. The firſt Adam ſinned againſt God, and was preſently caſt forth out of Paradiſe: Chriſt the ſecond Adam having made a ſatisfaction for ſinne, muſt immediately enter into Paradiſe. Now to ſay that Chriſt in ſoule deſcended locally into hell, is to aboliſh this analogie betweene the firſt and ſecond Adam.

III. Auncient Councels in their confeſſions and Creeds omitting this clauſe, ſhew, that they did not acknowledge any reall deſcent, and that the true meaning of thoſe words, hee deſcended, was ſufficiently included in ſome of the former articles; and that may appeare, becauſe when they ſet downe it, they omit ſome of the former: as Athanaſius in his Creede ſetting downe theſe words, he deſcended, &c. omits the buriall, putting them both for one as he expounds himſelfe (b) elſe where. Now let us ſee the reaſons which may bee alleaged to the contrary.

Object. I. Matth. 12. 40. The Sonne of man ſhall be three dayes and three nights in the earth, that is, in hell. Anſ. I. This expoſition is directly againſt the ſcope of the place: for the Phariſies deſired to ſee a ſigne, that is, ſome ſenſible & manifeſt miracle: & hereunto Chriſt anſwers that hee will give them the ſigne of Ionas, which cannot bee the deſcent of his ſoule into the place of the damned, becauſe it was inſenſible; but rather his buriall, and after it his manifeſt and glorious reſurrection. II. The heart of the earth may as well ſignifie the grave, as the center of the eatth. For thus Tyrus bordering upon the ſea, is ſaid to bee in the heart of the ſea. III. This expoſition takes it for granted that hell is ſeated in the middeſt of the earth: whereas the Scriptures reveale unto us no more but this, that hell is in the lower parts: but where theſe lower parts ſhould be, no man is able to define.

Object. II. Act. 2. 37 Thou wilt not leave my ſoule in hell, neither wilt thou ſuffer thy holy one to ſee corruption. Anſ. Theſe words cannot proove any locall deſcent of Chriſts ſoule. For Peters drift in alleaging of them is, to proove the reſurrection, and hee ſaith expreſſely, that the words muſt be underſtood of the reſurrection of Chriſt. ver. 31. Hee ſeeing this before, ſpake of the reſurrection of Chriſt. What? namely theſe words, his ſoule was not left in hell, &c. Now there in no reſurrection of the ſoule, but of the body onely, as the ſoule can not bee ſaid to fall, but the body. It will bee replied that the word נפש cannot ſignifie the body, and the word שאול the grave. Anſw. The firſt word, ſignifies not onely the ſpirituall part of man, the ſoule; but alſo the whole perſon, or the man himſelfe, Rom. 13. 1. 1. Cor. 15. 40. And the ſecond is as well taken for the grave, as for hell: Apoc. 20. 14. Death and hell are caſt into the lake of fire. Now we can not ſay, that hell is caſt into hell, but the grave into hell. And the very ſame word in this text, muſt needes have this ſenſe. For Peter makes an oppoſition betweene the grave into which David is ſhut up, and the hell out of which Chriſt was delivered. v. 29. 31. Againe, it will be ſaid, that in this text there bee two diſtinct parts: the firſt, of the ſoules comming forth of hell, in theſe words, Thou wilt not leave my ſoule in hell. The ſecond, of the bodies riſing out of the grave, in the next words: Neither wilt thou ſuffer my fleſh to ſee corruption. Anſ. It is not ſo. For fleſh in this place ſignifies not the body alone, but the humane nature of Chriſt, as appeares ver. 30. vnleſſe we ſhall ſay, that one and the ſame word in the ſame ſentence is taken two waies. And the words rather carry this ſence: Thou wilt not ſuffer me to continue long in the grave; nay which is more, in the time of my continuance there, thou wilt not ſuffer me ſo much as to feele any corruption; becauſe I am thy holy one.

Object. III. 1. Pet. 3. 19. Chriſt was quickned in ſpirit, by the which ſpirit he went and preached to the ſpirits which are in priſon. Anſ. The place is not for this purpoſe. For by ſpirit is not meant the ſoule of Chriſt, but the Godhead, which in the miniſtery of Noe preached repentance to the old world. And I thinke that Peter in this place alludes to another place in Gen. 6. 3. where the Lord ſaith, My ſpirit ſhall not alwaies ſtrive with man, becauſe he is but fleſh. And if the ſpirit doe ſignifie the ſoule, then Chriſt was quickned either by his ſoule, or in his ſoule. But neither is true. For the firſt, it can not bee ſaid, that Chriſt was quickned by his ſoule, becauſe it did not joyne it ſelfe to the body; but the Godhead joyned them both. Neither was hee quickned in ſoule: for his ſoule died not. It could not die the firſt death, which belongs to the body: and it did not die the ſecond death, which is a totall ſeparation from God: onely it ſuffered the ſorrowes of the ſecond death, which is the apprehention of the wrath of God; as a man may feele the pangs of the firſt death, and yet not die the firſt death, but live. Againe, it is to no end that Chriſts ſoule ſhould goe to hell to preach, conſider that it was never heard of, that one ſoule ſhould preach to another, eſpecially in hell, where all are condemned, and in conſcience convicted of their juſt damnation, and where there is no hope of repentance or redemption. It will be anſwered, that this preaching is onely reall or experimentall, becauſe

In corde marium, Ezech. 17. 4.

Bellar. quæſt. de deſcen.

Chriſt ſhewes himſelfe there to convince the unbeleefe of his enemies: but this is flat againſt reaſon. For when a man is juſtly condemned by God, and therefore ſufficiently convicted, what need the Iudge himſelfe come to the place of execution to convict him? And it is flat againſt the text; For the preaching that is ſpoken of here, is that which is performed by men in the miniſtery of the word, as Peter expounds himſelfe, 1 Pet. 4. 6. To this purpoſe was the Goſpel preached vnto the dead, that they might be condemned according to men in the fleſh, that they might live according to God in the Spirit. Laſtly, there is no reaſon why Chriſt ſhould rather preach and ſhew himſelfe in hell, to them that were diſobedient in the daies of Noe, than to the reſt of the damned.

After juſt execution conviction is needleſſe.

And this is the firſt expoſition, the ſecond follows: Hee deſcended into Hell, that is, Chriſt deſcended into the grave, or was buried. This expoſition is agreeable to the truth, yet is it not meet or convenient. For the clauſe next before, he was buried, contained this point: and therfore if the next words following yeeld the ſame ſence, there muſt be a vaine and needleſſe repetition of one and the ſame thing twice, which is not in any wiſe to bee allowed in ſo ſhort a Creed as this. If it be ſaid, that theſe words are an expoſition of the former, the anſwer is, that then they ſhould bee more plaine then the former. For when one ſentence expoundeth an other, the latter muſt alwaies be the plainer; but of theſe two ſentences, He was buried, He deſcended into hell, the firſt is very plaine and eaſie, but the latter very obſcure and hard, and therefore it can bee no expoſition thereof: and for this cauſe this expoſition neither, is it to be received.

Thirdly, others there be which expound it thus: He deſcended into hell, that is; Chriſt Ieſus, when he was dying upon the croſſe, felt and ſuffered the pangs of hell & the full wrath of God ſeazing upon his ſoule. This expoſition hath his warrant in Gods word, where hell often ſignifies the ſorrowes and paines of hell, as Hannah in her ſong unto the Lord ſaith, The Lord killeth & maketh alive, he bringeth down to hell and raiſeth up, that is, hee makes men feele woe and miſerie in their ſoules, even the pangs of hell, and after reſtoreth them. And David ſaith, The ſorrowes of death compaſſed me, and the terrours of hell laid hold on me. This is an uſuall expoſition received of the Church, and they which expound this Article thus, give this reaſon therof. The former words, was crucified, dead and buried, doe containe (ſay they) the outward ſufferings of Chriſt: now becauſe he ſuffered not onely outwardly in body, but alſo inwardly in ſoule, therfore theſe words he deſcended into hell, do ſet forth unto us his inward ſufferings in ſoule, when hee felt upon the croſſe the full wrath of God upon him. This expoſition is good and true, and whoſoever will, may receive it. Yet nevertheleſſe it ſeemes not ſo fitly to agree with the order of the former articles. For theſe words, was crucified dead and buried, muſt not bee underſtood of any ordinary death, but of a curſed death, in which Chriſt ſuffered the full wrath of God, even the pangs of hell both in ſoule and body: ſeeing then this expoſition is contained in the former words, it cannot fitly ſtand with the order of this ſhort Creede, unleſſe there ſhould be a diſtinct article of things repeated before.

1. Sam. 2. 6.

Pſal. 18. 5.

But let us come to the fourth expoſition, He deſcended into hell, that is; when he was dead and buried, hee was held captive in the grave, and lay in bondage under death for the ſpace of three dayes. This expoſition alſo may bee gathered forth of the Scriptures. Saint Peter ſaith, God hath raiſed him up (ſpeaking of Chriſt) and looſed the ſorrowes of death, becauſe it was unpoſſible that hee ſhould bee holden of it. Where wee may ſee that between the death and reſurrection of Chriſt, there is placed a third matter, which is not mentioned in any clauſe of the Apoſtles Creede, ſave in this; and that is his bondage under death, which commeth in betweene his death and riſing againe. And the words themſelves doe moſt fitly beare this ſenſe, as the ſpeech of Iacob ſheweth, *I will goe downe into * hell, unto my ſonne mourning.* And this expoſition doth alſo beſt agree with the order of the Creed: firſt, he was crucified and died; ſecondly, he was buried; thirdly, laid in the grave, and was therein held in captivity and bondage under death. And theſe three degrees of Chriſts humiliation, are moſt fitly correſpondent to the three degrees of his exaltation. The firſt degree of exaltation he roſe againe the third day, anſwering to the firſt degree of his humiliation hee died: the ſecond degree of his exaltation, he aſcended into heaven, anſwering to going downe into the grave, was buried: and thirdly, his ſitting at the right hand of God (which is the higheſt degree of his exaltation) anſwering to the loweſt degree of his humiliation, he deſcended into hell. Theſe two laſt expoſitions are commonly received, and wee may indifferently make choice of either: but the laſt (as I take it) is moſt agreeable to the order and words of the Creede.

Act. 2. 24.

Gen. 37. 35 * Or the grave.

Thus much for the meaning of the words: now follow the uſes. And firſt of all Chriſts deſcending into hell, teaching every one of us, that profeſſe the name of Chriſt, that if it ſhall pleaſe God to afflict vs, either in body or in mind, or in both, though it bee in moſt grievious and tedious manner, yet muſt wee not thinke it ſtrange. For if Chriſt upon the Croſſe not onely ſuffered the pangs of hell, but after hee was dead, death takes him, and as it were carries him into his den, or cabbin, and there triumpheth over him, holding him in captivitie and bondage, and yet for all this was hee the Sonne of God: and therefore when Gods hand is heavie upon us any way, wee are not to deſpaire, but rather thinke it is the good pleaſure of GOD to frame and faſhion us, that wee may become like unto Chriſt Ieſus as good children of God. David a man after Gods owne heart was by Samuel anointed King over Israel, but withall GOD raised up Saul to persecute him, as the fowler hunteth the Patridge in the mountaines, in so much that David said, there was but one steppe betweene him and death. So likewise Iob a just man and one that feared God with all his heart, yet how heavily did God lay his hand upon him? his goods and cattle were all taken away, and his children slaine, and his body stricken by Sathan with lothsome byles from the sole of his foot to the crowne of his head: so as hee was faine to take a potsheard, and scrape himselfe sitting among the ashes. And Ionah the servant and Prophet of the most high God, when hee was called to preach to Ninive, because hee refused for feare of that great citie, God met with him, and he must bee cast into the sea, and there be swallowed up of a Whale, that so hee might chastise him: and thus doth he deale with his owne servants, to make them conformable to Christ. And further when it pleaseth GOD to lay his hand upon our soules, and make us have a troubled and distressed conscience, so as wee doe as it were struggle with Gods wrath as for life and death, and can finde nothing but his indignation seazing upon our soules, which is the most grievous and perplexed estate that any man can bee in: in this case howsoever we can not discerne or see any hope or comfort in our selves, wee must not thinke it strange, nor quite despaire of his mercy. For the Sonne of God himselfe descended into hell, and death carried him captive, and triumphed over him in the grave: and therefore though God seeme to be our utter enemie, yet wee must not despaire of his helpe. In divers Psalmes wee reade how David was not onely persecuted outwardly of his enemies, but even his soule and conscience were perplexed for his sinnes, so as his very bones were consumed within him, and his moysture was turned into the drought in sommer, This caused Iob to cry out, that arrowes of God were within him, and the venome thereof did drinke up his spirit, the terrors of God did fight against him, and the griefe of his soule was as weighty as the sand of the sea, by reason whereof hee saith, that the Lord did make him a marke and a butte to shoote at: and therefore when God shall thus afflict us, either in body, or in soule, or in both, wee must not alwaies thinke that it is the wrathfull hand of the Lord that begins to bring us to utter condemnation for our sinnes, but rather his fatherly worke to kill sin in us, and to make us grow in humility, that so wee may become like unto Christ Iesus. Secondly, whereas Christ for our sakes was thus abased, even unto the lowest degree of humiliation that can bee, it is an example for us to imitate, as Christ himselfe prescribeth: Learne of me, that I am meeke and lowly. And that wee may bee the better to doe this, wee must learne to become nothing in our selves, that wee may bee all in all forth of our selves in Christ: wee must loath, and thinke as basely of our selves as possibly may bee in regard of our sinnes, Christ Iesus upon the Crosse was content for our sake, to become a worme and no man, as David saith; which did chiefly appeare in this lowest degree of his of his humiliation, when as death did as it were tread on him in his denne; and the same mind must likewise be in us which was in him. The liking that we have of our selves must bee meere nothing, but all our love and liking must bee foorth of our selves in the death and blood of Christ.

And thus much of this clause, as also of the state of Christs humiliation. Now followeth his second estate, which is his exaltation into glory, set downe in these words, The third day he rose againe from the dead, &c. And of it wee are first to speake in generall, then in particular according to the severall degrees thereof. In generall, the exaltation of Christ is that glorious or happy estate, into which Christ entred after he had wrought the worke of our redemption upon the Crosse. And hee was exalted according to both natures, in regard of his Godhead, and also of his manhood. The exaltation of the Godhead of Christ, was the manifestation of the Godhead in the manhood. Some will peradventure demand, how Christs Godhead can bee exalted, seeing it admits no alteration at all. Answ. In it selfe it cannot bee exalted, yet being considered as it is joyned with the manhood into one person, in this respect it may be said to bee exalted: and therefore I say, the exaltation of Christs Godhead is the manifestation of the glory thereof in the manhood. For though Christ from his incarnation was both God and man, and his Godhead all that time dwelt in his manhood, yet from his birth unto his death, the same Godhead did little shew it selfe, and in that time of his suffering did as it were lye hid under the vaile of his flesh, as the soule doth in the body, when a man is sleeping, that thereby in his humane nature hee might suffer the curse of the Law, and accomplish the work of redemption for us, in the low and base estate of a servant. But after this worke was finished, he began by degrees to make manifest the power of his Godhead in his manhood. And in this respect his Godhead may bee said to bee exalted. The exaltation of Christs humanilitie stood in two things. The first, that he laid downe all the infirmities of mans nature, which hee carried about him so long as hee was in the state of a servant, in that he ceased to be wearie, hungry, thirsty, &c. Here it may bee demanded, whether the wounds and skarres remaine in the body of Christ now after it is glorified. Answ. Some thinke that they remaine as testimonies of that victorie which Christ obtained of his and our enemies, and that they are no deformitie to the glorious body of the Lord, but are themselves also in him in some unspeakable manner glorified. But indeede it rather seemes to be a truth, to say that they are quite abolished; because they were a part of that ignominious and base estate in which our Saviour was upon the crosse: which after his entrance into glory he laid aside. And if it may be thought, that the wounds in the hands and feete of Christ remaine to bee seene, even to the last judgement, why may wee not in the same manner thinke, that the veines of his body remaine emptied of their blood, because it was shed upon the crosse?

The second thing required in the exaltation of Christs manhood is, that both his body and soule were beautified & adorned with all qualities of glory. His mind was inriched with as much knowledge & understanding as can possibly befall any creature, and more in measure then all men and angels have: and the same is to be said of the graces of the spirit in his will and affections: his body also was incorruptible, and it was made a shining body, a resemblance wherof some of his disciples saw in the mount: & it was indued with agility, to move as wel upward as downeward; as may appeare by the ascension of his body into heaven, which was not caused by constraint, or by any violent motion, but by a propertie agreeing to all bodies glorified. Yet in the exaltation of Christs manhood we must remember two caveats: first, that he did never lay aside the essentiall properties of a true body: as length, breadth, thicknes, visibility, localitie, which is to bee in one place at once and no more, but keepes all these still, because they serve for the being of his body. Secondly, we must remember that the gifts of glory in Christs body are not infinite, but finite: for his humane nature being but a creature, and therefore finite, could not receive infinite graces and gifts of glory. And hence it is more then manifest, that the opinion of those men is false, which hold that Christs body glorified, is omnipotent and infinite, every way able to do whatsoever he wil: for this is to make a creature to be the creator.

Thus much of Christs exaltation in generall. Now let us come to the degrees thereof, as they are noted in the Creede, which are in number three: I. He rose againe the third day: II. Hee ascended into heaven: III. Hee sitteth at the right hand of God the Father Almightie. In the handling of Christs resurrection wee must consider these points: I. Why Christ ought to rise againe: II. The manner of his rising: III. The time when he rose: IV. The proofes of his resurrection: V. The uses thereof. For the first, it was necessarie that Christ should rise again, and that for three especiall causes. First, that hereby he might shew to al the people of God that he had fully overcome death. For also, if Christ had not risen how should wee have bin perswaded in our consciences, that hee had made a full & perfect satisfaction for us? nay rather we should have reasoned thus: Christ is not risen, and therefore hee hath not overcome death, but death overcame him. Secondly, Christ which dyed, was the Sonne of God; therefore the author of life it selfe: and for this cause it was neither meete nor possible for him to bee holden of death, but he must needs rise from death to life. Thirdly, Christs priesthood hath two parts: one, to make satisfaction for sinne by his one only sacrifice upon the crosse; the other, to apply the vertue of this sacrifice unto every beleever. Now he offered the sacrifice for sinne upon the crosse, before the last pang of his death, and in dying satisfied the justice of God: and therefore being dead must needs rise againe to performe the second part of his priesthood, namely, to apply the vertue thereof unto all that shall truly beleeve in him, and to make intercession in heaven unto his Father for us here on earth. And thus much of the first point.

Now to come to the manner of Christs resurrection; five things are to be considered in it. The first, that Christ rose againe not as every private man doth, but as a publike person representing all men that are to come to life eternall. For as in his passion, so also in his resurrection, he stood in our roome and place: and therefore when he rose from death, we all, yea the whole Church rose in him, and together with him. And this point not considered, wee do not conceive aright of Christs resurrection, neither can we reape sound comfort by it. Eph. 2.6.

The second is, that Christ himselfe, and no other for him, did by his owne power raise himselfe to life. This was the thing that hee meant, when hee said, Ioh.2.19. Destroy this temple, and in three daies I will built it againe: and more plainely, I have (saith he, John 10.18.) power to lay downe my life, & I have power to take it againe. From whence we learn divers instructions. First, whereas Christ raiseth himselfe from death to life, it serveth to proove that hee was not only man, but also true God. For the body being dead, could not bring againe the soule & joyne it selfe unto the same, and make it selfe alive againe; neither yet the soule that is departed from the body can returne againe and quicken the body: and therefore there was some other nature in Christ, namely, his Godhead, which did reunite soule and body together, and thereby quicken the manhood. Secondly, if Christ give life to himselfe being dead in the grave, then much more now being alive in heaven glorified, is he able to raise up his members from death to life. We are all by nature even starke dead in sinne, as the dead body rotten in the grave: and therefore our duty is, to come to Christ our Lord by humble prayer, earnestly intreating him that hee would raise us up every day more and more from the grave of our sinnes to newnes of life. He can of men dead in their sinnes, make us alive unto himselfe, to live in righteousnesse and true holinesse all the daies of our life.

The third thing is, that Christ rose againe with an earthquake. And this serves to proove that he lost nothing of his power by death; but ſtill remained the abſolute Lord and King of heaven and earth, to whom therefore the earth under his feete trembling doth him homage. This alſo prooveth unto us, that Chriſt which lay dead in the grave, did raiſe himſelfe againe by his own almightie power. Laſtly, it ſerveth to convince the keepers of the grave, the women which came to embalme him, and the diſciples which came to the ſepulchre, and would not yet beleeve that he was riſen againe. But how came this earth-quake? Anſ. S. Matthew ſaith, there was a great earth-quake. For the Angel of the Lord deſcended from heaven, &c. Matth. 28.2. This ſhewes that the power of Angels is great, in that they can moove and ſtir the earth. Three Angels deſtroyed Sodome and Gomorrah. An Angel deſtroyed all the firſt borne of Egypt in one night. In the hoaſt of Senacherib one angel ſlew in one night an hundred foureſcore and five thouſand men. Of like power is the divell himſelfe to ſhake the earth, and to deſtroy us all, but that God of his goodneſſe limits and reſtraines him of his libertie. Well, if one Angel be able to ſhake the earth, What then will Chriſt himſelfe doe when he ſhall come to judgement the ſecond time, with many thouſand thouſands of Angels? oh how terrible and fearefull will his comming be! Not without cauſe ſaith the holy Ghoſt, that the wicked at that day ſhall cry out, wiſhing hils to fal upon them, and the mountaines to cover them for feare of that great and terrible day of the Lord.

Gen. 19. 1.13. Exod. 12. 29. 2 King. 19.35.

The fourth thing is, that an Angel miniſtred to Chriſt, being to riſe againe, in that hee came to the grave, and rolled away the ſtone, and ſate upon it. Where obſerve, firſt how the angels of God miniſter unto Chriſt, though dead and buried; whereby they acknowledge that his power, majeſtie, and authoritie is not included within the bounds of the earth, but extends it ſelf even to the heavens themſelves & the hoaſts thereof, and that according to his humanitie. Wicked men for their parts laboured to cloſe him up in the earth, as the baſeſt of all creatures: but the angels of heaven moſt readily accept him as their ſoveraigne Lord and King: as in like manner they did in his tẽption in the wildernes, and in his agony in the garden. Secondly, that the opinion of the Papiſts & others, which thinke that the body of Chriſt went thorow the grave-ſtone when he roſe again, is without warrant. For the end no doubt, why the angel rolled away the ſtone was that Chriſt might come forth. And indeed it is againſt the order of nature, that one body ſhould paſſe thorow another, without corruption or alteration of either, conſidering that every body occupies a place, and two bodies at the ſame inſtant cannot be in one proper place.

Mat. 4.11 Luk 22. 43.

Furthermore it is ſaid, that when the angel ſate on the ſtone, Mat. 28.3,4. His countenance was like lightning, & his rayment as white as ſnow: & this ſerved to ſhew what was the glory of Chriſt himſelf. For if the ſervant and miniſter be ſo glorious, then endleſſe is the glory of the Lord and maſter himſelfe. Laſtly it is ſaid, that for feare of the angel the watch-men were aſtonied, and became as dead men: which teacheth us, that what God would have come to paſſe, all the world can never hinder. For though the Iewes had cloſed up the grave with a ſtone, and ſet a band of ſouldiers to watch, leſt Chriſt ſhould by any meanes be taken away, yet all this availeth nothing: by an angel from heaven the ſeale is broken, the ſtone is remooved, and the watch-men are at their wits ends. And this came to paſſe by the providence of God; that after the watch-men had teſtified theſe things to the Iewes, they might at length bee convicted, that Chriſt whom they crucified, was the Meſſias.

The fifth and laſt point is, that Chriſt roſe not alone, but accompanied with others: as St. Matthew ſaith, Mat. 27.52,53. that the graves opened, and many bodies of the Saints which ſlept, aroſe, and came out of the graves, and went into the citie, and appeared unto many after Chriſts reſurrection. And this came to paſſe, that the Church of God might know and conſider, that there is a reviving and quickning vertue in the reſurrection of Chriſt, whereby he is able, not only to raiſe our dead bodies unto life, but alſo when wee are dead in ſinne, to raiſe us up to newnes of life. And in this very point ſtands a maine difference betweene the reſurrection of Chriſt, and the reſurrection of any other man. For the reſurrection of Peter nothing availes to the raiſing of David or Paul: but Chriſts reſurrection availes for all that have beleeved in him: by the very ſame power whereby hee raiſed himſelfe, he raiſeth all his members: and therefore he is called a quickning ſpirit. And let us marke the order obſerved in riſing. Firſt Chriſt riſeth, & then the Saints after him. And this came to paſſe to verifie the Scripture, which ſaith, that Chriſt is the firſt borne of the dead. Now he is the firſt borne of the dead, in that he hath this dignitie & priviledge to riſe to eternall life the firſt of all men. It is true indeed that Lazarus & ſundry other in time roſe before Chriſt: but yet they roſe to live a mortall life, & to die againe: Chriſt he is the firſt of all that roſe to life everlaſting & to glory: never any roſe before Chriſt in this maner. And the perſons that roſe with Chriſt are to be noted, they were the Saints of God, not wicked men: wherby we are put in mind, that the elect children of God only are partakers of Chriſts reſurrection. Indeed both good and bad riſe again, but there is great differẽce in their riſing: for the godly riſe by the vertue of Chriſts reſurrection, & that to eternal glory: but the ungodly riſe by the vertue of Chriſt, not as he is a redeemer, but as he is a terrible judge, and is to execute juſtice on thẽ. And they riſe again for this end, that beſides the firſt death of the body, they might ſuffer the ſecond death, which is the powring forth of Gods wrath upon body & ſoule eternally. This difference is proved un-

1 Cor. 15.20. to us by that which Paul saith, Christ is the first fruits of them that sleepe. Among the Iewes such as had corne fields gathered some little quantitie thereof, before they reaped the rest, and offered the same unto God: signifying thereby, that they acknowledged him to be the author and giver of all increase; and this offering was also an assurance unto the owner, of the blessing of God upon the rest, and this being but one handfull did sanctifie the whole crop. Now Christ to the dead is as the first fruits to the rest of the corne, because his resurrection is a pledge and an assurance of the resurrection of the faithfull. When a man is cast into the sea, and all his body is under the water, there is nothing to bee looked for but present death; but if he carry his head above the water, there is good hope of a recovery: Christ himselfe is risen as a pledge that al the just shal rise again: he is the head unto his Church, & therefore all his members must needs follow in their time. It may bee demanded, What became of the Saints that rose againe after Christs resurrection. Ans. Some thinke they dyed againe: but seeing they rose for this end to manifest the quickning vertue of Christs resurrection, it is as like, that they were also glorified with Christ, and ascended with him to heaven.

Thus much of the manner of Christs resurrection: Now followes the time when he rose againe, and that is specified in the Creede, The third day he rose againe. Thus saith our Saviour Christ unto the Pharises, Mat. 12.39. As Ionas was three daies & three nights in the Whales belly: so shall the Son of man be three daies & three nights in the heart of the earth. And though Christ was but one day and two peeces of two daies in the grave; (for he was buried in the evening before the Sabbath, and rose in the morning the next day after the Sabbath) yet is this sufficient to verifie the saying of Christ. For if the analogie had stood in three whole daies, then Christ should have risen the fourth day. And it was the pleasure of God that hee should lye thus long in the grave, that it might be knowne that he was throughly dead: and he continued no longer, that hee might not in his body see corruption. Againe, it is said that Christ rose againe in the end of the Sabbath, whē the first day of the week began to dawne. And this very time must bee considered, as the reall beginning of the new spirituall world, in which we are made the sonnes of God. And as in the first day of the first world, light was commanded to shine out of darknesse upon the deepes; so in the first day of this new world, the Sunne of righteousnesse riseth and giveth light to them that sit in darkenesse, and dispels the darkenesse that was under the old Testament. And here let us marke the reason why the Sabbath day was changed. For the first day of the week, which was the day following the Iewes Sabbath, is our Sabbath day, which day we keepe holy in memory of the glorious resurrection of Christ: and therefore it is called the Lords day. And it may not unfitly be tearmed [a] Sunday, though the name came first from the heathen, because on this day the blessed Sun of righteousnesse rose from death to life.

His abode in the grave was about 38. houres.

Apoc. 1. 10.

Let us now in the next place proceed to the proofes of Christs resurrection, which are diligently to be observed, because it is one of the most principall points of our religion. For as the Apostle saith, Rom. 4.25. He died for our sins, and rose againe for our justification: and againe, 1 Cor. 15.14. If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vaine, and your faith is also vaine. The proofes are of two sorts: first, Christs appearances unto men: secondly, the testimonies of men. Christs appearances were either on the first day, or on the daies following. The appearances of Christ the same day he rose again are five. And first of all early in the morning he appeared to Mary Magdalen, Mark, 16.9. In this appearance divers things are to be considered. The first of what note and qualitie the partie was, to whom Christ appeared. Answer. Mary Magdalen was one that had bin possessed with seaven divels, but was delivered and became a repentant sinner, and stood by when Christ suffered; and came with sweete odours when hee was dead to embalme him. And therfore to her is granted this prerogative, that shee should be the first that should testifie his resurrection unto men. And hence we learne, that Christ is ready and willing to receive most miserable wretched sinners, even such as have bin vassals and bondslaves of the divell, if they will come to him. Any man would thinke it a fearefull case, to bee thus possessed with divels, as Mary was: but let all those that live in ignorance, and by reason thereof live in sinne without repentance, know this; that their case is a thousand times worse then Mary Magdalens was. For what is an impenitent sinner? surely nothing else but the castle and hold of the divell, both in body and soule. For looke as a Captaine that hath taken some hold or skonse, doth rule and governe all therein, and disposeth it at his will & pleasure: even so it is with all blind and impenitent sinners; not one divell alone, but even legions of divels possesse them, and rule their hearts: & therefore howsoever they may sooth themselves, and say all is well, for God is merciful; yet their case is farre worse then Maries was. Now then, would any be freed from this fearefull bondage? let them learne of Mary Magdalen to follow Christ, and to seeke unto him, and then albeit the divell and all his angels possesse their hearts, yet Christ being the strong man, will come and cast them all out, and dwell there himselfe.

The second is, what Christ in his appearance said to Mary. Ans. He said, Ioh. 20.17. Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father. Mary no doubt was glad to see Christ, and therefore looked to have conversed as familiarly with him as shee was woont before his death: but hee forbids her to touch him, that is, not to looke to enjoy his corporall preſence as before, but rather to ſeeke for his ſpirituall preſence by faith, conſidering he was ſhortly to aſcend to his Father. For this cauſe when hee appeared to his diſciples, hee ſtaied not long with them at any time, but only to manifeſt himſelfe unto them, thereby to prove the certaintie of his reſurrection. This prohibition ſhewes firſt of all, that it is but a fond thing to delight in the outward picture and portraiture of Chriſt, as the Ieſuites doe, who ſtand much upon his outward forme and lineaments. Secondly, it overthroweth the popiſh crucifixes, and all the carved and molten images of Chriſt, wherin the Papiſts worſhip him. For corporall preſence is not now required: therefore ſpirituall worſhip only muſt be given unto him. Thirdly, it overthroweth the reall preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament. Many are of minde, that they cannot receive Chriſt, except they eate and drinke his body and blood corporally: but it is not much materiall, whether we touch him with the bodily hand or no, ſo be it we apprehend him ſpiritually by faith. Laſtly, as we muſt not have earthly conſiderations of Chriſt; ſo muſt we on the contrary labour for the ſpiritual hand of faith, which may reach up it ſelfe to heaven, & there lay hold on him. This is the very thing which Chriſt inſinuateth to Mary in ſaying, Touch me not. And Saint Paul ſaith, 2 Cor. 5. 16, 17. Henceforth know wee no man after the fleſh, yea though wee had knowne Chriſt after the fleſh, yet now we know him no more: that is, we know him no more as a man living among us, and therefore hee addeth, If any man be in Chriſt, hee is a new creature: and this new creation is not by the bodily preſence of Chriſt, but by the apprehenſion of faith.

The ſecond appearance was to Mary Magdalen, and to the other Marie, as they were going from the grave to tell his diſciples; at which time, Chriſt meets them, & bids them goe tell his brethren that hee is riſen againe. And wheras Chriſt ſendeth women to his diſciples, he purpoſed hereby to checke them for their unbeleefe. For theſe women forſooke him not at his death, but ſtood by and ſaw him ſuffer, and when he was buried they came to embalme him: but all this while what became of his diſciples? Surely, Peter denied him, and all the reſt fled away, even Iames and Iohn the ſonnes of thunder, ſave that Iohn ſtood aloofe to behold his death. Hereupon Chriſt to make them aſhamed of their fault, ſendeth theſe women unto them, to publiſh that unto them which they by their calling ought above other to have publiſhed. Secondly, this teacheth that whereas Christ buldeth his kingdome and publiſheth his Goſpel by Apoſtles, Evangeliſts, Paſtours, Teachers, he can, if it ſo pleaſe him, performe the ſame by other meanes. In this his ſecond appearance, he uſed weake & ſilly women to publiſh his reſurrection, and thereby ſheweth that hee

Mat. 28. 9, 10.

A is not bound to the ordinary meanes, which now he uſeth. Thirdly, he ſent them to his diſciples, to ſhew that howſoever they had dealt unfaithfully with him, by forſaking him, and denying him, yet he had not quite forſaken them, but if they would repent and beleeve, hee would receive them into his love and favour againe, and therefore calleth them his brethren, ſaying: Go and tell my brethren. This teacheth us a good leſſon, that howſoever our ſinnes paſt are to humble us in regard of our ſelves, yet muſt they not cut off, or diſmay us from ſeeking to Chriſt; yea even then when we are laden with the burden of thē, we muſt come unto him, and he will eaſe us, Mat. 16. 7.

B Fourthly, whereas ſilly women are ſent to teach Chriſts diſciples, which were ſchollers brought up in his owne ſchoole, we are admoniſhed, that ſuperioritie in place & calling, muſt not hinder us ſomtime to heare and to be taught of our inferiours. Iob ſaith, Iob 31. 13. hee never refuſed the counſell of his ſervant: and Naaman the Syrian obeyed the counſell of a ſilly maide which adviſed him to goe to the Prophet of the Lord in Samaria to be cured of his leproſie: and when he had bin with the Prophet, hee obeyed the counſell of his ſervants that perſwaded him tō do all the Prophet had ſaid, Waſh and be cleane.

2 King. 5. 3. 13.

C Now after that the women are come to the diſciples & make relatiō of Chriſts reſurrection, the text ſaith, Luk. 24. 11. Their words ſeemed as fained things unto them, neither beleeved they them. Hence we learne two things: the firſt, that men of themſelves cannot beleeve the doctrine of Chriſtian religion; it is a hard matter for a man to beleeve ſundry things in the worke of creation. The temporall deliverance of the children of Iſrael ſeemed to them as a dreame: and the reſurrection of Chriſt, even to Chriſts owne diſciples, ſeemed a fained thing. The ſecond, that it is an hard thing truly and unfainedly to beleeve the points of religion. Diſciples brought up in the ſchoole of Chriſt, and often catechiſed in this very point of Chriſts reſurrection, yet dull are they to beleeve it. This confuteth and condemneth our carnall goſpellers, that make it the lighteſt and eaſieſt thing that can bee to beleeve in Chriſt: and therefore they ſay their faith is ſo ſtrong, that they would not for all the world doubt of Gods mercie: whereas indeede they are deceived, and have no faith at all, but blind preſumption.

Pſa. 126. 1

D The third appearance was on this manner: As two of Chriſts Diſciples were going from Ieruſalem to Emmaus about threeſcore furlongs, and talked together of all the things that were done, Ieſus drew neere and talked with them, but their eyes were holden that they could not know him: and as they went he communed with them, and prooved out of the Scripture his reſurrection, expounding unto them all things that were written of him: then they made him ſtay with them, and their eyes

Luk. 24. 13. 15.

were opened, and they knew him by breaking of bread: but he was taken out of their ſight. In this notable appearance we may obſerve theſe foure points: The firſt, that Chriſt held their eyes that they could not know him: they ſaw a man indeede, but who he was they could not tell. By this it is more then manifeſt, that the uſe of our outward ſenſes, as ſeeing, feeling, ſmelling, &c. is ſupplyed unto us continually by the power of Chriſt, & therfore evē in theſe things wee muſt acknowledge the continuall goodnes of God. Now if one man cannot ſo much as diſcerne an other but by the bleſſing of Chriſt, then ſhall wee never be able to diſcerne the way of life from the way of death without him: and therefore we muſt pray unto God that hee would give us his holy ſpirit to inlighten the eyes of our underſtanding, wherby we may be able to ſee & know the way that leadeth unto life, & alſo to walke in the ſame.

Verſ. 32. The ſecond, that as Chriſt was in expounding the Scriptures unto them, their hearts burned within them. By this we learne, that howſoever the Miniſters of God publiſh the Goſpel to the outward eares of men, yet it is the proper worke of Chriſt alone to touch & inflame the heart by the fire of his holy ſpirit, and to quicken and raiſe men up to the life of righteouſneſſe & true holineſſe: it is he only that Luk. 3. 16. baptizeth with the holy Ghoſt and with fire. And it further admoniſheth us, that we ſhould heare the Word preached from the mouth of Gods Miniſters with burning and melting hearts: but alas, the ordinary practice is flat contrary; mens eyes are drouſie and heavie, and their hearts dead and frozen within them: and that is the cauſe why after much teaching there followes but little profit.

Luk. 24. 30, 31. The third thing is, that Chriſt did eate with the two diſciples, and was knowne of them in breaking bread. It is very like that our Saviour Chriſt did in ſome ſpeciall manner bleſſe the bread which he brake, whereby his diſciples diſcerned him from others. And in like manner we muſt by bleſſing our meates & drinkes diſtinguiſh our ſelves, though not from ſuch as are the ſervants of God, yet from all ungodly and careleſſe men. Many being ſilent themſelves do make their children to give thankes, and to bleſſe their meates. And indeede it is a commendable thing if it bee done ſometimes to nurture the child; but for men to disburden themſelves wholly of this dutie, is a fault. And it is a ſhame, that that mouth which openeth it ſelfe to receive the good creatures of God, ſhould never open it ſelfe to bleſſe and praiſe God for the ſame. Therefore in this action of eating and drinking, let us ſhew our ſelves followers of Chriſt, that as by bleſſing the ſame, he was knowne from all other; ſo we may alſo hereby diſtinguiſh our ſelves from the prophane and wicked of this world. Otherwiſe what difference ſhall there be betweene us and the very hogge that eates maſt on the ground; but never lookes up to the tree from whence it fals? And as Chriſt revealed himſelfe unto his diſciples, at that time when they cauſed him to eate meat with them; ſo let us ſuffer Chriſt to be our gueſt, and let us entertaine him in his members, & no doubt he will bleſſe us, and withall reveale himſelfe unto us. The fourth thing is, that having eaten, hee is taken out of their ſight. And this came to paſſe not be- Verſ. 31. cauſe the body of Chriſt became ſpirituall, but becauſe either he held their eyes as before, or he departed with celeritie and ſpeed according to the properties of a body glorified.

The fourth appearance of Chriſt was to Peter alone, mentioned only by S. Paul, 1 Cor. 15. 5. He was ſeene of Cephas.

The fift appearance was to all the diſciples together ſave Thomas, Ioh. 20. 19. In it we muſt conſider three things, which are all effectuall arguments to proove Chriſts reſurrection. The firſt, that he came and ſtood in the midſt among them the dores being ſhut. Now it may be demanded, how this could be. Anſw. The Papiſts ſay, his body was glorified & ſo paſſed thorow the dore, but (as I have ſaid) it is againſt the nature of a bodie, that one ſhould paſſe thorow another, as heate doth thorow a peece of yron, both bodies remaining intire and ſound: therefore wee may rather thinke, that whereas Chriſt came in, when the dores were ſhut; it was either becauſe by his mightie power he cauſed the dores to give place, the diſciples not knowing how: or elſe becauſe he altered the very ſubſtance of the dores, that his body might paſſe thorow, as hee thickned the waters to carry his body when hee walked upon the ſea. Now if this be true, as very like it is, that theſe dumbe creatures gave place to Chriſt, and became plyable unto his commandement, then much more ought wee to carry our hearts conformable and plyant to the will of our Lord Ieſus in all his commandements. The ſecond point is, that when as the diſciples thought Chriſt to have bin a ſpirit; hee to proove the truth of his manhood, ſhewed unto them his hands and feete, and the wound in his ſide, and cals for meate, and eates among them. But it may bee asked how this could bee, conſidering that a glorified body hath no blemiſh, nor needs not to eate, but is ſupported by God without meate: for if this be true in our bodies when they ſhall be glorified, then much more was it true in Chriſt. Anſ. True it is, a glorified body hath no blemiſhes; but our Saviour Chriſt had not yet entred into the fulneſſe of his glory. If hee had bin fully glorified, he could not ſo ſenſibly and plainely have made manifeſt the truth of his reſurrection unto his diſciples: and therefore for their ſakes and ours he is content, after his entrance into glory, ſtill to retaine in his body ſome remnants of the ignominies and blemiſhes, which if it had pleaſed him, he might have laid aſide; hee is alſo content to eate, not for need, but to proove that his body was not, a body in ſhew, but a true body: This teacheth us two lessons: first, if Christ for our good and comfort bee content to retaine these ignominious blemishes, then answerably every one of us must as good followers of Christ referre the workes of our callings to the good of others, as Paul saith, He was free from all men, yet he was content to become all things unto all men, that by all meanes he might win the more. Secondly, we learne, that for the good of our neighbour, and for the maintaining of love & charitie, we must be content to yeeld from our own right, as in this place our Saviour Christ yeelds of his owne glory for the good of his Church.

1 Cor. 9.19.

The third point is, that hee then gave the Disciples their Apostolicall commission, saying, Goe and teach all nations: of which, three points are to be considered. The first, to whom it is given. Ans. To them all, as well to one as to another, and not to Peter only. And this overthrows the fond and forged opinions of the Papists concerning Peters supremacy. If his calling had beene above the rest, then hee should have had a speciall commission above the rest: but one and the same commission is given alike to all. The second, that with the commission he gives his spirit; for, whom hee appointeth to publish his will and word, them he furnisheth with sufficient gifts of his holy spirit to discharge that great function: and therfore it is a defect, that any are set apart to be Ministers of the Gospel of Christ, which have not received the spirit of knowledge, the spirit of wisedome, and the spirit of propheeie in some measure. The third point is, that in conferring of his spirit hee useth an outward signe: for the text saith, *Ioh.*20.22. He breathed on them, and said, receive the holy Ghost. The reasons hereof may be these: First, when God created Adam, & put into him a living soule, it is said, *Gen.*2.7. He breathed in his face. And so our Saviour Christ in giving unto his Disciples the holy Ghost, doth the same, to shew unto them, that the same person that giveth life, giveth grace; and also to signifie unto thē, that being to send them over all the world to preach his Gospel, he was as it were to make a second creation of man, by renuing the image of God in him which he had lost by the fall of Adam. Againe, he breathed on them in giving his spirit, to put them in mind that their preaching of the Gospel could not bee effectuall in the hearts of their hearers, before the Lord doth breathe into them his spirit, and thereby draw them to beleeve: and therfore the spouse of Christ desires the Lord to send forth his north and south wind to blow on her garden, that the spices thereof might flow out, *Cant.*4.16. The garden is the Church of God, which desires Christ to cōfort her, & to poure out the graces of his spirit on her, that the people of God which are the hearbes and trees of righteousnesse, may bring forth sweet spices, whose fruit may bee for meate, and their leaves for medicines.

Mat.28. 19.

Thus much for the five appearances of Christ the same day he rose againe: Now follow the rest of his appearances which were in the fortie daies following, which are in number sixe. The first is mentioned by S. Iohn in these words, *Ioh.*20.26. Eight daies after when the disciples were within, and Thomas with them, came Iesus when the dores were shut, & stood in the middest of them, and said, Peace be unto you. In it we must consider two things: I. The occasion thereof: II. The dealing of Christ. The occasiō was this: after Christ had appeared unto the other disciples in Thomas absence, they told him that they had seene the Lord: but he made answer, Except I see in his body the print of the nailes, and put mine hand into his side, I will not beleeve. Now eight daies after, our Saviour Christ appeared againe unto all his disciples, especially for the curing of Thomas his unbeleefe, which was no small sinne, considering it containes in it three great sins. The first, is blindnes of mind: for he had bin a hearer of our Saviour Christ a long time, & had bin instructed touching the resurrection divers times: he was also with Christ & saw him whē he raised Lazarus, & had seen, or at leastwise had heard the miracles which he did: and also had heard all the disciples say that they had seene the Lord, and yet will it not sinke into his head. The second is deadnesse of heart. When our Saviour Christ went to raise Lazarus that was dead, Thomas spake very confidently to his fellow disciples, and said, *Ioh.*11.16. Let us goe, that we may die with him, yet when Christ was crucified he fled away, and is the longest from Christ after his resurrection, and when he is certainly told therof, he will not acknowledge it or yeeld unto it. The third is, wilfulnesse: for when the disciples told him that they had seene the Lord, he said flatly, that unlesse hee saw in his hands the print of the nailes hee would not beleeve, and that which is worse then all this, he continued eight daies in this wilfull mind. Now in this exceeding measure of unbeleefe in Thomas, any man, even he that hath the most grace, may see what a masse of unbeleefe is in himselfe, and what wilfulnesse and untowardnesse to any good thing, in so much that we may truly say with David, Lord what is man that thou so regardest him? And if such measure of unbeleefe was in such men, as the disciples were, then we may assure our selves, that it doth much more exceede in the common professors of religion in these daies, let them protest to the contrary what they wil.

Psal 8.4.

Now the cause of his unbeleefe was this: hee makes a law to himselfe, that hee will see and feele, or else he will not beleeve: but this is flat against the nature of faith which consisteth neither in seeing nor feeling. Indeede, in things natural a man must first have experience in seeing and feeling; and then beleefe: but it is contrary in divinitie, a man must first have faith and beleefe, and then comes experience afterward. But Thomas having not learned this, doth over-shoote himselfe: and herein also many deceiue themselves, which thinke they have no faith, becauſe they have no feeling. For the chiefeſt feeling that wee muſt have in this life, muſt bee the feeling of our ſinnes and the miſeries of this life, and though we have no other feeling at all, yet we muſt not therefore ceaſe to beleeve.

In Chriſts dealing with Thomas we may conſider three actions. The firſt, that he ſpeaks to Thomas alone, and anſwers him accordingly to the very words which he had ſpoken of him in his abſence, & that word for word. And by this hee laboured to overthrow his unbeleefe, and to convince him, that being abſent he knew what he ſpake. And by this we learne that though wee want the bodily preſence of Chriſt, he being now in heaven, yet he knoweth well what we ſay, and if need were, could repeat all our ſayings word by word: and if it were not ſo, how could it be true that we muſt give an account of every idle word? Now this muſt teach us, to looke that our ſpeech bee gracious according to the rule of Gods holy word. Secondly, this muſt make us willing and ready to direct our prayers to Chriſt, conſidering he knoweth what we pray for, and heareth every word we ſpeake. The ſecond action is, that Chriſt condeſcends to Thomas, and gives him libertie to feele the print of the nailes, and to put his finger into his ſide. He might have rejected Thomas for his wilfulneſſe, yet to helpe his unbeleefe, hee yeeldeth unto his weakeneſſe. This ſheweth that Chriſt is moſt compaſſionate to all thoſe that unfainedly repent them of their ſinnes and cleave unto him, although they doe it laden with manifold wants. David ſaith, that the Lord hath compaſſion on them that feare him, as a father hath compaſſion on his children: and hee addes the reaſon: For he knoweth of what we are made. And the Prophet Eſay, He will not breake the bruiſed reede, and ſmoaking flaxe hee will not quench. When a childe is very ſicke, in ſo much that it caſteth up all the meat which it taketh, the mother will not be offended thereat, but rather pitie it. Now our Saviour Chriſt is ten thouſand times more mercifull to them that beleeve in him, then any mother is or can be. The third action is, that when Thomas had ſeene and felt the wounds, Chriſt revived his faith, whereupon he brake forth and ſaid, My Lord and my God. In which words he doth moſt notably bewaile his blindneſſe and unbeleefe; and as a fire that hath bin ſmoothered, ſo doth his faith burſt forth and ſhew it ſelfe. And in this example of Thomas we may ſee the eſtate of Gods people in this life. Firſt, God giveth them faith, yet afterward for a time he doth (as it were) hide the ſame in ſome corner of their hearts, ſo as they have no feeling thereof, but thinke themſelves to be voide of all grace: and this hee doth for no other end but to humble them: and yet again after all this, the firſt grace is further renued and revived. Thus dealt the Lord with David and Salomon (for whereas he was a pen-man of Scripture, & therfore an holy man of God, we may not thinke that he was wholly forſaken) with Peter, and in this place with Thomas. And the experience of this ſhall every ſervant of God finde in himſelfe.

Ioh. 20. 27.

Pſal. 103. 13.

Iſa. 42. 3.

Ioh. 20. 28.

The ſecond appearance of Chriſt was to ſeven of his Diſciples as they went on fiſhing, in which he gives three teſtimonies of his godhead, and that by death his power was nothing diminiſhed. The firſt, that when the Diſciples had fiſhed all night, and caught nothing, afterward by his direction they catch fiſh in abundance and that preſently. This teacheth us, that Chriſt is a Soveraigne Lord over all creatures, and hath the diſpoſing of them in his owne hands: and that if good ſucceſſe follow not when men are painefull to their callings, it is becauſe God will prepare and make them fit for a further bleſſing. Chriſt comes in the morning, and gives his Diſciples a great draught of fiſh: yet before this can bee, they muſt labour all night in vaine. Ioſeph muſt be made ruler over all Egypt, but firſt he muſt be caſt into a dungeon where hee can ſee no Sun, nor light, to prepare him to that honour: and David muſt be King over Iſrael, but the Lord will firſt prepare him hereunto, by raiſing up Saul to perſecute him: therefore when God ſendeth any hinderances unto us in our callings, we muſt not deſpaire, nor be diſcouraged; for they are the meanes whereby God maketh us fit to receive greater bleſſings at his hands, either in this life or in the life to come. The ſecond is, that the net was unbroke, though it had in it great fiſhes to the number of an hundred fifty three. The third, that when the diſciples came to land, they ſaw hot coales and fiſh laid thereon, and bread. Now ſome may aske, whence was this foode? Anſw. The ſame Lord that was able to provide a whale to ſwalow up Ionas, & ſo to ſave him: and he that was able to provide a fiſh for Peters angle with a peece of twentie pence in his mouth; and to make a litle bread & few fiſhes to feed ſo many thouſands in the wildernes; the ſame alſo doth of himſelf provide bread and fiſhes for his diſciples. This teacheth us, that not onely the bleſſing, but alſo this very having of meate, drinke, apparell is from Chriſt: and hereupon all ſtates of men, even the kings of the earth are taught to pray that God would give them their daily bread. Again, when we ſit down to eate & drink, this muſt put us in minde that we are the gueſts of Chriſt himſelf: our food which we have, commeth of his meere gift; and he it is that entertaines us if we could ſee it. And for this cauſe we muſt ſoberly & with great reverēce, in feare and trembling uſe all Gods creatures as in his preſence. And when we eate & drink, we muſt alwaies looke that all our ſpeech bee ſuch as may beſeeme the gueſts of our Lord and Saviour Ieſus Chriſt. Vſually the practiſe of men is far other wiſe, for in feaſting many take libertie to ſurfet, and to be drunke, to ſweare, and to blaſpheme: but if we ſerve the Lord, let us remember whoſe gueſts we are, and who is our entertainer; and ſo behave our ſelves as being in his preſence, that all our actions and words may tend to his glory.

Ioh. 21. 1. 6.

1 Cor. 15.7. The third appearance was to Iames, as Saint Paul recordeth, although the ſame bee not mentioned in any of the Evangeliſts.

Matth. 28. 16. The fourth was to all his diſciples in a mountaine, whither he had appointed them to come.

Act. 1. 12. The fifth and laſt appearance was in the mount of Olives, when he aſcended into heaven. Of theſe three laſt appearances, becauſe the holy Ghoſt hath onely mentioned them, I omit to ſpeake, and with the repeating of them I let them paſſe.

Thus much of the appearances of Chriſt after his reſurrection: the witneſſes thereof are of three ſorts: I. angels. II. women that came to the grave to embalme him. III. Chriſts own diſciples who did publiſh and preach the ſame according as they had ſeene and heard of our Saviour Chriſt: and of theſe likewiſe I omit to ſpeake, becauſe there is not any ſpeciall thing mentioned of them by the Evangeliſts.

Now follow the uſes, which are two-fold: ſome reſpect Chriſt, and ſome reſpect our ſelves. Vſes which concerne Chriſt are three: I. Whereas Chriſt Ieſus being ſtarke dead roſe againe to life by his owne power, it ſerveth to proove unto us that he was the Son of God. Thus Paul ſpeaking of Chriſt ſaith, that he was Rom. 1. 4. declared mightily to be the Sonne of God touching the ſpirit of ſanctification, by the reſurrection from the dead. And by the mouth of David God ſaid, Pſal. 2. 7. Thou art my ſonne, this day have I begotten thee. Which place muſt be underſtood not ſo much of the eternall generation of Chriſt before all worlds, as of the manifeſtation thereof in time after this manner. This day, that is, at this time of thine owne incarnation, but eſpecially at the day of thy reſurrection, I have begotten thee, that is, I have made manifeſt that thou art my Sonne: ſo is this place expounded by Saint Paul in the Acts. Secondly, Chriſts riſing from death by his owne power, prooves unto us evidently, that he is Lord over all things that are: & this uſe S. Paul makes hereof, for ſaith he, Rom. 14. 9. Chriſt therefore dyed, that he might be Lord both of the dead and of the quicke. And indeed whereas hee roſe againe on this manner, he did hereby ſhew himſelfe moſt plainly to be a mightie Prince over the grave, death, hell, and condemnation, and one that had all-ſufficient power to overcome them. Thirdly, it prooves unto us, that he was a perfect Prieſt, and that his death and paſſion was a perfect ſatisfaction to the juſtice of God for the ſins of mankinde. For whereas Chriſt died he died for our ſinnes: now if he had not fully ſatisfied for them all (though there had remained but one ſinne, for which he had made no ſatisfaction) he had not riſen againe: but death which came into the world by ſinne, and is ſtrengthened by it, would have held him in bondage: and therefore, whereas he roſe againe, it is more then manifeſt, that he hath made ſo full a ſatisfaction, that the merit thereof doth and ſhall countervaile the juſtice of God for all our offences. To this purpoſe Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 15. 17. If Chriſt be not riſen again, your faith is vaine, and you are yet in your ſins, that is, Chriſt had not ſatisfied for your ſinnes, or at leaſt you could not poſſibly have knowne that hee had made ſatisfaction for any of them, if he had not riſen againe.

The uſes which concerne our ſelves are of two ſorts: comforts to the children of God, and duties that are to be learned and practiſed of us all. The comforts are eſpecially three. Firſt, Chriſts reſurrection ſerveth for the juſtification of all that beleeve in him, even before God the Father: as Paul ſaith, Rom. 4. 25. Chriſt was given to death for our ſinnes, and is riſen againe for our juſtification: which words have this meaning: when Chriſt died, we muſt not conſider him as a private man, as we have ſhewed before, but as one that ſtood in the ſtead and roome of all the elect: in his death he bare our ſinnes, and ſuffered all that we ſhould have ſuffered in our owne perſons for ever, and the guilt of our offences was laid upon him: and Iſa. 53. 12. therefore Eſay ſaith, he was numbred among the wicked. Now in this his riſing againe, he freed and diſburdened himſelfe not from any ſinnes of his owne, becauſe he was without ſinne, but from the guilt and puniſhment of our ſinnes imputed unto him. And hence it comes to paſſe, that all thoſe which put their truſt and affiance in the merit of Chriſt, at the very firſt inſtant of their beleeving have their owne ſins not imputed unto them, and his righteouſneſſe imputed.

Secondly, the reſurrection of Chriſt ſerveth as a notable meanes to worke inward ſanctification, as Saint Peter ſaith, Wee are regenerate 1 Pet. 1. 3. to a lively hope by the reſurrection of Ieſus Chriſt from the dead. And S. Paul, We are then (ſaith he) Rom. 6. 4. 5. buried with him by baptiſme into his death, that like as Chriſt was raiſed up from the dead by the glory of his Father, ſo we alſo ſhould walke in newneſſe of life. For if wee bee grafted with him to the ſimilitude of his death, wee ſhall be alſo to the ſimilitude of his reſurrection. Which words import thus much, that as Chriſt by the power of his own Godhead, freed his manhood from death and from the guilt of our ſins: ſo doth hee free thoſe that are knit unto him by the bond of one ſpirit, from the corruption of their natures in which they are dead, that they may live unto God. In the naturall body, the head is the fountaine of all the ſenſes and of motion: and therefore by ſundry nerves diſperſed thorow the body, the power of mooving and of ſenſe is derived even to the leaſt parts; ſo as the hands and feete moove by meanes of that power which comes from the head: and ſo it is in the ſpirituall body of Chriſt, namely, the Church: hee is the head and the fountaine of life, and therefore hee conveyeth ſpirituall life to every one of his members: and that very power of his Godhead, whereby hee raised up himselfe when he was dead, he conveyeth from himselfe to his members, and thereby raiseth them up fromthe death of sinne to newnesse of life. And looke as in a perfect body, when the head hath sense and motion, the hand that is of the same bodie hath also the sense and motion convenient for it: so likewise Christ being the resurrection and the life; as there is spirituall life in him, so every member of his shall feele in it selfe spirituall sense and motion, whereby it is raised up from sinne, and liveth unto God. For the better conceiving of this, we must consider two things: the outward meanes of this spirituall life, and the measure of it. For the meanes, if we will have common water, we must go to the well: and if we would have water of life, we must goe unto Christ, who saith, If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drinke. Now this well of the water of life is very deep, and we have nothing to draw with, therefore we must have our pipes and conduits to convey the same unto us, which are the word of God preached, and the administration of the Sacraments. Christ saith, The dead shall heare the voyce of the sonne of God, and they that heare it shall live; where by the dead is meant, not the dead in the grave, but those that are dead in sinne. And againe, Christ saith, the words which I speake are spirit and life, because the word of God is the pipe whereby he conveyeth into our dead hearts spirit and life. As Christ when hee raised up dead men, did onely speake the word and they were made alive: and at the day of judgement by his very voice, when the trumpet shall blow, all that are dead shall rise againe: So it is in the first resurrection; they that are dead in their sins, at his voice uttered in the ministery of the word shal rise againe. To goe further, Christ raised three from the dead; Iairus daughter newly dead; the widdowes sonne dead and wounded up and lying on the hearse: Lazarus dead and buried, and stinking in the grave; and all this he did by his very voice: so also by the preaching of his word, he raiseth all sorts of sinners, even such as have lien long in their sinnes as rotting and stinking carrion. The Sacraments also are the pipes and conduits whereby God conveyeth grace into the heart, if they are repaired to, that is, if they be received in unfained repentance for all our sins, and with a true and lively faith in Christ for the pardon of the same sinnes. And so, I take it, they be rightly used as flagons of wine, which revive the Church being sicke and falne into a swound. As for the measure of life derived from Christ, it is but small in this life, and given by little and little, as Osee saith, The Lord hath spoiled us, and he will heale us, he hath wounded us, & he will bind us up. After two daies he will revive us, & in the third he will raise us up, and wee shall live in his sight. The Prophet Ezechiel in a vision is carried into the midst of a field, full of dead bones, and he is caused to prophesie over them, and say, O ye dry bones, heare the word of the Lord: at the first there was a shaking, and the bones came together bone to bone, and their sinewes and flesh grew upon them, and upon the flesh grew a skin. Then hee prophesied unto the winds the second time, and they lived and stood upon their feet, for the breath came upon them, and they were an exceeding great army of men. Hereby it signifieth not onely the state of the Iewes after their captivitie, but in them the state of the whole Church of GOD. For these temporall deliverances signifie further a spirituall deliverance. And we may here see most plainly, that God worketh in the hearts of his children the gifts and graces of regeneration by little and little. First, he giveth no more then flesh, sinewes and skin: then after he giveth them further graces of his spirit, which quickneth them and maketh them alive unto God. The same also we may see in the vision of the waters that ran out of the Temple: First, a man may wade to the ankles, then after to the knees, and so to the loynes: then after the waters grow to a river that cannot be passed over: and so the Lord conveyeth his graces by little and little, till at the last men have a full measure thereof.

Thirdly, the resurrection of Christ serves as an argument to proove unto us our resurrection at the day of judgement. Paul saith, If the spirit of him that raised up Iesus from the dead, dwell in you, he that raised Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortall bodies. Some will say, that this is no benefit, for all must rise againe, as well the wicked, as the godly. Answ. True indeed: but yet the wicked rise not againe by the same cause that the godly doe. They rise againe by the power of Christ, not as he is a Saviour, but as hee is a judge to condemne them. For God had said to Adam; at what time hee should eate of the forbidden fruit, he should die the death; meaning a double death, both the first, and the second death. Now then the ungodly rise againe, that God may inflict upon them the punishment of the second death, which is the reward of sinne, that so Gods justice may be satisfied: but the godly rise againe by the power of Christ their head and redeemer, who raiseth them up that they may be partakers of the benefit of his death, which is to enjoy both in body and soule the kingdome of heaven, which he hath so dearely bought for them.

Thus much for the comforts: Now follow the duties, and they are also three. First, as Christ Iesus when he was dead rose againe from death to life by his own power, so we by his grace, in imitation of Christ, must endeavour our selves to rise up from all our sins both originall and actuall unto newnes of life. This is worthily set downe by the Apostle, saying, We are buried by baptisme into his death, that as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, so we also should walke in newnesse of life: and therefore wee must endeavour our ſelves to ſhew the ſame power to be in us every day, by riſing up from our owne perſonall ſinnes to a reformed life. This ought to bee remembred of us, becauſe howſoever many heare and know this point, yet very few doe practiſe the ſame. For (to ſpeake plainely) as dead men buried would never heare though a man ſhould ſpeake never ſo loud: ſo undoubtedly among us there bee alſo many living men, which are almoſt in the ſame caſe. The miniſters of God may cry unto them daily, and iterate the ſame thing a thouſand times, & tell them that they muſt riſe up from their ſinnes and leade a new life, but they heare no more then the dead carkaſſe that lyeth in the grave. Indeed men heare with their outward eares, but they are ſo farre from practiſing this dutie, that many judge it to be a matter of reproach and ignominy. And thoſe which make any conſcience of this dutie, how they are laden with nick-names and taunts, who knoweth not? I need not to rehearſe them: ſo odious a thing now adaies is the riſing from ſinne to newneſſe of life. Sound a trumpet in a dead mans eares, he ſtirres not: and let us cry for amendment of life till breath goe out of our bodies, no man almoſt ſaith, What have I done? And for this cauſe undoubtedly, if it were not for conſcience of that dutie which men owe unto God, we ſhould have but few miniſters in England. For it is the joy of a Miniſter to ſee the unfained converſion of his people: whereas, alas men generally lie ſnorting in their corruptions, and rather goe forward in them ſtill, then come to any amendment; ſuch is the wonderfull hardneſſe that hath poſſeſſed the hearts of moſt men. He which hath but halfe an eye may ſee this to be true. Oh! how exceeds Atheiſme in all places, contempt of Gods worſhip, prophanation of the Sabbath; the whoredomes and fornications, the crueltie and oppreſſion of this age cry to heaven for vengeance. By theſe and ſuch like ſinnes the world crucifies Chriſt againe. For looke as Pilates ſouldiers with the wicked Iewes, tooke Chriſt and ſtripped him of his garments; buffeted him, and ſlew him; ſo ungodly men by their wicked behaviour ſtrip him of all honour, and ſlay him againe. If an infidell ſhould come among us, and yeeld himſelfe to be of our religion, after he had ſeene the behaviour of men, he would peradventure leave all religion: for he might ſay, ſurely it ſeemes this God whom theſe men worſhip, is not the true God, but a God of licentious liberty. And that which is more, whereas at all times we ought to ſhew our ſelves new creatures, and to walke worthy of our Saviour and redeemer, and therfore alſo ought to riſe out of our ſinnes, and to live in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe, yet we for the moſt part go on ſtill forward in ſin, and every day goe deeper then other to hellward. This hath beene heretofore the common practiſe, but let us now learne after the example of Chriſt, being quickned and revived by his grace, to endeavour our ſelves, eſpecially to come out of the grave of ſinne, and learne to make conſcience of every bad action. True it is, a Chriſtian man may uſe the creatures of God for his delight, in a moderate and godly manner, but Chriſt never gave liberty to any to live licenciouſly: for he that is free, is yet ſervant unto Chriſt, as Paul ſaith: and therefore we muſt not enterpriſe any thing, but that which may be a worke of ſome good dutie unto God; to which end the Apoſtle ſaith, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ſtand up from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall give thee life. If this will not moove us, yet let the judgement of God draw us thereunto, Bleſſed is he (ſaith the holy Ghoſt) that hath part in the firſt reſurrection: for on ſuch the ſecond death hath no power: where mention is made of a double death; the firſt, is the ſeparation of ſoule and body, the ſecond, is the eternall condemnation of ſoule and body in hell fire. Would we now eſcape the ſecond death after this life? we muſt then labour in this life to be partakers of the firſt reſurrection, and that on this manner: looke what ſinnes we have lived in heretofore, wee muſt endeavour to come out of them all, and leade a better life according to all the commandements of God. But if it be ſo that ye will have no care of your owne ſoules goe on hardly to your owne perill, and ſo ye ſhall be ſure to enter into the ſecond death, which is eternall damnation.

Secondly, we are taught by the example of Saint Paul, to labour above all things, to know Chriſt, and the vertue of his reſurrection. And this we ſhall doe, when we can ſay by experience that our hearts are not content with a drowſie profeſſion of religion, but that wee feele the ſame power of Chriſt, whereby he raiſed up himſelfe from death to life, to be effectuall, and powerfull in us, to worke in our hearts a converſion from all our ſinnes, wherein we have lien dead, to newneſſe of life, with care to live godly in Chriſt Ieſus. And that we may further attaine to all this, we muſt come to heare the word of God preached and taught with feare and trembling; having heard the word, we muſt meditate therein, and pray unto God, not onely publikely, but privately alſo, intreating him that he would reach forth his hand, and pull us out of the grave of ſinne, wherein we have lien dead ſo long. And in ſo doing, the Lord of his mercy, according as he hath promiſed, will ſend his ſpirit of grace into our hearts, to worke in us an inward ſenſe and feeling of the vertue of Chriſts reſurrection. So dealt he with the two diſciples that were going to Emmaus; they were occupied in the meditation of Chriſt his death and paſſion: and whiles they were in hearing of Chriſt, who conferred with them, hee gave them ſuch a meaſure of his ſpirit, as made their hearts to burne within them. And Paul prayeth for the Epheſians, that God would enlighten their eyes, that they might ſee and feele in themſelves the exceeding greatneſſe of the power of God, which he wrought in Chriſt Ieſus, when he raiſed him from the dead.

3. Col. 3. 1. Thirdly, as Saint Paul ſaith, If we bee riſen with Chriſt, then we muſt ſeeke the things that are above. But how & by what meanes can we riſe with Chriſt, ſeeing we did not die with him? Anſ. We riſe with Chriſt thus. The Burgeſſe of a towne in the Parliament Houſe beareth the perſon of a whole towne, and whatſoever he ſaith, that the whole towne ſaith, and whatſoever is done to him, is alſo done to al the town: ſo Chriſt upon the croſſe ſtood in our place, and bare our perſon; and what he ſuffered, we ſuffered: and when he died, all the faithful died in him: and ſo likewiſe as he is riſen againe, ſo are all the faithfull riſen in him. The conſideration whereof doth teach us, that we muſt not have our hearts wedded to this world. Wee may uſe the things of this life, but yet ſo as though we uſed them not. For all our love and care muſt be for things above, and ſpecially we muſt ſeeke the kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe, peace of conſcience, and joy in the holy Ghoſt. Wee muſt therefore ſue for the pardon of ſinne, for reconciliation to God in Chriſt, and for ſanctification. Theſe are the precious pearles which we muſt ſeeke, & when we have found them, we muſt ſell all that we have to buy them, and having bought them, we muſt lay them up in the ſecret corners of our hearts, valuing and eſteeming of them better then all things in the world beſide.

Thus much of Chriſts reſurrection, containing the firſt degree of Chriſts exaltation: now followeth the ſecond in theſe words, He aſcended into heaven: in the handling whereof we are to conſider theſe ſpeciall points: I. the time of his aſcenſion. II. the place. III. the manner. IV. the witneſſes. V. the uſes thereof. For the firſt, the time of Chriſts aſcenſion was fortie daies after his reſurrection, when hee taught his diſciples the things which appertaine to the Kingdome of God. And this ſhewes that he is a moſt faithfull King over his Church, procuring the good thereof. And therefore Eſay ſaith, The government is on his ſhoulders: And the Apoſtle ſaith, hee was more faithfull in all the houſe of God, then Moſes was. Hence we gather, that whereas the Apoſtles changed the Sabbath from the ſeventh day to the eighth, it was no doubt, by the counſell and direction of Chriſt before his aſcenſion: and likewiſe in that they planted Churches, and appointed teachers and meete over-ſeers for the guiding & inſtruction hereof, we may reſolve our ſelves that Chriſt preſcribed the ſame unto them before his aſcenſion: and for theſe and ſuch like cauſes did he aſcend no ſooner.

Act. 1. 3.

Eſa. 9. 6. Heb. 3. 5, 6.

Now looke what care Chriſt at his aſcenſion had over his Church, the ſame muſt all maſters of families have over their houſholds when God ſhall call them out of this world. They muſt have care not onely that their families be well governed while they live; but alſo, that after their death, peace, love, and good order may be continued in their poſteritie. And therefore the Prophet Eſay is ſent to Ezechias King of Iuda, to bid him ſet his houſe in order, for he muſt die, ſignifying, that it is the dutie of a good maſter of a family, to have care not onely for the governement of his houſe whileſt he is alive, but alſo that it may be well governed when he is dead. The ſame alſo muſt be practiſed of Gods miniſters: a part of whoſe fidelitie is this, that they have not onely a care to feede their particular flockes while they are alive, but alſo that they further provide for the people after their departure, as much as they can. Example whereof wee have in Peter, who ſaith, I will endeavour alwayes that yee may be able alſo to have remembrance of theſe things after my departure.

Iſa. 38. 1.

2 Pet. 1. 15.

The place of Chriſts aſcenſion was, the mount of Olives neere Bethanie; and it was the ſame place from whence Chriſt went to Ieruſalem to be crucified. One place ſerved to be a paſſage both to paine and torments, and alſo to glorie. This ſhewes that the way to the kingdome of heaven is through afflictions. There are many which have Gods hand heavie upon them in lingring ſickneſſes, as the dead palſie, and ſuch like; wherin they are faine to lie many yeers without hope of cure: wherupon their beds, which ſhould bee unto them places of reſt and eaſe, are but places of woe and miſerie. Yet may theſe men hence have great comfort, if they can make a good uſe of their ſickneſſes: for the beds whereon they ſuffer ſo much torment, ſhall be places from whence they ſhall paſſe to joy and happineſſe. Againe, there be many that for the teſtimonie of the truth, and for religions ſake ſuffer impriſonment, with many afflictions; now if they can uſe their afflictions well, their priſons ſhall be Bethanies unto them; although they be places of bondage, yet God will at length make them places of entrance to libertie. Many a man for the maintaining of faith and good conſcience, is baniſhed out of his countrey, and is faine to live in a ſtrange place among a people to whom he is unknowne: but let him uſe it well: for though it be a place of griefe for a time, as Bethany was to Chriſt when he went to ſuffer, yet God will make it one day to be a paſſage into heaven.

Luke 24. 50. & 19. 29. Act. 1. 12.

Thus much of the place of his aſcending. The third thing to be conſidered, is the manner of Chriſts aſcenſion, and it containeth three points. The firſt, that Chriſt being now to aſcend, lift up his hands, and bleſſed his diſciples. In the Scripture are mentioned divers kinds of bleſſings. The firſt, when one prayeth to God for a bleſſing upon another: and this bleſſing doe kings and princes beſtow upon their ſubjects, and parents on their children: and for this cauſe children are well taught to aske their fathers and mothers bleſſing, that they may pray to God to bleſſe them. There is another kinde of bleſſing, when a man doth not onely pray for a bleſſing, but alſo pronounceth it:

Luke 24. 50.

This did the priests in the old Testament: and thus Melchisedecke when hee met Abraham blessed him, saying, Blessed art thou Abraham of God, the most high possessour of heaven and earth. Gen. 14. 19. And this was the ordinary dutie of the priests, prescribed by God himselfe: and therefore the very forme of words which they used, is set downe after this manner, The Lord blesse thee and keepe thee, the Lord make his face to shine upon thee, &c. Numb. 6. 24,25,26. The third kinde of blessing is, when a man doth not onely pray to God and pronounce blessing, but by the spirit of prophecie doth foretell a particular blessing upon any. Thus Isaac blessed Iacob and Esau, particularly foretelling both their estates. And Iacob blessed the twelve Patriarkes by the same spirit, foretelling them what should befall them many hundred yeeres after. Gen. 27. 28. Gen. 49. Now our Saviour Christ did not blesse his disciples any of these three wayes: and therefore there remaineth a fourth kind of blessing which he used, and that was after this manner: Christ in blessing his disciples did not onely pronounce or foretell a blessing that should come to his disciples, but did conferre and give the same unto them. For he is the fountaine and author of all blessings. And therefore Paul saith, that God the Father hath blessed us in all spirituall blessings in Christ. Eph. 1. 3.

Hence wee learne, first, that all those which deny themselves and flie to Christ, and put their affiance in him, shall be freed from the curse of the law, and from the wrath of God due unto them for their sinnes, whatsoever they are. Secondly, that the curses of men must not discourage us from doing well. For though men curse, yet Christ blesseth: and for this cause hee saith, Woe bee unto you, when all men speake well of you: Luk. 6. 26. as if he should say, then you want the blessing of God. And we must remember, that when men shall curse us for doing our dutie, even then the blessing of God shall bee upon us; and the curse causeless shall not hurt. And God saith to Abraham, Gen. 12. 3. he will curse them that curse him: Thirdly, we learne that no witchcraft, nor sorcery, (which often are done with cursing) shall be able to hurt us. For looke where Christ will blesse, there all the divels in hell can never fasten a curse. This is found true by experience. For when Balaam the wizzard should have cursed the people of Israel, and had assaied to doe it many waies, but could not; at length he said, *There is no sorcerie * against Iacob, nor soothsaying against Israel.* Numb. 23. 23. * The English translation being otherwise here seemes to faile. This is a notable comfort to the people of God, that witches and sorcerers, doe what they can, shall never be able to hurt them. It may be, that their bad practices may annoy mens bodies and goods, yet the Lord will turne all to a blessing upon his servants, either in this life, or in the life to come.

The second point is, that Christ went apart from his disciples, and ascended upward toward heaven in their sight. For the right understanding of this, sundry speciall points must be observed. The first, that the lifting up of his bodie was principally by the mightie power of his Godhead, and partly by the supernaturall propertie of a glorified bodie, which is to moove as well upward as downward, without constraint or violence. The second, that Christ did goe from earth to heaven really and actually, and not in appearance onely. The third, that he went visibly in the sight of his Disciples. The fourth, that he went locally, by changing his place and going from earth to heaven, so as he is no more on earth bodily, as we are now on earth. It may be objected, that Christ made a promise that he would be with his Church to the end of the world. Matth. 28. 20. Answ. That promise is to be understood of the presence of his spirit, or Godhead, not of the presence of his manhood. Againe, it may bee further alleadged, that if the Godhead be on earth, then must the manhood be there also, because they are both united together. Answ. It is not true, that of two things conjoyned, where the one is, there must the other be also. For the Sunne it selfe, and the Sun-beames are both joyned together, yet they are not both in all places together. For the body of the Sunne is onely in the heavens, but the Sunne-beames are also upon the earth. The argument therefore followes not: Christs manhood subsists in that person which is every where: ergo, his manhood is every where. Vide Th. contra. Gent. lib. 4. c. 49. And the reason is, because the Sonne of God subsists not onely in his divine nature, but also by it: whereas hee doth not subsist at all by the manhood, but onely in it: for hee subsisted before all eternitie, when the manhood was not. Nay rather because the manhood doth subsist by the person of the Sonne, therefore the person extends it selfe further then the manhood, which is assumed and sustained by it; and hath his existing thence. For that very thing whereby any other thing either essentially or accidentally is, extends it selfe further then the thing whereby it is. As the humane nature whereby Peter is a man, extends it selfe further then to Peter, namely, to all other men: and the whiteneſse whereby the snow is white, extends it selfe further then to that snow which a man holds in his hand.

The third point is, that in the ascension a cloud tooke Christ from the sight of his disciples. Act. 1. 9. And whereas hee caused a cloud to come betweene their sight and himselfe, it signified unto them, that they must now be contented with that which they had seene, and not to seeke to know further what became of him afterward; and the same thing is taught unto us also: we must content our selves with that which God hath revealed in his word, and seeke no further, specially in things which concerne God. For the like end in the giving of the law in Sinai, God appeared in a cloud: and when he did manifest his glory in the temple which Salomon made, a thicke cloud filled the same. Exod. 19. 9. 1 King. 8. 10,11.

The fourth point to be considered, is concerning the witneſſes of his aſcenſion, which were his owne diſciples in the mount of Olives at Bethanie, and none but they. Now it may be demaunded, why he would not have all the whole nation of the Iewes to ſee him aſcend, that ſo they might know that hee was riſen againe, and beleeve in him. Anſw. The reaſon may be this: it was his good pleaſure that the points of faith and religion, whereof this article is one, ſhould rather be learned by hearing then by ſeeing. Indeed Chriſts owne diſciples were taught the ſame by ſight, that they might the better teach others which ſhould not ſee; whereas now the ordinarie meanes to come by faith is hearing.

Luke 24. 50. Act. 1. 9.

The uſes to be made of Chriſts aſcenſion, are of two ſorts; ſome are comforts to Gods Church and people, and ſome are duties. The comforts are eſpecially foure. The firſt is this: Chriſt Ieſus did aſcend up to heaven, to leade captivitie captive, a moſt worthy benefit. By captivitie is meant, ſinne and Satan which did & do leade men captive into perdition: ſecondly death and the grave, which held him captive and in bondage for the ſpace of three dayes. And he leades them all captive two waies: firſt in himſelfe, in that he began his triumph upon the croſſe, as I have ſhewed, and continued the ſame till his very aſcenſion: ſecondly, in all his members, becauſe by his mighty power being now aſcended, he doth ſubdue and weaken the power of ſinne & Satan; which he manifeſteth every day by killing the corruption of their natures, and the rebellion of their fleſh. But it may be demanded, how Chriſt doth leade his enemies captive, conſidering the divell reignes every where, and the world, and death & hell. Anſ. Chriſts victory over his and our enemies hath five degrees. Firſt, it is ordained by God; ſecondly, it is fore-told; thirdly, it is wrought; fourthly, it is applyed; laſtly, it is acompliſhed. The ordaining of it was before all worlds: the fore-telling of it was in all the ages of the old teſtament: the working of it was upon the croſſe, and afterwards: the applying hath been ſince the beginning of the world more or leſſe: and it is onely in part in this life; that while Chriſt is bruiſing of the head of Satan, hee againe may bruiſe his heele: the accompliſhment ſhall not be before the laſt judgement.

Eph. 4. 8.

Rom. 16. 20.

From this great benefit beſtowed on Gods Church, there are many duties to bee learned. Firſt, here is an inſtruction for all ignorant perſons and impenitent ſinners, which abound among us in every place, whoſoever they bee, that live in the blindneſſe of their mindes, and hardnes of their hearts; they muſt know this, that they are captives and bondſlaves of ſinne and Satan, of hell, death, and condemnation: and let no man flatter himſelfe of what ſtate or degree ſoever he be (for it is Gods truth,) if he have not repented of all his ſinnes, hee as yet is no better then a ſervant or a vaſſall, yea a very drudge of the divell. Now then, what wilt thou doe in this caſe? The beſt thing is, to lay to thy heart this benefit of Chriſt. Hee is aſcended up to heaven to leade captive, and to vanquiſh the divell and all his angels, under whom thou lyeſt bound and that not onely in himſelf, but in his members. Now then if thou wilt become a true member of Chriſt, he will free thee from this bondage. Therefore take heede how thou continueſt longer in thy old ſinnes, and in thy groſſe ignorance: and ſeeing Chriſt hath made a way to libertie; let us ſeeke to come out of this ſpirituall bondage: hee is aſcended for this end and purpoſe to free us from it; therefore if we refuſe this benefit, our ſtate will be the more damnable. A man lies bound hand and foote in a darke dungeon, and the keeper comes & ſets open the priſon dore and takes off his bolts, and biddes him come out; if he refuſe and ſay that he is well, may it not bee thought that he is a madde man, and will any be ſorry for his caſe? No ſurely. Well, this is the ſtate of all impenitent ſinners. They lie faſt fettered and bound under the power of ſinne and Satan, & Chriſt it is who is aſcended into heaven to unlooſe them of this bondage: he hath ſet open the priſon doore, and hath unlocked our fetters: if we refuſe to come out, & lie ſtill in our ſins, there remaineth nothing for us, but everlaſting thraldome. Let us therefore in the feare of God, if we have care of our owne ſoules, receive and imbrace this benefit which redounds unto us by Chriſts aſcenſion.

Secondly, in that Chriſt is aſcended to heaven to leade captive ſinne and Satan, here is a good conſolation for al thoſe that are afflicted in conſcience for their ſins. There is no man in this caſe but he hath great cauſe to feare, yet muſt he not be diſcouraged. For Chriſt by his aſcenſion like a noble Captaine hath taken ſin and Satan priſoner, and hath pinnioned them faſt, ſo as all the power they have, is in Chriſts hand: & therefore for this cauſe although they are ſuffered to exerciſe and afflict us, yet by his grace they ſhall never be able to prevaile againſt us. Therefore we may ſafely caſt our care upon God, and not feare overmuch.

Hence alſo wee may learne a third dutie. There is no man that knoweth what ſin meaneth, and what the blood of Chriſt meaneth, but in regard of the corruption of his owne nature, he will ſay with Paul, that he is ſold under ſinne, and in regard thereof will crie out with him alſo, O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from this body of death? yea it will make his hart to bleed within him. Now what ſhall he doe in this caſe? ſurely let him remember the end of Chriſts aſcenſion, which is to vanquiſh and ſubdue the rebellion of his nature, and labour to feele the benefit thereof: and then he ſhall no doubt finde, that Chriſt wil diſſolve in him the works of the divell, & tread Satan under his feete. And thus alſo thoſe that feele in themſelves the law of their members rebelling againſt the law of their minde, muſt come to Chriſt, & he will helpe & free them.

Rom. 7. 14. Verſ. 24.

1 Ioh. 3. 8. Rom. 16. 20.

The ſecond benefit of Chriſts aſcenſion is that he aſcended up to heaven to beſtow gifts upon his Church, as it is ſaid in the place before mentioned. He aſcended up on high, &c. He gave gifts unto men, that is, the gift of the knowledg of Gods word, the gift of preaching and prophecie, & all other gifts needful for the good of his Church. The conſideration of this, that Chriſt who is the fountaine of grace, & in whom are hid all the treaſures of wiſedome & knowledge, ſhould be mindful of us, & vouchſafe ſuch ſpeciall favour to his Church, muſt cauſe every one of us who hath received any gift of God (as there is no man but he hath received his portion) to be humbled in his owne eyes for the ſame. There is no cauſe why wee ſhould be proud of our gifts; ſeeing wee have nothing but that which we have received. For to this end Chriſt aſcended, to give gifts unto men, and therefore our gifts whatſoever they bee, are not our owne, but we haue them from Chriſt, & we are ſtewards of them a while for the good of others. The more the Lord gives to man, the more he requires at his hands; and as for ſuch as having good gifts abuſe the ſame, their ſin is the more grievous, and their danger the greater. Men of great gifts unleſſe they uſe them aright with humbled harts, ſhall want Gods bleſſing vpon them. For he giveth grace to the humble. The high hils after much tillage are often barren, whereas the low vallies by ſtreames of water paſſing thorow thē, are very fruitfull: and the gifts of God joyned with a ſwelling heart are fruitleſſe, but joyned with love & the grace of humility they edifie.

Eph. 4. 8.

Secondly, if Chriſt aſcend up to heaven to give gifts unto men, here we may ſee how many a man and woman in theſe our daies are over-ſeene, in that they plead ignorance, & ſay that they hope God will haue them excuſed for it, ſeeing that they are not learned; they have dull wits, & it is not poſſible to teach thē now, they are paſt learning: & hereupon they preſume they may live in groſſe ignorance, as blind almoſt in religion as when they were firſt borne. But mark, I pray you, who is it that is aſcended up into heaven; namely, Chriſt Ieſus our Lord, who made thee of nothing. Now was he able to give thee a beeing, when thou wert not, and is hee not likewiſe able to put knowledge into thy ſoul, if ſo be thou wilt uſe the meanes which he hath appointed? and the rather, ſeeing he is aſcended for that end: but if thou wilt not uſe the meanes to come to knowledge, thy caſe is deſperate, and thou art the cauſe of thine owne condemnation, and thou bringeſt confuſion upon thine owne head Therefore let ignorant men labour for knowledge of Gods word. Ignorance ſhall excuſe none: it wil not ſtand for paiment at the day of judgement. Chriſt is aſcended to this end to teach the ignorant, to give knowledge & wiſdome unto the ſimple, & to give gifts of prophecy unto his miniſters, that they may teach his people. Therefore I ſay againe, let ſuch as be ignorāt uſe the meanes diligently, & God wil give the bleſſing. Thirdly, wheras it is thought to be a thing not poſſible, to furniſh a whole Church with preaching miniſters, it ſeemes to be otherwiſe. For wherefore did Chriſt aſcend to heaven? was it not to give gifts unto his Church? what, is Chriſts hand now ſhortned? undoubtedly we may reſolve our ſelves, that Chriſt beſtowed gifts ſufficient upon men in the Church: but it is for our ſins that they are not imployed. The fountaines of learning the Vniverſities; though they are not dammed up, yet they ſtream not abroad as they might. Many there be in them indued with worthy gifts for the building of the Church; but the covetouſneſſe of men hinders the comfortable entrance which otherwiſe might bee. Laſtly, ſeeing Chriſt aſcēded to give gifts needfull for his Church, as the gift of teaching, the gift of prophecy, the gift of tongues, of wiſedome, and knowledge: the dutie of every man is, eſpecially of thoſe that live in the ſchooles of learning, to labour by all meanes to increaſe, cheriſh, and preſerve their gifts, & as Paul exhorteth Timothie, to ſtirre up the gift of God, that is, as men preſerve the fire by blowing it, ſo by our diligence wee muſt kindle and revive the gifts and graces of God beſtowed on us. Chriſt hath done his part, and there is nothing required but our paines and fidelity.

1 Tim. 1. 6 ἀναζωπυρεῖν

The third benefit that comes by Chriſts aſcenſion is, that hee aſcended to prepare a place for all that ſhould beleeve in him: In my Fathers houſe (ſaith Chriſt) are many dwelling plaæs, if it were not ſo, I would have told you, I goe to prepare a place for you. For by the ſin of Adam our entrance into heaven was taken away. If Adam by his fall did exclude himſelf from the earthly paradiſe, then how much more did he exclude himſelfe from heaven? And therefore all mankind ſinning in him, was likewiſe deprived of heaven. The people of Iſrael being in woe & miſerie, cried out that they had ſinned, & therefore the Lord had covered himſelfe with a cloud, that their prayers could not paſſe through. And Eſay ſaith, that our ſins are a wall betwixt God & us. And S. Iohn that no unclean thing muſt enter into the heavenly Ieruſalē. Now ſeeing we have ſhut our ſelves out of heaven by our ſins, it was requiſite that Chriſt Ieſus our Saviour ſhould go before us to prepare a place, and to make ready a way for us. For he is King over all, he hath the keyes of heaven, hee openeth and no man ſhutteth: and therefore it is in his power to let us in, though wee have ſhut our ſelves out. But ſome may ſay, if this be the end of his aſcenſion to prepare a place in heaven, then belike ſuch as died before the comming of Chriſt were not in heaven. Anſ. As there are two degrees of glory, one incompleate and the other compleate or perfect, (for the faithfull departed are in glory but in part, and there remaines fulnes of glory for ſuch then at the day of judgement, when ſoule and body ſhall bee both glorified together:) ſo anſwerably there are two degrees of preparation of places in heaven. The places of glory were in part prepared for the faithfull from the beginning of the world, but the full preparation is made by Chriſts aſcenſion. And of this laſt preparation is the place of John to be underſtood.

The uſe of this doctrine is very profitable: Firſt, it overthroweth the fond doctrine of the Church of Rome, which teacheth that Chriſt by his death did merit our juſtification, & that we being once juſtified doe further merit ſalvation, and purchaſe for our ſelves a place in heaven. But this is as it were to make a partition betweene Chriſt and us in the worke of our redemption, whereas in truth not onely the beginning and continuance of our ſalvation, but alſo the accompliſhment thereof in our vocation, juſtification, ſanctification, glorification, is wholly and onely to be aſcribed to the meere merit of Chriſt: and therefore having redeemed us on earth, he alſo aſcends to prepare a place in heaven for us.

Secondly, this ſerves to condemne the fearefull, lamentable, and deſperate ſecuritie of theſe our daies. Great is the love of Chriſt in that he was content to ſuffer the pangs of hell to bring us out of hell: and withall to goe to heaven to prepare a place for us there: and yet who is it that careth for the place, or maketh any account thereof? who forſaketh this world, and ſeekes unto Chriſt for it? And further, leſt any man ſhould ſay, alas, I know not the way: therefore Chriſt before hee aſcended made a new and living way, with his own blood, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. And to take away all excuſes from men, hee hath ſet markes and bounds in this way, and hath placed guides in it, namely, his miniſters, to ſhew all the paſſengers a ſtraight and ready courſe into the kingdome of heaven. And though Chriſt have done all this for us, yet the blindneſſe and ſecurity of men is ſuch, that none almoſt walketh in this way, nor careth to come into this manſiõ place; but in ſted of this they walk in by-waies according to the luſts of their owne fleſh. Whẽ they are commanded to go Eaſtward to Ieruſalem, they turn Weſtward another way: whẽ they are commanded to go on forward to heaven, they turn againe backward & go ſtraight to hell. Men run on all the daies of their lives in the broad way that leadeth to deſtruction, and never ſo much as once make inquiry for a reſting place in heaven; but when the houre of death commeth, then they call for the guide; whereas all their lives before they have runne out of the way many thouſand miles: but then alas, it is too late, unleſſe it be the unſpeakeable mercy of God. For they have wandered ſo far aſtray, that in ſo ſhort a ſpace they cannot be able to come into the right way againe. Yet generally, this the ſtate of moſt amongſt us, whoſe ſecuritie is ſo much the more grievous and fearefull, becauſe Chriſt hath done all that heart can wiſh. There is nothing elſe required, but only that by his grace we ſhould walke in the way. There was never any that knew the ſtate of the people in theſe daies, but hee will graunt, that this is moſt true which I ſay. Beſides, as by this we are brought to a ſight of the deſperate ſecurity of this age: ſo we may further learne our owne duties. Is Chriſt gone to heaven before-hand to prepare a place for thee? then practiſe that which Paul teacheth: Have thy cõverſation in heavẽ. The words which he uſeth are very ſignificant, & the meaning of thẽ is: Ye are free-denizens of the city of God, & therefore as free-men in Gods houſe, let all your cares & duties, all your affaires & doings be in heaven. In the world if a man make purchaſe of an houſe, his heart is alwaies there: there he puls downe and builds againe: there he makes him orchards and gardens: there hee means to live and die. Chriſt Ieſus hath bought the kingdome of heavẽ for us (the moſt bleſſed purchaſe that ever was) & hath paid the deereſt price for it that ever was paid, evẽ his own precious blood: & in this city he hath prepar'd for us a dwelling place, & made us free denizẽs of it: therfore al our joy, & al our affaires ought to be there. It will be ſaid, how ſhall a man upon earth have his cõverſation in heaven? Anſ. We muſt converſe in heaven, not in body but in heart: and therefore, though our bodies bee on earth, yet our hearts joy & comfort, and al our meditation muſt be in heaven. Thus muſt we behave our ſelves like good free-men in Gods houſe. It muſt be far from vs, to have our joy and our hearts ſet on the things of this world.

Phil. 3. 20 πολίτευμα ἐν οὐρανοῖς.

Thirdly, the cõſideration of this; that Chriſt Ieſus hath prepared a place for us in heaven, and alſo hath trained the way with his owne blood, muſt make every one of us to ſtrive to enter in at the ſtraight gate, as our Saviour Chriſt counſelleth us, Luk. 13. 24. & that as wraſtlers do, which ſtrive for life and death. Within this gate is a dwelling place of happineſſe ready for us. If a man were aſſured that there were made for him a great purchaſe in Spaine or Turkey; ſo as if he would but come thither, he might enjoy it; would hee not adventure the dangers of the ſea, and of his enemies alſo, if neede were, that he might come to his owne? Well, behold Chriſt Ieſus hath made a purchaſe for us in heaven, and there is nothing required of us, but that we wil come & enjoy it. Why then ſhould men refuſe any paines, or feare in the way? nay we muſt ſtrive to get in: it may be we ſhal be pinched in the entrãce, for the gate is ſtrait and low; we muſt be faine to leave our wealth behind us, & the pleaſures of this life; & enter we muſt, though we ſhould be conſtrained to leave our fleſh behind us, for the purchaſe that is made is worth ten thouſand worlds. And beſides, if we loſe it by fainting in the way our purchaſe ſhall be the blacknes of darknes for ever with the divel & al his angels; who therfore would not ſtrive, though he loſt his life in the gate? The urging of this point is needfull in theſe daies. There is ſtriving enough for worldly preferment, but a man almoſt muſt goe alone in the ſtraight way that leadeth to heaven, he ſhall have none to beare him company. And where are they that ſtrive to enter? where is the violence offered to the kingdome of heaven? where be the violent which ſhould take it to themſelves, as in the daies of Iohn Baptiſt? *Matth.*11.12.

Fourthly, if Chriſt have prepared a place for us in heaven, then wee are in this world as pilgrims & ſtrangers, and therfore muſt learne the counſell of Saint Peter: As ſtrangers and pilgrims abſtaine from fleſhly luſts, which fight againſt the ſoule. 1 Pet.2.11. Hee that doth eſteeme himſelfe as a pilgrim, is not to intangle himſelf with the affaires of this world, nor put in practeſe the behaviour thereof; but to behave himſelf as a free-man of heaven, as ſtrangers uſe to live in forraine countries, according to the faſhion of their owne. And therefore in thought, word, & deed, in life & converſation, he muſt ſo carry himſelfe, as thereby he may appeare to all the world of what countrey he is. An ancient divine ſpeaking of ſuch as had curled & imbroidered haire, bids them cõſider, whether they muſt go to heaven with ſuch haire or no: and whereas they adorned themſelves with winckles made of other womens haire, he askes them whether it may not bee the haire of a damned perſon or no. If it may be, he further demanded, how it may beſeeme them to weare it which profeſſe themſelves to be the ſonnes and daughters of God. The like may be ſaid of all other ſins, they that bee of Gods houſe muſt behave themſelves as free-men there. And when God hath made us free, it doth not beſeeme us to make our ſelves bond-men of ſin and Satan, and of this world.

Fiftly, ſeeing Chriſt went to heaven to prepare a place for all that beleeve in him, here is a good duty for parents. Many of them are very carefull to prefer their children to great places & noble-mens houſes, and they are not to be blamed therefore: but if they would indeede be good parents to their children, they ſhould firſt endeavour thẽſelves to get roomes for them in heaven: they that doe this, are good parents indeed. Some wil ſay, how ſhall we get this preferment for them? Anſ. God hath two houſes, his Church, and the kingdome of heaven. The Church is his houſe of grace: Heaven is his houſe of glory. Now if thou wouldeſt bring thy childe to a place in the houſe of glorie, then thou art firſt of all to get him a place in the houſe of grace: bringing him up ſo in the feare of God, that both in life and converſation hee may ſhew himſelfe to be a member of the Church: and then aſſure thy ſelfe, that after this life, hee ſhall be remooved to the ſecond houſe of God, which is the houſe of glorie, & there bee free-man for ever in the kingdome of heaven. And if thou ſhalt thus provide for thy childe, thou ſhalt not leave him as an orphane when thou dieſt, but he ſhall have God for his father, and Chriſt for his brother, and the holy Ghoſt his Comforter. And therefore firſt of all & above all, remember to make thy childe a member of Gods Church. Let the example of David excite all parents hereunto; I had rather (ſaith he) be a doore-keeper in the houſe of God, then to dwell in the tabernacle of wickednes. For a day in thy courts is better then a thouſand elſe-where, Pſal.48.10.

Laſtly, hence we may find remedy againſt the tediouſneſſe of ſickneſſe and feare of death. Thou which feareſt death remember that Chriſt is gone to heaven to prepare a place for thy body, where it muſt be glorified, and live for ever with the bleſſed Trinitie, and all the Saints and Angels, though for a while it lye dead and rot in the grave. Remember this alſo, thou which continueſt in any lingring ſickneſſe, Chriſt Ieſus hath prepared a place for thee, wherein thou ſhalt reſt in joy and bliſſe without all paine or faintneſſe.

The fourth benefit is, that Chriſt aſcended up to heaven to ſend the Comforter unto his Church. This was a ſpeciall end of his aſcenſion, as appeares by Chriſts owne words, Ioh. 16.7. It is (ſaith he) expedient that I goe away, for if I go not, the Comforter will not come: but if I depart, I will ſend him unto you. And againe, Ioh. 14.16. I will pray unto the Father, and he ſhall give you another Comforter, which ſhall abide with you for ever, even the ſpirit of truth. But ſome wil ſay, how can Chriſt ſend his ſpirit unto his Church, for the perſon ſending, & the perſon ſent are unequal, whereas all three perſons in Trinitie are equal, none greater or leſſer then another, none inferiour or ſuperiour to other. Anſw. It is true indeede: but we muſt know, that the action of ſending in the Trinitie makes not the perſons unequall, but onely ſhewes a diſtinction and order among equals. The Father ſends the Sonne, the Father and the Sonne both ſend the holy Ghoſt: yet the Father is not above the Sonne, neither the Father or the Sonne above the holy Ghoſt, but all are equall in degree, though in regard of order one is before another: and it ſtands with reaſon. For two men that are equall in degree, may upon mutuall conſent one ſend another. But it may be further demanded, how the holy Ghoſt can bee ſent which is every where? Anſ. The H. Ghoſt indeede is every where, therefore he is ſent not ſo much in regard of the preſence of his eſſẽce or ſubſtance, as of his operation whereby hee renueth and guideth the members of Chriſt.

Now then, this being ſo, here firſt wee have occaſion to conſider the miſerie of the world. When a man is troubled in his minde (as no ungodly man, but ſometime hee feeles the terrour of conſcience for his ſinnes) then hee labours to remoove it by merry company and pleaſant bookes, whereas Chriſt at his aſcenſion ſent his holy Spirit to be the comforter of his Church: and therefore when we are troubled in conſcience for our ſins, we ſhould not ſeeke eaſe by ſuch ſlender meanes, but rather ſeeke for the helpe & comfort of the H. Ghoſt, and labour to have our ſinnes waſhed away, & our hearts purified and cleanſed by the blood of Christ. As for wine, and mirth and such like meanes of comfort, neither at the day of death, nor at the day of judgement shall they stand us in stead, or be able to comfort us. Again, when crosses & calamities fall, the counsel of the minister is not sought for, but the helpe of such as are called cunning men & cunning women, that is, of charmers, inchanters, and figure-casters: a bad practice. Christ at his ascension sent his holy Spirit unto his Church and people, to be their guide & comforter in their calamities and miseries: and therfore when any man is in distresse, hee should have recourse to the right meanes of comfort; namely, the Word and Sacraments, & there he should find the assistance of the holy Ghost. Thus the Prophet Esay informeth the Iewes: When they shall say unto you: inquire at them which have a spirit of divination, & at the southsayers which whisper and murmur: Should not a people inquire at their God, from the living to the dead? To the law, and to the testimonie. Esa. 8.19. Rebecca, when the two twinnes strove in her wombe, what did shee? the text saith, she sent to aske the Lord. Yet commonly the men of these daies leave God, and seeke to the instruments of the divell. To goe yet further, God useth for sundry causes most of all to afflict his deerest children. Iudgement, saith Peter, begins at Gods house. S. Luke saith, that a certaine woman was bound of Satan eighteene yeeres, but what was shee? a daughter of Abraham, that is, a child of God. When the like condition shall befall any of us, let us remember the end why Christ ascended up to heaven: & let us pray unto God that he will give us his spirit, that thereby we may bee eased and delivered, or els inabled to persevere & continue in patience: and this is the true way and meanes to lighten & ease the burthen of al afflictions. And for this cause Paul prayeth, that the Colossians might bee strengthned with all might, through his glorious power, unto all patience and long sufferance with joyfulnes. Col. 1.11. For to whom soever God gives grace to beleeve, to them also hee gives power to suffer affliction by the inward worke of his spirit. Secondly, if Christ have sent unto his Church, the holy spirit to be our comforter, our duty is, to prepare our bodies and soules to be fit temples and houses for so worthy a guest. If a man were certified that a Prince would come to his house, hee would dresse it up, & have al things in as good order as might be: and shall we not much more endeavour to purifie & cleanse our soules and bodies from all sinne, that they may bee fit temples for the entertainement of the holy Ghost, whom Christ Iesus had sent to bee our comforter? the Shunamite was carefull to entertaine the man of God Elisha, for she said to her husband, Let us make him a little chamber I pray thee, with walls, and let us set him there a bed and a stoole, a table and a candle-sticke. 2 Kin. 4. 10. Now how much more carefull ought wee to bee to entertaine God himselfe, who is content to come and dwel with us: and therefore we must

A adorne our bodies and soules with grace, that he may lodge, and suppe, and dine with us, as he hath promised: but on the contrary, if wee defile our bodies with sin, wee banish the holy Ghost out of our hearts, and invite the divell to come & dwell with us. For the more a man defileth his body, the fitter and cleaner it is for him. And to conclude this point, let us remember that saying which is used of some, that Christ when he went hence, gave us his pawne, namely, his spirit, to assure us, that hee would come to us againe, and also hee tooke with him our pawn, namely, his flesh, to assure us further, that we should ascend up to him. Tertull.

Thus much for the benefits of Christs ascension. Now follow the duties whereunto we B are mooved, and they are two. First, wee must be here admonished, to renounce the ubiquity, and the errour of the reall & essentiall presence of the body of Christ in the Sacrament of the Lords Supper; as flatly oppugning this article of Christs ascension into heaven. For it is flat against the nature of a true body to subsist in many places at once. Secondly, as the Apostles then did, when they saw Christ ascending up into heaven, so must we do also: while he was present with them, they gave him honour, but when they saw him ascending, they adored him with far greater reverence: and so must wee now for the same cause bow the knees of our hearts unto him. Luk. 24. 42.

C Thus much of the second degree of the exaltation of Christ: Now followes the third, in these words, And sitteth at the right hand of God the Father Almightie. In the handling whereof, we are first to shew the meaning of the words: secondly, the comforts and benefits that redound to Gods Church: thirdly, the duties that we are mooved unto. For the meaning of the words: if we speake properly, God hath neither right hand nor left, neither can hee bee said to sit or stand; for God is not a body, but a spirit: the words therefore cõtaine a borrowed speech from earthly kings & potẽtates, whose manner and custome hath beene, to place such persons at their right hands, whom they purpose to advance to any speciall office or dig-D nity. So, King Salomon when his mother came to speake with him rose up from his throne, & met her, and caused a seate to be set at his owne right hand, and set her upon it, in token, no doubt, of honour which he gave unto her. To the same purpose David saith, Vpon thy right hand did stand the Queene in a vesture of gold. And the sonnes of Zebedeus made suite to Christ, that one of thẽ might sit at his right hand, and the other at his left in his kingdome. Now their request was to have the two speciall and principall dignities of his kingdome. Thus we see it is manifest, that the sitting at the right hand of an earthly Prince signifieth advancement into authority and honour: and therefore the same phrase of speech applied to Christ signifieth two things. First, his full and manifest exaltation in dignity, honor, and glorie: and 1 King 2. 19. Psal 45.9 Mark. 10. 37 in this ſenſe it is ſaid, that to him is given a name that is above all names, that at the name of Ieſus every knee ſhall bow. Phil. 2.9. Secondly, it ſignifieth his full and manifeſt exaltation into the authority and government of his kingdome, which ſpreads it ſelfe over heaven and earth: ſo David ſaith, Pſal. 110.1. The Lord ſaid vnto my Lord Sit thou at my right hand untill I make thine enemies thy footeſtoole, Which place being alleadged by S. Paul repeating the words, but changing the phraſe, is thus ſet downe: He ſhall reigne till he have put all his enemies under his feete. 1 Cor. 15. 25. And to ſpeake in briefe, the ſcope of the words is to ſhow, that Chriſt God and man after his aſcenſion is advanced to ſuch an eſtate in which he hath fulneſſe of glory, power, majeſtie, and authoritie in the preſence of his Father and all the Saints and holy Angels.

Furthermore: in the words three circumſtances muſt be obſerved. The firſt, is the place where Chriſt is thus advanced, noted in the former article. Hee aſcended in to heaven, and ſits (namely in heaven) at the right hand of God. The place then, where Chriſt Ieſus in both his natures, as he is God and alſo man, doth rule in full glory, power, & majeſtie, is heaven it ſelfe. To which effect Paul ſaith, Eph. 1.12. God raiſed Chriſt from the dead, and put him at his right hand in the heavenly places. And in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes it is ſaid, he ſits at the right hand of the majeſtie in higheſt places. Heb 1.3. This point well conſidered, ſerves to diſcover the overſight of ſundry Divines, which hold and teach, that to ſit at the right hand of God, is to bee every where in all places, and not in heaven onely, that they might hereby lay a foundation for the ubiquitie of Chriſts manhood: which nevertheleſſe the heavens muſt containe till the time that all things be reſtored. The ſecond circumſtance, is the time when Chriſt began to ſit at the right hand of God the Father, which is to be gathered by the order of the articles. For firſt, Chriſt died & was buried, then he roſe again & aſcended into heaven, & after his aſcenſion hee is ſaid to ſit at the right hand of his Father. This order is alſo noted unto us by S. Paul: Who ſhall condemne? (ſaith he) it is Chriſt which is dead, yea or rather riſen againe, who is alſo at the right hand of God. Rom. 8. 34. And S. Marke ſaith, when Chriſt was riſen againe he appeared to his diſciples, and after he had ſpoken unto them, he was received into heaven, and ſet at the right hand of God. Mar. 16. 19. But it may be demãded, how this can ſtand with truth, that Chriſt ſhould not begin to ſit at the right hand of his Father before the aſcenſion, conſidering he is one God with the Father, and therefore an abſolute and ſoveraigne King from all eternitie. Anſw. As Chriſt is God or the Word of the Father, hee is coequal and coeternal with him in the regiment of his kingdome: and hath neither beginning, middle, nor ending thereof; yet as Chriſt is God incarnate, and in one perſon God-man or Man-god, hee began after his aſcenſion and not before, to ſit at the right hand of his Father: and as Saint Peter ſaith, was made Lord; partly becauſe as hee was God, hee did then manifeſt himſelfe to bee that which indeed he was before, namely, God & Lord of heaven & earth: and partly, becauſe as he was man, hee received dominion or Lordſhip from the Father, which he had not before, & thereby was even in his manhood exalted to bee king of heavẽ & earth: and in this ſenſe Chriſt ſaith of himſelfe, All power is given to me in heaven and earth. Act. 2.36. Matt. 28. 19. The third circumſtance, is concerning the perſon at whoſe right hand Chriſt ſits, noted in the words of the article, of God the Father Almighty, whereby is ſignified, that he receives all the honour, power, and glory of his kingdome from his Father; as hee, that is ſet at the right hand of a Prince, receives the honour and authority which he hath, from the prince. Now if it bee alleadged, that by this meanes Chriſt ſhall bee inferiour to his Father, becauſe he which receiveth honour of another, is inferiour to him of whom hee receiveth it: the anſwer is, that in Chriſt we muſt conſider his perſon and his office: in reſpect of his perſon, as he is the eternall Sonne of God, he is equall to the Father, and is not here ſaid to ſit at his right hand: yet in reſpect of the office which he beares, namely, as he is a Mediatour, and as he is man, he is inferiour to the Father, and receives his kingdome from him. As he is God, he is our King and head, and hath no head more then the Father: as hee is Mediatour, he is alſo our head, yet ſo as he is under the Father as beeing his head. 1 Cor. 11. And wee muſt not thinke it ſtrange, that one and the ſame thing ſhould be both equall and inferiour to another, divers reſpects conſidered.

Now in that Chriſts placing at the right hand of his Father argues inferiority between the Father and him, hence we learne that they are deceiued which from this article gather, that in the glorification of Chriſt there is a transfuſion of the proprieties of the Godhead, as omnipotency, omnipreſence, &c. into his manhood. For this is to aboliſh all inferiority, and to make an equality betweene the creature and the Creator.

And whereas againe the word Almighty is repeated, it is done vpon ſpeciall reaſon: becauſe Chriſt ſitting at the right hand of God doth preſuppoſe omnipotencie. For in vaine were all power in heaven and earth given to him, vnleſſe he were omnipotent as the Father to execute the ſame. And therefore the ſong of the elders was on this manner: Worthy is the Lambe that was killed to receive power and riches, and wiſedome, and ſtrength, and honour, and glory, and praiſe. Rev. 5.22.

The benefits which redound unto us by Chriſts ſitting at the right hand of God are two, one concernes his prieſthood, the other his kingly office. The benefit ariſing from his prieſthood is his Interceſſion for us: for this is one of the ends why Chriſt is now exalted in glorie, and ſits at the right hand of his Father; namely, to make requeſt in the behalfe of all that come unto him, as Paul ſaith, Chriſt is riſen againe, and ſitteth at the right hand of God, and maketh requeſt for us. Rom.8. 34.

Now that we may rightly underſtand what his Interceſsion is, wee are to conſider theſe points. Firſt, to whom it is made: Secondly, in what manner: Thirdly, whether it be made by Chriſt alone or no: Fourthly, what be the fruits and benefits thereof: Fifthly, the duties whereunto wee are mooved thereby. For the firſt, Interceſsion is, to make ſute, requeſt, or intreaty in ſome ones behalfe to another: and this is done by Chriſt for us unto God, as Paul ſaith, There is one God, and one Mediator betweene God and Man, which is the Man Chriſt Ieſus. 1 Tim. 2. 5. Here at the very firſt ariſeth a difficulty: for in every interceſsion there bee three parties: the perſon offended; the perſon offending; the interceſſor, diſtinct from them both. Now if Chriſt the Son of God, make interceſsion to God for man, then he maketh interceſsion to himſelfe, becauſe hee is true God; which cannot be: how then ſhall Chriſt be a Mediator? Anſ. This point hath ſo troubled the Church of Rome, that for the reſolving of it, they have deviſed an errour, avouching that Chriſt is Mediatour onely as hee is man, not as hee is God, which is untrue. For as both natures doe concurre in the worke of ſatisfaction, ſo likewiſe doe they both concurre in the worke of interceſsion: and therefore a more meete and convenient anſwer is this; Chriſt Ieſus God-Man in both natures is directly our Mediatour to the firſt perſon the Father, as S. John ſaith, If any man ſinne, we have an Advocate with the Father, Ieſus Chriſt the juſt. 1 Ioh. 2. 1. And thus wee have three perſons in the worke of interceſsion really diſtinguiſhed. The party offended is God the Father; the party offending is man; and thirdly, the interceſſour diſtinct from them both, is Chriſt the ſecond perſon in Trinity. For howſoever in Godhead He and the Father be One, yet in perſon they are really diſtinguiſhed, and he as it were in the middle betweene the Father and us: for the Father is God and not Man: we that beleeve in Chriſt are men not God: Chriſt himſelfe both Man and God. It may be further replyed, that this anſwer will not ſtand, becauſe not onely the Father is offended, but alſo the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt: and therefore there muſt be a Mediator to them alſo. Anſ. The interceſsion of Chriſt is directed to the Father the firſt perſon immediately: now the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt have all one indiviſible eſſence, and by conſequent one and the ſame will; whereupon the Father being appeaſed by Chriſts interceſsion, the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt are alſo appeaſed with him and in him. Thus then interceſsion is made to the whole Trinity, but yet immediately and directly to the firſt perſon, and in him to the reſt.

The ſecond point to bee conſidered, is the manner of his interceſsion unto his Father. We A muſt not imagine, that Chriſt now in heaven kneeles downe on his knees, and utters words, and puts up a ſupplication for all the faithfull to God the Father: for that is not beſeeming the Majeſty of him that ſits at the right hand of God. But the manner of his interceſsion is thus to be conceived: When one is to ſpeake to an earthly Prince in the behalfe of another; firſt of all he muſt come into the preſence of the King: and ſecondly, make his requeſt: and both theſe, Chriſt performeth for us unto God. For the firſt, after his aſcenſion he entred into heaven, where hee did preſent unto his Father, firſt of all his owne perſon in two natures; ſecondly, the invaluable merits B of his death and paſſion, in which he was well pleaſed. And wee muſt further underſtand, that as on the croſſe hee ſtood in our roome, ſo in heaven he now appeares as a publike perſon in our ſtead, repreſenting all the elect that ſhall beleeve in him, as the holy Ghoſt ſaith, Chriſt Ieſus aſcended up into heaven, to appeare in the ſight of God for us. Heb. 9. 24. And for the ſecond, Chriſt makes requeſt for us, in that he willeth according to both his natures, and deſireth as hee is man, that the Father would accept his ſatisfaction in the behalfe of all that are given unto him. And that he makes requeſt on this manner, I proove it thus: Looke what was his requeſt in our behalfe when hee was here upon earth, the ſame for ſubſtance it continues ſtill in heaven: but here on earth the ſubſtance of C his requeſt was, that he willed and deſired that his Father would be well pleaſed with us for his merits, as appeares by his prayer in Saint John, Father, I will that thoſe which thou haſt given me be with me even where I am, that they may behold my glory which thou haſt given mee: for thou lovedſt me before the foundation of the world. Cap. 17. 24. Therefore he ſtill continues to make requeſt for us, by willing and deſiring that his Father would accept his merits in our behalfe. If it be alleadged, that Chriſt in this ſolemne prayer uſed ſpeech and proſtration of his body, the anſwer is, that theſe actions were no eſſentiall parts of his prayer. The proſtrating of his body ſerved onely as a token of ſubmiſſion to D God, as Chriſt was a creature: and the ſpeech which he uſed, ſerved onely to utter and expreſſe his requeſt. Furthermore, a difference here muſt be marked betweene Chriſts paſſion and his interceſsion. The paſſion ſerves for the working and cauſing of a ſatisfaction to Gods juſtice for us; and it is, as it were, the tempering of the plaiſter: the interceſsion goes further: for it applyes the ſatisfaction made, and layes the ſalve to the very ſore. And therefore Chriſt makes requeſt not onely for the elect generally, but for particular men, as Paul, Iames, John, and that particularly, as hee teſtifieth of himſelfe, ſaying, I have prayed for thee Peter, that thy faith faile not. Luk. 22. 32. If any ſhall ſay, that Chriſts willing and deſiring of a thing, cannot bee a requeſt or interceſsion, the anſwer is, that in vertue and efficacy it countervailes all the prayers in the world. For whatſoever Chriſt willeth, the ſame alſo the Father being well pleaſed with him, willeth; and therefore whatſoever Chriſt as a Mediatour willeth for us at the hands of his Father, in effect or ſubſtance is a requeſt or prayer.

The third point is, that Chriſt alone, and none with him makes interceſſion for us. And this I proove by induction of particulars. Firſt of all, this office appertaines not to the angels: they are indeed miniſtring ſpirits for the good of Gods choſen; they rejoyce when a ſinner is converted; and when he dyeth, they are ready to carry his ſoule into Abrahams boſome; and God otherwhiles uſeth them as meſſengers to Luk. 1. 13. reveale his will: thus the Angel Gabriel brings a meſſage to Zachary the Prieſt, that God had heard his prayer: but it is not once ſaid in all the Scriptures, that they make interceſſion to God for us. As for the Saints departed, they cannot make interceſſion for us, becauſe they know not our particular eſtates here on earth, neither can they heare our requeſts. And therfore if we ſhould pray to them to pray for us, we ſhould ſubſtitute them iuto the roome of God, becauſe wee aſcribe that to them, which is proper to him, namely, the ſearching of the heart, and the knowledge of all things done upon earth; though withall wee ſhould ſay, that they doe this not by themſelves, but of God. As for the faithfull here on earth, indeed they have warrant, yea Commandement to pray one for another: yet can they not make interceſſion for us. For firſt, hee that makes interceſſion muſt bring ſomething of his owne, that may be of value and price with God to procure the grant of his requeſt: ſecondly, he muſt doe it in his owne name: but the faithfull on earth make requeſt to God one for another, not in their owne names, nor for their owne merits, but in the name, and for the merits of Chriſt. It is a prerogative belonging to Chriſt alone to make a requeſt in his owne name, and for his owne merits: we therfore conclude, that the worke of interceſſion is the ſole worke of Chriſt, God and man, not belonging to any creature beſide in heaven or in earth. And whereas the Papiſts cannot content themſelves with his interceſſion alone, as being moſt ſufficient: it argues plainely, that they doubt either of his power, or of his will:
Iam. 1. 6. whereupon their prayers turne to ſinne.

The fruits and benefits of Chriſts interceſſion are theſe. Firſt, by meanes of it wee are aſſured, that thoſe which are repentant ſinners ſhall ſtand and appeare righteous before God for ever: at what time ſoever Chriſt, being now in heaven, and there preſenting himſelfe and his merits before his Father, ſhewes himſelfe deſirous and willing, and they whoſoever they are being ſinners, ſhould be accepted of God for the ſame, even then immediately at that very inſtant this his will is done, and they are accepted as righteous before God indeed. When a man lookes upon things directly through the ayre, they appeare in their proper formes and colours as they are, but if they be looked upon thorow a greene glaſſe, they all appeare greene: ſo likewiſe if God behold us as we are in our ſelves, we appeare as vile and damnable ſinners: but if he looke upon us as wee are preſented before his throne in heaven, in the perſon of our Mediator Chriſt Ieſus, willing that we ſhould be approoved for his merits: then we appeare without all ſpot and wrinkle before him. And this is the vſe Paul makes hereof: It is God (ſaith he) that Rom. 8. 34. juſtifieth: and the reaſon is rendred: for it is Chriſt that is dead, yea or rather which is riſen againe, who is alſo at the right hand of God, and makes requeſt for us.

Secondly, Chriſts interceſſion ſerves to preſerve all repentant ſinners in the eſtate of grace: that being once juſtified and ſanctified, they may ſo continue to the end. For when any ſervant of God is overtaken by the corruption of his owne nature, and fals into any particular ſinne, then Chriſts interceſſion is made as a bleſſed Hand to apply the ſalve of his death to that particular ſore. For he continually appeares before God, and ſhewes himſelfe to be willing that God the Father ſhould accept his one onely ſacrifice for the daily and particular ſinnes of this or that particular man: and this is done, that a man being juſtified before God, may not fall away quite from grace, but for every particular ſinne may bee humbled, and receive pardon. If this were not ſo, our eſtate ſhould be moſt miſerable, conſidering that for every ſinne committed by us after our repentance, we deſerve to be caſt out of the favour of God.

Thirdly, Chriſts interceſſion ſerveth to make our good workes acceptable to God. For even in the beſt workes that a man can doe, there are two wants. Firſt, they are good onely in part: Secondly, they are mingled with ſinne. For as a man is partly ſpirit or grace, and partly fleſh; ſo are his workes partly gracious, and partly fleſhly. And becauſe grace is onely begun in this life, therefore all the workes of grace in this life are ſinfull and imperfect. Now by Chriſts interceſſion his ſatisfaction is applyed to our perſons, and by conſequent the defect of our workes is covered and remooved, and they are approoved of God the Father. In a viſion S. John ſaw an An- Rev. 8. 3. gel, ſtanding before the Altar with a golden cenſer full of ſweet odours to offer up with the prayers of the Saints upon the ſame. And this ſignifies, that Chriſt preſents our workes before the throne of God, and by his interceſſion ſanctifies them, that they may be acceptable to God. And therefore wee muſt remember that when wee doe any thing that is accepted of God, it is not for our ſakes, but by reaſon of the value and vigour of Chriſt his merit.

Fourthly, the interceſſion of Chriſt made in heaven, breedeth and cauſeth in the hearts of men upon earth that beleeve another interceſsion of the ſpirit, as S. Paul ſaith, He giveth us his ſpirit, which helpeth our infirmities, and maketh requeſt for us with ſighes, which cannot be expreſſed, but he which ſearcheth the heart, knoweth what is the meaning of the ſpirit, for he maketh requeſt for the Saints, according to the will of God. Rom.8. 26.

Now the ſpirit is ſaid to make requeſt, in that it ſtirres and mooves every contrite heart to pray with ſighes and groanes unſpeakable to God for things needfull: and this grace is a fruit derived from the interceſsion of Chriſt in heaven by the operation of the ſpirit. For as the Sunne though the body of it abide in the heavens, yet the beames of it deſcend to us that are on the earth: So the interceſsion of Chriſt made in heaven is tyed as it were to his perſon alone, yet the groanes and deſires of the touched heart, as the beames thereof, are here on earth among the faithfull. And therefore if we deſire to know whether Chriſt make interceſsion for us or no, wee need not to aſcend up into the heavens to learne the truth: but we muſt deſcend into our owne hearts and looke whether Chriſt have given us his ſpirit, which makes us cry unto God, and make requeſt to him with groanes and ſighes that cannot be expreſſed: and if we finde this in our hearts, it is an evident and infallible ſigne, that Chriſt continually makes interceſsion for us in heaven. He that would know whether the Sun ſhine in the Firmament, muſt not climbe up into the cloudes to looke, but ſearch for the beames thereof upon the earth: which when he ſees, he may conclude, that the Sunne ſhines in the Firmament. And if wee would know whether Chriſt in heaven makes interceſsion for us, let us ranſacke our owne conſciences, and there make ſearch whether wee feele the ſpirit of Chriſt crying in us, Abba, Father. As for thoſe that never feele this worke of Gods ſpirit in them, their caſe is miſerable, whatſoever they be. For Chriſt as yet makes no interceſsion for them, conſidering theſe two alwayes goe together, his interceſsion in heaven, and the work of his ſpirit in the hearts of men, mooving them to bewaile their owne ſinnes with ſighes and groanes that cannot be expreſſed, and to cry, and to pray unto God for grace: and therefore all ſuch, whether they be yong or old, that never could pray, but mumble up a few words for faſhions ſake, cannot aſſure themſelves to have any part in Chriſts interceſsion in heaven.

The duties to be learned hence are theſe. Firſt, whereas Chriſt makes interceſsion for us, it teacheth all men to be moſt carefull to love and like this bleſſed Mediator, and to be ready and willing to become his ſervants and Diſciples, and that not for forme and faſhion ſake onely, but in all truth and ſincerity of heart. For he aſcended to heaven, and there ſits at the right hand of his Father to make requeſt for us, that we might be delivered from hell, and come to eternall life. Wicked Haman procured letters from Ahaſhueroſh, for the deſtruction of all the Iewes, men, women, and children in his dominions: this done, Heſter the Queene makes requeſt to the King that her people might be ſaved, and the letters of Haman revoked; ſhe obtaines her requeſt, and freedome was given, and contrary letters of joyfull deliverance were ſent in poſt-haſt to all Provinces where the Iewes were. Whereupon aroſe a wonderfull joy and gladneſſe among the Iewes, and it is ſaid, that thereupon many of the people of the land became Iewes. Heſt.8. 17.
Well now, behold a greater matter among us then this: for there is the hand-writing of condemnation, the law; and therein the ſentence of a double death, of body and ſoule, and Satan as wicked Haman accuſeth us, and ſeekes by all meanes our condemnation, but yet behold, not any earthly Heſter, but Chriſt Ieſus the Sonne of God is come downe from heaven, and hath taken away this hand-writing of condemnation, and cancelled it upon the croſſe, and is now aſcended into heaven, and there ſits at the right hand of his Father, and makes requeſt for us: and in him his Father is well pleaſed, and yeeldeth to his requeſt in our behalfe. Now then what muſt we doe in this caſe? Surely, looke as the Perſians became Iewes when they heard of their ſafety: ſo we in life and converſation muſt become Chriſtians, turne to Chriſt, imbrace his doctrine, and practiſe the ſame unfainedly. And we muſt not content our ſelves with a formall profeſſion of religion, but ſearch our owne hearts, and flye unto Chriſt for the pardon of our ſins, and that earneſtly, as for life and death, as the theefe doth at the barre, when the Iudge is giving ſentence againſt him. When we ſhall thus humble our ſelves, then Chriſt Ieſus that ſits at the right hand of God will pleade our cauſe, and be our atturney unto his Father, and his Father againe will accept of his requeſt in our behalfe. Then ſhall we of Perſians become Iewes, and of the children of this world become the ſonnes of God. Secondly, when we pray to God, we muſt not doe as the blind world doth, as it were, ruſh upon God in praying to him without conſideration had to the Mediatour betweene us and him, but wee alwayes muſt direct our prayers to God in the name of Chriſt, for hee is advanced to power and glory in heaven, that hee might bee a fit patrone for us, who might preferre and preſent our prayers to God the Father, that thereby they might be accepted, and wee might obtaine our requeſt. So likewiſe wee muſt give thankes to God in the name of Chriſt: for in him and for his ſake God doth beſtow on us his bleſſings. Iohn 16. 26.

Thus much of Chriſts interceſsion: the other benefit which concernes Chriſts Kingly office, is, that he ſits at the right hand of his Father for the adminiſtration of that ſpeciall Kingdome which is committed to him. I ſay ſpeciall, becauſe he is our King, not onely by right of creation governing all things created, together with the Father and the holy Ghost, but also more specially by the right of redemption in respect of another Kingdome, not of this world, but eternall and spirituall, respecting the very conscience of man. In the administration whereof he hath absolute power to command and forbid, to condemne and absolve, and therefore hath the keyes of heaven and hell to open and shut: which power no creature beside, no not the Angels in heaven can have. For the better understanding of this which I say, we are to consider, first, the dealing of Christ toward his owne Church; secondly, his dealing in respect of his enemies. And his dealing toward his owne Church stands in foure things. The first, is the collecting or gathering of it: and this is a speciall end of his sitting at the right hand of his Father. Christ said to his Disciples, I have chosen you out of this world: and the same may truly be said of all the Elect, that Christ in his good time wil gather them all to himselfe, that they may be a peculiar people to God. And this action of his in collecting the Church, is nothing else but a translation of those whom he hath ordained to life everlasting out of the Kingdome of darknesse, in which they have served sin and Satan, into his owne kingdome of grace, that they may be ruled and guided by him eternally. And this hee doth two waies: first, by preaching of the Word, for it is a powerfull outward meanes, whereby he singleth & sorteth his owne servants from the blind and wicked world, as Paul saith, He gave some to be Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers, for the gathering together of the Saints. And hence we learne two things. The first, that every Minister of Gods Word, and every one that intendeth to take upon him that calling, must propound unto himselfe principally this end, to single out man from man, and gather out of this world such as belong to the Church of Christ: and as Ieremy saith, to separate the precious from the vile. The second: that all those which will be good hearers of Gods Word, must shew themselves so farre forth conformable unto it, that it may gather them out of the world, and that it may worke a change in them, and make them the servants of Christ: and if the preaching of the Word doe not worke this good in our hearts, then the end will bee a separation from the presence of God. Christ when he came neere Ierusalem, and considered their rebellion whereby they refused to be gathered unto him, wept over it, and said, O Ierusalem, Ierusalem, thou which stonest the Prophets, and killest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together as the henne gathereth her chickens under her wings, and thou wouldst not! And by this he teacheth, that if the preaching of the Word turne not us to Christ, it turnes to our destruction.

The other meanes of gathering the Church, and that more principall, is the inward operation of the spirit, whereby the mind is inlightned, the heart is mollified, and the whole man is converted to God. And this ordinarily is joyned with the Ministery or preaching of the Word, as appeares by the example of Lydia. S. Luke saith, God opened her heart to bee attentive to the doctrine of the Apostles. And by the example of Paul, when Christ saith, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? at this very speech hee is converted, and saith, Who art thou, Lord? what wilt thou that I doe? And this is manifest also by experience. There is nothing in the world more contrary to the nature of man, then the preaching of the Word: for it is the wisedome of God, to which the flesh is enmity. Here then it may be demanded, how it can bee in force to turne any man to God. An. The Word preached is the scepter of Christs Kingdome; which against the nature of man, by the operation of the holy Ghost joyned therewith, doth bend and bow the heart, will, and affections of man to the will of Christ.

Act.9.4. Ver.5,6.

The second worke of Christ is, after the Church is gathered, to guide it in the way to life everlasting. Hee is the Shepheard of his Church, which guideth his flocke in and out, and therefore Paul saith, They that are Christs, are guided by his spirit. And by Isaiah the Lord saith, those his servants which are turned from idolatry, he will guide in the way, and their eares shall heare a voyce behind them, saying, This is the way walke in it, when thou turnest to the right hand and to the left. Which voyce is nothing else but the voyce of the holy Ghost in the mouth of the Ministers, directing them in the waies of God. The children of Israel were travelling from Egypt to the land of Canaan full forty yeares, whereas they might have gone the journey in forty dayes. Their way was thorow the wildernesse of Arabia: their guides were a pillar of cloud by day, and a pillar of fire by night: the manner of their journey was this: when the pillar mooved, they mooved: when the pillar stood still, they stood still: and so long as the pillar either mooved or stood still, they likewise mooved or stood still. And by all this a further matter, namely, the regiment of Christ over his Church, was signified. Every one of us are as passengers and travellers, not to any earthly Canaan, but to the heavenly Ierusalem: and in this journey wee are to passe thorow the wild and desert wildernesse of this world: our guide is Christ himselfe, figured by the pillar of fire and the cloud: because by his Word and Spirit he sheweth us how farre we may goe in every action, and where we must stand, and he goes before us as our guide to life everlasting.

Isai.45.

The third worke of Christ is, to exercise his Church unto spirituall obedience by manifold troubles, crosses, temptations and afflictions in this world, as earthly Kings use to traine and exercise their subjects. When our Saviour Christ was with his Disciples in a ship, there arose a great tempest upon the Sea, so as the ship was almost covered with waves; but hee was asleepe: and his disciples came and awoke him, saying, Save us master, we perish. Behold here a lively picture of the dealing of Christ with his servants in this life. His manner is to place them upon the sea of this world, and to raise up against them bleake stormes and flaes of contrary winds by their enemies, the flesh, the divell, the world. And further, in the middest of all these dangers he for his owne part maketh as though hee lay asleepe for a time, that he may the better make triall of their patience, faith, and obedience. And the ends for which he useth this spirituall exercise are these. The first, to make all his subjects to humble themselves, and as it were to goe crooked and buckle under their offences committed against his majesty in times past. Thus Iob after the Lord had long afflicted him, and laid his hand sore upon him, saith, Behold I am vile: and againe, I abhor my selfe and repent in dust and ashes. In the same manner we being his subjects and people, must looke to bee exercised with temptations and afflictions which shall make us bend and bow for our sinnes past, as the old man goeth crooked and doubles to the earth by reason of age. The second, is to prevent sinnes in the time to come. A Father when he sees his child too bold and venturous about fire and water, takes it and holds it over the fire or over the water, as though he would burne or drowne it, whereas his purpose indeed is nothing else but to prevent danger in time to come: In like manner Christs subjects are bold to sinne by nature, and therefore to prevent a mischiefe, hee doth exercise them with affliction, and seemes for a season as though hee would quite forsake his Church; but his meaning is onely to prevent offences in time to come. The third end is, to continue his subjects in obedience unto his commandements: so the Lord saith, when hee would bring his Church from idolatry; Behold, I will stop thy way with thornes, and make an hedge, that shee shall not finde her pathes. The holy Ghost here borrowes a comparison from beasts, which going in the way, see greene pastures, and desire to enter in, and therefore goe to the hedge, but feeling the sharpnesse of the thornes dare not adventure to goe in: So Gods people like unto wild beasts in respect of sin, viewing the greene pastures of this world, which are the pleasures thereof, are greatly affected therwith: and if it were not for sharpnesse of crosses and temptations, which are Gods spirituall hedge by which hee keepeth them in, they would range out of the way, and rush into sinne, as the horse into the battell.

was

The fourth and last worke of Christ in respect of his Church is, that he sits at the right hand of his Father to defend the same against the rage of all enemies whatsoever they are: & this he doth two waies. First, by giving to his servants sufficient strength to beare all the assaults of their enemies, the world, the flesh, and the divell: For Paul saith, those to whom the Lord hath given the gift of faith, to them also he hath given this gift to suffer afflictions. And the same Apostle also prayeth for the Colossians, that they may be strengthned with all might through his glorious power unto all patience and long suffering with joyfulnesse. The evidence hereof wee may more plainely see in the most constant deaths of the Martyrs of Christ, recorded both in the Word of God, and in the Church-histories. It is wonderfull to see their courage and constancy. For at such times as they have beene brought to execution, they refused to be bound or chained, willingly suffering most cruell torments, without shrinking or feare; such courage and strength the Lord gave them to withstand the violent rage of all their adversaries.

Secondly, hee defends his Church by limiting the power and rage of all enemies. And hence it is, that although the power of the Church of God on earth bee weake and slender in it selfe, and contrariwise the power of the divell exceeding great, yet can hee not so much as touch the people of God. And hee more prevailes by inward suggestions and temptations then by outward violence. And if it were not that the power of Christ doth bridle his rage, there could bee no aboad for the Church of Christ in this world.

Thus we have seene what are the workes of Christ in governing his Church: and we for our parts that professe our selves to bee members thereof, must shew our selves to be so indeed, by an experience of these workes of his in our owne hearts. And we must suffer him to gather us under his owne wing, and to guide us by his Word and Spirit; and we are to acquaint our selves with those spirituall exercises, whereby his good pleasure is to nurture us to all obedience. Lastly, we must depend on his ayde and protection in all estates. And seeing wee in this land have had peace and rest with the Gospel of Christ among us a long time, by Gods especiall goodnesse, we must now after these dayes of peace looke for dayes of tribulation: we must not imagine that our ease and liberty will continue alwayes. For looke as the day and night doe one follow another: so likewise in the administration of the Church hereupon earth, Christ suffereth a continuall intercourse between peace and persecution. Thus he hath done from the beginning hitherto, and we may resolve our selves, that so it will continue til the end: & therfore it shall be good for us in these daies of peace, to prepare our selves for troubles & afflictions: and when troubles come, wee must still remember the fourth worke of Christ in the government of his Church, namely, that in all dangers hee will defend us against the rage of our enemies, as well by giving us power and strength to beare with patience and joy whatsoever shall be laid upon us, as also bridle the rage of the world, the flesh, and the divell, so as they shall not bee able to exercise their power and malice to the full against us.

Thus much of the dealing of Christ towards his owne Church and people. Now followeth the second point, namely, his dealing towards his enemies; and here by enemies I understand all creatures, but especially men, which as they are by nature enemies to Christ and his Kingdome, so they persevere in the same enmity unto the end. Now his dealing towards them is, in his good time to worke their confusion, as he himselfe saith. Luk 19. 27. These mine enemies that would not that I should reigne over them, bring them hither, and slay them before me. And David saith, Psal. 2. 9. & 110. 1. the Lord will bruise his enemies with a rod of yron, and breake them in pieces like a potters vessell. And againe, I sh 10. 24. I will make thine enemies thy foot-stoole. As Iosuah dealt with the five Kings that were hid in the cave; hee first makes a slaughter of their armies; then he brings them forth and makes the people to set their feete on their neckes, and to hang them on five trees? So Christ deales with his enemies; he treads them under his feete, and maketh a slaughter not so much of their bodies as of their soules. And this the Church of God finds to be true by experience, as well as it finds the love of Christ towards it selfe.

Now he confounds his enemies two waies: The first, is by hardnesse of heart, which ariseth when God withdraweth his grace from man, and leaveth him to himselfe, so as he goeth on forward from sinne to sinne, and never repenteth to the last gaspe. And wee must esteeme of it as a most fearefull and terrible judgement of God: for when the heart is possessed therewith, it becomes so flinty and rebellious, that a man will never relent or turne to God. This is manifest in Pharaoh, for though God sent most grievous plagues both upon him and al the land of Egypt, yet would hee not submit himselfe, save onely for a fit, while the hand of God was upon him: for after, hee returned to the former obstinacy, in which hee continued till hee was drowned in the Sea. And this judgement of God is the more fearefull, because when a man is in the middest of all his misery, he feeles no misery. And as in some kind of sickenesse a man may dye languishing: so where hardnesse of heart reignes wholly and finally, a man may descend to the pit of hell triumphing and rejoycing. And to come neere to our selves, it is to bee feared lest this Iudgement of all Iudgements be among us in these our dayes. For where is any turning to God by repentance? Still men goe forward in sinne without remorse. Wee have had the Word preached among us a long time, but it taketh no place in mens hearts. They are not softned with the Hammer of Gods Word: nay, they are like the smiths stithy or anvill, which the more it is beate with the hammer, the harder it is. But in the feare of God, let us seeke to be changed, and take heed: the deceitfulnesse of sinne is wonderfull. Let us not bee carried away with an overweening

A of our selves; a man may have good gifts of God, as the gift of knowledge, the gift of prophecy, the gift of conceiving a prayer (I say not of praying truly:) and hereupon thinke himselfe in good case; and yet for all this have nothing but an impenitent and flinty heart. For this cause it standeth every man upon to looke unto it, lest this Iudgement of God take hold on him. And that wee may avoyde the same, we must labour for two things: I. to feele the heavy burden of our sinnes, and to be touched in conscience for them, even as wee are troubled in our bodies with the aches and paines thereof: this is a token of grace. II. We must labour to feele in our soules the want
B of Christ: we say indeed that we feele it, but it is a very great matter to have an heart that doth open it selfe, and as it were gape after Christ, as the dry and thirsty land where no water is. Though wee have knowledge and learning never so much, and many other gifts of God, yet if we have not broken hearts that feele the burden of our sinnes, and the want of Christ, and that wee stand in neede of every drop of his blood for the washing away of all these our sinnes, our case is miserable. And the rather we must prevent this hardnesse of heart, because Christ Iesus in heaven sits at the right hand of his Father in full power and authority, to kill and confound all those that bee his
C enemies, and will not submit themselves to beare his yoake.

The second way is, by finall desperation, I say, finall, because all kinde of desperation is not evill. For when a man despaireth of himselfe and of his owne power in the matter of his salvation, it tends to his eternall comfort. But finall desperation is, when a man utterly despaires of pardon of his owne sinnes, and of life everlasting. Examples hereof we have in Saul that slew himselfe, and in Achitophel and Iudas, that hanged themselves. This sinne is caused thus. So many sinnes as a man committeth without repentance, so many most bloody wounds he giveth unto his own soule: and either in death or life God makes him feele the smart, and the huge waite of them
D all: whereby the soule sinkes downe to the gulfe of despaire without recovery. God said to Cain: if thou doe amisse, sinne lieth at the doore. Where hee useth a borrowed speech from wild beasts, who so long as they are sleeping stirre not; but being awaked, they flie in a mans face, and rend out his throat. In like manner the sinnes which thou committest, lye at the doore of thine heart, though thou feele them not: and if thou do not prevent the danger by speedy repentance, God will make thee to feele them once before thou die, and raise up such terrours in thy conscience, that thou shalt thinke thy selfe to bee in hell before thou art in hell: and therefore it is good for every man to take heede how hee continues an enemy to Christ. The best course is to turne betime from our sinnes, and become the friends Gen. 4. 7.

of Chriſt, that ſo wee may eſcape theſe fearefull judgements.

And whereas Chriſt in this manner governs all things in heaven and earth, we are bound to performe unto him three duties; reverence, obedience, thankfulnes. For the firſt, Paul ſaith, Phil. 2. 10. God hath exalted him and given him a name above al names, that at the name of Ieſus (which name is his exaltation in heaven in full power and glory) ſhould every knee bow. We dare not ſo much as ſpeake of an earthly king unreverently: what reverence then doe wee owe unto Chriſt the King of heaven and earth? Davids heart was touched in that he had cut off but the lap of Sauls garment, when hee might have ſlaine him, becauſe he was the Lords annointed, 1 Sam. 24. 6. oh then, how much more ought our hearts to be touched, if we ſhall in the leaſt meaſure diſhonour Chriſt Ieſus our Lord and King? Secondly, we are here taught to performe obedience unto him, and doe him all the homage we can. The maſter of his family in all his lawful commandements muſt be obeyed: now the Church of Chriſt is a family, & we are members thereof; therefore we muſt yeeld obedience to him in all things: for all his commandements are juſt. When Saul was choſen king over Iſrael, certaine men which feared God, whoſe hearts God had touched, followed him to Gibea, and brought him preſents; but the wicked deſpiſed him, 1 Sam. 10. 26, 27. the ſame is much more to be verified in us toward Chriſt our Lord. We muſt have our harts touched with deſire to performe obedience unto him: if not, we are men of Belial that deſpiſe him. If this obedience were put in practiſe, the Goſpel would have better ſucceſſe in the hearts of the people, and the Lords Sabbath would be better kept, and men would beare greater love both to God and to their neighbours then now they doe. The third dutie which we owe unto him is thankefulnes, for the endles care which he ſhews in the governing and preſerving of us. When David waxed old, and had made Salomon his ſonne king in his ſtead, all the people ſhouted & cried, God ſave king Salomon, God ſave king Salomon, ſo as the earth rang againe, 1 Kin. 1. 39, 40. Shall the people of Iſrael thus rejoyce at the crowning of Salomon, and ſhall not we much more rejoyce when as Chriſt Ieſus is placed in heaven at the right hand of his Father, and hath the everlaſting ſcepter of his kingdome put into his hand? And we are to ſhew this thankefulnes unto him by doing any thing in this world that may tend to his honour & glory, though it be with the adventure of our lives. When David deſired to drinke of the water of the well of Bethlehē, three of his mightie men went & brake into the hoaſt of the Philiſtims, & brought him water, 2 Sam. 23. 15, 16. Thus they ventured their lives for Davids ſake: and ſhall not we much more willingly venture our lives to do Chriſt ſervice in token of thankfulnes for his continuall preſerving of us?

Thus much of the higheſt degree of Chriſts exaltation in his kingdome. Now followes the laſt point to be beleeved concerning Chriſt, in theſe words, From thence hee ſhall come to judge the quicke and the dead. And they containe a proofe or a particular declaration of the former article. For as on earth thoſe that are ſet at the right hand of Kings do execute juſtice in courts or aſſiſes for the maintenance of the ſtate and peace of the kingdome: ſo Chriſt Ieſus ſitting at the right hand of his Father, that is, being made ſoveraigne Lord of al things both in heaven and earth, is to hold a court of aſſiſe, in which he ſhall come to judge both the quicke and the dead.

Now in handling the laſt judgement, we are to conſider theſe points: I. whether there ſhall be a judgement or not: II. the time of it: III. the ſignes thereof. IV. the manner of it. V. the uſe which is to be made thereof. Of theſe in order. For the firſt point, whether there ſhal be a judgement or not? the queſtiō is needfull: for as S. Peter ſaith, 2 Pet. 3. 3. There ſhall come in the laſt daies mockers, which ſhall walke after their luſts, and ſay, Where is the promiſe of his comming? which daies are now. The anſwer to this queſtiō is ſet down in this article, in which we profeſſe that the comming of Chriſt to the laſt judgement, is a point of religion ſpecially to be held and avouched. The reaſons to proove it, are principally two; firſt, the teſtimonie of God himſelfe in the bookes of the old and new Teſtament, which affoord unto us plentifull proofes touching the laſt judgement, ſo as he which will but lightly reade the ſame, ſhall not need to doubt thereof. The ſecond reaſon is taken from the juſtice and goodnes of God, the propertie whereof is to puniſh wicked & ungodly men, and to honour and reward the godly: but in this world the godly man is moſt of all in miſerie, (for judgement beginneth at Gods houſe) and the ungodly have their hearts eaſe. Wicked Dives had the world at will, but poore Lazarus is hunger-bitten, full of ſores, and miſerable every way. This being ſo, it remaineth that after this life, there muſt needs be a judgement and a ſecond comming of Chriſt, when the godly muſt receive fulneſſe of joy and glory and the ungodly fulneſſe of woe and miſerie. This ſecond reaſon may ſtop the mouthes of all gaine-ſayers in the world whatſoever. But it may be objected, that the whole world ſtands either of beleevers or unbeleevers, and that there is no laſt judgement for either of theſe: for the beeleever, as Chriſt ſaith, Ioh. 5. 24. hath everlaſting life, and ſhall not come into judgement: and the unbeleever is condemned already, Iohn 3. 18. and therefore needeth no further judgement. Anſwer. Where it is ſaid, he that beleeveth ſhal not come into judgment, it muſt be underſtood of the judgement of condemnation, and not of the judgement of abſolution; and he that beleeves not, is condemned already in effect and ſubſtance three waies: I. In the counſell of God, who did fore-ſee and appoint his condemnation, as it is a puniſhment of ſin, and execution of his juſtice. II. In the word of God, where he hath his condemnation ſet downe. III. He is condemned in his owne conſcience: for every ungodly mans conſcience is a judge unto himſelfe, which doth every houre condemne him, and it is a forerunner of the laſt judgement. And notwithſtanding all this, there may remaine a ſecond judgement, which is a manifeſtation and finiſhing of that which was begun in the world: and therefore the meaning of that place is this, he that beleeveth not is already judged in part, but ſo as the full manifeſtation thereof, ſhall bee at the ſecond comming of Chriſt.

The ſecond circumſtance, is the time of this judgement: in handling whereof, firſt let us ſee what is the judgement of men; ſecondly, what is the truth. For the firſt, two opinions touching this time take place. The firſt is, that the ſecond comming of Chriſt ſhal be about ſixe thouſand yeeres from the beginning of the world, & for the Elects ſake ſome of theſe daies muſt be ſhortned: and now ſince the beginning of the world, are paſſed five thouſand and almoſt ſixe hundred yeeres, ſo as there remaines but ſome foure hundred. The grounds of this opinion are theſe: Firſt, the teſtimonie of Elias, Two thouſand yeeres before the law: two thouſand yeeres under the law: and two thouſand yeeres under Chriſt. And for the Elects ſake, ſome of theſe yeeres ſhall bee ſhortned. Anſ. This was not the ſentence of Elias the Thisbite, but of another Elias which was a Iew, no Prophet. And whereas he ſaith: two thouſand yeeres before the law: and two thouſand yeeres under the law; he faileth. For from the giving of the law to the comming of Chriſt, was about one thouſand and five hundred yeeres: and from the law to the creation above two thouſand. Now if Elias cannot ſet downe a juſt number for the time paſt, which a meane man may doe, what ſhall we thinke that he can doe for the time to come? And if hee deceive us in that which is more eaſie to finde, how ſhall wee truſt him in things that bee harder? The ſecond reaſon is this: How long God was in creating the world, ſo long he ſhall be in governing the ſame; but he was ſixe dayes in creating the world, and in the ſeventh he reſted, and ſo proportionally he ſhall be ſixe thouſand yeeres in governing the world; every day anſwering to a thouſand yeeres, as Peter ſaith, 2 Pet. 3.8. A thouſand yeeres are but as one day with God, and then ſhall the end be. Anſw. This reaſon likewiſe hath no ground in Gods word: as for that place of Peter, the meaning is, that innumerable yeeres are but as a ſhort time with God, and we may as well ſay, two thouſand or ten thouſand yeeres are but as one day with God. For Peter meant not to ſpeake any thing diſtinctly of a thouſand yeeres, but of a long time. [A certaine number put for an uncertaine.] Thirdly, it is alleadged, that within ſixe thouſand yeeres from the creation of the world, ſhall appeare in the heavens ſtrange conjunctions, and poſitions of the Starres, which ſignifie nothing elſe but the ſubverſion of the ſtate of the world: nay ſome have noted that the end thereof ſhould have beene in the yeere of our Lord, a thouſand five hundred eightie eight: their writings are manifeſt: but wee finde by experience that this opinion is falſe and frivolous, and their grounds be as frivolous. For no man can gather by the ordinary change of the heavens, the extraordinary change of the whole world.

The ſecond opinion is, that the end of the world ſhall be three yeeres and a halfe after the revealing of Antichriſt. And it is gathered out of places in Daniel and the Revelation, abuſed. Where a time and times and halfe a time ſignifie not three yeere and a halfe, but a ſhort time. And therefore to take the words properly, is farre from the meaning of the holy Ghoſt. For marke, if the end ſhall be three yeeres and a halfe after the revealing of Antichriſt, then may any man know aforehand the particular moneth wherein the end of the world ſhould be, which is not poſſible.

Now the truth which may be avouched againſt all, is this, that no man can know, or ſet downe, or conjecture the day, the weeke, the moneth, the yeere, or the age wherein the ſecond comming of Chriſt and the laſt judgement ſhall be. For Chriſt himſelf ſaith, Mat. 24.36. Of that day and houre knoweth no man, no not the Angels in heaven, but God onely: nay, Chriſt himſelfe as he is man knew it not. And when the diſciples asked Chriſt at his aſcenſion, whether he would reſtore the kingdome unto Iſrael, he anſwered, It is not for you to know the times and ſeaſons, which the Father hath put in his owne power, Act. 1.7. And Paul ſaith, 1 Theſſ. 5.2. Of the times and ſeaſons, brethren, you have not need that I write unto you. For you your ſelves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord ſhall come, even as a thiefe in the night. Now we know that a man that keepeth his houſe, can not conjecture or imagine when a thiefe will come: and therefore no man can ſet downe the particular time or age, when Chriſt ſhall come to judgement. This muſt we hold ſtedfaſtly, and if wee reade the contrary in the writings of men, we are not to beleeve their ſayings, but account of them as the devices of men, which have no ground in Gods word.

To come to the third point, namely, the ſignes of the laſt judgement, they are of two ſorts: ſome goe before the comming of Chriſt, and ſome are joyned with it. The ſignes that goe before, are in number ſeven, recorded diſtinctly by the holy Ghoſt. The firſt, is the preaching of the Goſpel through the whole world. So our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 24. 14. This Goſpel of the kingdome muſt bee preached thorow the whole world for a witneſſe unto all nations, and then ſhall the end come. Which place muſt thus bee underſtood; not that the Goſpel muſt bee preached to the whole world at any one time: for that (as I take it) was never yet ſeene, neither ſhall be, but that it ſhall be publiſhed diſtinctly and ſucceſſively at ſeverall times: and thus underſtanding the words of Chriſt, if we conſider the time ſince the Apoſtles dayes we ſhall finde this to be true, that the Goſpel hath beene preached to all the world, and therefore the firſt ſigne of Chriſts comming is already paſt and accompliſhed.

The ſecond ſigne of his comming, is the revealing of Antichriſt, as Paul ſaith, 2 Theſſ. 2.3. The day of Chriſt ſhall not come before there be a departure firſt, and that man of ſinne be diſcloſed, even the ſonne of perdition, which is Antichriſt. Concerning this ſigne, in the yeere of our Lord, 602. Gregory the firſt Pope of Rome, avouched this ſolemnely as a manifeſt truth, that whoſoever did take to himſelfe the name of Vniverſall Biſhop, the ſame was Antichriſt. Now five yeeres after, Boniface ſucceeding him, was by Phocas the Emperour intituled the Vniverſall Biſhop, Paſtour of the Catholike Church, in the yeere of our Lord, 607. and of all Popes hee was the firſt knowne Antichriſt, and ſince him all his ſucceſſours have taken unto them the ſame title of Vniverſall and Catholike Biſhop, whereby it doth plainely appeare, that at Rome hath beene and is the Antichriſt. And this ſigne is alſo paſt.

The third, is a generall departing of moſt men from the faith. For it is ſaid in the place before named, Let no man deceive you: for the day of Chriſt ſhall not come except there bee a departing firſt, 2 Theſſ. 2. 3. Generall departure hath beene in former ages. When Arrius ſpread his hereſie, it tooke ſuch place, that the whole world almoſt became an Arrian. And during the ſpace of nine hundreth yeeres from the time of Boniface, the Popiſh hereſie ſpread it ſelfe over the whole earth, and the faithfull ſervants of God were but as a handfull of wheat in a mountaine of chaffe, which can ſcarce bee diſcerned. This ſigne is in part already paſt, nevertheleſſe it ſhall continue to the end, becauſe men ſhall continually depart from the faith. And the neerer the end of the world is, the more Satan rageth and ſeeketh to bring men into his kingdome. Therefore it ſtandeth us in hand to labour for the knowledge of true Religion, and having learned it, moſt heartily to love the ſame.

The fourth ſigne is, a generall corruption in manners. This point the Apoſtle ſets downe at large, ſaying, 2 Tim. 3.1. Toward the latter daies ſhall come perillous times, wherein men ſhall be lovers of themſelves, covetous, boaſters, proud, curſed ſpeakers, diſobedient to parents, unthankefull, unholy, and without naturall affection, truce-breakers, falſe accuſers, intemperate, fierce, deſpiſers of them which are good, traitours, headie, high-minded, lovers of pleaſures more then lovers of God, &c. This generall corruption in the manners of men is noted by our Saviour Chriſt, when he ſaith, Luke 18.8. When he commeth he ſhall ſcarce finde faith upon the earth. This ſigne hath beene in former ages, and is no doubt at this day in the world. For it is hard to finde a man that walketh juſtly, ſoberly, and faithfully, doing the duties of his calling to God and man.

The fifth ſigne of Chriſt his comming ſtandeth in terrible and grievous calamities, For Christs disciples asking him a signe of his comming & of the end of the world, he saith, Mat. 24.6,7. There shall be warres and rumours of warres, nation shal rise against nation, & realme against realm: and there shall be pestilence and famine, and earthquakes in diverse places, and men shall bee at their wits end. These have beene in former ages. In the first 3. hundred yeeres after Christ, were ten more fearefull persecutions; and since in Europe the Church of God hath becne wonderfully persecuted by the Antichrist of Rome in the hundred yeeres last past.

The sixt signe, is an exceeding deadnesse of heart, so as neither judgements from heaven, nor the preaching of the Word shal moove the hearts of men. So Christ saith. It shall be in the comming of the Sonne of man, as it was in the daies of Noe, and in the daies of Sodom: They knew nothing till the flood came, and fire from heaven destroyed them all. This signe undoubtedly is manifest in these our daies, howsoever it hath beene also in former times. For where are any almost that are mooved with Gods judgements, or touched at the preaching of the Word? nay rather men harden their hearts, & become secure and careless. The small fruit that the Word of God bringeth forth in the lives of men, shewes this to be most true.

Luk 17.16 and 29.

The seaventh and last signe, set downe by the Apostle Paul, is, that there shall be a calling of the Iewes before the Lord come to judgement, Rom. 11.25. but of the time when this calling shall be, of the manner how, or the number of them that shall be called, there is no mention, made in the Word of God. Now it is likely that this signe is yet to come.

These are the signes that goe before the comming of Christ, all which are almost past, and therefore the end cannot be far off. Now followes the signe that is joyned with the cōming of Christ, called the signe of the son of man. What this signe is, wee find not in the Scriptures. Some thinke it to be the signe of the crosse, but that is frivolous: some, the glorie & majestie of Christ, which shall be made manifest in his appearance: which seemes to bee otherwise by the very words of Christ, Then (saith he) shall appeare the signe of the Son of man, &c. and then they shall see him come in the clouds of heavē with power and great glory: where he distinguisheth the one from the other. But I rather conjecture it to be the burning of heaven & earth with fire, at the very instant of Christs comming mentioned by Peter. Wee must not here dispute whēce this fire shal come, or how it shall be kindled, for that the Word of God hath concealed: & where God hath no mouth to speak, there we must have no eare to heare.

Mat. 24. 30.

2 Pet. 3. 10

The uses to be made hereof are these: When S. Peter had set downe the change that shal be at the comming of Christ, and that heaven and earth must be purged with fire, hee makes this use thereof. Seeing all things must bee dissolved, what manner of men ought we to be in holy conversation and godlinesse? and the reason is good. For if heaven and earth must bee changed, and purged at Christs comming, then much more ought we to be changed, and put off the old man of sinne, and to become new creatures created after the image of God in righteousnes & true holines. If the bruit creatures must be renued by fire, then much more are wee to labour that the heat of Gods spirit may burne up sinne, and corruption in us, and so change us that we may be ready for him against his comming: else heaven & earth it selfe shal stand in judgement against us to our condemnation. Secondly, the consideration of this, that the world shal be consumed with fire, teacheth us moderation and sobriety in the use of Gods creatures, as in costly building, gorgeous attire, and such like. What madnes is this to bestow all that we have, on such things, as at the day of judgement shal be consumed with fire? For look whatsoever abuse shal come to Gods creatures by our folly, the same shall then be abolished. Thirdly, we must consider that the cause why heaven & earth must be consumed with fire, is mans sin, by meanes whereof, they are made subject to vanity & corruptiō. Here then we have just occasion to acknowledg the greatnesse and wretchednesse of our sinnes. If any of us had but seene the Iewes leprosie, it would have made us to wonder: for the contagion thereof did infect not only the whole man, but his garments also that were about him, and sometime the walles of his house: but howsoever we cannot see that leprosie among us, yet we may see a worse. For the leprosie of our sinnes doth not onely infect our garments, and the things about us with our bodies: but even the high heavens and the earth are stained with the contagion thereof, and are made subject to vanity and corruption: yea by sinne in us the most glorious creatures in them, as the Sunne, Moone, and Starres, are become subject to vanitie. Oh then, how wretched is the heart of man, that makes no bones of sin, which is the most noysome thing in all the world, the stinke whereof hath infected both heaven and earth! If wee could consider this, wee would not be so slacke in humbling our selves for the same as we are. Wee cannot abide to looke on a poore lazar full of blanes and sores: but if we would see our sins in their right colours, they would make us seeme unto our selves tenne thousand times more ougly then any lazar-man can bee; the contagion thereof is so great and noysome, that the very heavens which are many thousand miles distant from us, are infected therewith. Yet here we are to know, that this fire shall not cōsume the substance of heaven and earth, but onely change the quality, and abolish the corruption, which our sinnes have brought upon them.

Lev. 13.2. 47. & 14. 34.

The fourth point to bee considered, is the manner of the last judgement, in which wee may observe two things: I. who shall be judge: II. the proceeding of this judge. The first is expressed in this article; From thence hee shall come to judge. He, that is, Christ Iesus, the second person in Trinitie, but yet the execution thereof appertaines unto the Son. The Father indeede doth judge the world, but yet by the Son. But some may object, that the Apostles shall sit on twelve thrones, and judge the twelve tribes of Israel. And S. Paul saith, 1 Cor. 6. 2. The Saints shall judge the world. How then is this true, that Christ is the only judge of the world? Ans. The authority of judgement & giving sentence at the last day is proper to Christ alone, and doth not belong either to the Apostles or to the Saints: and they shall judge at the last day onely as witnesses and approvers of Christs judgement. At the great day of assise beside the judge, the justices on the bench are also in a manner judges, not that they give sentence, but because by their presence they approove and witnes the equitie of the sentēce of the judge: so the definitive sentēce doth belōg to Christ: & the Apostles and Saints do nothing but approve, & being presēt give assent to his righteous sentēce.

Matt. 19. 28.

The whole proceeding of the last judgement may bee reduced to seaven points or heads. The first, is the comming of the judge in the clouds. Here at the first, may be demanded, why Christ holds the last judgement rather on earth then in heaven? Ans. Hee doth it for two causes. One, the creature to be judged hath sinned here upon earth: and hee proceeds after the manner of earthly judges, who hold their sessions and assises there where trespasses are commonly committed. The second, because the divell and his angels are to bee judged, and it is a part of their punishment to bee cast out of heaven. For no uncleane thing may come into his heavenly Ierusalem, and therefore they now remaine in the lower parts of the world, and there must bee judged. Furthermore, the second comming of Christ is sudden, as the comming of a theife in the night. He will come when the world thinketh not of him, as the snare doth on the bird. The consideration whereof must teach us the same duties which our Saviour Christ taught the men of his time. First he teacheth them what they must not doe: for he knowing all things, knew also the dispositiō of mans heart, & therfore he saith, Take heed to your selves lest at any time your hearts be oppressed with surfetting & drunkennes, & the cares of this life, lest that day come upon you unawares. For these sins benumme the heart, and steale away all grace. This exhortation in these our daies is most needfull. For mens hearts are like the smithes stithie, the more they are beaten with the hammer of Gods Word, the harder they are. Secondly, hee teacheth them what they must doe: Watch therefore (saith he) and pray continually: that yee may be counted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to passe, and that we may stand before the Some of man. But you will say: how may we be found worthy to stand before Christ at that day? Ans. Doe but this one thing: for your lives past be humbled before God, and come unto him by true, heartie, and unfained repentance; be changed, and become new creatures: pray unto him earnestly for the pardon of your sinnes in Christ, and pray continually that God will turne your hearts from your old sinnes every day more and more; and then come the last judgement when it will, ye shall be found worthy to stand before Christ at his comming. The repentant sinner is hee, that shall find favour in the sight of God at that day. The consideration hereof may moove us to change our lives. Those which were never yet humbled for their sinnes, let them now begin: and those which have already begun, let them go forward and continue. But the divell will crie in the hearts of some men, that this exhortation is as yet needlesse: for the day of judgement is not neere, because all the signes are not yet passed. Answ. Suppose the day of judgement be farre off, yet the day of death cannot be so, for the common saying is true, to day a man, to morrow none. Now looke as death leaveth thee, so shall the day of judgement finde thee. Impenitent Cain dyed long since, and yet the day of judgement when it commeth, shall find him impenitent still. The same thing may bee said of Saul, Achitophel, and Iudas. They died desperately and impenitent, and the Lord shall finde them so at his comming. So will it be with thee, whatsoever thou art that repentest not. Death may come upon thee, the next day or the next houre, therefore watch and pray. Prepare thy selfe against the day of death, that at the day of judgment thou maiest be found worthy to obtaine favour in the sight of the Lord. Security doth overwhelme the world; but let us for our parts learne to prepare our selves daily: for if the day of death doe leave thee unworthy, then the Lord Iesus at his comming shall finde thee unworthy: & the divell shall stand before thee and accuse thee, thy conscience shal condemne thee, and hell shall be ready to swallow thee up. If this admonition take no place in thy heart, then at the day of judgment it shall stand against thee, and be a bill of inditement to thy further condemnation.

Luk. 21. 35.

Luk. 21. 34.

Lnk. 21. 36.

The second point followes, that Christ after that he is come in the clouds, shal sit in a throne of glory, as the soveraigne judge of heaven and earth, after the manner of earthly kings, who when they will shew themselves unto their subjects in majestie, power, and glory, use to ascend into the thrones of their kingdomes, and there to shew themselves and appeare in state unto al the people. Now what this throne is & how Christ sits in the same, the scripture hath not revealed, & therefore I will not stand to search. Yet here must we further mark, that this appearance of his in endlesse glorie and majestie shall bee more terrible and dreadfull to the ungodly, and therefore in Daniel his throne is said to be like a flame of fire, and at the very sight therof men shall desire the mountains to fall upon them, and the hils to cover them. Dan 7.7.

The third point, is the citing of all men and of the Angels before his majestie in that day, there to answer for themselves. This citing shall bee done by the voice of Christ, as he himselfe saith, In that day all that are in the graves shall heare his voice, & they shall come forth. And here we are to consider two things. I. the power of his voice: II. the minister whereby it shall be uttered. For the first, no doubt the power of his voice shall be unspeakable, and therefore it is compared to a trumpet, the loudest & shrillest of all musicall instruments; and to the crie of the marriners, whose manner hath bin in the doing of any busines with all their strength at one instant to make a common shout. And sensible experience shall manifest the force therof. For it shall cause all the dead even from the beginning of the world to rise againe, though they have lien rotten in the earth many thousand yeeres: and al uncleane spirits shal be forced and compelled, will they, nill they, to come before Christ; who shall be unto them a most feareful and terrible judge, neither man nor angel shall be able to absent or hide himselfe; all without exception must appeare, as well high as low, rich as poore: none shal be able to withdraw themselves, no not the mightie Monarches of the earth. Joh. 5.29. Mat. 24. 31. 1 Thess. 4.16.

Furthermore, this voice shall be uttered by Angels. As in the Church Christ useth men as his ministers by whom hee speakes unto his people: so the last day hee shall use the ministerie of Angels, whom he shall send forth into the foure winds to gather his Elect together: and therefore it is likely that this voice shall be uttered by them. And by this which hath beene said, wee must be mooved to make conscience of all sinne. For there is no avoiding of this judgement, we cannot absent our selves, no excuse will serve the turne: even the most rebellious of all creatures whether man or angel, shall be forced to appeare: and therefore it stands us in hand, while we have time in this life, to looke unto our estates, and to practise the duties of Christianity, that when we shall be cited before his glorious majesty at the last day, we may be cleared and absolved. Mat. 24. 31.

The fourth point is, the separation of the sheepe from the goates, the good from the bad. Mat. 25. 32. for when all the kindreds of the earth, and all uncleane spirits shall stand before Christ, sitting in the throne of his glory; then as a good shepheard hee shall separate them one from another, the righteous from the wicked, and the elect from the reprobate. He which knoweth the hearts of all men knoweth also how to doe this: and he will doe it. This full and finall separation is reserved to Christ, and shall not bee accomplished till the last day. For so it is in the parable, that the tares must grow with the wheate till harvest, and the reapers must separate them, and gather the wheat into the barne, but the tares must bee burnt with unquenchable fire. By the consideration of this one point, we learne divers things: I. That in the Church of God in this world, good and bad are mingled together, elect and reprobate: and wee are not to imagine any perfection of the Church of God upon earth, as many have dreamed, which when they could not finde, they have therefore forsaken all assemblies. I confesse indeed, that the preaching of the Word is the Lords fanne, whereby he cleanseth his Church, in part, but yet the finishing of this worke shall not be before the last judgement. For when the ministers of God have done all that they can, yet shall the wicked bee mingled with the godly. Therefore the Church is compared to a barne-floore, where is both wheate and chaffe: and a corne-field, where is both tares & good corne; and a draw-net, wherein is both good fish and bad. Secondly, whereas this separation must not be before the end of the world, hence wee learne the estate of Gods Church in this life. It is like a flocke of sheepe mingled with goates, and therefore the condition of Gods people in this world, is to be troubled many waies by those with whom they live. For goates use to strike the sheepe, to annoy their pasture, and to make their water muddie that they cannot drinke of it: and therefore wee must prepare our selves to beare al annoyances, crosses, & calamities that shall befal us in this world by the wicked ones among whom we live. Thirdly, we are taught, that goates and the sheepe be very like, and feede in one pasture, and lie both in one folde all their life time: yet Christ can and will sever them asunder at the last day. Therefore, considering as we are borne of Adam, we have the nature of the goate, yea of the wild beast, and not of the sheepe; it stands us in hand to lay aside our goatish conditions, and to take unto us the properties of the sheepe of Christ, which he expresseth in these words, My sheepe (saith he, Ioh. 10, 27.) heare my voice, I know them, and they follow me. And the properties are three: to know him, to be knowne of him, and to follow him: namely, in obedience: and hee that finds them all in himselfe, weares the brand and marke of the true sheepe of Christ: but contrariwise they that make profession of Christ, and yet therewithall joyne not obedience, howsoever the world may account of them, they are but goates and no sheepe. Let us therefore with the knowledge of Christ joyne obedience to his Word, that when the day shall come that the goates must be separated from the sheepe, wee may bee found to be in the number of the true sheepe of Christ. We may deceive men both in life and death, and beare them in hand that we are sheepe, but when the judgement shall come, we cannot deceive Christ; hee it is that formed us, he knowes our hearts, and therefore can easily discerne what we are. Ezc. 34.18

The fifth thing is, the tryall of every mans particular cause; a point especially to be cõsidered.

For as at the bar of an earthly judge, the malefactour is brought out of prison, and set before the judge, and there examined: even so in that great day, shall every man without exception be brought before the Lord, to bee tried. But how shall this triall be made? Ans. By workes: as the Apostle saith, 2 Cor. 5. 10. Wee must all appeare before the judgment seat of Christ, that every man may receive the things which are done in his body according to that hee hath done, whether it be good or evill. And the reason is, because works are the outward signes of inward grace and holines. And though we be justified by faith alone without workes, yet may we be judged both by faith and workes. For the last judgement doth not serve to make men just that are unjust, but onely to manifest them to be just indeed, which are just before, and in this life truly justified. The consideration of this very point should moove us all to repent us of our sinnes past, and to reforme our selves throughout, and to be plentifull in all good works. And undoubtedly if we seriously think upon it, it will hold us more streitly to al good duties, then if with the Papists, wee held justification by workes.

Furthermore, in this triall two things must be scanned: I. how all mens workes shall bee made manifest: II. by what meanes they shall be examined. Of the manifestation of every mans worke S. Iohn speakes, Rev. 20. 12. And I saw (saith he) the dead both great and small stand before God, and the bookes were opened: and another booke was opened, which is the booke of life, and the dead were judged of those things which were written in the booke according to their works. God is said to have bookes not properly, but because all things are as certaine and manifest to him, as if he had his Registers in heaven to keepe rolles and records of them. His bookes are three; the booke of Providence, the booke of Iudgement, the booke of Life. The booke of his providence is the knowledge of all particular things past, present, or to come. Of this the Psalmist speaks, Psal. 139. 16. Thine eyes did see me when I was without forme: for in thy booke were all things written, which in continuance were fashioned, when there was none of them before. The book of judgement is that, whereby hee gives judgement: and it is two-fold. The first, is Gods knowledge or prescience, in which all the affaires of men, their thoughts, words, and deede, are as certainely knowne and set downe, as if they were put in bookes of Record. Wee may forget our sinnes, but God keepes them in a Register; he knowes them every one. The second booke is every mans particular conscience, which also brings to remembrance, & testifies what men have done, & what they have not done. The book of life is nothing else, but the decree of Gods election, in which God hath set down who be ordained to life eternal.

Gods bookes 3. 1. 2. Isa 4. 3. 3.

Now the opening of these bookes is a thing wherein the endlesse power of God shall most notably shew it selfe. For when we shall stand before the judgement seate of Christ, hee then knowing all things in his eternall counsel, shal reveale unto every man his owne particular sins, whether they were in thought, word, or deede; and then also by his mighty power, he shall so touch mens consciences, that they shall afresh remember what they have done. Now indeede, the wicked mans conscience is shut up as a closed booke; but then it shall bee so touched, and as it were opened, that hee shall plainely see and remember all the particular offences which at any time hee hath committed, and his very conscience shall bee as good as a thousand witnesses: whereupon he shall accuse and utterly condemne himselfe. The consideration of this ought to terrifie all those that live in their sinnes: for howsoever they may hide and cover them from the world; yet at the last day, God will be sure to reveale them all.

Now after that mens workes are made manifest, they must further be tried whether they be good or evill. And that shall be done on this manner. They that never heard of Christ, must bee tried by the law of nature, which serves to make them inexcusable before God. As for those that live in the Church, they shall be tried by the Law and the Gospel, as Paul saith, Rom. 2. 12. As many as have sinned in the law, shall be judged by the law. And againe, v. 16. At the day of judgement God shall judge the secrets of our hearts according to his Gospell. And, Heb. 11. 7. By faith Noah builded an arke, whereby he condemned the old world. Then we must in the feare of God heare his Word preached and taught with all reverence, and make conscience to profit by it. For otherwise in the day of judgement when all our works shall be tried by it, the same Word of God shall be a bill of inditement, and the fearefull sentence of condemnation against us. Therefore let us be humbled by the doctrine of the law, and willingly embrace the sweet promises of the Gospel: considering it is the onely touch-stone, whereby all our words, thoughts, and workes must be examined.

The sixt point in the proceeding of the last judgement; is the giving of sentence, which is two-folde: the sentence of absolution, and the sentence of condemnation, both which are to be observed diligently, that wee may receive profit thereby. And first of all, Christ shall begin his judgement with the sentence of absolution; which shewes that hee is ready to shew mercy, and slow to wrath. In this sentence wee are to consider foure points: I. A calling of the Elect to the kingdome of heaven: II. The reason thereof: III. A reply of the Elect: IV. The answer of Christ to them againe. The calling of the Elect is set downe in these words: Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdome prepared for you from the beginning of the world. Matt. 25. 34. And the words are to bee observed one by one. Come ye blessed ] Though Christ now sit in glory and majesty in judgement, yet hee ceaseth not to shew his tender affection of love unto his chosen. And this overthroweth the opinion of the Church of Rome, which would have us rather to come unto Christ by the intercession of Saints, then by our selves immediatly because he is now exalted in glory and majesty. But marke, when he was here on earth he said, Come unto me all you that are heavy laden, and I will ease you: And when he shall be most glorious in majesty and power at the day of judgement, hee will then also say, Come yee blessed of my Father, and therefore we may resolve our selves, that it is his will now, that we should come unto him without any intercession of Saints. Ye blessed of my Father] The elect are heere called the blessed of God, because their righteousnesse, salvation, and all that they have, springs of the meere blessing of God. Nothing therefore must bee ascribed to the worke of man. Inherit] that is, receive as your inheritance: therefore the Kingdome of heaven is Gods meere gift. A father giveth no inheritance unto his sonne of merit, but of his free gift: whereupon it followes, that no man can merit the Kingdome of Heaven by his workes. The Kingdome] that is, the eternall estate of glory and happinesse in heaven: therefore in this life we must so use the World, as though we used it not: all that we have here is but vaine and transitory: and all our study and indevor must be to come to the kingdome of heaven. Prepared] Here note the unspeakable care of God for the faithfull. Had he such care to provide a Kingdome for his children before they were? then wee may assure our selves, he wil have greater care over them now when they have a being. For you] that is, for the elect and faithful. Hence it appeares, that there is no universal election, whereby (as some suppose) God decrees that all and every man shall be saved. Indeed if hee had said, Come yee blessed of my Father, inherite the Kingdome prepared for all, but received of you, it had beene something, but he saith onely, prepared for you: and therefore all were not chosen to salvation.

Mat. 11. 28.

The reason of this calling, is taken from workes, as from signes, in these words: For I was hungry and ye gave me meate, &c. When he saith, for I was hungry, he meanes his poore and distressed members upon earth: and thereby he signifies unto us, that the miseries of his servants are his owne miseries. Thus the Lord saith in Zachary, He which toucheth you, toucheth the apple of mine eye. And when Saul was going to persecute them in Damascus and elsewhere, that called on the name of Christ, hee cryed from heaven, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou mee? And this is a notable comfort to Gods Church and people, that they have an high Priest who is touched with the feeling of their infirmities, and if hee account our miseries his owne miseries, then no doubt he will pitty our estates, and make us able to beare the worst. And ye gave me meate] Here we note, that the principall workes of men are those which are done to the poore members of Christ. We are indeed to helpe all, in as much as they are our very flesh and the creatures of God; but the rule of Saint Paul must bee remembred, Doe good to all, but especially to those that are of the household of faith. Many are of mind that the best workes are to build Churches and Monasteries, but Christ tels us here, that the best worke of all is to releeve those that bee the living members of his mysticall Body.

Zach. 2. 8.

Act. 9. 4.

Heb. 4. 15

Gal. 6. 10

The third point, is the reply of the Saints to Christ againe, in these words: Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, and fed thee, &c. They doe not deny that which Christ avouched, but doe, as I take it, standing before the tribunall Seate of God, humble themselves, having still an after consideration of the infirmities and offences of their lives past. Here note then, that it is a Satanicall practice for a man to bragge of workes, and to stand upon them in the matter of justification before God. And wee must rather doe as the Saints of God doe, abase our selves in regard of our sinnes past.

Mat. 25. 37.

The last point, is the answer of Christ to them againe, in these words, Verily I say unto you, in as much as ye did it to the least of these my brethren, yee did it to me. A most notable sentence; and it serveth to teach us, how we should behave our selves in doing workes of mercy, which are duties to be performed in this life. Wee are not to doe them of any sinister respect, as for praise of men or commodity, but wee must propound unto our selves the party to whom we doe any good, and in him looke on Christ, and so doe it, as unto Christ, and for Christs sake onely: and this is a good worke indeed. Christ saith, Whosoever shall give a cup of cold water to a disciple in the name of a disciple shall not lose his reward. It is but a small gift, but yet the manner of doing it, namely, in the name of a disciple, that is, in respect that he is a member of Christ, doth make it an excellent worke of mercy. It is a speciall marke of a child of God to shew mercy on a Christian, because he is a Christian. If any would know whether he be a Christian or no, let him search himselfe, whether he love a man and can doe good unto him, because he is a Child of God, and a member of Christ. For this is a plaine argument, that hee also is the Child of God. Many can love, because they are loved againe: but to love for Christ his sake, is a worke of Christ in us and a speciall gift of God.

Mat. 25. 40.

The sentence of condemnation followeth in the second place: and it containes foure points: I. the rejection of the ungodly: II. the reason of their rejection: III. the defence which the wicked make for themselves: lastly, the answer of Christ to them againe. The rejection of the wicked is uttered by a terrible sentence, Away from mee, yee cursed into hell fire. The use hereof in generall is two-fold. First, it serves, to awake and excite all men and women in the world, whosoever they be that shall heare it, to looke unto their owne estates. It is wonderfull to ſee what great ſecurity reigneth every where in theſe our dayes. Men goe on in ſinne from day to day and from yeare to yeare without repentance, nothing at all fearing the ſentence of condemnation at the laſt day; like unto many which for the obtaining of other mens goods are neither by the feare of arraignment or impriſonment kept in good order. The occaſions of ſecurity are twofold: I. the proſperity of the wicked, who of all men live at moſt eaſe without trouble, either in body or in mind. II. Gods patience, and long ſuffering; as Salomon ſaith, Becauſe ſentence againſt an evill worke is not executed ſpeedily, therefore the hearts of the children of men are fully ſet in them to doe evill. But to awake all thoſe which live in their ſecurity; they muſt remember that howſoever the Lord God doth now deferre his judgement, yet there is a day wherein he will no way ſhew mercy and long ſuffering, when they ſhall heare this fearefull ſentence of condemnation pronounced againſt them, Away from me ye curſed. The ſecond uſe is to the godly: It ſerves to nurture them and to keepe them in awe before God: and no doubt this was a principall cauſe why this ſentence was here penned by the holy Ghoſt. A wiſe maſter of a family will checke his ſervant, and if the cauſe require, correct him in his childs preſence, that the child it ſelfe may learne thereby to feare and ſtand in awe of his father: ſo Chriſt the moſt carefull and wiſe governor of his Church hath ſet downe this ſentence of condemnation againſt the wicked, that the children of God in this world whenſoever they ſhall heare or reade the ſame, might bee mooved thereby to ſtand in feare of God, and more dutifully performe obedience unto his Commandements. Away from me.] Here we may learne, what a bleſſed thing it is for a man to have true fellowſhip with Chriſt in this world. For in the day of judgment the puniſhment of the wicked is to be cut off from him, and driven away from his preſence. Now hee that would have fellowſhip with God after this life, and eſcape that puniſhment, muſt ſeeke to have it in this life; and hee that will not ſeeke to have fellowſhip with him in this life, ſhall never have it after in the day of judgment. Againe, let us marke that it is nothing to draw neere unto Chriſt with our lippes, if the heart bee not with him: for ſuch as come neere with the lippe and keepe aloofe in the heart, ſhall heare the ſentence pronounced, Away from me ye curſed; and ſhall bee ſevered as farre from Chriſt as hell from heaven. Therefore let us not content our ſelves with formall profeſſion, but open the doores of our hearts, that the King of glory may come in. Ye curſed.] They are curſed who are borne in ſinne and live in their ſins, and all the dayes of their lives ſo perſevere to the laſt gaſpe without ſeeking recovery. Whoſoever he be, that is in this eſtate, the curſe of God hangeth over his head, and will ſo doe till he get reconciliation with God in Chriſt. This being ſo, above all things in this world wee muſt labour to bee at peace with God, and never ceaſe nor be quiet with our ſelves till we have the ſame wrought and ſealed in our hearts. For before ſuch a time as we be in Gods favour, his fearefull curſe hangs over our heads, and if we ſo perſevere without repentance, the day will come when we ſhall heare this fearefull ſentence pronounced againſt us: Away from me ye curſed into hell fire. What hel fire is, we muſt not curiouſly ſearch, but rather give our whole endeavour to learne how wee may avoyde it: as when a mans houſe is on fire, his care muſt be, not to ſearch how it came, but rather how to quench it: yet wee are to know thus much that by hell fire is not meant any bodily flame, but it ſignifies the ſeazing of the fearefull and terrible wrath of God both on body and ſoule for ever. For howſoever the body bee ſubject to burning with bodily fire, yet the ſoule being ſpirituall cannot burne; and therefore hell fire is not a materiall fire, but a grievous torment, fitly reſembled thereby. Prepared for the divell and his angels] There is in every mans heart by nature this corruption; whereby when hee ſinneth, he thinkes that there is no danger but all is well, having, as Iſaiah ſaith, made a covenant with hell. But here conſider, that although the divell was once an Angel of light, yet when he had ſinned, he could not eſcape hell; it was prepared even for him. How then ſhall ungodly men, which are not halfe ſo wily, thinke to eſcape?

Iſai. 28. 15.

Now followeth the reaſon of their rejection in theſe words: For I was an hungred and ye gave me no meate, &c. Hence wee learne theſe two points. I. that all mans religion & ſerving of God is in vaine, if ſo be hee ſhew no compaſſion toward the poore members of Chriſt, in feeding, cloathing, lodging, and viſiting of them. For we muſt thinke, that many of thoſe againſt whom this reaſon ſhall bee brought, did know religion and profeſſe the ſame, yea, they prophelied in the Name of Chriſt, and called on him, ſaying, Lord, Lord: and yet the ſentence of condemnation goeth againſt them, becauſe they ſhew no compaſſion toward the members of Chriſt; and therefore it is a principall vertue, and a ſpeciall note of a Chriſtian, to ſhew the bowels of compaſſion towards his needy brethren. Here againe wee note, that it is not ſufficient for us to abſtaine from evill, but we muſt alſo doe good. For it is not ſaid, I was an hungred and ye tooke from me, but, When I was hungry ye gave me no meate. They are not charged with doing evill, but for not doing good. Saint John ſaith, The axe is laid to the roote of the tree, and the reaſon followes, not becauſe the tree bare evill fruit, but becauſe it bare not good fruit: therefore it muſt be caſt into the fire. This condemnes a bad opinion of all worldly men, who thinke that all is well, and that God wil be merciful unto them, becauſe they doe no harme. Thus we ſee how the divell blinds the eyes of men: for it will not ſtand for payment at the day of judgement to ſay, I have hurt no man, unleſſe we further doe all the good we can.

The third point, is the defence which impenitent ſinners make for themſelves in theſe words, Lord, when ſaw we thee an hungred, or thirſty, or naked, or in priſon, or ſicke, and did not miniſter unto thee? Thus in their owne defence, that which Chriſt ſaith, they gaine-ſay, and juſtifie themſelves. Here marke the nature of all impenitent ſinners, which is to ſooth and flatter themſelves in ſinne, and to maintaine their owne righteouſneſſe, like to the proud Phariſee in his prayer, who bragged of his goodnes, and ſaid, Lord, I thanke thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, &c. and in the very ſame manner ignorant perſons of all ſorts among us, juſtifie themſelves in their ſtrong faith, and bragge of their zeale of Gods glory, and of their love to their brethren, and yet indeed ſhew no ſignes thereof. And truly we are not to marvell when wee ſee ſuch perſons to juſtifie themſelves before men, whereas they ſhall not bee aſhamed to doe it at the day of judgement before the Lord Ieſus himſelfe.

Mat. 25. 44.

Luk. 18. 10.

The laſt point, is Chriſts anſwer to them againe, in theſe words: Verily I ſay unto you, in as much as ye did it not to one of the leaſt of theſe, ye did it not to me. This ſentence being repeated againe, doth teach us the leſſon which we learned before, that when we are to ſhew compaſſion to any man, eſpecially if he be a member of Gods Church, we muſt not conſider his outward eſtate or his baſeneſſe, in that hee wants food or rayment, but behold Chriſt in him, not reſpecting him as a man, but as a member of Chriſt. This it is, that muſt moove us to compaſſion, and cauſe us to make a ſupply of his wants more then any reſpect in the world beſide. And ſurely when Chriſt in his members comes to our doores, and complaines that he is hungry, and ſicke, and naked, if our bowels yearne not towards him, there is not ſo much as a ſparke of the love of God in us.

Mat. 25. 45.

The ſeventh point in the proceeding of the laſt judgement, is the retribution or reward, in theſe words: And they ſhall goe into everlaſting paine, and the righteous into life eternall. How do the wicked enter into hell, and the godly into heaven? Anſ. By the powerfull and commanding voyce of Chriſt, which is of that force, that neither the greateſt rebell that ever was among men, nor all the divels in hell, ſhall be able to withſtand it. And ſeeing that after the day of judgement wee muſt remaine for ever either in heaven or in hell, wee are to looke about us, and to take heed unto our hearts. Indeed if the time were but a thouſand or two thouſand yeeres, then with more reaſon men might take liberty to themſelves: but ſeeing it is without end, we muſt be more carefull thorow the whole courſe of our lives ſo to live and behave our ſelves, that when the day of judgement ſhall come, wee may avoyde that

Mat. 25. 46.

A fearefull ſentence of everlaſting woe and condemnation, which ſhall bee pronounced againſt the wicked. And whereas all wicked men ſhall goe to hell at Chriſts Commandement; it teacheth us, willingly to obey the voyce of Chriſt in the miniſtery of the Word. For if we rebel againſt his voyce in the Word, when in the day of judgement ſentence ſhall be pronounced againſt us, we ſhall heare another voyce, at the giving whereof, wee muſt obey whether wee will or no, and thereupon goe to everlaſting paine, whither wee would not. Let us therefore in time deny our ſelves for our ſinnes paſt, and onely relye upon Chriſt Ieſus for the free remiſſion of them all; and for the time to come, leade a new reformed life.

Thus much of the order of Chriſt his proceeding at the day of judgement: now follow the uſes thereof, which are either comforts to Gods Church, or duties for all men. The firſt comfort or benefit is this, that the ſame perſon which dyed for us upon the croſſe to worke our redemption, muſt alſo bee our judge. And hence we reape two ſpeciall comforts. I The people of God ſhall hereby injoy full redemption from all miſeries and calamities, which they had in this life. So Chriſt himſelfe ſpeaking of the ſignes of the end of the world, ſaith to his Diſciples; When you ſee theſe things, lift up your heads: for your redemption draweth neere. Then he ſhall wipe all teares from their eyes.

Luk. 21. 28.

Secondly, we ſhall thereby have a finall deliverance from all ſinne. Now what a joyfull thing it is to be freed from ſinne, may plainely appeare by the cry of Saint Paul: O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from this body of death? And certaine it is, that hee which knowes what ſinne is, and ſeriouſly repents him of the ſame, would wiſh with all his heart to be out of this world, that he might leave off to ſinne, and thereby ceaſe to diſpleaſe God.

Rom. 7. 24.

The ſecond comfort is this: the godly in this world have many enemies: they are reviled, ſlandered, and oftentimes put to death: well, Chriſt Ieſus at the day of judgement will take every mans cauſe into his owne hand; he will then heare the complaint of the godly, howſoever in this world they found no remedy: and then he will revenge their blood that is ſhed upon the earth, according to their prayer. This comfort is to be conſidered, eſpecially of all thoſe that are any way perſecuted, or moleſted by the wicked of this world.

Apoc. 6. 10.

Now follow the duties to be learned of every one of us, and they are divers. Firſt, the conſideration of the laſt judgement ſerveth to teach all ignorant perſons and impenitent ſinners, repentance and humiliation for their ſinnes, and to moove them with ſpeed to ſeeke unto Chriſt for the pardon of the ſame. When Paul preached to the Athenians, hee willed them to repent upon this ground and reaſon, Becauſe the Lord hath appointed a day wherein he will judge the world in righteouſneſſe. To ſpeake

plainely; we can be content to heare the Word of God, and to honour him with our lippes, yet for the moſt part, all is done but for faſhions ſake: but ſtill we live in our old ſinnes: our hearts are not turned: but in the feare of God let us bethinke our ſelves of the time, when we ſhall come before the Iudge of heaven and earth, and have all our ſinnes laid open, and we muſt anſwer for them all. This is the point which the holy Ghoſt uſeth as a reaſon to moove men unto repentance: and aſſuredly if this will not moove us, there is nothing in the World will. Secondly, to this purpoſe Paul ſaith, 1 *Cor.*11.31. If we would judge our ſelves, we ſhould not bee judged. Wouldeſt thou then eſcape the judgement of Chriſt at the laſt day? then in this life judge thy ſelfe. Now a man in judging of himſelfe muſt performe foure things. I. He muſt examine himſelfe of his owne ſinnes. II. He muſt confeſſe them before the Lord. III. He muſt condemne himſelfe, and as a judge upon the bench, give ſentence againſt himſelfe. Laſtly, he muſt plead pardon, and cry unto God as for life and death, for the remiſſion of all his ſinnes: and hee that doth this unfainedly, ſhall never bee judged of the Lord at the laſt day: but if we ſlacke and neglect this duty in this life, then undoubtedly there remaines nothing but eternall woe in the world to come.

Thirdly, by this we may learne, one not to judge or condemne another, as Paul ſaith, 1 Cor.4.5. Iudge nothing before the time, untill the Lord come, who will lighten all things that are in darkenes, and make the counſels of the hearts manifeſt. And Chriſt ſaith, Luk.6.27. Iudgement is mine: and judge not, and ye ſhall not be judged. And againe Paul ſaith to the Romanes, Why doeſt thou judge thy brother? for wee muſt all appeare before the Iudgement ſeat of Chriſt: but ſome will aske, how doth one judge another? Anſ. Thus: I. When a man doth well, to ſay of him that he doth evill. II. When a man doth evill, then to make it worſe. III. When a thing is doubtfull, to take it in the worſt part. And by any of theſe three wayes we are not to judge either of mens perſons, or of their actions.

Rom.14. 10.

Fourthly, we muſt endeavour our ſelves to keepe a good conſcience before God and before all men. This is the practice of Saint Paul, who in conſideration and hope of a reſurrection unto judgement, as well of the juſt as of the unjuſt, endeavoured himſelfe to have alwayes a cleare conſcience both towards God, and towards men. His example is worthy our marking and imitation; for few there bee that upon this occaſion make any conſcience either of duty to God or to their brethren.

Act.24 15,16.

Fifthly, the laſt judgement muſt ſtirre us up to a reverend feare of God, and cauſe us to glorifie him: as the Angel ſaith in the Revelation, Feare God, and give glory to him: for the houre of his judgement is come. And doubtleſſe if any thing in the world will moove a man to feare the Lord, it is this, to remember the fearefull and terrible day of judgement.

Now having ſpoken hitherto of the firſt perſon the Father, and alſo of the Sonne, it followeth in the next place to ſpeake of the third perſon in theſe words, I beleeve in the H. Ghoſt. In which we may conſider two things, the title of the perſon, and the action of faith, repeated from the beginning. The title is, holy Ghoſt, or Spirit. It may here be demanded, how this title can bee fit to expreſſe the third perſon, which ſeemes to be common to the reſt: for the Father is holy, and the Sonne is holy; againe, the Father is a Spirit, and the Sonne is a Spirit. Anſ. Indeed the Father and the Sonne are as well to be tearmed holy in reſpect of their natures as the third perſon: for all three ſubſiſting in one and the ſame Godhead, are conſequently holy by one and the ſame holineſſe: but the third perſon is called holy, becauſe beſide the holineſſe of nature, his office is to ſanctifie the Church of God. Now if it be ſaid that ſanctification is a worke of the whole Trinity, the anſwer is, that although it be ſo, yet the worke of ſanctification agrees to the holy Ghoſt in ſpeciall manner. The Father ſanctifieth by the Sonne and by the holy Ghoſt: the Sonne ſanctifieth from the Father and by the H. Ghoſt: the holy Ghoſt ſanctifieth from the Father and from the Sonne by himſelfe immediately; and in this reſpect is the third perſon termed holy. Againe, the third perſon is tearmed a Spirit, not onely becauſe his nature is ſpirituall (for in that reſpect the Father is a Spirit, and the Sonne is a Spirit;) but becauſe he is ſpired or breathed from the Father, and from the Sonne, in that he proceeds from them both. Thus we ſee there is a ſpeciall cauſe why the third perſon is called the holy Ghoſt.

Now the action of Faith which concernes the third perſon, is to beleeve in him. Which is. I. To acknowledge the holy Ghoſt as hee hath revealed himſelfe in the Word. II. In ſpeciall to beleeve that he is my ſanctifier and comforter. III. To put all the confidence of my heart in him, for that cauſe. In theſe words are compriſed foure points of doctrine, which are to be beleeved concerning the holy Ghoſt. The firſt, that he is very God. For we are not to put affiance or confidence in any but in God alone. And no doubt the penners of the Creed, in that they prefixed theſe words, I beleeve in, before the article of the third perſon, meant thereby to ſignifie that he is true God, equall with the Father and the Sonne, according to the tenour of the Scriptures themſelves. Peter ſaith to Ananias: Why hath Satan filled thine heart that thou ſhouldeſt lye unto the holy Ghoſt? and continuing the ſame ſpeech, he changeth the tearme onely, and ſaith, Thou haſt not lyed unto men, but unto God. Whereby hee inſinuateth, that the holy Ghoſt is very God. In the viſion of the Prophet Iſaiah, the words by him ſet downe are thus: I heard the voyce of Iehova, ſaying, Whom ſhall I ſend, &c. and he ſaid, Goe and ſay to this people: Ye ſhall heare deed, but yet ye shall not understand. But Paul quoting the same place, spake on this manner: Well spake the holy Ghost by Esay the Prophet, saying, Goe unto this people and say unto them, &c. Now these places beeing compared together make it plaine, that the title of Iehovah, agreeth to the holy Ghost. But yet the enemies of this truth which thinke that the holy Ghost is nothing els but the action or operation of God, object out of the Scriptures to the contrarie: I. God knoweth the Sonne: the holy Ghost knoweth not the Sonne: for none knoweth the Sonne but the Father; ergo, the holy Ghost is not God. Ans. That place excludeth no person in Trinitie, but onely creatures, and false gods, and the meaning is this: None, that is, no creature, or idol god, knoweth the Sonne of God, but the Father. And the opposition is made to exclude creatures, not to exclude the holy Ghost. Againe they object, that the holy Ghost maketh request for us with groanes and sighes that cannot bee uttered: therefore (say they) the holy Ghost is not God, but rather a gift of God. For hee that is true God, cannot pray, grone, or sigh. Ans. Pauls meaning is thereby to signifie that the holy Ghost causeth us to make requests, and stirreth up our hearts to grone and sigh to God: for hee said before, Wee have received the spirit of adoption, whereby wee crie Abba father. Yet further, they object the words of the angel Gabriel to the Virgin Mary, saying, The vertue of the most high hath over-shadowed thee: and hence they gather, that if the holy Ghost be the vertue of God, then he is not God indeede. Ans. As Christ is called the Word of God, not a word made of letters or syllables, but a substantiall word, that is, beeing for ever of the same substance with the Father: so in this place the holy Ghost is called the vertue of the most highest, not because he is a created qualitie, but because he is the substantiall vertue of the Father and the Sonne: and therefore God equall with them both. Furthermore they alleadge, that neither the Scriptures, nor the practice of the Primitive Church doth warrant us to pray to the holy Ghost. Ans. It is not true. For whensoever we direct our prayers to any one of the three persons, in him we pray to them all. Besides we have example of praier made to the holy Ghost, in the Word of God. For Paul saith to the Corinthians, The grace of our Lord Iesus Christ, the love of God the Father, and the fellowship of the holy Ghost bee with you all. And the words are as if Saint Paul had said thus; O Father, let thy love, O Sonne, let thy grace, O holy Ghost, let thy fellowship bee with them all. And therefore this first doctrine is true, and as well to bee beleeved as any other, that the holy Ghost is God.

Mat. 11. 27.

Rom. 8. 16

Rom. 8. 15

Luk. 1. 35

2 Cor. 13. 13.

The second point is, that the holy Ghost is a distinct person from the Father and the Sonne. Hereupon the articles touching the three persons are thus distinguished: I beleeve in the Father, I beleeve in the Sonne, I beleeve in the holy Ghost. This point also is consonant to the Scriptures which make the same distinction. In the baptisme of Christ, the Father uttereth a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Sonne, in whom I am well pleased: and not the Sonne or the holy Ghost. Secondly, the Sonne stood in the water, and was baptized by Iohn: and not the Father or the holy Ghost. Thirdly, the holy Ghost descended from heaven upon Christ in the forme of a dove; and not the Father, or the Sonne, but the holy Ghost alone. Christ in his commission unto his disciples, saith, Matth. 28. 19. Goe teach all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost. Now if the holy Ghost had beene the same person either with the Father, or with the Sonne, then it had bin sufficient to have named the Father and the Sonne onely. And the distinction of the third person from the rest may bee conceived by this, That the holy Ghost is the holy Ghost, and not the Father or the Sonne.

Mat. 3. 17

The third point to be beleeved, is that the holy Ghost proceedeth from the Father and the Sonne. For a further proofe hereof, consider these places. Paul saith, Rom. 8. 9. Yee are not in the flesh, but in the spirit: for the spirit of God dwelleth in you. But if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is not his. And againe, Gal. 4. 6. Because you are sonnes, God hath sent forth the spirit of the Son into your hearts. Where we may observe, that the holy Ghost is the spirit both of the Father and of the Sonne. Now the holy Ghost is called the spirit of the Father, not onely because he is sent of him, but because hee proceedeth from the Father; as Christ saith to his disciples, When the comforter will come, whom I shall send unto you from the Father, even the spirit of truth which proceedeth of the Father, he shall testifie of me. And therefore likewise hee is the spirit of the Sonne, not onely because he is sent of the Sonne, but also because hee proceedeth from him. Againe, in the Trinitie the person sending, doth communicate his whole essence and substance to the person sent. As the Father, sending the Sonne, doth communicate his essence and substance to the Sonne. For sending doth presuppose a communication of essence. Now the Father and the Sonne send the holy Ghost: therefore both of them communicate their substance and essence unto the same person. Thirdly Christ saith, The holy Ghost hath received of mine which hee shall shew unto you, namely, knowledge and truth, to be revealed unto his Church. Where wee may reason thus: the person receiving knowledge from another, receives essence also: the holy Ghost receives truth and knowledge from Christ to bee revealed unto the Church: and therefore first of all hee hath received substance and essence from the Sonne. But some peradventure will say, where is it written in all the Bible in expresse words, that the holy Ghost proceedes from the Sonne as hee proceedes from the Father? Answ. The Scripture saith

Ioh. 15. 26

not

not ſo much in plaine tearmes, yet wee muſt know, that that which is gathered from thence by juſt conſequence, is no leſſe the truth of God, then that which is expreſſed in words. Hereupon all Churches, ſave thoſe in Greece, with one conſent acknowledge the truth of this point.

The fourth and laſt point is, that the holy Ghoſt is equall to the Father and the Sonne. And this we are taught to acknowledge in the Creede, in that we doe as well beleeve in the holy Ghoſt, as in the Father and the Son. And though the holy Ghoſt bee ſent of the Father and the Sonne, (yet as I have ſaid before) that argues no inequality (for one equall may ſend another by conſent,) but order onely, whereby the holy Ghoſt is laſt of all the three perſons. Againe, in that the holy Ghoſt receiveth from the Sonne, it prooves no inferiority. Becauſe hee receives from the Sonne whatſoever he receives, by nature, and not by grace. And hee receives not a part, but all that the Sonne hath, ſaving the propriety of his perſon.

Now follow the benefits which are given by the holy Ghoſt, and they are of two ſorts: ſome are common to all creatures, and ſome are proper to men. The benefit of the holy Ghoſt common to all creatures, is the worke of creation and preſervation. For all things were created and made, and afterward preſerved by the holy Ghoſt, So Elihu ſaith, Iob 33.4. The ſpirit of God hath made mee. And Moſes ſaith, *Gen.*1.2. In the beginning the ſpirit mooved upon the waters. The phraſe is borrowed from a bird, who in hatching of her young ones, ſits upon the egges, mooves her ſelfe upon them, and heats them. And ſo likewiſe the holy Ghoſt in the beginning did by his owne power cheriſh and preſerve the maſſe or lumpe whereof all things were made, and cauſed it to bring forth the creatures. This being evident, that the holy Ghoſt hath a ſtroke in the worke of creation and preſervation, we muſt unfainedly acknowledge that we were firſt created, and ſince that time continually preſerved by the benefit even of the third perſon.

The benefits proper unto men, are of two ſorts: ſome are common to all men both good and bad, and ſome proper to the elect and faithfull. The benefits common to all men are divers. 1. The gift of practiſing a particular calling. As in the body ſeverall members have ſeverall uſes; ſo in every ſocietie ſeverall men have ſeverall offices and callings, and the gifts whereby they are inabled to performe the duties thereof, are from the holy Ghoſt. When Gedron became a valiant captaine to deliver the Iſraelites, it is ſaid, he was cloathed with the ſpirit. Iudg. 6.34. Bezaleel and Aholiab being ſet apart to build the tabernacle, were filled with the ſpirit of God in wiſedome and underſtanding, and in all workmanſhip, to finde out curious workes, to worke in gold, and in ſilver, and in braſſe, alſo in the Art to ſet ſtones, and to carve in timber, &c. By this it is manifeſt, that the skill of any handicrafe is not in the power of man, but comes by the holy Ghoſt. And by this we are taught, to uſe all thoſe gifts well, whereby we are inabled to diſcharge our particular callings; that they may ſerve for the glory of God, and the good of his Church: and thoſe that in their callings uſe fraud and deceit, or elſe live inordinately, doe moſt unthankfully abuſe the gifts of God, and diſhonour the ſpirit of God the author of their gifts, for which thing they muſt give an account one day.

Exod. 31. 3.

The ſecond gift common to all, is Illumination, whereby a man is inabled to underſtand the will of God in his word. The Iewes in the reading of the old Teſtament had a veile over their hearts: and the like have all men by nature, to whom the word of God is fooliſhneſſe. Acts 9.17,18. Paul at his converſion was ſmitten blind, and ſkales were upon his eyes: the like alſo be over the eyes of our minds, and they muſt fall away, before wee can underſtand the will of God. Now it is the worke of the holy Ghoſt to remoove theſe ſkales and filmes from our eyes. And for this very cauſe hee is called the anointing and eye-ſalve: for as it doth cleare the eyes, and take away the dimneſſe of them; ſo doth the holy Ghoſt take away blindneſſe from our minds, that we may ſee into the truth of Gods word. This being a common gift, and received both of good and bad, it ſtandeth us in hand not to content our ſelves with the bare knowledge of the word, but therewithall we muſt joyne obedience, and make conſcience thereof, or elſe that will befall us which Chriſt foretold, that he which knoweth his maſters will and doth it not, ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes.

Heb. 6. 4.

1 Ioh. 2. 20. Apoc. 3. 18.

Luk. 12. 47.

The third gift of the holy Ghoſt, is the gift of Prophecy, whereby a man is made able to interpret and expound the Scriptures. Now albeit this gift be very excellent and not given to every man, yet is it common both to good and bad. For in the day of judgement when men ſhall come to Chriſt and ſay, Maſter, we have propheſied in thy name, he ſhall anſwer againe, I never knew you, depart from mee ye workers of iniquitie. Hereupon thoſe that are in the calling of the miniſtery, and have received the gift of prophecie, muſt not herewithall be puffed up. For if they be not as well doers of Gods will, as teachers, their gifts will turne to their further condemnation. As the Carpenters that built Noahs Arke, when the flood came were drowned, becauſe they would not obey Noahs preaching; ſo thoſe that have the gift of prophecie, and are builders in Gods houſe, if they build not themſelves as well as others; for all their preaching, at the day of judgement they ſhall be condemned: and therefore it ſtandeth them in hand, not to content themſelves with this, that they know and teach others Gods will, but they themſelves muſt be the firſt doers of the ſame.

1 Cor. 12. 10.

Matth. 7. 22, 23.

The fourth common gift of the holy Ghoſt, is Abilitie to bridle and restraine some affections, so as they shall not breake out into outragious behaviour. Haman a wicked man, and an enemy to Gods Church, when he saw Mordecai the Iew sitting in the kings gate, and that he would not stand up to moove unto him, he was full of indignation: nevertheless the text saith, Hest.5.10. that he refrained himselfe. And when Abimelech an heathen king had taken Sarah Abrahams wife, God said unto him, I know that thou diddest this with an upright heart: and the text addeth further, I have kept thee that thou shouldest not sinne against me. And thus the Lord gives to men, as yet without the spirit of sanctification, this guift to bridle themselves, so as in outward action they shall not practise this or that sinne. For why did not Abimelech commit adulterie? surely, because God kept him from it. Againe, in the histories of the heathen we may reade of many that were just, liberall, meeke, continent, &c. and that by a generall operation of the holy Ghost, that represseth the corruption of nature, for the common good. Here then if any man aske, how it comes to passe that some men are more modest and civill then others, seeing all men by nature are equally wicked: the answer may bee, not as the common saying is, because some are of better nature then others; (for all the sonnes of Adam are equall in regard of nature: the childe new borne in that respect is as wicked as the eldest man that ever lived) but the reason is, because God gives this common gift of restraining the affections more to some then to others. This must be considered of us all. For a man may have the spirit of God to bridle many sinnes, and yet never have the spirit to mortifie the same, & to make him a new creature. And this being so, we must take heed that we deceive not our selves. For it is not sufficient for a man to live in outward civility, & to keep in some of his affections upon some occasion (for a wicked man may doe) but we must further labour to feele in our selves the spirit of God, not only bridling sin in us, but also mortifying & killing the same. Indeed both of thē are the good gifts of Gods spirit, but yet the mortification of sin is the chiefest, being an effectuall signe of grace, and proper to the elect.

Gen.20.6

The fifth grace and gift of the holy Ghost is, to heare & receive the word of God with joy. In the parable of the sower, one kind of bad ground are they which when they have heard, receive the word with joy: and this is that, which the author of the Hebrews cals the tasting of the good word of God, and of the power of the world to come. We know that there is great difference betweene tasting of meate and eating of it. They that sit down at the table do doth taste & eat, but they that dresse the meat do onely see & taste thereof: so it is at the Lords table; Many there bee that have this gift, truly both to taste and eat of the body and blood of Christ offered in the word and Sacraments; & some againe do only taste & feele the sweetnes of them and rejoyce therein, but yet are not indeed partakers thereof. Now if this be so, then al those which heare the word of God, must take heede how they heare, and labour to find these two things in themselves by hearing: I. that in heart & conscience they be throughly touched & humbled for their sins: II. that they be certenly assured of the favour and love of God in Christ, & that the sweete promises of the Gospel do belong to them: and in consideration hereof they must make a conscience of all sin both in thought, word and deed, through the whole course of their lives. And this kind of hearing bringeth that joy which vanisheth not away.

Heb.6.5.

Thus much of the benefits of the H. Ghost common to all men both good and bad: now follow such as are proper to the elect, al which may be reduced unto one, namely, the inhabitation of the spirit, whereby the Elect are the temples of the holy Ghost: who is said to dwell in men, not in respect of substance (for the whole nature of the holy Ghost cannot be comprised in the body or soule of man) but in respect of a particular operation: and this dwelling stands in two things. The first, that the holy Ghost doth abide in them, not for a time onely, but for ever: for the word, dwelling, noteth perpetuitie. Secondly, that the holy Ghost hath the full disposition of the heart, as when a man commeth to dwell in an house, whereof he is lord, he hath libertie to governe it after his owne will. Now this disposition of the hearts of the faithfull by the holy Ghost, standeth in five speciall and notable gifts; every one worthy our observation.

1 Cor.3.16. Rom 8.9.

The first is, a certaine knowledge of a mans own reconciliatiō to God in Christ. As it is said in Esay 53.11. By his knowledge my righteous servant shal justifie many. And Christ saith Ioh.17.3. This is life eternall, that they know thee to be the only very God, and whom thou hast sent, Iesus Christ. This knowledge is not generall: for then the divels might be saved; but it is particular, whereby a man knoweth God the Father to bee his Father, and Christ the redeemer to be his redeemer, & the holy Ghost to be his sanctifier and comforter. And it is a speciall work of the holy Ghost, as Paul saith Rom.8.16. The spirit of God beareth witnesse to our spirits, that wee are the children of God. And, 1 Cor.2.12. we have received the spirit which is of God, that wee might know the things that are given unto us of God.

The second gift, is regeneration, whereby a man of a limme of the divel is made a member of Christ, and of a child of Satan (whom every one of us by nature do as lively resemble as any man doth his owne parent) is made the child of God. Except a man (saith our Saviour Christ, Ioh.3.5.) be borne againe by water & the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdome of heaven. Iohn Baptist in saying that Christ baptized with the holy Ghost and fire, compares the spirit of God to fire and water. To fire for two causes: I. as it is the nature of fire to warme the body that is benummed and frozen with cold: ſo when a man is benummed and frozen in ſin, yea when he is even ſtarke dead in ſinne, it is the property of the holy Ghoſt to warme and quicken his heart, and to revive him. II. Fire doth purge and eate out the droſſe from the good mettall: now there is no droſſe nor canker that hath ſo deepely eaten into any mettall as ſinne into the nature of man; therefore the holy Ghoſt is as a fire to purge and eate out the hidden corruptions of ſinne out of the rebellious heart of man. Againe, the holy Ghoſt is compared to cleare water for two cauſes: I. man by nature is as dry wood without ſappe, and the property of the holy Ghoſt is as water to ſupple, & to put ſappe of grace into the dead and rotten heart of man. II. the property of water is to cleanſe and purifie the filth of the body: even ſo the H. Ghoſt doth ſpiritually waſh away our ſins, which are the filth of our nature, and this is the ſecond benefit of the holy Ghoſt. By this we are taught, that he which would enter into the kingdome of God, and have the H. Ghoſt to dwell in him, muſt labour to feele the work of regeneration by the ſame ſpirit: and if a man would know whether he hath this worke wrought in him or no, let him marke what Saint Paul ſaith, Rom. 8. 5. They that are of the ſpirit, ſavour the things of the ſpirit: but they that live after the fleſh ſavour the things of the fleſh. If therefore a man have his heart continually affected with that which is truely good either more or leſſe, it is a certaine token that his wicked nature is changed, and he regenerate: but contrariwiſe, if his heart be alwaies ſet on the pleaſures of ſinne, and the things of this world, he may juſtly ſuſpect himſelfe that hee is not regenerated. As for example, if a man have all his mind ſet upon drinking and gulling in of wine and ſtrong drinke, having little delight or pleaſure in any thing elſe, it argues a carnall minde and unregenerate, becauſe it affects the things of the fleſh; and ſo of the reſt. And on the contrary, hee that hath his minde affected with a deſire to doe the will of God in practiſing the workes of charity and religion he I ſay, hath a ſpirituall and a renued heart, and is regenerate by the holy Ghoſt.

The third worke of the holy Ghoſt, is to governe the hearts of the elect: this may be called ſpirituall regiment. A man that dwelleth in a houſe of his owne, orders and governs it according to his owne will: even ſo the H Ghoſt governes all them in whom hee dwelleth, as Paul ſaith, Rom. 8. 14. They that are the ſonnes of God, are led by his ſpirit; a moſt notable benefit: for looke where the holy Ghoſt dwels, there he will be Lord, governing both heart, minde, will, and affections; and that two waies: I. by repreſſing all bad motions unto ſinne, ariſing either from the corruption of mans nature, from the world, or from the divell. II. by ſtirring up good affections and motions upon every occaſion: ſo it is ſaid, Gal. 5. 17. The fleſh (that is, the corruption of mans nature) luſteth againſt the ſpirit: and the ſpirit (that is, grace in the heart) luſteth againſt the fleſh; and that after a double ſort: firſt, by labouring to overmaſter and keepe down the motions thereof: ſecondly, by ſtirring up good motions and inclinations to pietie and religion. In Eſay the holy Ghoſt hath moſt excellent titles, Eſa. 11. 2. The ſpirit of the Lord: the ſpirit of wiſedome and underſtanding: the ſpirit of counſell, & of ſtrength: the ſpirit of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lord. Now he is ſo called, becauſe he ſtirres up good motions in the godly: of wiſedome, of knowledge, of ſtrength, of underſtanding, of counſell, and of the feare of the Lord. And S. Paul ſaith, that the fruites of the ſpirit are joy, peace, love, long-ſuffering, gentlenes, goodnes, faith, meekneſſe, temperance, &c. all which are ſo tearmed, becauſe where the H. Ghoſt rules, there hee ingendreth theſe good gifts & motions of grace: but among al the inward motions of the ſpirit, the moſt principall are theſe: I. an utter diſliking of ſin becauſe it is ſin. And that is, when a man hath an eye not ſo much to another mans ſins, as to his owne, & ſeeing thē is truly ſorrowfull for them, and diſliketh them, and himſelfe for them, not ſo much becauſe there is a place of torment, or a day of judgement to come, wherin he muſt anſwer to God for them all: but, as if there were no hell or judgement, becauſe God is diſpleaſed by them, who hath bin unto him a moſt loving and mercifull Father in redeeming him by Chriſt. The ſecond, is an hungring deſire above all things in this world, to be at unitie with God in Chriſt for the ſame ſins. This is a motion of the H. Ghoſt, which no man can have but hee in whom the holy Ghoſt doth dwell. The third, the gift of hearty prayer. For this cauſe the holy Ghoſt is called the ſpirit of ſupplications, becauſe it ſtirs up the heart & makes it fit to pray: and therefore Paul ſaith, that the ſpirit of God helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what to pray, as wee ought, but the ſame ſpirit it ſelfe maketh requeſt for us with ſighes which cannot be expreſſed. This is an ordinary worke of the holy Ghoſt in al that beleeve: and he that would know whether he have the ſpirit dwelling truly in his heart ſhall know it by this: A mother carrieth her child in her armes; if it cry for the dug, and ſucke the ſame, it is alive: being obſerved many dayes together, if it neither cry nor ſtir, it is dead. In like manner, it is an infallible note of a true child of God to cry out to his Father in heaven by prayer: but he that never cryeth nor feeleth himſelfe ſtirred up to make his mone to God, is in a miſerable caſe, and he may well be thought to be but a dead childe, and therefore let us learne in prayer unfainedly to poure out our ſoules before God, conſidering it is a ſpeciall gift of the holy Ghoſt beſtowed on the children of God.

The fourth worke of the holy Ghoſt in the heart of the elect, is comfort in diſtreſſe, & therfore our Saviour Chriſt calleth him the Comforter whom he will ſend, Ioh. 15. 26. and in the Gal. 5. 22.

Zach. 12. 10.

Rom. 8. 26.

Pſalme he is called the oyle of gladnes, Pſal. 45. 7. A becauſe hee maketh glad the heart of man in trouble and diſtreſſe. There be two things that fill the heart full of endleſſe griefe: the firſt, outward calamities, as when a man is in any danger of death, when he looſeth his goods, his good name, his friends, and ſuch like. The ſecond, is a troubled conſcience, whereof Salomon ſaith, Pro. 18. 14. A troubled ſpirit, who can beare it? and of all other it is the moſt heavy & grievous croſſe that can be. When as the hand of God was heavie upon Iob, this was the ſoreſt of his afflictions, and therefore he cries out that the arrowes of the Almighty did ſticke in his ſoule, Iob, 6. 4. Now what is the comfort in this caſe? Anſwer. In the midſt of all our diſtreſſes B the holy Ghoſt is preſent with us, to make us rejoyce, and to fill us with comforts (that no tongue can expreſſe) out of the Word of God, and ſpecially the promiſes thereof. And hereupon, the ungodly man when afflictions befall him, is ready to make away himſelfe, becauſe he wants the comfort of the holy Ghoſt.

The laſt benefit wrought in the hearts of the Elect, is the ſtrengthning of them to doe the weightieſt duties of their callings: and hence the holy Ghoſt is called the ſpirit of ſtrength, Eſay, 11. 2. There be divers things to bee done of a Chriſtian man that are farre beyond the reach of his power; as firſt, when hee ſeeth his owne ſinnes, and is truly humbled for them; then to lift up the hand of faith to heaven, and C thereby to catch hold on the mercie of God in Chriſt, is the hardeſt thing in the whole world: & this doe all thoſe which know what it is to beleeve. Secondly, it is as hard a thing in the time of temptation to reſiſt temptation, as for dry wood to reſiſt the fire whō it begins to burne. Thirdly, when a man is put to his choice, either to loſe his life, goods, friends, and all that he hath, or elſe to forſake religion; even then to forſake al, & to ſticke unto Chriſt, is a matter of as great a difficultie as any of the former. Fourthly, when a man wants the ordinary meanes of Gods providence, as meate, drinke, and cloathing, then at the very inſtant to acknowledge Gods providence, to reioyce in it, and to relie thereon, is as much as if a D man ſhould ſhake the whole earth. It is againſt our wicked nature to truſt God, unleſſe he firſt lay down ſome pawne of his love & mercy to us. How then, will ſome ſay, ſhal any one be able to doe theſe things? Anſ. The holy Ghoſt is the ſpirit of ſtrength, and by him wee doe all things, as Paul ſaith, I am able to doe all things through the helpe of Chriſt which ſtrengthneth me. Phil. 4 12.

Concerning theſe gifts of the holy Ghoſt, two queſtions may be mooved. Firſt, what is the meaſure of Grace in this life? Anſ. Small, in reſpect. In this world we receive, as Paul ſaith, Rom. 8. 23. not the tenth, but the firſt fruites of Gods Spirit, and the earneſt of the Spirit. 2 Cor. 1. 22. Now the firſt fruits properly are but as an handfull or twaine of corne, to a whole corne-field, containing many acres and furlongs of ground. And the earneſt in a bargaine it may be is but a penie laid downe for the paying of twenty thouſand pound. The ſecond queſtion is, whether the graces of the H. Ghoſt may be wholly loſt or not? Anſ. The common gifts of the ſpirit may be loſt and extinguiſhed; but the gifts proper to the Elect cannot. Indeede they may be diminiſhed and covered as coales under aſhes, and as the ſappe in the roote of the tree in the winter ſeaſon, not appearing at al in the branches; & the feeling of thē may be loſt: but they cannot either finally or totally bee loſt. It is true that God doth forſake his children; but that is only in part, as he left Ezechias to prove and trie what was in his heart. 2 Chron. 32. 31. A mother that loves her childe moſt tenderly, ſets it down in the flore, lets it ſtand, and fall, and breake the face, and all this while ſhee hides her ſelfe, not becauſe her purpoſe is to leave her child quite, or to make it hurt it ſelfe; but that when ſhe taketh it up againe, it may love her the better: So dealeth the holy Ghoſt with men to make them know their weakeneſſe and frailtie: he hides himſelfe as it were in ſome corner of the heart for a ſeaſon, that they may the more earneſtly hunger after grace, the want whereof they feele.

The uſe of this article, whereby we confeſſe that we beleeve in the holy Ghoſt, is manifold. Firſt, conſidering that all the gifts which any man hath, whether they be gifts of knowledge in the word of God, or of humane learning, or any gifts whereby men are inabled to practiſe their trades or handicrafts, doe come not from our ſelves, but from the holy Ghoſt: wee are taught this duty. Looke what gifts ſoever we for our parts have received of the ſpirit of God, we muſt uſe them ſo, as they may ever ſerve for the glory of God and good of our brethren, and not to the practiſing and ſetting forth of any manner of ſin, and by conſequent to the ſervice of the divell. For that is as if a man receiving riches and revenewes of his prince, ſhould ſtraightway goe to the princes enemy & imploy them for his benefit; which were a point of exceeding treacherie.

Furthermore, in every place the greater part of men are blind and ignorant perſons both young & old; and aged folks, as they are ignorant themſelves, ſo they muzzle up their youth in ignorance. Confer with them, you ſhall find that they can ſay nothing, but that which may be learned by common talke, as that there is a God, and that this God muſt be worſhipped: but aske them further of the meanes of their ſalvation, and of their duties to God and man, and they will anſwer you, that they are not booke-learned: tell them further, that the ordinary meanes to bring men to knowledge, is the preaching of the Word, which if they will not uſe, they ſhall be inexcuſable; they will ſay, alas, we are dull of memorie, and cannot learne. Well, for all this, thou ſaiſt thou beleeveſt in the holy Ghoſt, and he is thy Schoolemaſter to teach thee: though thy capacitie be dull, yet he is able to open thine underſtanding: for as there is outwrad teaching by the miniſter, ſo the work of the holy Ghoſt is joyned withall to enlighten the conceit of the minde, that they which heare the Word with reverence, may profit thereby, and get knowledge. But if for al this men wil not learne, but remaine ignorant ſtill, then let them mark the example of the ſonnes of Eli: he in ſome part did rebuke them for their wickedneſſe, but yet they would not obey: and the reaſon is there ſet downe, becauſe the Lord would deſtroy them. 1 *Sam.*2.25. In the ſame manner, howſoever we may not judge of any mans perſon, yet this may be ſaid, that if men refuſe to heare the Word of God, when they may, or if in hearing they will not obey, it is a fearefull ſigne that God will at length deſtroy them. When a trumpet is ſounded in a mans eare, and hee lies ſtill, not ſtirring at all, he is certenly dead. And ſurely when the trumpet of the Goſpel is ſounded in the eares of our hearts, if we awake not out of our ſinnes to newnes of life, wee are no better then dead men before God. Wherefore the caſe being thus dangerous, and the puniſhment ſo great, let us labour in time for the knowledge of Gods will, and prevent Gods judgements before they light upon us.

Thirdly, as the Apoſtle ſaith, *Gal.*5.25. If we live in the ſpirit, we muſt walke in the ſpirit, that is, if wee be dead unto ſin by the power of the holy Ghoſt, and be raiſed up to newnes of life, then we muſt walk in the ſpirit. Now to walk in the ſpirit, is to lead our lives in ſhewing forth the fruits of the ſpirit. In Eſay the holy Ghoſt is compared unto water powred forth on the drie land, which maketh their ſeede to grow like the willowes by the rivers of waters. Eſa. 44.3,4. wherefore thoſe that have the gifts of the ſpirit muſt be trees of righteouſnes bringing forth the fruits of the ſpirit, which (as they are ſet downe by Paul) are principally nine.

Gal. 5.22, 23.

The firſt fruite is love, which reſpects both God and man. Love unto God is an inward and ſpirituall motion in the heart, whereby God is loved abſolutely for himſelfe. This love ſhewes it ſelfe in two things: I. When a mans heart is ſet and diſpoſed to ſeeke the honour and glory of God in all things. II. When a man by all meanes ſtrives and endeavours himſelfe to pleaſe God in every thing, counting it a moſt miſerable eſtate to live in the diſpleaſure of God: and the heart that is thus affected, can have no greater torment then to fall into ſinne, whereby God is offended and his diſpleaſure provoked. By theſe two ſignes a man may know whether he love God or no, and by them alſo muſt hee teſtifie his love. Now our love to man is a fruite of this love of God, for God is to be loved for himſelfe: man is loved for God. This love muſt not bee in ſhew onely, but in deede and action. Saint Iohn biddeth us not to love in word & tongue onely, but indeed & truth, 1 *Ioh.*3.18. Brotherly love doth alwaies lie hid, but when an occaſion is offered, it doth breake forth into action; it is like fire, which though for a time it bee ſmothered, yet at length it breakes forth into a flame. And ſo much love a man ſheweth to his neighbour, as he hath; and where none is ſhewed, none is.

The ſecond fruit is Ioy, when a man is glad at the good of his neighbor as at his own good: and this is a ſpeciall worke of the holy Ghoſt. For the nature of man is to pine away, and to grieve at the good of another; and contrariwiſe it is a worke of grace to rejoyce thereat. Paul ſaith, *Rom.*12.15. Rejoyce with them that rejoyce. And this was the holy practiſe of the friends and neighbours of Zacharias and Elizabeth, when Iohn Baptiſt was borne, they came and rejoyced with them.

The third fruit of the ſpirit, is peace. Of this Paul ſpeaketh moſt excellently, ſaying, Rom. 12.18. If it be poſſible, as much as in you is, have peace with all men. It is nothing els but concord which muſt be kept in an holy manner, with al men, both good and bad, ſo farre forth as can be. Iſay the Prophet ſpeaking of the fruites of the Goſpel, ſaith, Iſa. 11.6. The wolfe ſhall dwel with the lambe, & the leopard with the kidde, &c. Where note, that in the kingdome of Chriſt, when a man is called into the ſtate of grace, howſoever by nature he be as a wolfe, as a leopard, as a lyon, or as a Beare; yet he ſhall then lay away his cruell nature, and become gentle, and live peaceably with all men. Now for the practiſing of this peace, there are three duties eſpecially to be learned and performed: I. Rather then peace ſhould be broken, a man muſt yeeld of his owne right. When Publicans came to our Saviour Chriſt for tribute, hee had a lawfull excuſe: for howſoever he lived in low eſtate among men, yet he was the right heire to the kingdome, and therefore was free: nevertheleſſe hee ſtood not on his priviledge, but called Peter, ſaying, *Matt.*17.26,27. Leſt we offend them go to the Sea & caſt in an angle, & take the firſt fiſh that commeth up: and when thou haſt opened his mouth, thou ſhalt find a piece of twenty pence: take it and give it to them for thee and me. Here we ſee that our Saviour Chriſt, rather then hee would breake the common peace, yeelds of his owne right; and ſo wee muſt doe if we will be good followers of him. Secondly, when any man ſhall ſinne either in word or in deed, ſpecially if it bee upon infirmitie, we muſt avoide bitter invectives and mildely tell him of his fault, and in all meekeneſſe and love labour for his amendment. So Paul teacheth us, ſaying, *Galat.*6.1,2. If any man bee fallen into any fault by occaſion, reſtore ſuch an one with the ſpirit of meekeneſſe, conſidering thy ſelfe, leſt thou bee alſo tempted, &c. Beare yee one anothers burden. Thirdly, every man within the compaſſe of his calling, muſt bee a peace-maker betweene them that are at variance. This is a ſpeciall duty of godlineſſe and chriſtianitie, and therefore our Saviour Chriſt doth highly commend ſuch, and pronounceth his bleſſing upon them, that they ſhall bee called the children of God. Mat. 5. 9.

The fourth fruit of the ſpirit, is long-ſuffering: and it ſtandeth in two points: I. when a man deferreth his anger, and is hardly brought to it: II. being angry doth not moderate the ſame, and ſtay the hotnes of that affection. For the firſt, to bridle anger, it is a ſpeciall work of the holy Ghoſt, and the meanes to attaine unto it are theſe: I. not to take notice of the injuries and wrongs done unto us, if they bee not of great moment; but to let them paſſe, as not knowing them. Salomon ſaith, Prou. 19. 11. It is a mans diſcretion to deferre his anger. Now how is that done? it is added in the next words, It is the glory of a man to paſſe by infirmitie: that is, when a man ſhall over-ſhoote himſelfe, either in word or deed, to let it paſſe either wholly or till a time convenient, as though we knew not of it. The ſecond way to deferre and bridle anger, is when a man hath injured us either in word or deed, to thinke with our ſelves that we have injured others in the ſame manner: and for this cauſe Salomon ſaith, Eccleſ. 7. 23, 24. Give not thine heart to all that men ſpeake, leſt thou heare thy ſervant curſing thee: for oftentimes thine heart alſo knoweth that thou haſt curſed others. A man muſt not liſten to every mans words at all times: but he is to thinke that hee hath ſpoken or done the ſame unto other men, and that now the Lord meeteth with him by the like, as it is ſaid, Mat. 7. 2. With what meaſure ye mete, it ſhall be meaſured to you againe. This is a thing which few conſider. Evill men deſire good report, and would have all men ſpeake well of them, where as they can ſpeake well of none; but indeed they muſt begin to ſpeake well of others before others ſpeake well of thē. Thirdly, a man muſt conſider how God dealeth with him. For ſo often as he ſinneth hee provoketh God to caſt him away, and to confound him eternally; yet the Lord is mercifull and long-ſuffering. Even ſo when men doe offend & injurie us, we muſt do as God doth: not be angry, but fight againſt our affections, endeauouring to become patient and long-ſuffering as God is with us. The ſecond propertie of long-ſuffering, is to keepe the affection of anger in moderation and compaſſe. It is not alwaies a ſin to be angry, and therefore it is ſaid of Chriſt (in whom was no blemiſh of ſin) that he was angry: yet we muſt looke that our anger be moderate not continuing overlong, as Paul ſaith, let not the ſunne go downe upon your wrath. Mar. 3. 5. Eph. 4. 26

The fift fruite of the ſpirit, is gentlenes, whereby a man behaveth and ſhewes himſelf friendly and courteous to every man, as Paul ſaith to Titus, Tit. 3. 2. Put them in remembrance that they ſpeake evill of no man, that they be no fighters, but ſoft, ſhewing all meekeneſſe unto all men, whether they be good or bad. This gentleneſſe ſtandeth in theſe points: I. to ſpeake to every man friendly and lovingly. II. to ſalute friendly and courteouſly. III, to bee ready vpon every occaſion to give reverence and honour to every man in his place. It is made a queſtion of ſome, whether a man is to ſalute and ſpeake unto them that are knowne to bee lewd and wicked men: but here we ſee what our duty is, in that we are taught to be curteous to all men both good and bad, yet ſo as wee approove not of their ſinnes: as for that which S. Iohn ſaith of falſe prophets. 2 Ioh. 10. Receive them not, neither bid them God ſpeede, it is to bee underſtood of giving an outward approbation to falſe teachers.

The ſixt fruit, is goodneſſe, which is, when a man is ready to doe good and become ſeruiceable in his calling to all men, at all times, upon all occaſions. This was to be ſeene in that holy man Iob: he ſaith, Iob 39. 15, 16. that hee was eyes to the blind, and feete to the lame, a father unto the poore, and when he knew not the cauſe hee ſought it out. And S. Paul ſhewed this fruit moſt notably after his converſion, for hee ſaith, 1 Cor. 9. 22, that he was made all things to all men that he might ſave ſome. Hee was content to undergoe any thing for the good of any man. And as we have heard, the godly are trees of righteouſnes bearing fruit, not for themſelves but for others, and therefore Paul in the Epiſtle to the Galatians gives this rule, Do ſervice one to another in love. In theſe daies it is hard to find theſe duties performed in any place. For both practice and proverbe is commonly this, Every man for himſelfe, and God for us all: but it is a graceleſſe ſaying; and the contrary muſt be practiſed of all, that deſire to bee guided by the ſpirit.

The ſeuenth fruit is faith. Faith or fidelitie ſtands in theſe two duties: One, to make conſcience of a lye, & to ſpeak euery thing whereof we ſpeak, as we thinke it is, & not to ſpeak one thing, and thinke another. A rare thing it is, to find this vertue in the world now adaies: who is he that makes conſcience of a lye? and is not truth baniſhed out of our coaſts; conſidering that for gaines and outward commodities men make no bones of glozing and diſſembling? but alas, the practiſe is damnable, & the contrary is the fruit of the holy Ghoſt, namely, to ſpeake the truth from the heart: and he that can doe this, by the teſtimony of God himſelfe ſhall reſt in the mountaine of his holineſſe, even in the kingdome of heaven. The ſecond point wherin fidelitie conſiſteth, is when a man hath made a promiſe that is lawfull and good, to keepe and performe the ſame. Some thinke it is a ſmall matter to breake promiſe, but indeed it is a fruit of the fleſh; and contrariwiſe a fruit of the ſpirit to perform a lawfull promiſe: & a mans word ſhould be as ſure as an obligation: and in conſcience a man is bound to keepe promiſe ſo farre forth, as hee will to whom the promiſe is made. Indeede if a man be releaſed of his promiſe, he is then free: otherwiſe if we promiſe and doe not performe, we doe not onely cracke our credite before men, but alſo ſinne before God. Pſal. 15. 1, 2.

The eighth fruit of the ſpirit, is meekeneſſe, which is a notable grace of God, when a man provoked by injuries, doth neither intend, nor enterpriſe the requitall of the ſame. And it ſtands in three duties. The firſt is, to interpret the ſayings and doings of other men in better part, as much as poſſibly may be. The ſecond, when men miſtake and miſconſtrue our ſayings and doings, if the matter bee of ſmaller moment, to bee ſilent and patient as Chriſt was, when hee was accuſed before the high Prieſts and Phariſees: this being withall remembred, that if the matter be of weight and moment, we may defend our ſelves by ſoft and milde anſwers. The third is, not to contend in word or deede with any man, but when wee are to deale with others, to ſpeake our minde, and ſo an end.

The laſt fruit of the ſpirit is temperance, whereby a man bridleth his appetite or luſt in meate, drinke, and apparell. In bridling the luſt, theſe rules muſt be obſerved: I. Eating and drinking muſt bee joyned with continuall faſting, after this manner: We muſt not glut our ſelves, but rather abſtaine from that which nature deſireth, and as ſome uſe to ſpeak, leave our ſtomackes craving. II. A man muſt ſo eate and drinke, as afterward hee may the better bee enabled for Gods worſhip. Creatures are abuſed when they make us unfit to ſerve God. The common fault is, on the Sabbath day men ſo pamper themſelves, as that they are made unfit both to heare and learne Gods word, and fit for nothing but to ſlumber and ſleepe: but following this rule of temperance, theſe faults ſhall be amended. III. This muſt be a caveat in our apparell, that we be attired according to our callings in holy comelineſſe. The Lord hath threatned to viſite all thoſe that are cloathed in ſtrange apparell, Zeph. 1.8. And holy comelineſſe is this, when the apparell is both for faſhion & matter ſo made and worne, that it may expreſſe & ſhew forth the graces of God in the heart, as ſobrietie, temperance, gravitie, &c. and the beholder may take occaſion by the apparell, to acknowledge and commend theſe vertues. But lamentable is the time, looke on men and women in theſe daies, and you may ſee and reade their ſins written in great letters on their apparell, as intemperance, pride, and wantonneſſe. Every day new faſhions pleaſe the world; but indeed that holy comelines, which the holy Ghoſt doth commend to us, is the right faſhion when all is done. And theſe are the nine fruits of the ſpirit, which we muſt put in practice in our lives and converſations.

Tit. 2 3.

Fourthly, if we beleeve in the holy Ghoſt, and thereupon doe perſwade our ſelves, that he will dwell in us: wee muſt daily labour as we are commanded to keepe our veſſels in holines and honour unto the Lord, 1 Theſſ. 4.4. and the reaſon is good. If a man be to entertaine but an earthly prince or ſome man of ſtate, hee would be ſure to have his houſe in a readineſſe, and all matters in order againſt his comming, ſo as every thing might bee pleaſing unto ſo worthy a gueſt: well now, behold, we put our confidence and affiance in the holy Ghoſt, and do beleeve that he will come unto us, and ſanctifie us, and lodge in our hearts. Hee is higher thē all ſtates in the world whatſoever; & therfore we muſt look that our bodies & ſoules be kept in an honorable and holy manner, ſo as they may be fit temples for him to dwell in. S. Paul biddeth us not to grieve the holy ſpirit, Eph. 4.30. Where the holy Ghoſt is compared to a gueſt, and our bodies & ſoules unto Innes: and as men uſe their gueſts friendly & courteouſly, ſhewing unto them all ſervice & dutie: ſo muſt we doe to Gods ſpirit which is come to dwell and abide in us, doing nothing in any caſe, which may diſquiet or moleſt him. Now there is nothing ſo grievous unto him as our ſinnes, and therfore me muſt make conſcience of all manner of ſinne, leſt by abuſing of our ſelves, we do cauſe the holy Ghoſt (as it were) with griefe to depart from us. When the Arke of the covenant, which was a ſigne of the preſēce of God, was in the houſe of Obed Edom, the text ſaith, 2 Sam. 6.11. that the Lord bleſſed him and all his houſe: but when the holy Ghoſt dwels in a mans heart, there is more then the arke of the Lord preſent, even God himſelfe and therefore may we looke for a greater bleſſing. Now then ſhall we grieve the holy Ghoſt by ſinning, ſeeing we reape ſuch benefit by his abode? It is ſaid that our Saviour Chriſt was angry when he came into the temple at Ieruſalem, and ſaw the abuſes therein, Ioh. 2,15. Now ſhall hee be angry for the abuſes that are done in a temple of ſtone, and ſeeing the temples of our bodies, which are not made of ſtone, but are ſpirituall, figured by that earthly temple; ſeeing them (I ſay) abuſed by ſinne, will he not bee much more angry? yea, wee may aſſure our ſelves he cannot abide that. And therefore if wee beleeue in the holy Ghoſt, wee muſt hereupon bee mooved to keepe our bodies and ſoules pure and cleane. And further to perſwade us hereunto, we muſt remember this, that when we pollute our ſoules and bodies with any manner of ſinne, we make them even ſtables and ſtyes for our wretched enemy the divell to harbour in. For when Satan is once caſt out, if afterward we fall again to our old ſinnes and looſeneſſe of life, and ſo defile our bodies, they are then moſt cleane and neate for him to dwell in: whereupon he will come and bring ſeven other divels worſe then himſelfe, and ſo a mans laſt end ſhall bee worſe then his beginning. Now what a fearefull thing is this, that the body which ſhould be a temple for the holy Ghoſt, by our ſinnes ſhould be made a ſtable for the divell. Furthermore, S. Paul biddeth us, not to quench the ſpirit. The graces of the holy ſpirit in this life, are like ſparks of fire, which may ſoone be quenched with a little water. Now ſo oft as we ſin, we caſt water upon the grace of God, and as much as wee can, put out the ſame: therefore it ſtands us in hand to make conſcience of every thing wherein wee may offend and diſpleaſe God. And wee may aſſure our ſelves, that ſo long as we live and lye in our corruptions and ſins, the holy Ghoſt will never come and dwell with us. He is a ſpirit moſt pure and chaſte, and therefore muſt have an undefiled temple to dwell in.

Thus wee have heard what is to bee beleeved concerning the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt. Now, looke as we beleeve in God diſtinguiſhed into three perſons: ſo we muſt remember, that when we performe divine worſhip to him, we may diſtinguiſh the perſons, but we are not to ſever them: when we pray to the Father, we muſt not omit the Sonne or the holy Ghoſt, but make our prayers to them all: for as in nature they are one, and in perſon not divided but diſtinguiſhed: ſo in all worſhip we muſt never confound or ſever the perſons, but diſtinguiſh them, and worſhip the Trinity in Vnity, and Vnity in Trinity: one God in three perſons, and three perſons in one God.

Hitherto we have intreated of the firſt part of the Creed concerning God: now followes the ſecond part thereof concerning the Church: and it was added to the former upon ſpeciall conſideration. For [a] the right order of a confeſſion did require, that after the Trinity the Church ſhould be mentioned, as the houſe after the owner, the temple after God, and the City after the builder. Againe, the Creede is concluded with points of doctrine concerning the Church, becauſe whoſoever is out of it, is alſo forth of the number of Gods children: and he cannot have God for his Father, which hath not the Church for his mother.

Queſtion is made what the wordes are which are to be ſupplyed in this article, the holy Catholike Church, whether, I beleeve, or I beleeve in: and ancient expoſiters have ſufficiently determined the matter. One [b] ſaith, In theſe words, in which is ſet forth our faith of the Godhead, it is ſaid, In God the Father, in the Son, and in the holy Ghoſt; but in the reſt where the ſpeech is not of the Godhead but of creatures and myſteries, the preposition (In) is not added that it ſhould be, in the holy Church, but that we ſhould beleeve there is an holy Church, not as God, but as a company gathered to God. And men ſhould beleeve that there is remiſſion of ſinnes, not, in the remiſſion of ſinnes: and they ſhould beleeve the reſurrection of the body, not, in the reſurrection of the body: therefore by this preposition the Creator is diſtinguiſhed from the creatures, and things pertaining to God, from things pertaining to men. An other upon theſe words, This is the worke of God that ye beleeve in him, ſaith, If ye beleeve in him, yee beleeve him; not if ye beleeve him, yee beleeve in him: for the divels beleeved God, but did not beleeve in him. Againe of the Apoſtles, we may ſay, wee beleeve Paul, but wee doe not beleeve in Paul: we beleeve Peter, but we beleeve not in Peter, For his faith that beleeveth in him which juſtifieth the ungodly, is imputed to him for righteouſneſſe.

What is it therefore to beleeve in him? by beleeving to love and like, and as it were to paſſe into him, and to be incorporated into his members. Now the reaſons which ſome Papiſts bring to the contrary, to proove that we may beleeve in the creatures, and in the Church, are of no moment. Firſt, they alleadge the phraſe of Scripture, Exod. 14.31. They beleeved in God, and in Moſes. 1 Sam. 27.12. And Achis beleeved in David. 2 Chr. 20.20. Beleeve in the Prophets and proſper. Anſ. The Hebrew phraſe in which the ſervile letter Beth is uſed, muſt not be tranſlated with a prepoſition that ruleth an accuſative or ablative caſe, but with a dative on this manner, Beleeve Moſes, David, the Prophets: and it doth not import any affiance in the creature, but only a giving of credence one man to another. Secondly, they alleadge, that ancient fathers read the Article on this manner, I beleeve in the holy Catholike Church. Anſ. Indeed ſome have done ſo: but by this kind of ſpeech they ſignified no more but thus much, that they beleeved that there was a Catholike Church. Epiphan. in Ancor.

Thus having found what words are to bee ſupplyed, let us come to the meaning of the article. And that we may proceed in order, let us firſt of al ſee what the Church is. The Church is a peculiar company of men predeſtinated to life everlaſting, and made one in Chriſt. Firſt I ſay, it is a peculiar company of men: for S. Peter ſaith, Ye are a choſen generation, a royall prieſthood, an holy nation, and a peculiar people. 1 Pet. 2.9. He ſpeaks indeed of the Church of God on earth, but his ſaying may be alſo extended to the whole Church of God, as wel in heaven as in earth. Now becauſe there can be no company unles it have a beginning & cauſe whereby it is gathered: therefore I adde further in the definition, predeſtinate to life everlaſting. Noting thereby the ground and cauſe of the Catholike Church, namely, Gods eternal predeſtination to life everlaſting: & to this purpoſe our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Feare not little flocke, for it is your Fathers will to give you the kingdome: ſignifying thereby, that the firſt and principall cauſe of the Church, is the good pleaſure of God, whereby hee hath before all worlds purpoſed to advance his Elect to eternall ſalvation. Therefore one ſaith well, [a] onely the Elect are the Church of God. And further, becauſe no company can continue and abide for ever, unles the members thereof be joyned and coupled together by ſome bond, therefore I adde in the laſt place, made one with Chriſt. This union maketh the Church to bee the Church: & by it the members thereof, whether they be in heaven or in earth, are diſtinguiſhed from all other companies whatſoever. Now this conjunction between Chriſt & the Church is avouched by S. Paul when he ſaith, Chriſt is the head to the body, which is his Church: & when hee aſcribes the name of Chriſt not onely to the perſon of the Son, but to the Church it ſelf, as in the Epiſtle to the Galatians, To Abraham and to his ſeed were the promiſes made: he ſaith not and to his ſeeds, as ſpeaking of many, but and unto his seed, as speaking of one, which is Christ: that is, not the redeemer alone, but also the Church redeemed. For Christ as he is man is not the onely seede of Abraham. And this definition of the Church is almost in so many words set downe in the Scriptures, in that it is called the Family of God, partly in heaven, and partly in earth, named of Christ: and also it is called the heavenly Ierusalem, the mother of us all: and the celestiall Ierusalem: and the congregation of the first borne. Now for the better understanding of the nature, estate, and parts of the Church, two points among the rest must bee considered; the efficient cause thereof, Gods Predestination; and the former, the mystical Vnion.

Eph. 3. 15.

Gal. 4. 26. Heb. 12. 22, 23.

In handling the doctrine of Predestination, my meaning is, onely to stand on such points as are revealed in the word and necessary, tending to edification. And first I will shew what is the truth, and secondly the contrary falshood. In the truth I consider foure things. I. what Predestination is. II. what is the order of it. III. what be the parts of it. IV. what is the use.

Predestination may thus bee defined: It is a part of the counsell of God, whereby he hath before all times purposed in himselfe to shew mercy on some men, and to passe by others, shewing his justice on them for the manifestation of the glory of his owne name. First, I say, it is a part of his counsell, because the counsell or decree of God, universally extends it selfe to all things that are: and Predestination is Gods decree so far forth as it concernes the reasonable creatures, especially men. Now in every purpose or decree of God, three things must be considered; the beginning, the matter, the end. The beginning is the will of God whereby he willeth and appointeth the estate of his creatures: and it is the most absolute, supreame, and soveraigne cause of all things that are, so far forth as they have being: having nothing either above it selfe or out of it selfe, to be an impulsive cause to moove or incline it; and to say otherwise, is to make the will of God to be no will. Indeed mens wils are mooved and disposed by externall causes out of themselves, borrowed from the things whereof deliberation is made, because they are to be ruled by equitie and reason: and a mans bare will without reason is nothing. Now Gods will is not ruled by another rule of reason or justice, but it selfe is an absolute rule both of justice and reason. A thing is not first of all reasonable and just, and then afterward willed by God: but it is first of all willed by God, and thereupon becomes reasonable and just. The matter of his purpose, is a decreed manifestation of two of the most principall attributes of the Godhead, mercy and justice; and that with a limitation or restraint of mercy to some of the creatures, and justice to some others, because it was his good will and pleasure, And wee are not to imagine that this is a point of crueltie of God: for his very essence or nature is not justice A alone, or mercie alone, but justice and mercie both together: and therefore to purpose the declaration of them both upon his creatures over whom he is a soveraigne Lord, and that without other respects, upon his very will and pleasure, is no point of injustice. The supreame end of the counsell of God, is the manifestation of his owne glory, partly in his mercy, and partly in his justice. For in common equitie, the end which he propounds unto himselfe of all his doing must be answerable to his nature; which is majestie and glory, and (as I have said) justice and mercy it selfe.

And because Pauls disputation in the ninth to the Romanes gives light and sufficient confirmation to this which I now teach, I will B stand a little to open & resolve the same. From the 1. verse to the 6. he sets down his grief conceived for his brethren the Iewes, and therewithall, that it might not be thought that he spake of malice, he doth onely in close and obscure manner insinuate the Rejection of that nation. This done, in the 6. verse he answers a secret objection which might be made, on this manner: If the Iewes be rejected, then the word of God is of none effect: that is, then the covenant made with the forefathers is void: but the covenant cannot be voide: therefore the Iewes are not rejected. The assumption he takes for granted, and denies the consequence of the proposition. And the ground of his deniall is, C because there is a distinction betweene man and man, even among the Iewes, whereby some are indeed in the covenant, some not. And this distinction is prooved by three examples: the first in this verse, that of the children of Iacob the common parent of all the Iewes, some are Israel, that is, truly in the covenant as Iacob was: and some are not Israel. Now it might be further objected, that the Iewes are not onely the posteritie of Iacob, but the seed of Abraham in whom all nations of the earth are blessed: and therefore not to be rejected. And to this Paul answers, verse 7. alleadging a second example of the distinction betweene man and man out of the family of Abraham, in which some were indeed sonnes, some were D not. For the proofe of this, first, he sets downe the words of the text in Moses, in Isaac shall thy seede be called: and secondly, makes an exposition of them with a collection on this manner: All they which are the sonnes of the promise, are the seede of Abraham, or the sonnes of God: but Isaac is a sonne of promise and not Ishmael, therefore Isaac is the seed of Abraham and heire of the blessing, and not Ishmael. The proposition is in the eight verse, the assumption in the ninth verse, the conclusion in the seventh verse. Here marke, I. how hee makes a double seede, one according to the flesh, the other spirituall: and two kind of sons, one of the flesh, the other the son of the promise, or the sonne of God: for hee put the one for the other. II. That the distinction betweene Isaac & Ishmael, whereby one is in the covenant of grace, the other not; ſtands not in their foreſeene faith and unbeliefe, and the fruits of them: but in the purpoſe and will of God it ſelfe. For Iſaac is called the Child of promiſe, becauſe by the vertue of it hee was borne, and beleeved, and was adopted the child of God, and made heire of the covenant given to Abraham: and therefore conſequently the right of adoption befell him by the meere good pleaſure of God, which is the firſt cauſe of our ſalvation without reſpect of any thing in the perſon of Iſaac. For what God by his promiſe brings to paſſe in time, that hee moſt freely decreed before all times. Now conſidering the Iewes might ſay, that Iſmael was rejected, becauſe hee was borne of the handmaide Hagar, whereas they for their parts deſcend of Abraham and Sarah, by Iſaac the lawfull ſonne, Paul addes a third example of the diſtinction betweene man and man out of the family of Iſaac, in which Iacob was a true ſonne and heire of the promiſe, and Eſau was not. Now the diſtinction of theſe two perſons is propounded in the tenth verſe, and confirmed verſe 11,12,13. in which are ſet downe three things. I. the time of this diſtinction, ere the children were borne, and therefore when they had neither done good nor evill. And this circumſtance is noted, to ſhew that God was not mooved by any proviſion or preconſideration of Iacobs godlineſſe, and Eſaus prophaneneſſe, to preferre the one before the other. II. the end why the diſtinction was made at this time, & not afterward when they were borne, is, that the purpoſe of God which is according to his election might remaine ſure, not of workes, but by him that calleth: that is, that by this meanes it might appeare, that when God receives any man into the covenant of eternall life, it proceeds not of any dignity in the man whom God calleth, but from his mercy and alone good pleaſure, that his decree of ſaving the elect might remaine firme and ſure for ever. Hence it is manifeſt, that there is an unchangeable decree of election of ſome men (for hee that takes all, and excepts none, cannot be ſaid to chooſe) to ſalvation, depending upon the alone will of God; and therefore neceſſarily by the law of contraries, there is an oppoſite decree of reprobation: for in that God ordaineth ſome to eternall ſalvation, hee teſtifies thereby, that his purpoſe is to paſſe by ſome without ſhewing of mercy. III. The author of this diſtinction, is God himſelf by his purpoſe before all times, which purpoſe hee made manifeſt by teſtimony given to Rebecca, ſaying, the elder ſhall ſerve the younger: that is, the firſt borne and more excellent according to the fleſh, ſhall loſe his birth-right and the bleſſing of his father, and in reſpect of title to the covenant, be ſubject to the yonger. And becauſe this teſtimony concerning the freedome and ſervitude of Iacob and Eſau might ſeeme inſufficient to proove the election of the firſt, and the rejection of the ſecond, therefore Paul addes a ſecond teſtimony out of Malachy, I have loved Iacob, and hated Eſau: that is, I have purpoſed to love Iacob, and to hate Eſau. And theſe words no doubt are alleadged to expound the former place out of Moſes, and ſhew that the bondage of Eſau was joyned with the hatred of God, and the freedome of Iacob with the love of God as tokens hereof.

Rom. 9. opened.

Gen. 25. 3.

Againſt this received expoſition of the former words which I have now propounded, ſundry expoſitions are made. Firſt, that the prerogative of Iſaac above Iſmael, and Iacob above Eſau, was onely in temporary bleſſings, in that God vouchſafed unto them the right of the land of Canaan. Anſw. If theſe places are to be underſtood of temporall bleſſings and not ſpirituall, then the Apoſtle hath not fitly alleadged the former examples, to proove the rejection of the Iewes from the Covenant. For though it bee granted, there bee a difference betweene man and man in reſpect of earthly bleſſings, yet doth it not follow, that there ſhall bee the ſame difference in things concerning the kingdome of heaven. If a father for ſome cauſe diſinherit one to two of his children, it were abſurd thereupon or conclude, that he might therefore kill any of the reſt. Againe, the land of Canaan was not onely an earthly inheritance, but alſo a pledge and figure unto our forefathers of a better inheritance in heaven: and therefore the excluding of Iſmael and Eſau from the land of Canaan, was a ſigne that they were excluded from the covenant of grace, and the right of eternall life. Some others ſay, that by Iacob and Eſau are not meant two perſons, but the two nations of the Idumeans and the Iſraelites. Anſw. It is a manifeſt untruth. For it was not poſſible for two nations to ſtrive in the wombe of Rebecca, unleſſe wee conſidered them as they were comprehended under the two heads, to wit, the very perſons of Iacob and Eſau. And whereas they ſay, that Eſau in perſon never ſerved Iacob, but onely in his poſterity, the anſwer is that Iacobs freedome and prerogatives were ſpirituall, and not temporall, which by faith he ſaw a farre off, but enjoyed not? and therefore proportionably Eſau was debaſed to the condition of a ſervant in reſpect of his yonger brother, not ſo much in reſpect of his outward eſtate and condition, as in regard of the covenant made with his anceſtors from which hee was barred. And though it bee granted, that by Iacob and Eſau two nations, and not two perſons, are to be underſtood, yet all comes to one head: for the receiving of the nation of the Iſraelites into the covenant, and the excluding of the nation of the Edomites, both deſcending of Iacob and Eſau, ſerve as well to proove Gods eternall election and reprobation, as the receiving and rejecting of one man. Others ſay that theſe words, I have hated Eſau, are thus to be underſtood, I have leſſe loved Eſau then Iacob. But how then ſhall wee ſay that Paul hath fitly alleadged this text to proove the rejection of the Iewes from the favour of God and the covenant of grace: conſidering, that of men, whereof one is loved more of God, the other leſſe; both may ſtill remaine in the Covenant. Laſtly, it is alleadged that the former expoſition makes Iſmael and Eſau damned perſons. Anſw. We muſt leave unto God all ſecret judgement of particular perſons: and yet nevertheleſſe, Paul doth very fitly in their two perſons, both deſcending of Abraham, and both circumciſed; ſet forth examples of ſuch, as for all their outward prerogatives, are indeed barred from the covenant of life everlaſting before God. And againe the oppoſition made by Paul, requires that the contrary to that which is ſpoken of Iſaac and Iacob, ſhould be ſaid of Iſhmael and Eſau. And there is nothing ſpoken of either of them in the Scriptures, which argues the diſpoſition of men ordained to eternall life. Iſmael is noted with the brand of a mocker, and Eſau of a prophane man.

To proceede in the text, becauſe the doctrine of Paul delivered in the former verſes might ſeeme ſtrange unto the Romanes, therefore in the fourteenth verſe, he layes downe an objection, and anſwers the ſame. The objection is this: If God put diſtinction betweene man and man, without reſpect had to their perſons, upon his owne will and pleaſure, then is hee unjuſt: but he is not unjuſt, therefore hee makes no ſuch diſtinction. The anſwer is, God forbid. Whereby hee denyes the conſequence of the propoſition, on this manner: Though God ſhould elect ſome to ſalvation, and reject ſome others, and that upon his will, yet were there no injuſtice with God. The reaſon of this anſwer followes in the 18. verſ. God hath abſolute power or freedome of will, whereby without being bound to any creature, he may and can firſt of all have mercy on whom he will, and ſecondly harden whom hee will. For the proofe of the firſt, that God hath mercy on whom he will, he layes downe the Teſtimony of Moſes, verſ. 15. I will have mercy on whom I will ſhew mercy, and I will have compaſſion on him, on whom I will have compaſſion. And in verſ. 16. makes his collection thence, that it (namely, the purpoſe of God according to election, ver. 11.) is not in him that willeth, or in him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth mercy. Whereby he teacheth, that the free election of God in order goes before all things that may in time befall man: and that therefore neither the intentions and endeavours of the mind, nor the workes of our life, which are the effects of election, can be the impulſive cauſes to moove God to chooſe us to ſalvation. The ſecond, that God hardens whom he will, is confirmed and made plaine by the Teſtimony of Scripture concerning Pharaoh, verſ. 17.

In the 19. verſe there followes another objection, ariſing out of the anſwer to the former, on this manner. If God will have ſome to be hardned and rejected, and his will cannot A be reſiſted; then with no juſtice can he puniſh them that are neceſſarily ſubject to his decree: but God will have ſome to be hardned and rejected, and his will cannot bee reſiſted: therefore (ſaith the adverſary) with no juſtice can hee puniſh man that is neceſſarily ſubject to his decree. Here marke, that if there had beene an univerſall election of all men, and if men had beene elected or rejected according as God did foreſee that they would beleeve or not beleeve, the occaſion of this objection had beene cut off. But let us come to Pauls anſwer. In the twentieth verſe hee takes the aſſumption for granted, that ſome are rejected becauſe God will: and that the will, that is, the B decree of God cannot be reſiſted: and onely denies the coherence of the propoſition, checking the malepert pride of the adverſary, and ſhewing that the making of this wicked and blaſphemous collection againſt the Will of God, is as if a man ſhould ſue God at the law, and bring him as it were to the bar, and plead againſt him as his equall, whereas indeed the creature is nothing to the Creator, and is abſolutely to ſubmit it ſelfe to his will in all things. In verſ 21. he proceeds to a ſecond anſwer, ſhewing that Gods will is not to be blamed, becauſe by his abſolute ſoveraignty and the right of creation, hee hath power to chooſe men, or to reject or harden them. And where there is right and power to doe a thing, the wil C of the doer is not to bee blamed. Now that God hath this right & power over his creature, it is prooved by a compariſon from the leſſe to the greater, on this manner. The potter hath power over the clay to make of the ſame lumpe, one veſſell to honour, and another to diſhonour: therefore may God much more make ſome veſſels of mercy, and ſome veſſels of wrath prepared to deſtruction. The firſt part of the compariſon is verſe 21. the ſecond part, verſe 22, 23. And leſt any man ſhould thinke that God makes veſſels of honour and diſhonour without ſufficient and juſt cauſe in himſelfe, as the potter may doe: therefore he ſets downe ends of the will of God: he makes veſſels of diſhonour to ſhew his wrath, and to make manifeſt his power: and againe he condemnes D no man, till he haye ſuffered him with long patience. And he makes veſſels of honour that he might declare the riches of his glory upon them. Hence it is manifeſt, firſt, that the end of Predeſtination is the glory of God, which is to be made manifeſt, partly in his juſtice, and partly in his mercy: ſecondly, that men are not elected or refuſed of God, for their forſeene corruptions or vertues: for then Paul would not have ſaid, that God made veſſels of diſhonour, but that being ſo already, he left them in their diſhonour.

Thus from the 6. verſe of this chapter to the 24. Paul hath deſcribed unto us the doctrine of Gods eternall predeſtination, and that by the judgement of [a] Divines in all ages.

The order of Gods Predeſtination is this. It is

A Child might anſwer this objection, if men were elect and refuſed for their foreſeene faith and unbeliefe.

the property of the reaſonable creatures to conceive one thing after another, whereas God conceives all things at once with one act of underſtanding, and all things both paſt and to come are preſent with him; and therefore in his eternall counſell hee decrees not one thing after another, but all things at once. Nevertheleſſe for our underſtanding ſake, wee may diſtinguiſh the counſell of God concerning man into two acts or degrees: the firſt, is the purpoſe of God himſelfe, in which he determines what he will doe, and the end of all his doings: and that is to create all things, ſpecially man for his owne glory; partly by ſhewing on ſome men his mercy, and upon others his juſtice. The ſecond, is, another purpoſe, whereby hee decrees the execution of the former, and layes downe meanes of accompliſhing the end thereof. Theſe two acts of the counſell of God, are not to be ſevered in any wiſe, nor confounded: but diſtinctly conſidered with ſome difference. For in the firſt, God decrees ſome men to honour, by ſhewing his mercy and love on them, and ſome againe to diſhonour, by ſhewing his juſtice on them; and this man more then that, upon his will and pleaſure, and there is no other cauſe hereof knowne to us. In the ſecond, knowne and manifeſt cauſes are ſet downe of the execution of the former decree. For no man is actually condemned; yea God decrees to condemne no man but for his ſins: and no man is actually ſaved but for the merit of Chriſt. Furthermore, this latter act of the counſell of God, muſt be conceived of us in the ſecond place and not in the firſt. For evermore the firſt thing to bee intended is the end it ſelfe, and then afterward the ſubordinate meanes and cauſes whereby the end is accompliſhed. Againe, the ſecond act of Gods counſell containes two other; one which ſetteth downe the preparation of the meanes whereby Gods Predeſtination begins to come in execution; and they are two, the creation of man righteous after the Image of God, the voluntary fall of Adam, and withall the ſhutting up of all men under damnation: the other appoints the applying of the ſeverall meanes to the perſons of men; that Gods decree, which was ſet downe before all times, may in time be fully accompliſhed; as ſhall afterward in particular appeare.

Predeſtination hath two parts, the Decree of Election, the Decree of Reprobation, or No-election. This diviſion is plaine by that which hath bin ſaid out of the 9. chapter to the Romanes, and it may bee further confirmed by other Teſtimonies. Of ſome it is ſaid, that the Lord knowes who are his: and of ſome others, Chriſt ſhall ſay in the day of judgement, I never knew you. In the acts it is ſaid, that as many of the Gentiles as were ordained to life everlaſting, beleeved. And Iude ſaith of falſe prophets, that they were ordained to condemnation.

2 Tim. 2. 9. Mat. 7. 23 Acts 13. 48. Iude 4.

In handling of the decree of election. I will conſider three things. I. what election is. II. the execution thereof. III. the knowledge of particular Election. For the firſt: Gods election is a decree, in which according to the good pleaſure of his will, he hath certainely choſen ſome men to life eternall in Chriſt for the praiſe of the glory his grace. This is the ſame which Paul ſaith to the Epheſians, God hath choſen us in Chriſt before the foundation of the world, that we ſhould be holy and without blame before him in love: who hath predeſtinate us to bee adopted through Ieſus Chriſt unto himſelfe, according to the good pleaſure of his will. Now that we may the better conceive this doctrine, let us come to a conſideration of the ſeverall points thereof. Firſt of all I ſay, Election is Gods decree. For there is nothing in the world that comes to paſſe either univerſally or particularly without the eternall and unchangeable decree of God. And therefore whereas men are actually choſen, and brought to life everlaſting, it is becauſe God did purpoſe with himſelfe and decree the ſame before all worlds. Now touching the decree it ſelfe, ſixe things are to be obſerved. The firſt, what was the motive or impulſive cauſe that mooved God to decree the ſalvation of any man. Anſw. The good pleaſure of God. For Paul ſaith, Hee will have mercy on whom he will have mercy: and, He hath predeſtinate us according to the good pleaſure of God. As for the opinion of them that ſay, that foreſeene faith and good workes are the cauſe that mooved God to chooſe men to ſalvation, it is frivolous. For faith and good works are the fruits and effects of Gods election. Paul ſaith, he hath choſen us, not becauſe he did foreſee that we would become holy, but that we might be holy. And, he hath predeſtinate us to adoption. Which is all one as if he had ſaid, he hath predeſtinate us to beleeve, becauſe adoption comes by beleeving. Now if men are elected that they might beleeve, then are they not elected becauſe they would beleeve. For it cannot be that one thing ſhould be both the cauſe and the effect of another.

Rom. 9. 18. Eph. 1. 5. Eph. 1. 4. Ioh. 1. 12.

The ſecond point, is that Gods election is unchangeable: ſo as they which are indeed choſen to ſalvation cannot periſh, but ſhall without faile attaine to life everlaſting. Paul takes it for a concluſion, that the purpoſe of God according to election muſt remaine firme and ſure; and againe, that the gifts and calling of God are without repentance. And Samuel ſaith, The ſtrength of Iſrael will not lye or repent: For he is not a man that hee ſhould repent. Such as Gods nature is, ſuch is his will and counſell: but his nature is unchangeable, I am Iehovah, ſaith he, and I change not: therefore his will likewiſe and his counſels be unchangeable. And therefore whenſoever the ſpirit of God ſhall teſtifie unto our ſpirit that we are juſtified in Chriſt, and choſen to ſalvation; it muſt bee a meanes to comfort us, and to eſtabliſh our hearts in the love of God. As for the opinion of them that ſay, the elect may fall from grace and be damned, it is full of helliſh diſcomfort, & no doubt from

from the divell. And the reasons commonly alleadged for this purpose are of no moment, as may appeare by the skanning of them. First they object, that the Churches of the Ephesians, Thessalonians, and the dispersed Iewes are all called Elect by the Apostles themselves, yet sundry of them afterward fell away. Ans. I There are two kindes of judgement to bee given of men, the judgement of certainty and the judgement of charity. By the first indeed, is given an unfallible determination of any mans election; but it belongs unto God principally and properly: and so men but in part, namely, so farre forth as God shall reveale the estate of one man unto another. Now the judgement of charity belongs unto all men; and by it leaving all secret judgements unto God, we are charitably to thinke, that al those, that live in the Church of God, professing themselves to be members of Christ, are indeed elect to salvation, till God make manifest otherwise. And on this manner, and not otherwise doe the Apostles call whole Churches elect. II. They are called elect of the principall part, and not because every member thereof was indeed elect; as it is called an heape of corne though the bigger part be chaffe. Secondly, it is alleadged, that David prayes that his enemies may be blotted out of the booke of life, which is the election of God, and that Moses, and Paul did the like against themselves. Ans. Davids enemies had not their names written in the booke of life, but onely in the judgement of men. Thus Iudas so long as hee was one of the disciples of Christ, was accounted as one having his name written in heaven. Now hence it followes, that mens names are blotted out of Gods booke, when it is made cleare and manifest unto the world, that they were never indeed written there. And where Moses saith, Forgive them this sin: if not, blot me out of thy booke: and Paul, I could wish to be accursed, &c. their meaning was, not to signifie that men elected to salvation might become reprobates: onely they testifie their zealous affections, that they could be content to be deprived of their owne salvation, rather then the whole Body of the people should perish, and God lose his glory. As for that which Christ saith, Have I not chosen you twelve, and one of you is a divell? it is to be understood, not of election to salvation, but of election to the office of an Apostle; which is temporary and changeable.

Eph. 1. 4. 1 Thes. 1. 4. 1 Pet. 1. 1, 2.

Psal. 69. 28. Exod. 32. 32. Rom. 9. 3.

Ioh. 6. 70.

The third point, is that there is an actuall election made in time, being indeed a fruit of Gods decree, and answerable unto it, and therfore I added in the description these words, whereby hee hath chosen some men. All men by nature are sinners and children of wrath, shut up under one and the same estate of condemnation. And actuali election is, when it pleaseth God to sever and single out some men above the rest, out of this wretched estate of the wicked world, and to bring them to the kingdome of his owne Son. Thus Christ saith of his owne disciples, I have chosen you out of the world. Ioh. 15. 19.

The fourth point, is the actuall or reall foundation of Gods election, and that is Christ and therefore we are said to bee chosen to salvation in Christ. Hee must bee considered two wayes: as he is God, we are predestinate of him, even as we are predestinate of the Father and the holy Ghost. As hee is our Mediator, wee are predestinate in him. For when God with himselfe had decreed to manifest his glory in saving some men by his mercy, hee ordained further the creation of man in his owne image, yet so as by his owne fal he should infold himselfe and all his posterity under damnation: this done, he also decreed that the Word should be incarnate actually, to redeeme these out of the former misery, whom he had ordained to salvation. Christ therefore himselfe was first of all predestinate as he was to be our head, and as Peter saith, ordained before all worlds; and we secondly predestinate in him, because God ordained that the execution of mans election should be in him. Here if any demand, how we may be assured that Christ in his passion stood in our roome and stead, the resolution will be easie, if we consider that he was ordained in the eternall counsell of God, to be our surety and pledge, and to be a publike person to represent all the Elect in his obedience and sufferings: and therefore it is that Peter saith, that he was delivered by the foreknowledge and determinate counsell of God. And Paul, that grace was given unto us through Christ Iesus before the world was.

Eph. 1. 4.

1 Pet. 1. 20. Aug. de pred. sanct. c. 13.

Act. 2. 23. 2 Tim. 1. 9.

The fifth point is, concerning the number of the Elect. And that I expresse in these words, hath chosen some men to salvation. If God should decree to communicate his glory and his mercy to all & every man, there could be no election. For he that takes all, cannot be said to choose. Therefore Christ saith, Many are called but few are chosen. Some make this question, how great the number of the elect is: and the answer may be this, that the elect considered in themselves bee innumerable, but considered in comparison to the whole world they are but few. Hence it follows necessarily, that saving grace is not universall, but indefinite or particular, unlesse we will against common reason make the streames more large and plentifull then the very fountaine it selfe. And this must excite us above all things in the world to labour to have fellowship with Christ, and to be partakers of the speciall mercy of God in him, yea to have the same sealed up in our hearts. Benefits common to all, as the light of the Sunne, &c. are not regarded of any. Things common to few, though they bee but temporall blessings, are sought for of all. God gives not riches to all men, but to some more, to some lesse, to some none. And hereupon how do men like drudges toile in the world from day to day, & frō yeare to yeare, to enrich themselves? Therfore much more ought men to seeke for grace in Christ, considering it is not common to all. We must not content our selves to say, God is merciful;

Mat. 20. 16.

but

but we muſt go further, and labour for a certificate in the conſcience, that we may be able to ſay that God is indeed mercifull to us. When the Diſciples would have knowne how many ſhould be ſaved, he omitting the queſtion, anſwers thus, Strive to enter in at the ſtraite gate. Luk.13.24.

The laſt point is, the end of Gods election, and that is, the manifeſtation of the praiſe and excellency of the glorious grace of God, Eph.1.6.

Thus having ſeene what election is, let us come to the execution thereof. Of which remember this rule, Men predeſtinate to the end, that is, glory, or eternal life, are alſo predeſtinate to the ſubordinate means, whereby they come to eternall life: and theſe are vocation, juſtification, ſanctification, obedience. For the firſt, he that is predeſtinate to ſalvation, is alſo predeſtinate to be called, as Paul ſaith, *Rom.*8.30. Whom he hath predeſtinate, them alſo he cals. Secondly, whom God calleth, they alſo were predeſtinate to beleeve; therefore ſaving faith is called *the faith of the elect, Tit.*1.1. And in *Act.*13.48. as many as were ordained to life everlaſting, beleeved. Thirdly, whom God hath predeſtinate to life, them he juſtifieth, as Paul ſaith, Rom 8.30. whom he hath predeſtinate, them he calleth, and whom he calleth, them he juſtifieth. Fourthly, whom hee hath predeſtinate to life, them hee hath predeſtinate to ſanctification and holineſſe of life, as Peter ſaith, 1 *Pet.*1.2. that the Iewes were elect according to the foreknowledg of God the Father unto the ſanctification of the ſpirit. Laſtly, they that are predeſtinate to life, are alſo predeſtinate to obedience; as Paul ſaith to the Epheſians, *Eph.*2.10. We are the workemanſhip of God created in Chriſt Ieſus unto good workes, which God hath ordained that we ſhould walke in them. This rule being the truth of God, muſt be obſerved: for it hath ſpeciall uſe. Firſt of all it ſerves to ſtop the mouths of ungodly and prophane men. They uſe to bolſter up themſelves in their ſinnes by reaſoning on this manner: If I be predeſtinate to eternall life, I ſhall bee ſaved whatſoever come of it, how wickedly and lewdly ſoever I live: I will therefore live as I liſt, and follow the ſwinge of mine owne will. But alas, like blind bayards they thinke they are in the way, when as they ruſh their heads againſt the wall, and farre deceive themſelves. For the caſe ſtands thus: all men that are ordained to ſalvation, are likewiſe ordained in the counſell of God to uſe all the good meanes whereby they may come to ſalvation: And therefore all the elect that live in this world ſhall be called, juſtified, ſanctified, and leade their lives in all good conſcience before God and men: and they that live and continue in their owne wicked wayes diſputing on this manner, If I be ordained to ſalvation, I ſhall not be damned; overſhoote themſelves, and as much as they can, plunge themſelves head-long into the very pit of hell. And for a man to live and dye in his ſinnes, let the world diſpute as they will, it is an infallible ſigne of one ordained to damnation. Secondly, there bee others that thinke that the preaching of the Word, the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, admonitions, exhortations, lawes, good orders, and all ſuch good meanes are needleſſe, becauſe Gods counſels bee unchangeable: if a man ſhall be condemned, nothing ſhall helpe: if a man ſhall bee ſaved nothing ſhall hinder. But wee muſt ſtill for our part remember, that God doth not onely ordaine the end, but alſo the meanes whereby the end is compaſſed: and therefore the very uſe of all preſcribed meanes is neceſſary. And for this cauſe we muſt be admoniſhed with diligence to labour and uſe all good meanes, that we may be called by the miniſtery of the Goſpel, and juſtified, and ſanctified, and at length glorified. If a King ſhould give unto one of his ſubjects a princely pallace, upon condition that he ſhall goe unto it in the way which hee ſhall preſcribe; oh what paines would that man take to know the way, and afterward to keep and continue in it! But behold, the Kingdome of heaven is the moſt glorious and royall pallace that ever was; and God hath beſtowed the ſame on his elect: and he requires nothing at their hands, but that they would turne their faces from this world, and walke unto it in the way which hee hath chalked forth unto them in his word. Therefore if we would have life everlaſting, wee muſt come forth of the broad way which leades to deſtruction, and enter into the ſtraight way that leades to eternall life. Wee muſt acquaint our ſelves with the guides, which are the miniſters of the Word, that will cry unto us, Here is the way, walke ye in it, when ye goe to the right hand or to the left, Iſa. 30.21. Vocation, juſtification, ſanctification, repentance, new-obedience, are the markes of the way, and we muſt paſſe by them all: and thus our weary ſoules weltring a while in this wretched world, ſhall at length be received into eternall joy and happineſſe.

Touching the knowledge of particular election, two ſpeciall points are to bee ſkanned; I. whether a man may know his election: II. how it may be knowne. For the firſt, Papiſts are of mind, that no man can certainely know his owne election unleſſe he be certified thereof by ſome ſpeciall revelation from God; but the thing is falſe and erroneous which they ſay. When the Diſciples of our Saviour Chriſt returned from preaching, and ſhewed what wonders they had done, and how divels were ſubject unto them, the text ſaith, they rejoyced greatly. But Chriſt anſwered them againe, ſaying, *Luk.*10.20. In this rejoyce not, but rather rejoyce that your names are written in heaven. Whereby hee ſignifies, that men may attaine to a certaine knowledge of their owne election. For we cannot, neither doe we rejoyce in things either unknowne or uncertaine. Saint Peter ſaith, 1 *Pet.*1.10. Give all diligence to make your election ſure. Now in vaine were it to uſe diligence, if the aſſurance of election could not bee any wayes compaſſed without an extraordinary revelation. And Paul ſaith to the Corinthians, 2 Corin. 13.5. Proove your ſelves whether ye be in the faith or not. Where hee takes it for granted, that hee which hath faith, may know he hath faith, and therefore may alſo know his election: becauſe ſaving faith is an infallible marke of election.

The ſecond point, is how any man may come to know his owne election. And there be two wayes of knowing it. The one, is by aſcending up as it were into heaven, there to ſearch the counſell of God, and afterward to come downe to our ſelves. The ſecond, by deſcending into our owne hearts to goe up from our ſelves, as it were by Iacobs ladder, to Gods eternall counſell. The firſt way is dangerous, & not to be attempted. For the wayes of God are unſearchable and paſt finding out. The ſecond way alone is to be followed, which teacheth us by ſignes and teſtimonies in our ſelves, to gather what was the eternall counſell of God concerning our ſalvation. And theſe teſtimonies are two: the teſtimony of Gods ſpirit, and the teſtimony of our ſpirits; as Paul ſaith, The ſpirit of God beareth witneſſe together with our ſpirits, that we are the ſonnes of God, Rom. 8.16.

Touching the Teſtimony of Gods Spirit, two queſtions may be demanded. The firſt is, by what meanes the ſpirit of God gives a particular teſtimony in a mans conſcience of his adoption. Anſ. It is not done by any extraordinary revelation, or enthuſiaſme, that is, an ordinary revelation without the word; but by an application of the promiſes of the Goſpell in the forme of a practicall ſyllogiſme, on this manner: Whoſoever beleeveth in Chriſt, is choſen to life everlaſting. This propoſition is ſet down in the Word of God, and it is further propounded, opened, and applyed to all that be in the Church of God, by the Miniſters of the Goſpel ſet apart for this end. Now while the hearers of Gods Word give themſelves to meditate and conſider of the ſame promiſe, comes the Spirit of God and enlightens the eyes, and opens the heart, and gives them power both to will to beleeve, and to beleeve indeed: ſo as a man ſhall with freedome of ſpirit, make an aſſumption, and ſay, but I beleeve in Chriſt, I renounce my ſelfe, all my joy and comfort is in him: fleſh and blood cannot ſay this, it is the operation of the holy Ghoſt. And hence ariſeth the bleſſed concluſion which is the Teſtimony of the ſpirit; therefore I am the child of God.

The ſecond queſtion is, how a man may diſcerne betweene the illuſion of the divell, and the Teſtimony of the Spirit. For as there is a certaine perſwaſion of Gods favor from Gods ſpirit; ſo there be ſleights and frauds of the divell whereby hee flatters and ſoothes men in their ſinnes: and there is in all men naturall preſumption in ſhew like faith, indeed no faith. And this counterfeit mock-faith is farre more common in the world then true faith is. Take a view hereof in our ignorant & careleſſe people; aske any one of them, whether he be certaine of his ſalvation or no; hee will without bones-making, proteſt that he is fully perſwaded and aſſured of his ſalvation in Chriſt: that if there be but one man in a countrey to be ſaved it is he: that he hath ſerved God alwayes: and done no man hurt: that he hath evermore beleeved: and that hee would not for all the world, ſo much as doubt of his ſalvation. Theſe and ſuch like preſumptuous conceits in blind and ignorant perſons run for currant faith in the world. Now the true Teſtimony of the ſpirit is diſcerned from naturall preſumption, and all illuſions of the divell by two effects and fruits thereof, noted by Paul in that hee ſaith, Rom. 8. 16. 26. that the ſpirit makes us cry, Abba, that is, Father. The firſt is, to pray ſo earneſtly with groanes and ſighes, as though a man would even fill heaven and earth with the cry not of his lips, but of his heart, touched with ſenſe and feeling of his manifold ſins and offences. And this indeed is a ſpeciall and principall note of the ſpirit of adoption. Now look upon the looſe and careleſſe man, that thinkes himſelfe ſo filled with the perſwaſion of the love and favour of God, ye ſhall find that he very ſeldome or never prayes: and when he doth, it is nothing elſe but a mumbling over the Lords prayer, the Creede, and the tenne Commandements for faſhion ſake. Which argues plainely, that the perſwaſion which he hath of Gods mercy, is of the fleſh, and not of the ſpirit. The ſecond fruit is, the affection of a dutifull Child to God a moſt loving Father: and this affection makes a man ſtand in feare of the Majeſty of God, whereſoever he is, and to make conſcience of every evill way. Now thoſe that are carried away with preſumption, ſo ſoone as any occaſion is given, they fall ſtraight into ſin without miſlike or ſtay, as fire burnes with ſpeed when dry wood is laid unto it. In a word, where the teſtimony of the ſpirit is truely wrought, there be many other graces of the ſpirit joyned therewith, as when one branch in a tree buddeth, the reſt bud alſo.

The teſtimony of our ſpirit is the teſtimony of the heart and conſcience, purified and ſanctified in the blood of Chriſt. And it teſtifieth two waies: by inward tokens in it ſelfe; by outward fruits. Inward tokens are certaine ſpeciall graces of God imprinted in the ſpirit, wherby a man may certainely be aſſured of his adoption. Theſe tokens are of two ſorts, they either reſpect our ſinnes, or Gods mercy in Chriſt. The firſt are in reſpect of ſinnes paſt, preſent, or to come. The ſigne in the ſpirit which concerneth ſinnes paſt, 2 Cor. 7.10. is godly ſorrow, which I may tearme a beginning and mother-grace of many other gifts and graces of God. It is a kind of griefe conceived in heart in reſpect of God. And the nature of it may the better be conceived, if we compare it with the contrary. Worldly ſorrow ſprings of ſinne, and it is nothing elſe but the horror of conſcience, and the apprehenſion of the wrath of God for the ſame: now godly ſorrow, it may indeed bee occaſioned by our ſinnes, but it ſprings properly from the apprehenſion of the grace and goodneſſe of God. Worldly ſorrow is a griefe for ſinne onely in reſpect of the puniſhment; godly ſorrow is a lively touch and griefe of heart for ſin becauſe it is ſin, though there were no puniſhment for it. Now that no man may deceive himſelfe in judging of this ſorrow, the holy Ghoſt hath ſet downe ſeven fruits or ſignes thereof whereby it may be diſcerned, 2 Cor. 7. 11. The firſt is, Care to leave all our ſinnes: the ſecond is, Apology whereby a man is mooved and carried to accuſe and condemne himſelfe for his ſinnes paſt, both before God and man. The third is Indignation, whereby a man is exceedingly angry with himſelfe for his offences. The fourth is Feare, leſt he fall into his former ſinnes againe. The fift is Deſire, whereby he craveth ſtrength and aſſiſtance that his ſinnes take no hold on him as before. The ſixt is Zeale, in the performance of all good duties contrary to his ſpeciall ſins. The ſeventh is Revenge, whereby hee ſubdues his body, leſt it ſhould hereafter be an inſtrument of ſinne as it hath beene in former time. Now when any man ſhall feele theſe fruits in himſelfe, he hath no doubt the godly ſorrow, which here we ſpeake of.

The token which is in regard of ſinnes preſent, is the combate betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit. Gal. 5. 17. proper to them that are regenerate, who are partly fleſh, and partly ſpirit. It is not the checke of conſcience which all men finde in themſelves both good and bad, ſo oft as they offend God: but it is a fighting and ſtriving of the mind, will, and affections with themſelves, whereby ſo farre forth as they are renued, they carry the man one way, and as they ſtill remaine corrupt, they carry him flat contrary. Men having the diſeaſe called Ephialtes, when they are halfe a ſleepe feele as it were ſome weighty thing lying upon their breaſts, and holding them downe: now lying in this caſe, they ſtrive with their hands and feet, and with all the might they have to raiſe up themſelves, and to remoove the weight, and cannot. Behold here a lively reſemblance of this combate. The fleſh which is the in-borne corruption of mans nature, lyes upon the hearts of the children of God, and preſſeth them downe, as if it were the very weight of a mountaine: now they according to the meaſure of grace received, ſtrive to raiſe up themſelves from under this burden, and to doe ſuch things as are acceptable to God; but cannot as they would.

The token that reſpects ſinne to come, is care to prevent it. That this is the mark of Gods children, appeareth by the ſaying of Iohn, 1. Ioh. 5. 18. He that is borne of God ſinneth not, but keepeth himſelfe, that the wicked one touch him not. And this care ſhewes it ſelfe not onely in ordering the outward actions, but even in the very thoughts of the heart. For where the Goſpel is of force, it brings every thought into captivity to the obedience of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 10. 5. and the Apoſtles rule is followed: Whatſoever things are true, whatſoever things are honeſt, &c. thinke on theſe things. Phil. 4 8.

The tokens which concerne Gods mercy are ſpecially two: The firſt is: when a man feeles himſelfe diſtreſſed with the burden of his ſins, or when he apprehends the heavy diſpleaſure of God in his conſcience for the: then further to feele how bee ſtands in neede of Chriſt, and withal heartily deſire, yea to hunger and thirſt after reconciliation with God in the merit of Chriſt, and that above all other things in the world. To all ſuch, Chriſt hath made moſt ſweet and comfortable promiſes, which can appertaine to none but to the elect. If any man thirſt, let him come to me and drinke: he that beleeveth in mee, as ſaith the Scripture, out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of water of life. Rev. 21. 6. I will give unto him which is athirſt, of the well of the water of life freely. Now if he that thirſteth, drinke of theſe waters, marke what follows, Ioh. 4. 14. Whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall never be more athirſt: but the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing up unto everlaſting life. Ioh. 7. 37.

The ſecond is a ſtrange affection wrought in the heart by the Spirit of God, whereby a man doth ſo eſteeme and value, and as it were, ſet ſo high a price on Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, that he accounts even the moſt pretious things that are, to be but as dung in regard thereof. This affection was in Paul, and it is expreſſed in the parable, in which after a man hath found a treaſure, he firſt hides it: and then ſels all he hath, and makes a purchaſe of the field where it is. Now every man will ſay of himſelfe, that he is thus affected to Chriſt, and that hee more highly eſteemes the leaſt drop of his blood, then all things in the world beſide: whereas indeed moſt men are of Eſaus mind, rather deſiring the red broth then Iſaacs bleſſing; and of the ſame affection with the Iſraelites, which liked better the onyons and fleſh-pots of Egypt, then the bleſſings of God in the land of promiſe. Therefore that no man may deceive himſelfe, this affection may be diſcerned by two ſignes. The firſt, is to love & like a Chriſtian man becauſe he is a Chriſtian. For he that doth aright eſteeme of Chriſt, doth in like manner eſteeme of the members of Chriſt. And of this very point our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, He that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, ſhall receive a Prophets reward; and he that receives a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, ſhal receive the reward of a righteous man. And S. Iohn ſaith. Hereby we know that we are trãſlated frõ death to life, becauſe we love the brethren: that is, ſuch as are mẽbers even becauſe they are ſo. The ſecond ſigne of this affection is a love and deſire to the comming of Chriſt, whether it be by death unto any man particularly, or by the laſt judgement univerſally, and that for this end, that there may be a full participation of fellowſhip with Chriſt. And that this very love is a note of Phil. 3. 4. Mat. 13. 43. Mat. 10. 41. 1 Ioh. 3. 14.

adoption, it appeares by that which Saint Paul ſaith, 2 Tim. 4. 8. that the crown of righteouſnes is laid up for all thē that love the appearing of Chriſt

The outward token of adoption, is New-obedience, whereby a man indeavours to obey Gods Commandements in his life and converſation: as Saint Iohn ſaith, 1 Ioh. 2. 3. Hereby we are ſure that we know him, if wee keepe his Commandements. Now this obedience muſt not be judged by the rigour of the morall Law, for then it ſhould be no token of grace, but rather a meanes of damnation: but it muſt bee eſteemed and conſidered as it is in the acceptation of God, Mal. 3. 17. who ſpares them that feare him, as a Father ſpares an obedient ſonne: eſteeming things done not by the effect and abſolute doing of them, but by the affection of the doer. And yet leſt any man ſhould here be deceived, we muſt know that the obedience, which is an infallible marke of the Child of God, muſt be thus qualified. Firſt of all, it muſt not be done unto ſome few of Gods commandements, but unto them all without exception. Mark. 6. 20. Herod heard Iohn Baptiſt willingly, and did many things: and Iudas had excellent things in him, as appeares by this, that he was content to leave all & to follow Chriſt, & he preached the Goſpel of Gods Kingdome in Iury as well as the reſt: yet alas, all this was nothing: for the one could not abide to become obedient to the ſeventh commandement in leaving his brother Philips wife; and the other would not leave his covetouſneſſe, to dye for it. Vpright and ſincere obedience doth inlarge it ſelfe to all the commandements, as David ſaith, Pſal. 119. 6. I ſhall not be confounded, when I have reſpect to all thy Commandements. And S. Iames ſaith, Iam. 2. 10. he which faileth in one law is guilty of all: that is, the obedience to many commādements is indeed before God no obedience, but a flat ſin, if a man wittingly and willingly carry a purpoſe to omit any one duty of the Law. He that repents of one ſin truly, doth repent of all: & he that lives but in one knowne ſinne without repentance, though he pretend never ſo much reformation of life, indeed repents of no ſinne. Secondly, this obedience muſt extend it ſelfe to the whole courſe of a mans life after his converſion and repentance. Wee muſt not judge of a man by an action or two, but by the tenour of his life. Such as the courſe of a mans life is, ſuch is the man: though he, through the corruption of his nature, faile in this or that particular action, yet doth it not prejudice his eſtate before God, ſo be it he renue his repentance for his ſeverall ſlips and fals, not lying in any ſinne; and withall from yeare to yeare walke unblameable before God and men. S. Paul ſaith, 2 Tim. 2. 19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure: the Lord knoweth who are his. Now ſome might hereupon ſay, It is true indeed, God knowes who are his; but how may I bee aſſured in my ſelfe, that I am his? to this demand, as I take it, Paul anſwers in the next words: Let every one that calleth on the name of the Lord depart from iniquity: that is, let men invocate the Name of God, praying ſeriouſly for things whereof they ſtand in need, withall giving thankes and departing from all their former ſinnes, and this ſhall bee unto them an infallible token, that they are in the election of God. Thirdly, in outward obedience is required that it proceed from the whole man, 1 Theſ. 3. 13. as regeneration which is the cauſe of it, is through the whole man in body, ſoule, and ſpirit. Againe, obedience is the fruit of love, and love is from a pure heart, a good conſcience, and faith unfained.

Thus we have heard the Teſtimonies and tokens whereby a man may bee certified in his conſcience, that hee was choſen to ſalvation before all worlds. If any deſire further reſolution in this point, let them meditate upon the 15. Pſalme, and firſt Epiſtle of S. Iohn, being parcels of Scripture penned by the Holy Ghoſt for this end.

Here ſome will demand, how a man may be aſſured of his adoption, if he want the teſtimony of the ſpirit to certifie him thereof. Anſw. Fire is knowne to be no painted but a true fire, by two notes; by heate, and by the flame: now if the caſe fall out that the fire want a flame, it is ſtill knowne to be fire by the heate. In like manner, as I have ſaid; there be two witneſſes of our adoption; Gods Spirit, and our ſpirit: now if it fall out, that a man feele not the principall, which is the ſpirit of adoption, he muſt then have recourſe to the ſecond witneſſe, and ſearch out in himſelfe the ſignes and tokens of the ſanctification of his owne ſpirit, by which he may certainely aſſure himſelfe of his adoption, as we know fire to be fire by the heate, though it want a flame.

Againe it may be demanded on this manner: how if it come to paſſe that after inquiry, we find but few ſignes of ſanctification in our ſelves. Anſw. In this caſe wee are to have recourſe to the leaſt meaſure of grace, leſſe then which, there is no ſaving grace; and it ſtands in two things: an hearty diſliking of our ſins becauſe they are ſinnes, and a deſire of reconciliation with God in Chriſt for them all: and theſe are tokens of adoption, if they be ſoundly wrought in the heart, though all other tokens for the preſent ſeeme to bee wanting. If any ſhall ſay, that a wicked man hath this deſire, as Balaam, who deſired to die the death of the righteous: the anſwer is, that Balaam indeed deſired to dye as the righteous man doth, but hee could not abide to live as the righteous; hee deſired the end, but not the proper ſubordinate meanes which tend unto the end: as vocation, juſtification, ſanctification, repentance, &c. The firſt is the worke of nature, the ſecond is the worke of grace. Now I ſpeake not this to make men ſecure and to content themſelves with theſe ſmall beginnings of grace, but onely to ſhew how any may aſſure themſelves that they are at the leaſt, babes in Christ: adding this withall, that they which have no more but these small beginnings must be carefull to increase them, because he which goes not forward, goes backward.

Lastly, it may bee demanded what a man should doe if he want both the testimony of Gods spirit, and his owne spirit, and have no meanes in the world of assurance? Answ. He must not utterly despaire, but be resolved of this, that though he want assurance now, yet he may obtaine the same hereafter. And such must be advertised to heare the word of God preached: and being outwardly of the Church to receive the Sacraments. When wee have care to come into the Lords vineyard, and to converse about the wine-presse, we shall finde the sweet juyce of heavenly grace pressed forth unto us plentifully by the Word and Sacraments, to the comfort of our consciences, concerning Gods election. This one mercy, that God by these meanes in some part reveales his mercy, is unspeakable. When sicknesse or the day of death comes, the deerest servants of God, it may be, must encounter with the temptations of the divell, and wrastle in conscience with the wrath and displeasure of God, as for life and death: and no man knoweth how terrible these things are, but those which have felt them. Now when men walke thus through the valley of the shadow of death, unlesse God should as it were open heaven, and streame downe unto us in this world some lightsome beames of his love in Christ by the operation of his spirit, miserable were the case even of the righteous.

Thus much of Election, now followes Reprobation; in handling whereof we are to observe three things. I. What it is. II. How God doth execute this decree. III. How a man may judge of the same.

For the first, Reprobation is Gods decree, in which because it so pleased him, he hath purposed to refuse some men by meanes of Adams fall and their owne corruptions, for the manifestation of his justice. First, I say, it is a decree, and that is evident thus: If there be an eternall decree of God, whereby he chooseth some men, then there must needs be another whereby he doth passe by others and refuse them. For election alwaies implies a refusall. Againe, what God doth in time, that hee decreed to doe before time: as the case falles out even with men of meane wisedome, who first of all intend with themselves the things to be done, and after doe them. But God in time refuseth some men as the Scripture testifieth, and it appeareth to bee true by the event? Therefore God before all worlds decreed the rejecting of some men.

Now in this decree foure points are to bee considered. The first is, the matter or object thereof, which is the thing decreed, namely, the rejection of some men in respect of mercie; or, the manifestation of his justice upon them. This may seeme strange to mans reason, but here we must with all submission strike

A our top-sailes, for the word of God saith as much in plaine tearmes. The Apostle Iude speaking of false Prophets saith, Iude 4. that they were of old ordained to this damnation. And Paul saith in emphaticall tearmes, Rom. 9. 22. that God makes vessels of wrath prepared to destruction, and some are rejected, whom he opposeth to them which are elected to salvation. 2 Cor. 4. 3. 2 Thess. 2. 9. 13.

The second point is, the impulsive cause that mooved God to set downe this decree concerning his creature, and that was nothing out of himselfe, but his very will and pleasure. Hee hardened Pharaoh with finall hardnesse of heart, because hee would: and therefore hee decreed to doe so because he would. And our B Saviour Christ saith, I thanke thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and men of understanding, and hast opened them unto babes. But upon what cause did God so? It followes in the next words, verse 26. It is so, O Father, because thy good pleasure is such. And if it be in the power and libertie of a man to kill an Oxe or a Sheepe for his use, to hunt and kill the Hare and Partridge for his pleasure: then much more without injustice may it be in the will and libertie of the Creator to refuse and forsake his creature for his glory. Nay, it stands more with equitie a thousand fold, that all the creatures in heaven and earth should joyntly serve to set forth the glory and Majesty of God the Creator in their eternall destruction, then the striking of a flie or the killing of a flea should serve for the dignitie of all men in the world. For all this, it is thought by very many to bee very hard to ascribe unto God who is full of bountie and mercy, such a decree, and that upon his very will: but let us see their reasons. First of all they say, it is a point of cruelty with God to purpose to create a great part of the world to damnation in hell fire: the answer is, that by the vertue of this decree God cannot be said to create any to damnation, but to the manifestation of his justice & glory in his due and deserved damnation: and the doing of this is absolute justice. Secondly, it is alleadged, that by this meanes God shall hate his owne creature, and that before it is: but it is an untruth. Wee must distinguish betweene Gods purpose to hate, and actuall hating. Now indeed God before all worlds did purpose to hate some creatures: and that justly so farre forth as his hating of them will serve for the manifestation of his justice: but hee neither hates them indeed, nor loves them before they are: and therefore actuall hatred comes not in till after the creation. Whom God hath decreed to love, them, when they are once created, he begins to love in Christ with actuall love: and whom he hath decreed to hate, them being once created, he hates in Adam with actuall hatred. Thirdly, it is objected, that by this doctrine God shall be the author of sinne; for he which ordaines to the end, ordaines to the meanes of the end: but God ordaines men to the end, that is damnation: therefore he ordaines them to the meanes thereof, that is ſin.

Anſ. The propoſition being thus underſtood, He which ordaines a man to an end, in the ſame order and manner ordaines him to the meanes; is falſe. For one may be ordained to the end ſimply, the end being ſimply good; and yet not be ſimply ordained to the meanes, becauſe they may be evill in themſelves, and onely good in part; namely, ſo far forth as they have reſpect of goodneſſe in the minde of the ordainer. Secondly, the aſſumption is falſe; for the ſupreame end of Gods counſell is not damnation, but the declaration of his juſtice in the juſt deſtruction of the creature: neither doth God decree mans damnation as it is damnation, that is, the ruine of man and the putting of him forth to periſhment, but as it is a reall execution of juſtice. Thirdly, we muſt make diſtinction betweene ſin it ſelfe, and the permiſſion thereof: and betweene the decree of rejection, and actuall damnation: now the permiſſion of ſinne, and not ſinne it ſelfe properly is the ſubordinate meanes of the decree of rejection. For when God had decreed to paſſe by ſome men, he withall decreed the permiſſion of ſinne, to which permiſſion men were ordained: and ſinne it ſelfe is no effect, but onely the conſequent of the decree: yet ſo, as it is not onely the antecedent, but alſo the efficient and meritorious cauſe of actuall damnation.

The third point, is the reall foundation of the execution of this decree, in juſt condemnation, and that is the voluntary fall of Adam, and of all his poſteritie in him, with the fruit thereof, the generall corruption of mans nature. For howſoever God hath purpoſed to refuſe men becauſe it ſo pleaſed him, yet when his purpoſe comes to execution, he condemneth no man but for his ſins: and ſinne though it were not in the counſel of God an impulſive cauſe that mooved him to purpoſe a declaration of juſtice and judgement, yet was it a ſubordinate meanes of damnation: God in wonderfull wiſedome ordering and diſpoſing the execution of this decree, ſo as the whole blame and fault of mans deſtruction ſhould be in himſelfe. And therefore the Lord in the Prophet Oſe ſaith, Hoſ. 13. 9. One hath deſtroyed thee, but I will helpe thee: that is, ſalvation is of God, and the condemnation of men is from themſelves. Now whereas many depraving our doctrine ſay, that we aſcribe unto God an abſolute decree in which he doth abſolutely ordaine men to damnation, they may here be anſwered. If by abſolute, they underſtand that which is oppoſed to conditionall, then wee hold and avouch, that all the eternall decrees of God are ſimple or abſolute, and not limited or reſtrained to this or that condition or reſpect. If by abſolute, they underſtand a bare and naked decree without reaſon or cauſe, then we deny Gods decree to be abſolute. For though the cauſes thereof be not knowne to us, yet cauſes there be, knowne to him, and juſt they are: yea the very will of God it ſelfe is cauſe ſufficient, it being the abſolute rule of juſtice. And though men in reaſon can not diſcerne the equity and juſtice of Gods will in this point, yet may we not thereupon conclude that therfore it is unjuſt. The Sunne may ſhine clearely, though the blind man ſee it not. And it is a flat miſtaking to imagine that a thing muſt firſt of all be juſt in it ſelfe, and then afterward be willed of God. Whereas contrariwiſe, God muſt firſt will a thing before it can be juſt. The will of God doth not depend upon the quality and nature of the thing, but the qualities of things in order of cauſes follow the will of God. For every thing is as God wils it. Laſtly, if it be called an abſolute decree, becauſe it is done without all reſpect to mans ſinne, then we ſtill deny it to be abſolute. For as God condemnes man for ſinne: ſo hee decreed to condemne him for, and by his ſinne: yet ſo, as if the queſtion be made, what is the cauſe why hee decrees rather in his juſtice to condemne this man then that man, no other reaſon can bee rendred, but his will.

The laſt point is, the end of Gods decree, namely, the manifeſtation of his juſtice, as Salomon ſaith, The Lord hath made things for his owne ſake, and the wicked for the day of evill. And Paul ſaith, that God made veſſels of wrath, To ſhew his wrath, and to make his power knowne.

Prov. 16. 14.

Rom. 9. 22.

Thus we have ſeene what Reprobation is: now followes the Execution thereof, for that which God decrees before time, in time he executes. And here a ſpeciall rule to be remẽbred is this, Thoſe which are ordained to juſt damnation, are likewiſe ordained to be left to themſelves in this world, in blindnes of mind & hardnes of heart, ſo as they neither ſhall, nor will repent of their ſins. The truth of this we may ſee in Gods Word. For S. Peter ſpeaking of the Prieſts and Doctours, and chiefe of the people among the Iewes, ſaith plainly, They ſtumbled at the word, & were diſobedient. Why ſo? the reaſon is there ſet down: becauſe they were ordained to it of old. And ſo Paul ſaith to the Corinthians, that he handled not the word of God deceitfully, but in the declaration of the truth hee approoved himſelfe to every mans conſcience in the ſight of God. Now hereupon it may be ſaid: how then comes it to paſſe that all receive not the Goſpel in Corinth; and to this he anſwers with a terrible ſentence, If (ſaith he, 1 Cor. 4. 3.) our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that periſh: giving us to underſtand, that God leaves them to themſelves in this world, whom he purpoſeth to refuſe. And the Lord by the Prophet Eſay ſaith of the Iews, Eſa. 6. 9. By hearing they ſhall heare and not underſtand, and by ſeeing they ſhall ſee & not perceive, leſt they ſhould heare with their eares, and ſee with their eyes, and underſtand with their hearts, and ſo turne and be ſaved.

The uſe of this is manifold: firſt it ſerves to overthrow the opinion of carnall men, which reaſon thus: If I be ordained to damnation, let me live never ſo godly and well, I am ſure

to

to be damned, therefore I will live as I liſt: for it is not poſſible for me to alter Gods decree. Blaſphemous mouthes of men make nothing of this and like ſpeeches, and yet they ſpeak flat contraries. For whom God hath purpoſed in his eternall counſell to refuſe, them alſo he hath purpoſed for their ſinnes, to leave to the blindneſſe of their mindes and hardneſſe of their hearts, ſo as they neither will, nor can live a godly life. Secondly, this rule doth as it were, leade us by the hand to the conſideration of the fearefull eſtate of many people among us. We have had for the ſpace of thirty yeeres and more the preaching of the Goſpell of Chriſt, and the more plentifully by reaſon of the Schooles of learning. But what hath been the iſſue of it? I doubt not but in many it hath bin the meanes of their converſion and ſalvation: but to ſpeake generally of the greater part, there is little or no fruit to be ſeene. The moſt after this long preaching remaine as blind, as impenitent, as hard hearted, and as unreformed in their lives as ever they were, though they have heard the Lord calling them to repentance from day to day, and from yeare to yeare. Wel, if this rule be the truth of God, as no doubt it is, then I ſay plainely, that there is a moſt fearefull judgement of God among us. My meaning is not to determine or give ſentence of any mans perſon, of any towne, or people, nevertheleſſe this may be avouched, that it is a terrible and dangerous ſigne of the wrath of God, that after this long and daily preaching, there is ſtill remaining a generall hardneſſe of heart, impenitency, and want of reformation in the lives of men. The Smiths ſtithy, the more it is beaten, the harder it is made: and commonly the hearts of men, the more they are beaten with the hammer of Gods Word, the more dull, ſecure, and ſenſleſſe they are. This being ſo, it ſtands every man in hand to looke to his owne eſtate. We are carefull to flye the infection of the bodily plague: oh then how careful ſhould we be to flie the common blindneſſe and hardneſſe of heart which is the very plague of all plagues, a thouſandfold worſe then all the plagues of Egypt? And it is ſo much the more fearefull, becauſe the more it takes place, the leſſe it is perceived. When a malefactor on the day of Aſſiſe is brought forth of the Iayle, with great bolts and fetters to come before the Iudge, as he is going all men pity him and ſpeak comfortably unto him: but why ſo? becauſe he is now to be arraigned at the barre of an earthly judge. Now the caſe of all impenitent ſinners is farre more miſerable, then the caſe of this man: for they lye fettered in bondage under ſin and Satan; and this ſhort life is the way in which they are going every houre to the barre of Gods juſtice, who is the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, there to be arraigned and to have ſentence of condemnation given againſt them. Now canſt thou pity a man that is before an earthly judge, & wilt thou not be touched with the miſery of thine owne

A eſtate, who goeſt every day to the barre of Gods juſtice; whether thou bee ſleeping or waking, ſitting or ſtanding, as a man on the ſea in a ſhip, goes continually toward the haven, though he ſtirre not his foote. Begin now at length to lay this point to your hearts, that, ſo long as ye run on in your blind wayes without repentance, as much as ye can, ye make poſthaſt to hell-ward; and ſo long as you continue in theſe miſerable conditions, as S. Peter ſaith, 2 Pet. 2. 3. Your judgement is not farre off, and your damnation ſleepeth not. Thirdly, ſeeing thoſe whom God hath purpoſed to refuſe, ſhall be left unto themſelves, and never come to repentance, we are to love and embrace the
B Word of God preached, and taught unto us by the Miniſters of the Goſpell: and withall ſubmitting our ſelves unto it, and ſuffering the Lord to humble us thereby, that we may come at length out of the broad way of blindneſſe of mind, and hardneſſe of heart leading to deſtruction, into the ſtrait way of true repentance and reformation of life, which leadeth to ſalvation. For ſo long as a man lives in this world after the luſts of his owne heart, he goes on walking in the very ſame broad way to hell, in which all that are ordained to condemnation walke: and what a fearefull thing is it, but for a little while to be a companion in the way of deſtruction with them that periſh: & therfore
C I ſay once againe, let us all in the feare of God, lay his word unto our hearts, and heare it with reverence, ſo as it may be in us the ſword of the ſpirit to cut downe the ſins and corruptions of our natures, and worke in us a reformation of life and true repentance. The third point concerning the decree of Reprobation, is the judgment to be given of it. This judgment belongeth to God principally and properly, becauſe hee knoweth beſt what hee hath determined concerning the eſtate of every man, and none but he knows who they be which are ordained to due and deſerved damnation. And againe, he onely knowes the harts & wils of men, & what grace he hath given them, what they are, and what al their ſins be, and ſo doth no angell nor creature in the world beſide. As for men, it belongs not
D to them to give judgement of reprobation in themſelves, or in others, unles God reveale his wil unto them, & give them gift of diſcerning. This gift was beſtowed on ſundry of the Prophets in the old Teſtament, and in the new Teſtament on the Apoſtles. David in many Pſalms makes requeſt for the confuſiō of his enemies, not praying only againſt their ſins, (which we may do) but evē againſt their perſōs which we may not do. No doubt he was guided by Gods ſpirit & received thence an extraordinary gift to judge of the obſtinate malice of his adverſaries. And Paul praies againſt the perſon of Demetrius, ſaying, the Lord reward him according to his doings: and ſuch kind of praiers were lawful in thē, becauſe they were carried wth pure & upright zeale, & had no doubt a ſpecial gift wherby they were able to diſcerne of the final eſtate

Pſal. 69. & 109.

2 Tim. 4. 14.

their enemies. Againe, God ſometimes gives this gift of diſcerning of ſome mens finall impenitency to the Church upon earth; I ſay not, to this or that private perſon, but to the body of the Church or greater part thereof. Saint Iohn writing unto the Churches ſaith, 1 Ioh. 5. 16. There is a ſinne unto death, (that is, againſt the Holy Ghoſt) I ſay not that thou ſhouldeſt pray for it: in which words he takes it for granted, that this ſinne might be diſcerned by the Church in thoſe dayes. And Paul ſaith, If any man beleeve not the Lord Ieſus, 1 Cor. 16. 22. let him be had in execration, Mara-natha, that is, pronounced accurſed to everlaſting deſtruction. Whence it appeares that the Church hath power to pronounce men rejected to everlaſting damnation, upon ſome ſpeciall occaſions, though * I dare not ſay ordinarily and uſually. The Primitive Church with one conſent prayed againſt Iulian the Apoſtata, and the prayers made were not in vaine, as appeareth by the event of his fearefull end. As for private and ordinary men, for the tempering and rectifying of their judgement, in this caſe they muſt follow two rules. The one is, that every member of the Church is bound to beleeve his owne election. It is the Commandement of God binding the very conſcience, 1 Ioh. 3. 23. that we ſhould beleeve in Chriſt. Now to beleeve in Chriſt, is not only to put our affiance in him, and to bee reſolved that wee are juſtified and ſanctified, and ſhall be glorified by him, but alſo that we are elect to ſalvation in him before the beginning of the world, which is the foundation of the reſt. Againe, if of things that have neceſſary dependance one upon another, we are to beleeve the one, then we are to beleeve the other. Now election and adoption are things conjoyned, and the one neceſſarily depends upon the other. For all the elect (as S. Paul ſaith) are predeſtinate to adoption: and wee are to beleeve our owne adoption: and therefore alſo our election. The ſecond rule is, that concerning the perſons of thoſe that bee of the Church, wee muſt put in practiſe the judgement of charity, and that is, to eſteeme of them as of the elect of God, till God make manifeſt otherwiſe. By vertue of this rule the Miniſters of Gods Word are to publiſh and preach the Goſpell to all without exception. It is true indeed there is both wheate and darnell in Gods field, chaffe and corne in Gods barne, fiſh and droſſe in Gods net, ſheepe and goates in Chriſts fold: but ſecret judgements belong unto God, and the rule of love, which is to thinke and wiſh the beſt of others, is to be followed of us that profeſſe faith working by love. It may bee demanded, what wee are to judge of them that as yet are enemies of God. Anſw. Our duty is, to ſuſpend our judgement concerning their finall eſtate: for wee know not whether God will call them or no; and therefore wee muſt rather pray for their converſion, then for their confuſion.

* Sic chry.

Againe, it may be demanded, what is to be thought of all our anceſtors and forefathers, that lived and dyed in the times when popery tooke place. Anſ. We may well hope the beſt, and think that they were ſaved: for though the Papacy be not the Church of God, and though the doctrine of Popery raze the foundation, yet nevertheleſſe in the very midſt of the Romane Papacy, God hath alwayes had a remnant which have in ſome meaſure truly ſerved him. In the old Teſtament when open Idolatry tooke place in all Iſrael, God ſaid to Eliah, 1 King. 19. 18. I have reſerved ſeven thouſand to my ſelfe, that never bowed knee to Baal: and the like is and hath bin in the generall apoſtaſie under Antichriſt. Saint Iohn ſaith, that when the woman fled into the wildernes for a time, even then there was a remnant of her ſeed which kept the Commandements of God, and had the teſtimony of Ieſus Chriſt. And againe, when ordinary meanes of ſalvation faile, then God can and doth make a ſupply by meanes extraordinary, and therefore there is no cauſe why we ſhould ſay, that they were condemned.

Rev. 12. 17.

Thirdly, it may be demanded, whether the common judgement given of Francis Spira, that he is a reprobate be good or no? Anſ. We may with better warrant ſay no, then any man ſay, yea. For what gifts of diſcerning had they which came to viſit him in his extremity; and what reaſons induced them to give this peremptory judgement? He ſaid himſelfe, that he was a reprobate: that is nothing: a ſicke mans judgement of himſelfe is not to be regarded. Yea, but he deſpaired; a ſenſleſſe reaſon: for ſo doth many a man yeare by yeare, and that very often as deepely as ever Spira did; and yet by the good helpe of the miniſtery of the Word, both are and may be recovered. And they which will avouch Spira to bee a reprobate, muſt goe further and proove two things, that he deſpaired both wholly and finally: which if they cannot proove, we for our parts muſt ſuſpend our judgements; and they were much to blame that firſt publiſhed the booke.

Laſtly, it may be demanded, what is to be thought of them that make very fearefull ends in raving and blaſpheming? Anſ. Such ſtrange behaviors are oftentimes the fruits of violent diſeaſes which torment the body, and bereave the minde of ſenſe and reaſon: and therefore if the perſons lived well, we muſt thinke the beſt: for wee are not by outward things to judge of the eſtate of any man. Salomon ſaith, that all things come alike to all, and the ſame condition to the juſt, and to the wicked.

Eccle. 9. 2.

Thus much of the parts of Predeſtination: Now followes the uſe therof: and it concernes partly our judgements, partly our affections, and partly our lives. The uſes which concerne judgement are three. And firſt by the doctrine of predeſtination, we learne that there cannot be any juſtification of a ſinner before God by his workes. For Gods election is the cauſe of juſtification, becauſe whom God electeth to ſalvation after this life, them he electeth to bee

juſtified in this life. Now election it ſelf is of grace, and of grace alone, as Paul ſaith, Rom. 11.5. Election is by grace, & if it be of grace, it is no more of works: or els were grace no grace: therfore juſtification is of grace & of grace alone: and I reaſon thus: The cauſe of a cauſe is the cauſe of all things cauſed: but grace alone is the cauſe of predeſtination, which is the cauſe of our vocation, juſtification, ſanctification, &c. Grace therefore is alſo the alone cauſe of all theſe. Therefore the ſcriptures aſcribe not onely the beginning, but alſo the continuance and accompliſhment of all our happines to grace. For firſt, as election, ſo vocation is of grace. Paul ſaith, 2 Tim. 1.9. God hath called us not according to our works, but according to his purpoſe and grace. Againe, faith in Chriſt is of grace. So it is ſaid, Phil. 1.29. To you it is given to beleeve in Chriſt. Alſo the juſtification of a ſinner is of grace. So Paul ſaith plainely to the Romanes: Rom. 3 24. You are juſtified freely by his grace. Againe, ſanctification and the doing of good works is of grace. So it is ſaid, Eph. 2.10. We are his workemanſhip created in Chriſt Ieſus unto good works, which God hath ordained that wee ſhould walk in them. Alſo perſeverance in good works and godlineſſe is of grace. So the Lord ſaith, Ier. 32 40. I will make an everlaſting covenant with them, that I will never turn away from them to doe them good, but I will put my feare in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from mee. Laſtly, life everlaſting is of grace. So Paul ſaith, Rō. 6.23. Life everlaſting is the gift of God through Ieſus Chriſt. Now they of the Church of Rome teach the flat contrary: they make two juſtifications; the firſt, whereby a man of an evill man is made a good man: the ſecond, whereby of a good man he is made better. The firſt they aſcribe to grace; but ſo, as the ſecond is by works. Secondly, hence we learne, that the Art of judiciall Aſtrology is vaine and frivolous. They that practiſe it, doe profeſſe themſelves to tell of things to come almoſt whatſoever, and this they doe by caſting of figures: and the ſpeciall point of their Art is to judge of mens nativities. For if they may know but the time of a mans birth, they take upon them to tell the whole courſe of his life from yeere to yeere, from weeke to week, and from day to day, from the day of his birth to the houre of his death: yea that which is more, they profeſſe themſelves to tell all things that ſhall befall men, either in body, goods, or good name, and what kinde of death they ſhall die. But that this their practiſe is not of God, but indeed unlawfull, it may appeare by this, becauſe it ſtands not with the doctrine of Gods predeſtination. Two twins begotten of the ſame parents, and borne both at one and the ſame time, by the judgements of Aſtrologians muſt have both the ſame life and the ſame death, and be every way alike both in goods and good name; yet we ſee the contrary to be true in Iacob and Eſau, who were borne both of the ſame parents at one time. For Iacob tooke Eſau by the heele, ſo as there could not be much difference betweene them in time: yet for all this Eſau was a fierce man and wild, given to hunting; but Iacob was milde of nature, and lived at home: the one had favour at Gods hand and was in the covenant; but God kept backe that mercy from the other. Again, in a pitcht field are ſlaine a thouſand men at one and the ſame time: now if we conſider the time of their births, it may bee, they were born at a thouſand ſundry times, and therefore under ſo many divers poſitions of the heavens, and ſo by the judgment of all Aſtrologers ſhould have all divers and ſundry lives & ends: but we ſee according to the determination of the counſell of God, they have all one and the ſame end: and therfore this muſt admoniſh all thoſe that are brought up in ſchooles of learning, to have care to ſpend their time in better ſtudies: and it teacheth thoſe that are falne into any manner of diſtreſſe, not to have recourſe unto theſe fond figure-caſters. For their aſtrologicall judgements are falſe and fooliſh, as we may ſee by the two former examples. Thirdly, the knowledge of God is one of the moſt ſpeciall points in Chriſtian religion: and therefore the Lord ſaith, Ier. 9. 24. Let him that reioyceth, reioyce in this, that he underſtandeth and knoweth me. For I am the Lord which ſhew mercy and iudgement in the earth. And our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Ioh. 17.3. This is life eternal to know thee, the onely very God, and whom thou haſt ſent Ieſus Chriſt. Now Gods predeſtination is a glaſſe wherein we may behold his majeſty. For firſt, by it we ſee the wonderfull wiſedome of God, who in his eternall counſell did foreſee and moſt wiſely ſet downe the eſtate of every man: ſecondly, his omnipotency, in that he hath power to ſave, & power to refuſe, whom he will: thirdly, his juſtice and mercy both joyned together in the execution of election: his mercy, in that he ſaveth thoſe that were utterly loſt; his juſtice in that he ordained Chriſt to be a Mediatour to ſuffer the curſe of the law, and to ſatisfie his juſtice for the elect: fourthly, his juſtice, in the execution of the decree of Reprobation; for though he decreed to hold backe his mercy from ſome men, becauſe it ſo pleaſed him, yet he condemneth no man but for his ſinnes. Now the conſideration of theſe and the like points, bring us to the knowledge of the true God.

The uſes which concerne our affections are theſe. Firſt, the doctrine of predeſtination miniſters to all the people of God matter of endleſſe conſolation. For conſidering Gods election is unchangeable, therefore they which are predeſtinate to ſalvation cannot periſh: though the gates of hell prevaile againſt them ſo as they be hardly ſaved, yet ſhall they certainly be ſaved; therefore our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, that in the latter daies ſhall ariſe falſe Chriſts and falſe prophets, which ſhall ſhew great ſignes & wonders, Mat. 24.24. So that if it were poſſible they ſhould deceive the very elect.

In

In which words he takes it for granted, that the elect of God can never finally fall away. And hereupon hee ſaith to his diſciples when they rejoyed that the divels were ſubject to them, Lu. 10.20. Rather rejoyce that your names are written in heaven. And S. Paul ſpeaking of Hymeneus and Philetus, which had fallen away from the faith, leſt the Church ſhould bee diſcouraged by their fall, becauſe they were thought to be worthy men and pillars of the Church; he doth comfort them from the very ground of election, ſaying, 2 Tim. 2.19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, and hath this ſeale: The Lord knoweth who are his. Where Gods election is compared to the foundation of an houſe, the building whereof may be ſhaken, but the ground-worke ſtandeth faſt: and therefore Paul ſaith further, Rom. 8.33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods elect? Now then that we may have comfort in diſtreſſe, and ſome thing to ſtay upon in all our troubles: we in this world are as ſtrangers in a farre countrey: our paſſage homeward is over the ſea of this world: the ſhip wherein wee ſaile is the Church: and Satan ſtirres up many blaſts of troubles and temptations, and his purpoſe is to ſinke the ſhip, or to drive it on the rocke; but we muſt take the anchor of hope, and faſten it in heaven upon the foundation of Gods election: which being done, we ſhal paſſe in ſafety, and rejoyce in the midſt of all ſtorms and tempeſts. Secondly, whereas God refuſeth ſome men, and leaves them to themſelves, it ſerves to ſtrike a feare into every one of us whatſoever we be, as S. Paul ſaith in the like caſe, the Iewes being the naturall branches, Rom. 11.20. are broken off through unbeleefe, & thou ſtandeſt by faith: be not high minded, but feare. This indeed was ſpoken to the Romans, but we muſt alſo lay it to our hearts. For what is the beſt of us, but a lumpe of clay? and howſoever in Gods counſell we are choſen to ſalvation, yet in our ſelves we are all ſhut up under unbeleefe, and are fit to make veſſels of wrath. Our Saviour Chriſt calleth Iudas a divell, and we know his lewd life and fearefull end: now what are we better then Iudas by nature? If we had bin in his ſtead, without the ſpeciall bleſſing of God, we ſhould have done as he did: he betrayed Chriſt; but if God leave us to our ſelves, we ſhall not onely betray him, but by our ſins even crucifie him a thouſand waies. Furthermore let us bethinke our ſelves of this, whether there be not ſome already condemned in hell, who in their lives were not more grievous offenders then wee. Eſay called the people of his time a people of Sodome and Gomorrha; giving the Iewes then living to underſtand, that they were as bad as the Sodomites, and as the people of Gomorrha, on whom the Lord had ſhewed his judgements long before. If this be true, then let us with feare and trembling be thankfull to his majeſtie that he hath preſerved us hitherto from deſerved damnation.

Eſa. 1.10.

A The uſes which reſpect our lives and converſations are manifold. Firſt, ſeeing God hath elected ſome to ſalvation, and hath alſo laide downe the meanes in his holy word whereby we may come to the knowledge of our particular Election, we muſt therefore as S. Peter counſelleth us, 2 Pet. 1,10. Give all diligence to make our election ſure. In the world men are carefull and painfull enough to make aſſurance of lands and goods to themſelves, and to their poſterity: what a ſhame is it then for us, that we ſhould bee ſlacke in making ſure to our ſelves the election of God, which is more worth then all the world beſide? & if we ſhall continue to be ſlacke herein, the leaſes of our
B lands and houſes and all other temporall aſſurances ſhall be bils of accuſation againſt us at the day of judgement to condemne us. Secondly, by this doctrine we are taught to live godly and righteouſly in this preſent world; becauſe all thoſe whom God hath choſen to ſalvation, hee hath alſo appointed to live in newneſſe of life, as S. Paul, Eph. 1.4. God hath choſen us in Chriſt before the foundation of the world; that we ſhould be holy and without blame before him. And againe, Eph. 2.10. We are created in Chriſt Ieſus unto good workes, which God hath ordained that we ſhould walke in them. And God hath choſen you to ſalvation through ſanctification of the ſpirit and faith of the truth. The
C elect are veſſels of honour: and therfore all thoſe that will be of the number of the elect, muſt carry themſelves as veſſels of honour. For ſo long as they live in their ſins, they be like veſſels of diſhonor, imploying themſelves to the moſt baſe ſervice that can be, even to the ſervice of the divell. The ſunne was ordained to ſhine in the day, and the moon in the night, and that order they keep; yea every creature in his kind obſerveth the courſe appointed unto it by creation, as the graſſe to grow, and trees to bring forth fruit: now the elect were ordained to this end to leade a godly life; and therfore if we would either perſwade our ſelves or the world, that we are indeed choſen to ſalvation, we muſt be plentifull in all good works, and make conſcience of every evill way; and to do
D otherwiſe, is as much as to change the order of nature, and as if the Sun ſhould ceaſe to ſhine by day and the Moone by night. Thirdly, when God ſhall ſend upon any of us in this world croſſes and afflictions, either in body or in minde, or any way els (as this life is the vale of miſery and teares, and judgement muſt begin at Gods houſe) wee muſt learne to beare them with all ſubmiſſion and contentation of minde. For whom God knew before, them he hath predeſtinate to be made like unto his ſonne. But wherein is this likeneſſe? Paul ſaith, Phil. 3.10. in the fellowſhip of his afflictions, and in a cõformity to his death. And the conſideration of this, that afflictions were ordained for us in the eternall predeſtination of God, muſt comfort our hearts, and reſtraine our impatience ſo oft as we ſhal go under the burden of them.

2 Theſſ. 2. 13. 2 Tim. 2, 21. Rom. 9.23.

Rom. 8.29.

Hence againe we learne, that they which perſwade themſelves that they are in the favour of God, becauſe they live at eaſe in wealth and proſperity, are farre deceived. For S. Paul ſaith, Rom. 9. 22. God ſuffereth with long patience the veſſels of wrath prepared to deſtruction, to make known his power, and to ſhew forth his wrath on them. This being ſo, no man then by outward bleſſings ought to pleade that he hath the love of God. Sheepe that goe in fat paſtures come ſooner to the ſlaughter-houſe thē thoſe which are kept upon the bare commons: and they which are pāpered with wealth of this world, ſooner forſake God, and therefore are ſooner forſaken of God, then others. Solomon ſaith, Eccle. 9. 1. No man knoweth love or hatred, that is, by outward things: for all things come alike to all: the ſame condition is to the juſt and to the unjuſt, to the wicked and good, to the pure and polluted. Laſtly, it may be an offence unto us, when we conſider that the doctrine of the Goſpel is either not knowne, or elſe deſpiſed & perſecuted of the whole world; but we muſt ſtay our ſelves with this conſideration, that nothing comes to paſſe by chance; that God knowes who are his; & there muſt be ſome in the world, on whom God hath in his eternall counſell purpoſed to manifeſt his power and juſtice. Again, Miniſters of the Goſpel may be diſcouraged, when after long preaching they ſee little or no fruit of their labours: the people whom they teach remaining as blinde, impenitent, and unreformed as ever they were. But they muſt alſo cōſider, that it is the purpoſe of God to chuſe ſome to ſalvation, and to refuſe others: and that of the firſt, ſome are called ſooner, ſome later: and that the ſecond being left to themſelves, never come to repentance. To this Paul had regard when he ſaid, 2 Cor. 4. 3. If our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that periſh. And againe, 2 Cor. 2. 15. Wee are vnto God the ſweet ſavour of Chriſt in them that are ſaved, and in them that periſh.

Hitherto I have delivered the truth of this weighty point of religion, which alſo is the doctrine of the Church of England: now it followeth that wee ſhould conſider the falſehood. Sundry Divines have deviſed, & in their writings publiſhed a new frame or platforme of the doctrine of Predeſtination: the effect whereof is this. The nature of God (ſay they) is infinite love, goodnes, & mercy it ſelfe: and therefore he propounds unto himſelfe an end anſwerable thereunto, and that is the communication of his love and goodneſſe unto all his creatures. Now for the accompliſhing of this ſupreame & abſolute end, he did foure things. Firſt, hee decreed to create man righteous in his owne image: ſecondly, he foreſaw the fall of man after his creation, yet ſo, as hee neither willed nor decreed it. Thirdly, he decreed the univerſall Redemption of all and every man actually by Chriſt, ſo be it they will beleeve in him. Fourthly, he decreed to call all and every man effectually, ſo as if they will, they may

A be ſaved. This being done, hee in his eternall counſell foreſeeing who would beleeue in Chriſt, did thereupon elect them to eternall ſalvation: and againe foreſeeing who would not beleeve but contemne grace offered, did thereupon alſo decree to reject them to eternall damnation.

This platforme howſoever it may ſeeme plauſible to reaſon, yet indeed it is nothing elſe but a device of mans braine: as will appeare by ſundry defects & errors that be in it. For firſt, whereas it is avouched that Adams fall came by the bare preſcience of God, without any decree or will of his, it is a flat untruth. The putting of Chriſt to death was as great a ſinne B as the fall of Adam; nay, in ſome reſpects greater. Now that came to paſſe not onely by the foreknowledg of God, but alſo by his determinate counſell. And therefore as the Church of Ieruſalem ſaith, Act. 4. 28. Herod and Pontius Pilate with the Gentiles, and the people of Iſrael, gathered themſelves together, to doe whatſoever thine hand & thy counſell had determined before to be done: ſo may we ſay, that Adam in his fall did nothing but that which the hand of God & his counſell had determined before to be done. And conſidering the will of God extends it ſelfe to the leaſt things that are, even to ſparrowes, wherof none doe light upō the ground without our heavenly Father, how can a man in reaſon imagine that the fall of one of the moſt principall creatures that are, ſhall fall out altogether without the will and decree of God? C And there can be nothing more abſurd then to ſever the foreknowledge of God from his counſell or decree. For by this meanes, things ſhall come to paſſe God [a] nilling, or not knowing, or not regarding them. Now if any thing come to paſſe, God nilling it, then that is done which God would not have done, and to ſay ſo, is to bereave him of his omnipotency. And if we ſhall ſay that things fall out, God not knowing of them; we make him to be imprudent, and deny his omniſcience. Laſtly, if we ſhall ſay that a thing is done, God not regarding it, we in bring an idoll of our own brains, and ſtabliſh the idol-god of the Epicures. But it is objected to the contrary, that if God any D way decreed and willed the fall of Adam, then he was the authour of ſinne: which once to ſay is blaſphemie. Anſw. The argument followes not. There be three actions in the will of God, one wherby he doth abſolutely will any thing and delight in it: and of all ſuch things God himſelf is the author. The ſecond is, wholly or abſolutely to nill a thing: and all things thus nilled, cannot poſſibly come to paſſe, or have the leaſt being in nature. There is alſo a third action which comes as a meane betweene the two former, which is remiſſly, or in part both to nill and will a thing: whereby though God approove not euill, as it is euill, and therefore doth it not: yet he willeth the permitting of it to be done by others, or the being of it: becauſe in reſpect of God that decreeth the permitting mitting of evill, it is good that there ſhould be evill. And on this manner and no otherwiſe God willed the fall of Adam: and therefore in the reaſon of any indifferent man, though hee decreed the fall, yet ſhall hee bee free from the blame thereof, which lies wholly upon the doer: theſe two caveats alwayes remembred: firſt, that God by his will did not conſtraine or force the will of Adam to ſinne, or infuſe into it any corruption, and that therefore he ſinned willingly and freely, onely by the [b] neceſſitie of immutability, and not by the neceſſitie of coaction: ſecondly, that God willed the fall for a moſt worthy end, which was, to lay down a way tending to the manifeſtation both of juſtice and mercy. Againe, it is alleadged, that if God willed Adams fal, then his wil is flat contrary to it ſelfe, becauſe he wils that which he had by expreſſe Commandement forbidden. Anſ. Indeed if God ſhould both will and forbid one and the ſame thing, in one and the ſame reſpect, there ſhould bee a contradiction in Gods will; but that God doth not. He forbad Adams fall, as it was ſin: for ſo in every commandement ſinne, as it is ſinne, is condemned and puniſhed; and yet becauſe it was in a new reſpect, a meanes of manifeſting his glory, who is able to bring light out of darknes: therefore he willingly decreed the permiſsion of it. Inceſt as it is ſin, it is condemned in the ſeventh Commandement, and puniſhed with death: yet as inceſt was a puniſhment of Davids adultery, God is ſaid to take his wives, and to give them to his ſonne Abſolom. 2 Sam. 12. 11.

Act. 2. 23.

2 Nolendo nolle, or penitus nolle.

Some againe, as it appeares by their writings, feare to aſcribe unto God ſo much as a permiſſion of Adams fall: but no doubt they are deceived. For if theſe rules be true: that God is omnipotent: that he workes all things that are by the counſell of his will, and governes them: that he hath care and regard over men: that nothing is hid from him: that he is unchangeable, there muſt needs be permiſſion of evill. If the divell could not enter ſo much as into a heard of ſwine without permiſſion, ſhall we thinke that he could compaſſe the fall and overthrow of man, without permiſſion? Indeed to permit, is, not to hinder evill when one may: and with men it is a fault, but not with God, becauſe he is not bound to hinder the evil which he permits.

The ſecond fault, is that they make the Preſcience of mans faith and unbeleefe, to be the [c] impulſive cauſe of Gods decree. For they ſay, that God eternally decrees to ſave or refuſe men, becauſe hee did foreſee, that they would beleeve or not beleeve. But indeed it is a manifeſt untruth. Among the cauſes of all things that are, there is an order ſet downe by God himſelfe, in which order ſome cauſes are higheſt, ſome loweſt, ſome in the mideſt. Now the higheſt cauſe of all is that, which over-rules all, & is over-ruled of none: and that is Gods will, beyond which there can be no higher cauſe: for God is placed above all, and ſubject unto none, and this very will of his is the cauſe of all things that have being: for wee muſt not imagine that a thing firſt of all exiſteth, and then afterward is willed of God, but firſt of all God wils a thing, and then afterward it comes to have a being. Now to ſay that foreſeene faith or unbeleefe are the moving cauſes whereby God was induced to ordaine men either to ſalvation or juſt damnation, is to undoe this divine order of cauſes, and to diſplace the links; in that Gods will is made a ſecondary or middle cauſe ſubordinate to other cauſes placed above it: yea, this is to make the will of God to depend upon the quality and condition of the creature, whereas contrariwiſe all things depend upon Gods will. Againe, Paul ſaith that God had opened the myſtery of his wil, according to his good pleaſure, Ephe. 1. 9. Which he had purpoſed in himſelfe: whereby he makes a diſtinction betweene the creature and the Creator. Men when they purpoſe the doing of any thing, borrow reaſons of their purpoſes & wils out of themſelves from the things to be done; becauſe mans bare will is no ſufficient cauſe to warrant the doing of this or that, in this or that manner, unleſſe there be juſt reaſon. But Gods will is a ſimple and abſolute rule of righteouſneſſe, and a thing is good, ſo farre forth as God wils it. Therefore there is no cauſe, why he ſhould go forth of himſelfe for eternall inducements and reaſons of his externall councell: his very will in himſelfe is a ſufficient reaſon of all his purpoſes and decrees. And hereupon Paul ſaith, that Gods purpoſe was in himſelfe, to ſhew that there is no dependance of his will upon the creature, and that in ordering and diſpoſing of his decrees, he had no reference or reſpective conſideration of the qualities and workes of them. Thirdly, by this doctrine, there is faſtened upon God want of wiſdome, who is wiſdome it ſelfe: and that is very abſurd. A ſimple man that hath in him but a ſparke of the wiſdome of God, firſt of all, intends with himſelfe the end and event of the buſines to be done, and then afterward the meanes whereby the end is accompliſhed: but in this plat-form God is brought in, in the firſt place to fore-ſee and conſider with himſelfe the meanes which tend to the end, namely faith and unbeleefe of men, and then afterward to determine with himſelfe what ſhall be the end and finall condition of every man either in life or death: as if a man ſhould purpoſe with himſelfe to build an houſe without any conſideration of the end why; & afterward conceive with himſelfe the particular uſes to which hee will apply it. Fourthly, hence it followeth; that faith ſhall not onely be an inſtrument, but alſo an efficient cauſe in the act of juſtification of a ſinner before God. For the cauſe of a cauſe is alſo the cauſe of a thing cauſed; but foreſeene faith is an impulſive cauſe whereby God was moved to chooſe ſome men to ſalvation (as it is ſaid:) and therefore it is not onely an inſtrument to

b Decretum Dei non tollit libertatem voluntatis, ſed ordinat.

Mark. 5. 12.

c Or as ſome ſpeak, a rule according to which he ordereth his decree.

apprehend Chriſts righteouſneſſe, but alſo a cauſe or meanes to moove God to juſtifie a ſinner; becauſe juſtification proceeds of election which comes of fore-ſeene faith: now this is erroneous by the doctrine of all Churches, unleſſe they be Popiſh. Fiftly, this doctrine takes it for granted, that all both young and olde; even Infants that die in their infancie, have knowledge of the Goſpel, becauſe both faith & unbeliefe in Chriſt preſuppoſe knowledge of our ſalvation by him; conſidering that neither ordinarily, nor extraordinarily men beleeve or cõtemne the thing unknowne. But how falſe is this, even common experiẽce doth ſhew. Laſtly, this plat-forme quite overthrowes it ſelfe. For whereas all men, equally corrupt in Adam, are effectually both redeemed and called, the difference betweene man and man, ſtands not in beleeving or not beleeving, for all have power to beleeve: but in this properly, that ſome are confirmed in faith, ſome are not. Now when all without exceptiõ are indued with grace ſufficient for ſalvation, I demand why ſome men are confirmed in grace, and others not confirmed; as alſo of Angels, why ſome confirmed ſtand, and ſome not confirmed, fell? No other reaſon can bee rendred but the will of God. And to this muſt all come, ſtrive as long as they will, that of men being in one and the ſame eſtate, ſome are ſaved, ſome juſtly forſaken, becauſe God would. Againe, as the foreſeeing of faith doth preſuppoſe Gods giving of faith, unleſſe men will ſay it is naturall: ſo the foreſeeing of faith in ſome men alone, doth preſuppoſe the giving of faith to ſome men alone. But why doth not God conferre the grace of conſtant faith to al? no other reaſon can be rendred, but becauſe he will not. Thus then thoſe men whoſe faith was foreſeene, are ſaved, not becauſe their faith was foreſeeene, but becauſe God would.

The third fault is, that they aſcribe unto God a conditionall purpoſe or counſel, whereby he decrees that all men ſhall be ſaved, ſo be it they wil beleeve. For it is every way as much againſt common ſenſe, as if it had bin ſaid, that God decreed nothing at all concerning man. A conditionall ſentence determines nothing ſimply but conditionally, and therefore uncertainely: and when we ſpeake of God, to determine uncertainely, is as much as if hee had determined nothing at al, eſpecially when the thing determined is in the power of mans wil, and in reſpect of God, the decree may come to paſſe, or not come to paſſe. Men, if they might alwaies have their choice, deſire to determine of all their affaires ſimply without condition: and when they doe otherwiſe, it is either becauſe they know not the event of things, or becauſe things to be done are not in their power. No reaſon therefore that wee ſhould burden God with that, where of wee would disburthen our ſelves. Again, the majeſtie of God is diſgraced in this kind of decree. God for his part would have all men to be ſaved: why then are they not? men will not keep the condition and beleeve. This is flat to hang Gods will upon mans wil, to make every man an Emperour, and God his underling, and to change the order of nature by ſubordinating Gods will, which is the firſt cauſe, to the wil of man, which is the ſecond cauſe: wheras by the very law of nature, the firſt cauſe ſhould order and diſpoſe the ſecond cauſe. But for the juſtifying of a conditionall decree it is alleadged, that there is no eternall hidden decree of God beſide the Goſpel, which is Gods predeſtination revealed. Anſw. It is an untruth. There be two wils in God: (a) one, wherby he determineth what he will doe unto us or in us: the other, (b) whereby hee determineth what wee ſhall doe to him. Now Predeſtination is the firſt: whereupon it is commonly defined to be the preparation of the bleſſing of God, whereby they are delivered which are delivered: and the Goſpel is the ſecond. Againe, Predeſtination determines who they are, and how many which are to be ſaved, and hereupon Chriſt ſaith, Ioh. 13.18. I know whom I have choſen: but the Goſpel rather determines what kinde of ones and how they muſt bee qualified which are to be ſaved. Laſtly, Predeſtination is Gods decree it ſelfe: and the Goſpel is an outward meanes of the execution of it: and therefore though the Goſpel be propounded with a condition, yet the decree of God it ſelfe may bee ſimple and abſolute.

The fourth defect, is the opinion of Vniverſall ſaving grace; appertaining to all and every man: which may fitly be tearmed the Schoole of univerſall Atheiſme. For it puls downe the pale of the Church, and laies it waſte as a very common field: it breeds a careleſneſſe in the uſe of the meanes of grace, the Word and Sacraments; when as men ſhall be perſwaded, that grace ſhall be offered to every one effectually, whether hee bee of the Church or not, at one time or other; whereſoever or howſoever hee live: as in the like caſe, if men ſhould bee told that whether they live in the market-towne or no, there ſhall bee ſufficient proviſion brought them, if they will but receive it and accept of it; who would then come to market?

Vniverſall grace hath three parts. Vniverſall Election: univerſall Redemption: univerſall Vocation. Vniverſall Election of all and every man, is a witleſſe conceit: for if men univerſally be appointed to grace without exception, then there is no election or chooſing of ſome out of mankinde to grace: and if ſome alone be appointed to grace, as it muſt needs be in election, then is not grace univerſall. And it is flat againſt the Word of God. For Chriſt avoucheth plainely, Matt. 22.14. that fewer be choſen thẽ called, & (as afterward we ſhal ſee) all are not called. And hee further ſaith, that all which are given unto him ſhall bee one with him, and have life everlaſting: but all men ſhal not be one with him and have life everlaſting: and therefore all men are not given to [Ioh. 17.2. 1.14.

a Quid velit fieri de nobis, or, in nobis.
b Quid velit fieri à nobis.

Chriſt of the Father, that is, ordained to ſalvation. And the Scripture ſaith, Apoc. 17.14. and 20.15. that all mens names are not written in the booke of life: and that the kingdome of heaven was not prepared for all, Matt. 25.14. And whereas men build this their univerſall election upon the largeneſſe of the promiſe of the Goſpel: upon the like ground they might as well make an univerſall decree of Reprobation, whereby God decrees all men to bee damned indefinitely upon this condition, if they doe not beleeve. Now if univerſall Reprobation be abſurd, as it is indeede; then univerſal Election of all and every man muſt take part therewith.

As for the univerſall Redemption of all and every man, it is no better then a forgerie of mans braine. There ſhall be many in the day of judgement of whom Chriſt ſhall ſay, Matt. 7.23. that he never knew them. Againe he ſaith, Ioh. 3.36. He which beleeveth not, is already judged, and the wrath of God abides upon him. But if all were effectually redeemed, and only condemned for not beleeving in Chriſt, it ſhould have bin ſaid that they are already judged, and that the wrath of God not abides, but returnes upon them. Chriſt makes no interceſſion for the world, Ioh. 17.9, and therefore his redemption is not effectual to all men. For the interceſſion is the meanes of applying the ſatisfaction. If it be ſaid, that by the world is meant onely contemners of grace, it appeares to be otherwiſe, in that Chriſt oppoſeth the world to them which are the Fathers, and are given to Chriſt by him: thereby ſignifying, that by the world he meanes all ſuch as are not the Fathers, & were never given to Chriſt. And Ioh. 10.17. he laies downe his life for his ſheepe: now the ſheepe have all theſe brands or markes; they heare his voice, 27. they know him, they follow him, they ſhall not 28. periſh, none ſhall plucke thē out of Chriſt his hands: and theſe are onely ſuch of whom Paul ſaith, Rom. 8.33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods Elect: it is God that juſtifieth, who ſhall condemne? And if this ſhould be true, that Chriſt was crucified and died no leſſe to make ſatisfaction for the ſinnes of the damned, then for the ſinnes of Peter and Paul and the reſt of the Saints, it followes neceſſarily that all their ſins are forgiven, conſidering that remiſſion of ſin depends inſeparably upon ſatisfaction made to Gods juſtice for ſinne: and ſatisfaction doth neceſſarily aboliſh all fault. Wee grant that Chriſts death is ſufficient to ſave many thouſand worlds: we grant againe it is every way moſt effectuall in it ſelfe: but that it is effectual in or unto the perſon of every man, that we deny. For if it were thus effectuall, then it ſhould be applyed to the perſon of every man, as to Cain, Iudas, Nero, Heliogabalus, &c. even as the plaiſter is laid to the ſore, being applyed. Chriſts righteouſneſſe ſhould bee imputed for the juſtification and ſanctification of all and every man: and thus ſome juſtified before God, and ſanctified, ſhould after goe to hell and be damned, whereas David, never ſo much as dreaming of this divinity, ſaith, Pſa. 32.1. that they are bleſſed which have the pardon of their ſins; and Paul, Rom. 5.1. that they which are juſtified have peace with God.

But let us heare what reaſons may bee alleadged for the Vniverſalitie of Redemption. I. Ezechiel. 33.v.11. As I live, ſaith the Lord, I will not the death of the wicked, but that the wicked returne from his wicked way. Anſw. The place is to be underſtood not ſimply but in reſpect: of the twaine God rather wils the repentance of the ſinner then his death. Againe, hee wils not death as it is the deſtruction of his creature; and ſo this place may be underſtood: yet nevertheleſſe he wils the ſame as it is a meanes of the manifeſtation of his juſtice: and therefore the Prophet Eſay ſaith, Eſa. 45.6. God createth evill. II. 1 Tim. 2.4. God would have all men to be ſaved: and come to the acknowledgement of the truth. Anſw. The place is meant not of the perſons of all particular men, but of the orders and kindes of men. For in the firſt verſe Paul exhorteth Timothy that prayer ſhould bee made for all men: and in the ſecond verſe opening his owne meaning, hee addeth theſe words, for kings and all that be in authoritie: as though he ſhould ſay, we muſt pray not onely for private men and for the common people, but alſo for publike perſons, though they perſecute the Goſpel. But why? becauſe in that very order God hath his elect which ſhall be ſaved. And on this manner Paul expounds himſelf elſewhere, Gal. 3.28. There is neither Iew nor Grecian: there is neither bond nor free: there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Chriſt. III. Rō. 11.32. God hath ſhut up all in unbeleefe that he might have mercy on all. Anſ. The word all, muſt be underſtood of all that are to bee ſaved, both of Iewes and Gentiles, as the article added to all importeth, and the meaning is, that the world. God will ſave all whom he purpoſeth to ſave, of his mercy, and not of their merit, becauſe all are ſinners as wel Iewes as Gentiles: thus Paul expounds himſelfe. Galat. 3.22. The Scripture hath concluded all under ſinne, that the promiſe by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt ſhould be given unto them that beleeve. And if wee ſhould expound the word all, for every particular man, as ſome would have it, Paul muſt contradict himſelfe, who ſaid before, that God would have mercy on whom he wil have mercy, & whom he wil he hardeneth: and in this very chapter his drift is to proove the rejection of the Iewes, and the calling of the Gentiles. IV. Iohn 3.16. God ſo loved the world that he hath given his onely begotten Sonne, that whoſoever beleeveth in him ſhall not periſh but have everlaſting life: and Ioh. 6.15. I will give my fleſh for the life of the world. Anſw. By world, wee muſt not underſtand every particular man in the world, but the elect among the Iewes and Gentiles: for in both theſe places Chriſt doth overthwart the conceit of the Iewes, which thought that they alone were loved of God, and not the Gentiles.

And how this word is to be understood in the new testament, Paul doth fully declare, Rom. 11.12. If (saith he) the fall of them, that is, the Iewes be the riches of the world, & the diminishing of them, the riches of the Gentiles, &c. and v.15. If the casting away of them, be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving be but life from the dead? Where, by the world, he understands the body of the Gentiles in the last age of the world. And thus hee fully declares his owne meaning, when hee saith to the Corinthians, 2 Cor.5.18. God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himselfe. V.Rom.14.15. Destroy not him with thy meate for whom Christ died. 2 Pet.2.1. Denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift damnation. Therefore Christ died for them also which are condemned. Answer. The reason is not good: For in these and such like places the Scripture speakes of men, not as they are indeede before God, but as they are in appearance and profession, and as they are in acceptation with men. For so long as a man holdes and embraces the Christian faith, so long in the judgement of charitie wee must esteeme him to bee one that is redeemed by Christ, though indeede he be not. And this is the meaning of Peter when he saith, that false prophets deny the Lord that bought them. VI. In the preaching of the Gospel grace is freely offered not onely to the Elect, but to all men indifferently: and God in offering grace deludes no man: therefore Christs death appertaines and belongs to all men indifferently. Ans. The preaching of the Gospel is an ordinance of God appointed for the gathering together and the accomplishment of the number of the Elect: and therefore in the ministerie of the word, grace and salvation is offered principally and directly to the elect, and onely by consequent to them which are ordained to just damnation: because they are mingled with the elect in the same societies, and because the ministers of God, not knowing his secret counsel, in charitie thinke all to be elect. And though God in offering grace do not conferre it to all, yet is there no delusion. For the offering of grace doth not onely serve for the conversion of a sinner, but also to bee an occasion by mens fault, of blinding the minde, and hardning the heart, and taking away excuse in the day of judgement.

To conclude this point; Vniversall redemption of all men, we grant: the Scripture saith so: and there is an universalitie among the Elect and beleevers: but universall Redemption of all and every man, as well the damned as the elect, and that effectually, we renounce; as having neither footing in the Scripture, nor in the writing of any ancient and orthodoxe divine, for many hundred yeeres after Christ, his words not depraved and mistaken.

As for the Vniversall vocation, it is of the same kinde with the former: because it is flat against the word of God in which is set down a distinction of the world, from the creation to the daies of Christ, into two parts: one, the people of God, being received into the covenant: the other (being the greatest part of the world) No people, and forth of the covenant. From the beginning of the world to the giving of the law, the Church was shut up in the families of the Patriarchs: and the covenant in the very familie of Abraham was restrained to Isaac: and the members of these families, for this cause, were called the sonnes of God: and the rest of the world beside being tearmed as they were indeed, the sonnes of men. From the giving of the law till Christ, the nation of the Iewes, the Church of God, and the rest of the world beside, no people of God. And therefore Esay cals them prisoners and them that are in darkenesse: and Ose such as are without mercy and no people: and Zachary, such as are not joyned to the Lord: and Paul, such as are set to walke in their owne waies, being without God and without Christ in the world. And this distinction betweene Iew and Gentile stood till the very ascension of Christ. And hereupon when hee was to send his disciples to preach, he charged them not to go into the way of the Gentiles: and not to enter into the cities of the Samaritans, but rather to goe to the lost sheepe of the house of Israel, Matt.10.5. and when the woman of Canaan made request for her daughter, hee gave a denial at the first upon this distinction, saying, Mat.15.24,26. It is not meet to take the childrens bread and give it unto dogs, and againe, I am sent but unto the lost sheepe of the house of Israel. It will be said, that this distinction arose of this, that the Gentiles at the first fell away frō the covenant, and contemned the Messias. It is true indeed of the first heads of the Gentiles the sonnes of Noe: but of their posteritie it is false, which in times following did not so much as heare of the covenant, and the Messias. The Prophet Esay saith of Christ. Esay 55.5. A nation that knew not thee, shall runne unto thee. And Paul speaking to the Athenians saith, *Act.*17.30. that the times of this their ignorance God regarded not: but now admonisheth all men every where to repent: and to the Romanes he saith, Rom. 16.29. that the mysterie touching Christ and his benefits was kept secret since the world began, and now opened and published among all nations, 1 *Tim.*3.16. And if the Gentiles had but knowne of the Messias, why did not their Poets and Philosophers, who in their writings notoriously abuse the Iewes with sundry * nickenames, at the least signifie the contempt of the Redeemer? Wherefore to hold, and much more to avouch by writing, that all and every one of the heathen were called, it is most absurd: and if it were so, the Canibals and the savage nations of America should have knowne Christ without preaching, which by the histories of those countries, is knowne to be false.

Againe, if the Vocation of every man be effectual, then faith must be common to all men either either by nature, or by grace, or both: now to ſay the firſt, namely, that the power of beleeving is common to all by nature, is the hereſie of the Pelagians, and to ſay it is common to all by grace, is falſe. All men have not faith, ſaith Paul, 2 Theſſ. 3.2. nay many to whom the Goſpel is preached doe not ſo much as underſtand it and give aſſent unto it; Satan blinding their minds that the light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt ſhould not ſhine unto them, 2 Cor. 4.4. And to ſay that faith is partly by nature and partly by grace, is the condemned hereſie of the Semipelagian: for wee cannot ſo much as thinke a a good thought of our ſelves, 2 Cor. 3.5.

The laſt defect in the platforme, is that they aſcribe unto God a wrong end of his counſels; namely, the communication of mercy or goodneſſe in eternall happineſſe. For the abſolute and ſoveraigne end of all Gods doings muſt be anſwerable to his nature, which is not mercy and love alone, but alſo juſtice it ſelfe: and therefore the right end is the manifeſtation of his glory both in juſtice and mercy by the expreſſe teſtimonie of Scripture. Againe, if the communication of his goodneſſe were the higheſt end of all his counſels, all men without exception ſhould bee ſaved, becauſe God cannot bee fruſtrated of his end and purpoſe: and if but one man be damned, hee is damned, either becauſe God will not ſave him, or becauſe he cannot. If they ſay he will not, then is hee changeable; if he cannot, then is hee not omnipotent, conſidering his purpoſe was to convey happineſſe to all creatures.

Thus much of the efficient cauſe of the Church, namely, Gods predeſtination which doctrine could not here bee omitted, conſidering no man can beleeve himſelf to be a member of the Church, unleſſe withall hee beleeve that he is predeſtinate to life everlaſting. Now we come to the ſecond point, namely, the Myſticall Vnion, which is the very forme of the Church, wherein all that beleeve are made one with Chriſt, Gal. 3.18. To the cauſing of this Vnion, two things are required, a Donation or giving of Chriſt unto man, which is to be made one with him, and a Conjunction betweene them both. Of the firſt, the Prophet Eſay ſaith, Eſay 9.6. Vnto us a child is borne, and unto us a Sonne is giuen; and Paul, Rom. 8.23. Who ſpared not his owne Sonne, but gave him for us all: how ſhall he not with him give us all things alſo? And touching it ſundry points muſt bee conſidered. The firſt is, what is meant by this giving? Anſ. It is an action or worke of God the Father by the holy Ghoſt, whereby Chriſt as redeemer in the appointed time is really communicated to all ordained to ſalvation, in ſuch manner, that they may truly ſay, that Chriſt himſelfe with all his benefits is theirs, both in reſpect of right thereto, and in reſpect of all fruits redounding thence, and that as truly as any man may ſay, that houſe and land given him of his anceſtours is his owne both to poſſeſſe and to uſe.

The ſecond point is, what is the very thing given? Anſ. Whole Chriſt, God and man is given, becauſe his humanity without his Godhead, or the Godhead without the humanity doth not reconcile us to God. Yet in this giving there muſt be a divers conſideration had of the two natures of Chriſt: for the communication of the Godhead is meerely energeticall, that is, only in reſpect of operatiõ, in that it doth make the manhood perſonally united unto it to be propitiatorie for our ſinnes and meritorious of life eternall. And to avouch any communication of the Godhead in reſpect of eſſence, were to bring in the hereſie of the Maniches, and to maintaine a compoſition and a commixtion of our natures with the nature of God. Againe, in the manhood of Chriſt we muſt diſtinguiſh betweene the ſubject it ſelfe, the ſubſtance of body and ſoule; and the bleſſings in the ſubject which tend to our ſalvation. And the communication of the aforeſaid manhood is in reſpect of both, without ſeparation: for no man can receive ſaving vertue from Chriſt, unleſſe firſt of all hee receive Chriſt himſelfe, as no man can have the treaſure hid in the field, unleſſe hee firſt of all have the field, Ioh. 6.53,54. and no man can be nouriſhed by meate and drinke, unleſſe firſt of all he receive the ſubſtance of both. And this is the cauſe, why not onely in the preaching of the Word, but alſo in the inſtitution of the Lords Supper, expreſſe mention is made, not only of Chriſts merit, but alſo of his very body and blood, whereby the whole humanity is ſignified, as appeares by that place, where it is ſaid, Ioh. 1.14. that the Word was made fleſh. And though the fleſh of it ſelfe profit nothing, as Saint Iohn ſaith, yet as it is joyned to the Godhead of the Sonne, and doth ſubſiſt in his perſon, it receiveth thence quickning vertue to revive and renue all thoſe to whom it ſhall be given. Laſtly, among the bleſſings that are ſtored up in the manhood of Chriſt for our ſalvation, ſome are given unto us by imputation as when we are juſtified by the righteouſneſſe, indeed inherent in his manhood, but imputed unto us: ſome by infuſion, as when holineſſe is wrought in our hearts by the ſpirit, as a fruit of that holineſſe which is in the manhood of Chriſt, and derived from it, as the light of one candle from another.

The third point is, in what manner Chriſt is given unto us. Anſw. God the Father giveth Chriſt unto his Church not in an earthly or bodily manner, as when a king beſtowes a gift with his owne hand, and putteth it into the hand of his ſubject: but the manner is altogether celeſtiall and ſpirituall: partly, becauſe it is brought to paſſe by the meere divine operation of the holy Ghoſt: and partly, becauſe in reſpect of us, this gift is received by an inſtrument which is ſupernaturall, namely faith, whereby we lay hold on, and apply unto our ſelves the Evangelicall promiſes. And this manner of giving may be conceived thus:

A man

A man that never stirred foote out of England holds and enjoyes land in Turkie: but how comes it to be his? Thus: the Emperour was willing and content to bestow it; and the man for his part as willing to accept and receive it: and by this meanes that which at the first was the Emperours, by mutuall consent becomes the mans. In the same manner God the Father hath made an Evangelicall covenant with his Church: in which of his mercie he hath made a grant of his owne Sonne unto us, with righteousnesse, & life everlasting in him: and we againe by his grace accept of this grant, and receive the same by faith: and thus by mutuall consent according to the tenour of the covenant, any repētant sinner may truly say, thogh I now have my abode upon earth, and Christ in respect of his manhood bee locally in heaven; yet is hee truly mine to have and to enjoy, his body is mine, his blood is mine. As for the giving and receiving of the body and blood of Christ in bodily manner (which the Papists maintaine in avouching the reall transubstantiation of bread and wine in the Sacramēt, into the body & blood of Christ, & the Lutherans also in teaching, that his body and blood is substantially either in, or with, or under the bread & wine) is an erroneous conceit, flat opposite to sundry points of the Christian faith. For Christ to this very houre retaineth still the essence and essentiall properties of a true body, and we beleeve that really & visibly he ascended into heaven, and there abides till his second comming to the last judgment: who then having but common reason would imagine a communication of the body of Christ pent up in the element of bread, and conveyed into our bodies by the mouth and stomacke?

The fourth point is, whether wee are not Lords of Christ, he being thus given unto us? Ans. No: for this donation is not single but mutuall. As Christ is given unto us, so wee againe are given to Christ, as he himselfe saith, Ioh. 17.2. Those whom thou hast given me, Father, I have kept. And we are given unto him, that our bodies and soules are made his, not onely as he is God, but also as he is our redeemer: and our sinnes with the guilt thereof are made his by imputation, and the punishment thereof is wholly laid upon him. This is all the dowry which the Church, being the spouse of Christ, hath brought unto him.

The fifth point is, how any man in particular may know that Christ is given unto him of the Father. Ans. When God gives Christ to man, he withall gives man grace and power to receive Christ, and to apprehend him with all his benefits: and this we doe when wee utterly renounce our selves, this world, & all things therein, bewaile our sins past, resting on the death of Christ for the pardon of them all, and as it were with both the armes of faith catching hold upon him in all estates, both in life and death. When the heart of any man is truly disposed and inclined to doe these and the like things, we may truly say, that God hath given him grace to receive Christ.

The second thing required to make us one with Christ, is the Mysticall union, which is a conjunction whereby Christ and his Church are actually coupled into one Mysticall bodie. Now that we may the better conceive the nature of it, sundry questions are to be mooved. The first, what kind of conjunction this is? Ans. In the Scripture we meet with three kind of conjunctions. The first, is conjunction in nature, when sundry things are coupled by one and the same nature. As the Father, the Son, and the holy Ghost, being three distinct substances are all one, and therefore joyned in one Godhead or divine nature. Now Christ & the beleever are not joyned in nature: for then they twaine should have one body and soule. The second conjunction is in person, when things in nature different, so concurre together, that they make but one person; as the body and soule make one man: and the Godhead of the Son with his manhood make but one Christ: in whom there is an union of distinct natures with unitie of person. Now Christ and a Christian are not joyned in person: for Christ is one person, Peter a second person, and Paul a third distinct from them both: and so many men as there be, so many severall persons. The third conjunction is in spirit; and this is the conjunction meant in this place: whereby Christ and his Church are joyned together: for the very same spirit of God that dwels in the manhood of Christ, and filleth it with all graces above measure, is derived thence and dwels in all the true members of the Church, and filleth them with the like graces in measure, and therefore S. Iohn saith, Hereby we know that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his spirit. Hence it followes, that the bond of this conjunction is one and the same spirit descending from Christ the head to all his members, creating also in them the instument of faith, whereby they apprehend Christ, and make him their owne. 1 Ioh. 4.13

The second is, what are the things united? Answ. Not the bodie of the beleever to the bodie of Christ, or the soule to his soule, but the whole person of the man to the whole person of Christ: yet in this order; we are first of all and immediately joyned to the manhood of Christ, & by the manhood to the godhead.

The third question is, what is the manner of this conjunction? Ans. We must not thinke that Christ & his Church are joyned by imagination, as the mind of man and the thing whereof he thinkes: or by consent of heart, as one friend is joyned with another, and as the Iewes converted were all of one heart and soule: or by any abode in one place, or by touching, as sea and land are both joyned together and make one globe: or by any compolition or commixtion of substances, as when many ingredients are put together, to make one medicine. But this conjunction is altogether Act. 2.42.

ſpirituall as the former Giving was; & incomprehenſible to mans reaſon: and therefore wee muſt rather labour to feele it by experience in the heart, then to conceive it in the braine. Yet nevertheleſſe it ſhall not be amiſſe to conſider a reſemblance of it in this compariſon. Suppoſe a man having the parts of his bodie disjoyned farre aſunder, his head lying in Italy, one arme in Germany, the other in Spaine, and his legs with us in England: ſuppoſe further, all theſe parts or quarters have all one ſoule, extēding it ſelfe unto them all & quickning each of them ſeverally, as though they were neerely joyned together: and though the parts be ſevered many hundred miles aſunder, yet the diſtance of place doth not hinder the conjunction, conſidering one and the ſame ſoule doth inlarge it ſelfe and give life unto them all. In the ſame manner the head of the Myſticall body Chriſt our Saviour is now in heaven, & ſome of his members in heavē with him, and ſome in earth: and of theſe, ſome in England, ſome in Germany, ſome in Italy, ſome in Spaine, diſtant many thouſand miles aſunder: and the ſpirit of God is as it were the ſoule of this body which gives ſpiritual life to all the members: diſtance of place doth not hinder this conjunction, becauſe the H Ghoſt which linketh al the parts together is infinite.

The benefits which we receive by this Myſticall union are manifold. For it is the ground of the conveyance of all grace. The firſt is, that by meanes hereof every Chriſtian as hee is a Chriſtian or a man regenerate, hath his beginning and being in Chriſt, howſoever as he is a man he hath his being & ſubſiſting in himſelf, as Paul ſaith, 1 Cor, 1.30. Ye are of God in Chriſt. And, Eph. 5.30. Ye are members of his body, of his fleſh, & of his bones. How (will ſome ſay) can this be? After this manner: The compariſon is taken from our firſt parents. Eve was made of a rib taken out of Adams ſide, he being caſt into a ſlumber: this being done, Adam awaked and ſaid, This now is bone of my bone, & fleſh of my fleſh. Gen. 2.23. Chriſt was nailed on the croſſe, and his moſt precious blood was ſhed, and out of it ariſe and ſpring all true Chriſtians: that is, out of the merit of Chriſts death and paſſion, whereby they become new creatures. Secondly, every one that beleeveth in Chriſt by reaſon of this union hath an unſpeakable prerogative: for hereby he is firſt united to Chriſt, and by reaſon thereof is alſo joyned to the whole Trinitie, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, and ſhall have eternall fellowſhip with them. Thirdly, ſundry men, ſpecially Papiſts, deride the doctrine of juſtification by imputed righteouſneſſe: thinking it is abſurd, that a man ſhould be juſt by that righteouſneſſe which is inherent in the perſon of Chriſt: as if we would ſay, that one man may liue by the ſoule of another: or be learned by the learning of another. But here wee may ſee that it hath ſufficient foundation. For there is a moſt neere and ſtreight union betweene A Chriſt and all that beleeve in him: and in this union Chriſt with all his benefits according to the tenour of the covenant of grace, is made ours really: and therefore wee may ſtand juſt before God by his righteouſneſſe; it being indeede his, becauſe it is in him as in a ſubject; yet ſo, as it is alſo ours; becauſe it is given unto us of God. Now there is no ſuch union betweene man and man, and for that cauſe one man cannot live by the ſoule of another, or be learned by the learning of another. Fourthly, from this fountaine ſprings our ſanctification, whereby we die to ſinne, and are renewed in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe. Wormes and flies that have lien dead all winter, if they be laid in the Sunne in the ſpring time begin to revive, B by vertue thereof: even ſo, when we are united to Chriſt, & are (as it were) laid in the beames of this bleſſed Sun of righteouſneſſe, vertue is derived thence, which warmeth our benummed hearts dead in ſinne, and reviveth us to newneſſe of life: wherby we begin to affect & like good things, and put in practiſe all the duties of religion. Fifthly, hence wee have the protections of Gods angels; for they alwaies wait & attend on Chriſt, & becauſe we are made one with him, they attend upon us alſo. Laſtly, by reaſon of this union with Chriſt, every beleever comes to have intereſt and to recover his title in the creatures of God, and to have the holy and lawfull uſe of them all. For we muſt conſider, that although Adam created in the C image of God, was made Lord over all things in heaven & earth; yet when he fell by eating the forbidden fruit, he, & in him all mankinde loſt the title & uſe of them all. Now therefore that a man may recover his intereſt, hee muſt firſt of all be united & made one with Chriſt: and then by Chriſt, who is Lord and King over all, ſhall he recover that title in the creatures of God, which he had by creation; & be made Lord over them againe. But ſome will ſay, if this bee ſo, then a Chriſtian man may have and enjoy all creatures at his pleaſure; and therefore the goods of other men? Anſw. The reaſon is not good, for in this life we have no more but (a) right unto the creature; and (b) right in it, that is, actuall poſſeſſion is reſerved for the life to come. Therfore we muſt content D our ſelves with our allowed portions givē unto us by God, by his grace uſing them in holy manner, expecting by hope the full fruition of all things till after this life. Againe, if all tities to the creatures be recovered by Chriſt, it may bee demanded, whether infidels have any intereſt to their goods or no? Anſ. Infidels before men are right lords of all their lands and poſſeſſions which they have obtained by lawfull meanes; and in the courts of men they are not to bee deprived of them: but before God they are but uſurpers: becauſe they hold them not in capite, that is, in Chriſt: neither have they any holy and right uſe of them, for to the uncleane, all things are uncleane, Tit. 1.15. And they muſt firſt of all become members of

b Ius in re.

Christ, before they can hold and enjoy them aright, and use them with good conscience.

The duties which are to bee learned of the doctrine of this union, are manifold. And first of all, wee are taught to purge our hands and hearts of all our sinnes, and especially to avoyd all those sinnes whereby mens bodies are defiled, as drunkennesse, uncleannesse, fornication: for they drive away the Spirit of God from his owne house, and dissolve the bond of the conjunction betweene Christ and us. Secondly, we must every one of us, which professe our selves to be members of Christ, labour to become conformable unto him in holinesse of life, and to become new creatures: for this union requireth thus much. Let a man take the grafts of a crabbe-tree, and set them into good stockes: yet will they not change their sappe, but bring forth fruit according to their owne nature, even sowre crabbes: but it must not be so with us: we are indeed wild olives, and the branches of wild vines; yet seeing we are perswaded that we are grafted into Christ, and made one with him, we must lay aside our wild and sowre nature, and take upon us the nature of the true vine, beare good fruit, have good juyce in us, and render sweet wine. Thirdly, we are taught hence to bee plentifull in all good workes, considering we are joyned to him that is the fountaine of grace. And therefore Christ saith, Ioh. 15.1. I am the true vine, and my father is the husband man: every branch that beareth not fruit in me, he taketh away: and every one that beareth fruit, hee purgeth it, that it may beare more fruit. And the Prophet Isaiah compares the Church of God to a vineyard with a tower & wine-presse in it. And God himselfe comes often down unto it, to see the fruits of the valley, to see if the vine bud, and the Pomegranats flourish. And further wee must bring forth fruit with patience. For the Lord of this vineyard comes with crosses and afflictions, as with a pruning knife in his hand, to pare and to dresse us that we may be fit to bring forth fruit, plentifull in duties of piety to God, and in duties of love to all men, yea to our enemies. Christian men are trees of righteousnesse growing by the waters of the Sanctuary: but what trees? not like ours: for they are rooted upward in heaven in Christ, and their graines and branches grow downeward that they may beare fruit among men.

Ezech. 47. 12.

Hitherto we have heard what the Church is: now to beleeve the Church, is nothing els but to beleeve that there is a company of the predestinate made one in Christ, and that withall we are in the number of them.

Before wee proceed any further, three rules must be observed touching the Church in generall. The first, that Christ alone is the head of the Catholike Church, and that hee neither hath nor can have any creature in heaven or earth to bee fellow herein. For the Church is his body, and none but hee can performe the duty of an head unto it: which duty stands in two things: the first, is to governe the Church

Eph. 1 22. Col. 1. 19.

A by such power and authority whereby he can and doth prescribe lawes properly binding the conscience of all his members; the second, is by grace to quicken and to put spirituall life into them, so as they shall be able to say, that they live not, but Christ in them. As for the Supremacy of the sea of Rome, whereby the Pope will needs stand ministeriall head to the Catholike Church, it is a Satanicall forgery. For the headship (as I may tearme it) of Christ is of that nature or quality, that it can admit no deputy, whether we respect the commanding, or the quickening power of Christ before named. Nay Christ needs no vicar or deputy: for hee is all-sufficient in himself and alwayes present B with his Church, as he himselfe testifieth, saying, Mat. 18. 20. Where two or three bee gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst among them. And whereas all commissions cease in the presence of him that gives the commission: it is as much pride and arrogancy for the Pope to take unto himselfe the title of the head and universall Bishop of the Church; as it is for a subject to keepe himselfe in commission in the Presence of his King.

The second rule is, that there is no salvation out of the Church, and that therefore every one which is to be saved must become a member and a citizen of the Catholike and Apostolike Church: and such as remaine for ever out of the same perish eternally. Therefore S. Iohn C saith, They went out from us, they were not of us: for if they had beene of us, they would have remained with us: but this commeth to passe that it might appeare, that they are not all of us. And againe, that such as be holy are in the city of God but without, that is, forth of the Church, are dogs, enchanters, whoremongers, adulterers, &c. And the Arke, out of which all perished, figured the Church, out of which all are condemned. And for this cause S. Luke saith, that the Lord added to the Church from day to day such as should be saved. And the reason hereof is plaine: for without Christ there is no salvation: but out of the militant Church there is no Christ, nor faith in Christ: and therefore no salvation. Againe forth of the militant Church there are no meanes of salvation, no preaching of the Word no invocation of Gods name, no Sacraments, and therefore no salvation. For this cause every man must be admonished evermore to joyne himselfe to some particular Church being a sound member of the Catholike Church.

1 Ioh. 2. 19.

Rev. 22. 15.

Act. 2.47.

D

The third rule, is, that the Church which here we beleeve is onely one. As Christ himselfe speaketh, My dove is alone, and my undefiled is the onely daughter of her mother. And as there is onely one God, and one redeemer, one faith, one baptisme, and one way of salvation by Christ onely, so there is but one Church alone.

Cant 6.8.

The Catholike Church hath two parts: the Church Triumphant in heaven, and the Church Militant on earth.

The Triumphant Church may thus bee described: It is a company of the spirits of just men, triumphing over the fleſh, the divell, and the world, praiſing God. Firſt I ſay, it is a company of the ſpirits of men, as the H. Ghoſt expreſſely tearmeth it, becauſe the ſoules onely of the godly departed, as of Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, David, &c. are as yet aſcended into heaven, and not their bodies. Furthermore the properties of this company are two: The firſt, is to make triumph over their ſpirituall enemies, the fleſh, the divell, the world: for the righteous man, ſo long as he lives in this world, is in continuall combate without truce with all the enemies of his ſalvation: and by conſtant faith obtaining victory in the end of his life, he is tranſlated in glorious and triumphant manner into the Kingdome of glory. This was ſignified to Iohn in a viſion, in which hee ſaw an innumerable company of all ſorts of nations, kindreds, people and tongues ſtand before the Lambe, cloathed in long white robes, with palmes in their hands, in token that they had beene warriours, but now by Chriſt have gotten the victory and are made conquerours. Their ſecond property, is to praiſe and magnifie the name of God, as it followeth in the former place, ſaying Amen: praiſe, and glory, and wiſedome, and thankes, honour, power and might bee unto our God for evermore. Hence it may be demanded, whether Angels be of this Triumphant Church or no? Anſw. The bleſſed Angels bee in heaven in the preſence of God the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, but they are not of the myſticall body of Chriſt, becauſe they are not under him, as he is their Redeemer, conſidering, they cannot be redeemed, which never fell: and it cannot be prooved that they now ſtand by the vertue of Chriſts redemption: but they are under him as he is their Lord and King; and by the power of Chriſt as he is God, and their God, are they confirmed. And therefore as I take it, we cannot ſay, that Angels are members of the myſticall body of Chriſt, or of the triumphant Church; though indeed, they bee of the company of the bleſſed.

Heb. 12. 23.

Rev. 7. 9.

Rev. 7. 12.

The Church Militant may bee thus deſcribed: It is the company of the elect or faithfull living under the croſſe, deſiring to be removed, and to bee with Chriſt. I ſay not that the Militant Church is the whole body of the elect, but onely that part thereof which liveth upon earth: and the infallible marke thereof is that faith in Chriſt which is taught and delivered in the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles? and this faith againe may be diſcerned by two markes. The firſt, is, that the members of this company live under the croſſe, and profit by it in all ſpirituall grace. And therefore it is ſaid, that we muſt through many afflictions enter into the kingdome of heaven. And our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, if any man will come after mee, let him deny himſelfe, and take up his croſſe every day and follow me. The ſecond marke, is a deſire to depart hence and to be with Chriſt, as Paul ſaith, We love rather to be removed out of this body and to be with Chriſt. And againe, I deſire to bee looſed and to bee with Chriſt, which is beſt of all. Where yet we muſt remember, that the members of Chriſt doe not deſire death ſimply and abſolutely, but in two reſpects. I. That they might leave off to ſinne, and by ſinning leave to diſpleaſe God. II. That they might come to enjoy happineſſe in heaven, and to be with Chriſt.

Act. 14. 22.

Luk. 9. 23.

2 Cor. 5. 8.

Phil. 1. 23

Touching the generall eſtate of the militant Church, two queſtions are to bee conſidered. The firſt, how farre forth God is preſent with it, aſſiſting it by his grace. Anſ. God gives his ſpirit unto it in ſuch a meaſure, that although the gates of hell cannot prevaile againſt it, yet nevertheleſſe it remaines ſtill ſubject to errour both in doctrine and manners. For that which is true in every member of the Church, is alſo true in the whole: but every member of the Militant Church is ſubject to errour both in doctrine and manners, becauſe men in this life are but in part enlightned and ſanctified: and therefore ſtill remaine ſubject to blindneſſe of mind and ignorance, & to the rebellion of their wils and affections: whereby it comes to paſſe, that they may eaſily faile either in judgement or in practice. Againe, that which may befall one or two particular Churches, may likewiſe befall all the particular Churches upon earth, all being in one and the ſame condition; but this may befall one or two particular Churches, to faile either in doctrine or manners. The Church of Epheſus failed in leaving her firſt love, whereupon Chriſt threatneth to remoove from her the Candleſticke. And the Church of Galatia was remooved to another Goſpel from him that had called them in the grace of Chriſt: now why may not the ſame things befal twenty, yea an hundred Churches, which befell theſe twaine? Laſtly, experience ſheweth this to be true, in that generall Councels have erred. The Councell of Nice being to reforme ſundry behaviours among the Biſhops and Elders, would with common conſent have forbidden marriage unto them, thinking it profitable to be ſo; unleſſe Paphnutius had better informed them out of the Scriptures. In the third Councell at Carthage, certaine bookes Apocrypha, as the booke of Syrach, Tobie, and the Macchabees, are numbred in the Canon, & yet were excluded by the Councell of Laodicea. And the ſaying of a Divine is received, that former Councels are to be reformed and amended by the later. But Papiſts maintaining that the Church cannot erre, alleadge the promiſe of Chriſt: Howbeit when he is come which is the ſpirit of truth, he will leade you into all truth. Anſw. The promiſe is directed to the Apoſtles, who with their Apoſtolicall authoritie had this priviledge granted them, that in the teaching and penning of the Goſpel they ſhould not erre: and therefore in the Councell at Ieruſalem they conclude thus, It ſeemes good unto us, and to the holy Ghoſt. And if the promiſe be further extended to all the Church, it muſt be underſtood with a limitation: that God will give his ſpirit unto the members thereof,

thereof to leade them into all truth, ſo far forth as ſhall be needfull for their ſalvation.

1 Ioh 3. 24. Act. 20. 20.27.

The ſecond queſtion is, wherein ſtands the dignity and excellency of the Church? Anſ. It ſtands in ſubjection & obedience unto the wil and Word of her ſpouſe and head, Chriſt Ieſus. And hence it followes, that the Church is not to challenge unto her ſelfe authority over the Scriptures, but onely a miniſtry or miniſteriall ſervice, whereby ſhee is appointed of God to preſerve and keep, to publiſh and preach them, and to give teſtimony of them. And for this cauſe, it is called the pillar and ground of truth. The Church of Rome not content with this, ſaith further, that the authority of the Church in reſpect of us, is above the authority of the Scripture, becauſe (ſay they) we cannot know Scripture to be Scripture, but by the teſtimony of the Church. But indeed they ſpeake an untruth. For the teſtimony of men that are ſubject to error cannot be greater and of more force with us, then the teſtimony of God who cannot erre. Againe, the Church hath her beginning from the Word: (for there cannot be a Church without faith, and there is no faith without the Word, and there is no word out of the Scriptures) and therefore the Church in reſpect of us, depends on the Scripture, and not the Scripture on the Church. And as the Lawyer which hath no further power but to expound the law, is under the law: ſo the Church which hath authority onely to publiſh and expound the Scriptures, cannot authorize them unto us, but muſt ſubmit her ſelfe unto them. And whereas it is alleadged, that faith comes by hearing, and this hearing is in reſpect of the voyce of the Church, and that therefore faith comes by the voyce of the Church: the anſwer is, that the place muſt bee underſtood, not of that generall faith whereby wee are reſolved that Scripture is Scripture, but of juſtifying faith, whereby wee attaine to ſalvation. And faith comes by hearing the voyce of the Church; not, as it is the Churches voyce, but as it is a miniſtry or meanes to publiſh the Word of God, which is both the cauſe and object of our beleeving. Now on the contrary we muſt hold, that as the carpenter knowes his rule to be ſtraight, not by any other rule applyed unto it, but by it ſelfe: for caſting his eye upon it, he preſently diſcernes whether it bee ſtraight or no: ſo we know and are reſolved that Scripture is Scripture, even by the Scripture it ſelfe, though the Church ſay nothing, ſo bee it we have the ſpirit of diſcerning when we reade, heare, and conſider the Scripture. And yet the teſtimony of the Church is not to bee deſpiſed; for though it breed not a perſwaſion in us of the certainty of the Scripture, yet it is a very good inducement thereto.

1 Tim. 3. 15.

Rom. 10. 17.

The Militant Church hath many parts. For as the Ocean ſea which is but one, is devided into parts according to the regions and countries againſt which it lyeth, as into the Engliſh Spaniſh, Italian ſea, &c. ſo the Church diſperſed over the face of the whole earth, is divided into other particular Churches according as the countries are ſeverall in which it is ſeated, as into the Church of England and Ireland, the Church of France, the Church of Germany, &c.

Againe, particular Churches are in a twofold eſtate: ſometime they lye hid in perſecution, wanting the publike preaching of the Word, and the adminiſtration of the Sacraments: and ſometime againe they are viſible, carrying before the eyes of the world an open profeſſion of the name of Chriſt: as the Moone is ſometime eclipſed, and ſometime ſhineth in the full. In the firſt eſtate was the Church of Iſrael in the dayes of Eliah, when he wiſhed to dye: becauſe the people had forſaken the covenant of the Lord, broken downe his altars, ſlaine his Prophets with the ſword, and he was left alone, and they ſought to take his life alſo. Behold a lamentable eſtate when ſo worthy a Prophet could not find another beſide himſelfe that feared God: yet marke what the Lord ſaith unto him, I have left ſeaven thouſand in Iſrael, even all the knees that have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth that hath not kiſſed him. Againe it is ſaid, That Iſrael had beene a long ſeaſon without the true God, without Prieſt to teach, and without the Law. Neither muſt this trouble any that God ſhould ſo farre forth forſake his Church: for when ordinary meanes of ſalvation faile, hee then gathereth his elect by extraordinary meanes, as when the children of Iſrael wandered in the wilderneſſe wanting both circumciſion and the Paſſeover, hee made a ſupply by Manna, and by the pillar of a cloud. Hence we have direction to anſwer the Papiſts, who demand of us where our Church was threeſcore yeares agoe before the dayes of Luther: wee ſay, that then for the ſpace of many hundred yeares, an univerſall Apoſtaſie overſpread the whole face of the earth; and that our Church then was not viſible to the world, but lay hid under the chaffe of Popery. And the truth of this, the Records of all ages manifeſt.

1 Kings 19.14.

2 Chro. 15.3.

The ſecond eſtate of the Church, is when it flouriſheth and is viſible, not that the faith and ſecret election of men can bee ſeene (for no man can diſcerne theſe things but by outward ſignes) but becauſe it is apparant in reſpect of the outward aſſemblies gathered to the preaching of the Word and the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, for the praiſe and glory of God, and their mutuall edification. And the viſible Church may be thus deſcribed: It is a mixt company of men profeſſing the faith, aſſembled together by the preaching of the Word. Firſt of all, I call it a mixt company, becauſe in it there be true beleevers and hypocrites, Elect and Reprobate, good and bad. The Church is the Lords field, in which the enemy ſowes his tares, it is the corne flore, in which lyeth wheat and chaffe: it is a band of men, in which beſide thoſe that bee of valour and courage there bee

Matth. 13. 25. 47.

white-livered ſouldiers. And it is called a Church of the better part, namely, the elect whereof it conſiſteth, though they be in number few. As for the ungodly, though they be in the Church, yet are they no more parts of it indeed, then the ſuperfluous humours in the veines are parts of the body. But to proceed, how are the members of the viſible Church qualified and diſcerned? the anſwer followeth in the definition, profeſſing the faith. Whereby I meane the profeſſion of that religion which hath beene taught from the beginning, and is now recorded in the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles. And this profeſſion is a ſigne and marke whereby a man is declared and made manifeſt to be a member of the Church.

Againe, becauſe the profeſſion of the faith is otherwhiles true and ſincere, and otherwhiles onely in ſhew, therefore there bee alſo two ſorts of members of the viſible Church, members before God, and members before men. A member of the Church before God, is hee that beſide the outward profeſſion of the faith, hath inwardly a pure heart, good conſcience, and faith unfained, whereby he is indeed a true member of the Church. Members before men, whom we may call reputed members, are ſuch as have nothing elſe but the outward profeſſion, wanting the good conſcience, and the faith unfained. The reaſon why they are to be eſteemed members of us, is, becauſe we are bound by the rule of charity to thinke of men as they appeare unto us; leaving ſecret judgement unto God.

I added in the laſt place, that the Church is gathered by the Word preached, to ſhew that the cauſe whereby it is begun and continued, is the Word: which for that cauſe is called the immortall ſeede, whereby we are borne anew: and milke, whereby wee are fed and cheriſhed to life everlaſting. And hence it followeth neceſſarily, that the preaching of the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, joyned with any meaſure of faith and obedience, is an infallible marke of a true Church. Indeed it is true, there bee three things required to the good eſtate of the Church, the preaching of the Goſpel, the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and the due execution of Diſcipline according to the Word: yet if the two later be wanting, ſo be it there be preaching of the Word with obedience in the people, there is for ſubſtance a true Church of God. For it is the banner of Chriſt diſplayed, under which all that war againſt the fleſh, the divell, the world, muſt ranke themſelves. As the Lord ſaith by the Prophet Iſaiah, I will lift up my hand to the Gentiles, and ſet up my ſtandard unto the people, and they ſhall bring their ſonnes in their armes, and their daughters ſhall be carried upon their ſhoulders. Hence it followeth, that men which want the preaching of the Goſpel, muſt either procure the ſame unto themſelves; or if that cannot be, becauſe they live in the middeſt of idolatrous nations, as in Spaine and Italy, it is requiſite that they ſhould

A joyne themſelves to thoſe places where with liberty of conſcience they may enjoy this happy bleſſing. Men are not to have their hearts glued to the honours and riches of this world, but they ſhould be of Davids mind, and rather deſire to bee doore-keepers in the houſe of God, then to dwell in the tents of ungodlineſſe. In the Canticles the ſpouſe of Chriſt ſaith, Shew mee, O thou whom my ſoule loveth, where thou feedeſt, where thou lyeſt at noone: for why ſhould I bee as ſhee that turneth aſide to the flockes of thy companions? To whom he anſwereth thus: If thou know not, O thou the faireſt among women, get thee forth by the ſteps of the flocke, and feed thy kiddes by the tents of the ſhepheards: that is, in thoſe places where the doctrine of righteouſneſſe and life everlaſting by the Meſſias, is publiſhed. When the Shunamites child was dead, ſhee told her husband that ſhe would go to the man of God; to whom he anſwered thus; Why wilt thou goe to him to day, it is neither new Moone, nor Sabbath day: whereby it is ſignified, that when teaching was ſcarce in Iſrael, the people did reſort to the Prophets for inſtruction and conſolation. And David ſaith, that the people whereſoever their aboad was, went from ſtrength to ſtrength till they appeared before God in Sion. And oftentimes they being Proſelytes, their aboad muſt needs be out of the precincts of Iewry.

Verſe 9.

2 Kings 4. 23.

Pſa. 84. 7

Thus we ſee what the viſible Church is: now further concerning it, three queſtions are to be ſkanned. The firſt is, how we may diſcerne whether particular men and particular Churches holding errours, bee ſound members of the Catholike Church or no. For the anſwering of this, we muſt make a double diſtinction, one of errours, the other of perſons that erre. Of errours ſome are deſtroyers of the faith, ſome onely weakners of it. A deſtroyer is that, which overturneth any fundamentall point of religion; which is of that nature, that if it be denied, religion it ſelfe is overturned; as the deniall of the death of Chriſt, and the immortality of the ſoule, juſtification by workes, and ſuch like: and the ſumme of theſe fundamentall points is compriſed in the Creede of the Apoſtles and the Decalogue. A weakning errour is that, the holding whereof doth not overturne any point in the foundation of ſalvation; as the errour of free-will, and ſundry ſuch like. This diſtinction is made by the holy Ghoſt, who ſaith expreſſely that the doctrines of repentance, and faith, and baptiſme, and laying on of hands, and the reſurrection, and the laſt judgement, are the foundation, namely, of religion: and againe, that Chriſt is the foundation, and that other doctrines conſonant to the Word, are as gold and ſilver laid thereupon. Secondly, perſons erring, are of two ſorts: ſome erre of weakeneſſe, being carried away by others: or of ſimple ignorance, not yet being convicted and informed concerning the truth. Some againe erre of obſtinacy, or affected ignorance, which having beene admoniſhed

and

and convicted, ſtill perſevere in their forged opinions. This being ſaid, we now come to the point. If any man or Church, ſhall hold an errour of the lighter kinde, hee ſtill remaines a member of the Church of God, and ſo muſt be reputed of us. As when a Lutheran ſhall hold, that images are ſtill to be retained in the Church, that there is an Vniverſall election of all men, &c. For theſe and ſuch like opinions may be maintained, the foundation of ſalvation unraſed. This which I ſay is flatly avouched by Paul. If any man (ſaith he) build on this foundation, gold, ſilver, precious ſtones; timber, hay, ſtubble, his worke ſhall bee made manifeſt by the fire, &c. and if any mans worke burne, he ſhall looſe, but yet he ſhall be ſafe himſelfe. And therefore the hay and ſtubble of mens errours that are beſide the foundation, on which they are laid, doe not debarre them from being Chriſtians or members of the Church. A man breakes downe the windowes of his houſe; the houſe ſtands: hee breakes downe the roofe or the wals; the houſe yet ſtands though deformed: hee pulles up the foundation; the houſe it ſelfe fals and ceaſeth to be an houſe. Now religion which we profeſſe is like an houſe or building: and ſome points thereof are like windowes, doores, wals, roofes, and ſome are the very foundation: and the former may be battered, the foundation ſtanding. Againe, if the errour be directly or by neceſſary conſequent, even in common ſenſe againſt the foundation, conſideration muſt bee had whether the Church or party erreth of weakeneſſe or malice: if of weakeneſſe, the party is to be eſteemed as a member of the Catholike Church. And thus Paul writes unto the Church of Galatia, as to a Church of God, though by falſe Teachers it had beene turned away to another Goſpel, embraced the fundamentall errour of juſtification by workes. But when any man or Church ſhall hold fundamentall errours in obſtinacy or affected ignorance, wee are not then bound to repute them any longer as Churches or Chriſtians, but as ſuch to whom condemnation belongs, as Paul ſheweth by the example of Iannes and Iambres. And as Iannes and Iambres, (ſaith he) withſtood Moſes, ſo doe theſe alſo reſiſt the truth, men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith. Yet withall, this caveat muſt ever be remembred, that wee rather condemne the error then the perſon that erreth, becauſe Gods mercy is like to a bottomleſſe ſea, whereby he worketh what he will and when he will in the hearts of miſerable ſinners.

1 Tim. 3. 8.

The ſecond queſtion is, Where at this day we may finde ſuch viſible Churches as are indeed ſound members of the Catholike Church? And for the reſolving of it, we are to goe thorow all countries and religions in the world. And firſt to begin with Turkes and Iewes, we are not in any wiſe to acknowledge their aſſemblies for Churches, becauſe they worſhip not God in Chriſt who is the head of the Church.

A As for the aſſemblies of Papiſts which have bin a great part of the world, if thereby we underſtand companies of men holding the Pope for their head, and beleeving the doctrine eſtabliſhed in the Councell of Trent: in name they are called Churches, but indeed they are no true or ſound members of the Catholike Church. For both in their doctrine and in the worſhip of God, they raze the very foundation of religion, which will appeare by theſe three poincs: Firſt of all, they hold juſtification by workes of grace: avouching that they are not onely juſtified before God by the merit of Chriſt, by alſo by their owne doings. Which opinion flatly overturneth juſtification by
B Chriſt. For as Paul ſaith to the Galathians, If ye be circumciſed, Chriſt profiteth you nothing, that is, if yee looke to be juſtified by the workes of the ceremoniall law, ye are falne from Chriſt: joyne circumciſion and Chriſt together in the matter of juſtification, and ye doe quite overthrow juſtification by Chriſt. Now if this be true, which is the Word of God that cannot lye, then we ſay to the Papiſts; if ye will needs be juſtified by workes of grace, yee are falne from grace. The ſecond point is, that they maintaine a daily reall ſacrifice of the body of Chriſt in the maſſe for the ſinnes of the quicke and dead. And this is alſo a fundamentall hereſie. For Chriſts ſacrifice on the croſſe muſt either be a perfect ſacrifice or no ſacrifice, and if it bee often iterated and repeated
C by the Maſſe-prieſt, it is not perfect but imperfect. The third point is, that they worſhip the Images of the Trinity and Saints departed, and their Breaden god, which is as vile an abhomination as ever was among the Gentiles: all being directly againſt the true meaning of the ſecond Commandement, and defacing the worſhip of God in the very ſubſtance thereof. Thus then it appeares, that the old Church of Rome is changed, and is now at this day, of a ſpouſe of Chriſt become an harlot: and therefore no more a Church of Chriſt indeed, then the carkaſſe of a dead man that weareth a living mans garment is a living man, though he looke never ſo like him.
D And whereas they pleade for themſelves, that they have ſucceſſion from the Apoſtles, the anſwer is, that ſucceſſion of perſon is nothing without ſucceſſion of doctrine, which they want: and we ſee that heretickes have ſucceeded lawfull Miniſters. Secondly, whereas it is alleadged, that in the Popiſh aſſemblies the Sacrament of Baptiſme is rightly (for ſubſtance adminiſtred, and that alſo is a note of a Church: three things may be anſwered. Firſt, that baptiſme ſevered from the preaching of the Goſpel, is no more a ſigne of a Church then the ſeale ſevered from the indenture is of force: and that is nothing. Circumciſion was uſed in Colchis, yet no Church; and among the Samaritans, and yet no people. Secondly, Baptiſme in the aſſemblies of the Church of Rome, is as the purſe of a true man in the hand of a theefe: and indeed doth no more argue them to bee Churches, then the true mans purſe argues the theefe to bee a true man. For Baptiſme though it bee in their aſſemblies, yet doth it not appertaine unto them, but unto another hidden Church of God, which he hath in all ages, gathered forth of the middeſt of them. Thirdly, though they have the outward baptiſme, yet they by neceſſary conſequent of doctrine, overturne the inward baptiſme that ſtands in juſtification and ſanctification. Moreover, whereas it is alleadged, that they maintaine the bookes of the old and new Teſtament penned by the Prophets and Apoſtles; the anſwer is, that they doe it with adding to the Canon, and by corrupting the native ſenſe of the Scriptures in the very foundation: and therefore they are but as a lanterne, that ſhewes light to others, and none to it ſelfe. Fourthly, it is further ſaid, that they hold the Creede of the Apoſtles, and make the ſame confeſſion of faith that we doe. I anſwer, that in ſhew of words they doe ſo indeed; but by neceſſary conſequents in the reſt of their doctrine they overturne one of the natures, and all the offices of Chriſt, and therewithall moſt of the articles of the Creed. And herein they deale as a father, that in outward ſhew tenders the body of his Child, and will not abide the leaſt blemiſh upon it: and yet by ſecret conveiances inwardly annoyes the heart, or the liver, and ſo in truth deſtroyes the ſame. Fifthly, it is alleadged, that Antichriſt muſt ſit in the temple of God, that is, the Church; therefore ſay ſome that deſire an Vnion betweene us and the papiſts, popiſh aſſemblies are true Churches: But the argument is not good. For it is one thing to be in the Church, and another thing to be of it. And Antichriſt is ſaid to ſit in the Church, not as a member thereof, but as an uſurper, or as the pyrate in the Ship or the Merchant: and hence it cannot be proved, that the aſſemblies of Papiſts are Churches, but that in them and with them there is mingled another hidden Church, in the middeſt whereof Antichriſt the Pope ruleth, though himſelfe hath no part therin. Laſtly, whereas ſome being no Papiſts, thinke their Churches to be like a body, diſeaſed and full of ſores and wounds from the head to the foote, and the throat alſo cut, yet ſo as life is ſtill remaining; we may better thinke (their foule errours conſidered, and their worſhip of God, which is nothing elſe but a mixture of Iudaiſme and Paganiſme) that it is a rotten & dead corps void of ſpirituall life. And therefore we have ſevered our ſelves from the Church of Rome upon juſt cauſe: neither are we ſchiſmatickes in ſo doing, but they rather, becauſe the ground and the proper cauſe of the ſchiſme is in them.

As for the aſſemblies of Anabaptiſts, Libertines, Antinomies, Tritheits, Arrians, Samoſatenians, they are no Churches of God, but conſpiracies of monſtrous hereticks judicially condemned in the primitive Church, and againe by the malice of Satan renued and revived in this age. The ſame we are to thinke and ſay of the Family of love.

As for the Churches of Germany commonly called the Churches of the Lutherans, they are reputed of us as the true Churches of God. Though their Auguſtane Confeſſion have not ſatisfied the expectation of other Reformed Churches: yet have they all the ſame enemies in matter of religion, and doe alike confeſſe the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt: and of the office of the Mediator, of faith and good workes, of the Word, the Church, and the Magiſtrate, are all of one judgement. They differ indeed from us in the queſtion of the Sacrament, but it is no ſufficient cauſe to induce us to hold them as no Church. For that there is a true or reall receiving of the body and blood of Chriſt in the Lords ſupper, we all agree; and wee joyntly confeſſe that Chriſt is there preſent, ſo farre forth that he doth truly feede us with his very body and blood to eternall life: and all the controverſie lyes in the manner of receiving; we contenting our ſelves with that ſpirituall receiving which is by the hand of faith, they adding thereto the corporall, whereby they imagine themſelves to receive Chriſt with the hand and mouth of the body. And though to maintaine this their opinion, they be conſtrained to turne the aſcenſion of Chriſt into a diſparition, whereby his Body being viſible becomes inviſible, yet in the maine points we agree: that he entred into his Kingdome in our name and for us: that we are governed and preſerved by his power and might: and that whatſoever good thing wee have or doe, proceeds wholly from the grace of his ſpirit. Indeed the opinion of the Vbiquity of the Body of Chriſt, reviveth the condemned hereſies of Eutyches and Neſtorius, and it overturneth by neceſſary conſequent moſt of the articles of faith: but that was private to ſome men, as Brentius and others, and was not received of whole Churches: and whereas the men were godly and learned, and we are uncertaine with what affection, and how long they held this errour, we reſt our ſelves in condemning it, leaving the perſons to God. Againe, Popiſh Tranſubſtantiation and Lutherian Conſubſtantiation, are both againſt the truth of the manhood of Chriſt, yet with great difference. Tranſubſtantiation is flat againſt an article of faith: for if Chriſts Body be made of bread, and his blood of wine (which muſt needs bee, if there be a converſion of the one into the other,) then was not he conceived and borne of the Virgin Mary: for it cannot both be made of Bakers bread, and of the ſubſtance of the Virgin. Againe, it aboliſheth the outward ſigne in the Lords Supper, as alſo the analogy betweene the ſigne and the thing ſignified, and ſo overturnes the Sacrament: but Conſubſtantiation doth not ſo, neither doth it overturne the ſubſtance of any article of religion, but onely a maine point of Philoſophy, which is, that a body doth occupy one onely place at once.

Furthermore, the Churches of Helvetia, and Savoy, and the free cities of France, & the low Countries, and Scotland are to bee reverenced as the true Churches of God, as their confessions make manifest. And no lesse must wee thinke of our owne Churches in England and Ireland. For we hold, beleeve, and maintaine, and preach the true faith, that is, the ancient doctrine of salvation by Christ, taught and published by the Prophets and Apostles, as the booke of the articles of faith agreed upon in open Parliament doth fully shew: and withall now we are, and have beene ready to testifie this our faith, by venturing our lives even in the cause of religion against forreine power, and especially the Spaniard: and hereupon all the Churches in Europe give unto us the hand of fellowship. And whereas sundry among us that separate and indeed excommunicate themselves, give out that there is no Church in England, no Ministers, no Sacraments: their peremptorie asseverations wanting sufficient ground, are but as paper shot. They alleadge that our assemblies are full of grievous blots and enormities. Ans. The defects and corruptions of Churches must be distinguished: and they be either in doctrine, or manners. Againe, corruptions in doctrine must further bee distinguished: some of them are errours indeed, but beside the foundatiō: & some errors directly against the foundatiō: and these overturne all religion, whereas the former doe not. Now it cannot be shewed that in our Churches is taught any one errour that raseth the foundation, & consequently annihilates the truth of Gods Church. Indeed there is controversie among us touching the point of Ecclesiasticall regiment: but marke in what manner. We all joyntly agree in the substance of the regiment, confessing freely that there must be preaching of the Word, administration of the Sacraments, according to the institution, and the use of the Power of the Keyes in admonitions, suspensions, excommunications: the differēce betweene us is only touching the persons, and the manner of putting this government in execution: and therefore men on both parts, though both hold not the truth in this point, yet because both hold Christ the foundation, they still remaine brethren and true members of Christ. As for corruptions in manners, they make not a Church to be no Church, but a bad Church. When as the wicked Scribs & Pharisees sitting in Moses chaire, taught the things which he had writtē, the people are commanded to heare them, and to do the things which they say, not doing the things which they doe. And whereas it is said, that we hold Christ in word, and deny him in deed, that is answered thus: deniall of Christ is double, either in judgement, or in fact: deniall in judgement joyned with obstinacy, makes a Christian to be nō Christian; deniall in fact, the judgement still remaining sound, makes not a man to be no Christian, but a bad Christian. When the Iewes had crucified the Lord of life, they still remained a Church, (if any upon earth:) and notwithstanding this their fact, the Apostles acknowledged that the covenant and the promises still belonged unto them: & they never made any separation from their Synagogues, till such time as they had beene sufficiently convicted by the Apostolicall ministerie that Christ was the true Messias.

Mat. 23. 2.

Rom. 9. 4. Act. 2. 39. 40.

Thus we see where at this day we may find the true Church of God. Now I come to the third question, and that is, at what time a man may with good conscience make separation from a Church. Answ. So long as a Church make no separation from Christ, wee must makes no separation from it: and when it separates from Christ, we may also separate from it: and therefore in two cases there is warrant of separation. The one is, when the worship of God is corrupt in substance. And for this wee have a commandement, Be not, saith Paul, unequally yoked with infidels, for what fellowship hath righteousnes with unrighteousnes, or what communion hath light with darkenes? or what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath the beleever with the infidell? or what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? Wherefore come out from among them, & separate your selves, saith the Lord. And we have a practise of this in the old testament. When Ieroboam had set up idols in Israel, then the Priests and Levites came to Iudah and Ierusalem to serve the Lord. The second is, when the doctrine of religiō is corrupt in substance: as Paul saith, If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to the wholesome words of our Lord Iesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godlinesse, he is puffed up: from which separate your selves. A practise of this we have in the Apostle Paul, who being in Ephesus in a Synagogue of the Iewes, spake boldly for the space of three moneths, disputing and exhorting to the things which concerne the kingdome of God: but when certaine men were hardened and disobeyed, speaking evill of the way of God, he departed from them, and separated the disciples of Ephesus: and the like he did at Rome also. As for the corruptions that be in the māners of men that be of the Church, they are no sufficient warrant of separation, unlesse it be from private cōpany, as we are admonished by the Apostle Paul: and by Davids & Lots examples. By this which hath bin said, it appeares that the practise of such as make separation frō us, is very bad & schismatical, considering our Churches faile not either in the substance of doctrine, or in the substance of the true worship of God.

Act. 19. 9. & 28. 28.

1 Cor. 5. 11. Psa. 17. 4. 2 Pet. 2. 8.

Now to proceede in the Creed. The Church is further set forth by certaine properties and prerogatives. The properties or qualities are two, holinesse and largenesse. That the Church is holy, it appeares by Peter which cals it an holy nation, and a chosen people: and by S. John, who cals it the holy citie. And it is so called, that it may be distinguished from the false Church, which is tearmed in Scriptures, The Synagogue of Satan, and the maligniant Church.

Now this holineſſe of the Church is nothing elſe but a created quality in every true member thereof, whereby the image of God, which was loſt by the fall of Adam, is againe renued and reſtored. The author of it is God by his word & ſpirit, by little & little aboliſhing the corruption of ſin, and ſanctifying us throughout, as Chriſt ſaith, Father ſanctifie them in thy word, thy word is truth. And holineſſe muſt bee conceived to be in the Church on this manner: it is perfect in the Church Triumphant, and it is onely begun in the Church Militant in this life, and that for ſpeciall cauſe, that wee might give all glory to God; that wee might not bee high minded, that we might work our ſalvation with feare & trembling; that we might deny our ſelves and wholly depend upon God.

Ioh.17.17.

1 Tim.1.17. Rom.11.20. Phil.2.12. Mar.9.24

Hence we learne three things: firſt that the Church of Rome erreth in teaching that a wicked man, yea ſuch an one as ſhall never bee ſaved, may be a true member of the Catholike Church: for in reaſon, every man ſhould bee anſwerable to the qualitie & condition of the Church wherof he is a member: if it be holy, as it is, he muſt be holy alſo. Secõdly, we are every one of us, as Paul ſaith to Timothie, to exerciſe our ſelves unto godlines, making cõſcience of al our former unholy waies, endeavouring our ſelves to pleaſe God in the obedience of all his commandements. It is a diſgrace to the holy Church of God, that men profeſſing themſelves to be members of it, ſhould bee unholy. Thirdly, our duty is to eſchew the ſociety of atheiſts, drunkards, fornicatours, blaſphemers, & al wicked & ungodly perſons, as Paul ſaith, Be no companions of them, and have no fellowſhip with unprofitable workes of darknes. And he charges the Theſſalonians, that if any man among them walke inordinately, they have no companie with him, that he may be aſhamed, 2 Theſſ.3.14.

1 Tim.4.7

Eph.5.7.11

The largeneſſe of the Church is noted in the word Catholike, that is, generall or univerſall. And it is ſo called for three cauſes. For firſt of all, it is generall in reſpect of time, becauſe the Church hath had a beeing in all times & ages, ever ſince the giving of the promiſe to our firſt parents in Paradiſe. Secondly, it is generall, in reſpect of the perſons of men: for it ſtands of all ſorts and degrees of men, high & low, rich and poore, learned and unlearned, &c. Thirdly, it is Catholike or univerſal in reſpect of place; becauſe it hath beene gathered from all parts of the earth, ſpecially now in the time of the new Teſtament; when our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Mat.26.13. that the Goſpel ſhall be preached in all the world. To this purpoſe S. Iohn ſaith, in Revel.7.9. I beheld, and loe, a great multitude which no man could number, of all nations and kindreds and peoples, & tongues, ſtood before the throne and before the lambe, cloathed with long white robes and palmes in their hands.

Catholica. 1. per totum orbem diffuſa. Aug. epiſt.150.

And the Church which we here profeſſe to beleeve, is called Catholike, that wee may diſtinguiſh it from particular Churches, which are not beleeved, but ſeene with eye, whereof mention is made often in the Scriptures. Rom. 16.5. 1 Cor.16.19. the Church in their houſe; and, the Churches of Aſia. Coloſſ.4.15. Salute Nymphas and the Church in his houſe. Act.11.22. the Church of Ieruſalem. Act.13.1. the Church at Antioch, &c.

That the Church is Catholike in reſpect of time, place, perſon, it miniſters matter of endleſſe comfort unto us. For hereby we ſee that no order, degree, or eſtate of men are excluded from grace in Chriſt, unleſſe they will exclude themſelves. S. Iohn ſaith, 1 Ioh.2.1. If any man ſinne, we have an advocate with the Father, Ieſus Chriſt the righteous. Now it might be anſwered, it is true indeed, Chriſt is an Advocate to ſome men, but he is no Advocate to me. S. Iohn therfore ſaith further, verſ.2. and he is the reconciliation for our ſinnes, and not for our ſinnes onely, but for the whole world, that is, for all beleevers of what condition or degree ſoever.

Thus much of the properties of the Church: now follow the prerogatiues or benefits which God beſtoweth on it, which are in number foure. The firſt is expreſſed in theſe words, the Communion of Saints. Where communion ſignifieth that fellowſhip or ſociety that one hath with another: and by Saints wee underſtand not dead men inrolled in the Popes callender, but all that are ſanctified by the blood of Chriſt, whether they be living or dead: as Paul ſaith, 1 Cor.1.2. Vnto the Church of God which is at Corinthus, to them that are ſanctified in Ieſus Chriſt, Saints by calling. And 14.33. God is the God of peace in al the Churches of the Saints. Now if wee adde the clauſe I beleeve, unto theſe words, the meaning is this; I confeſſe and acknowledge that there is a ſpirituall fellowſhip and ſocietie among all the members of Chriſt, being the faithfull ſeruants and children of God: and withall I beleeve that I am partaker of the ſame with the reſt.

This communion hath two parts, fellowſhip of the members with the head, and of the members with themſelves. The communion of the members with their head, is not outward, but altogether ſpirituall in the conſcience; and for the opening of it, we muſt conſider what the Church receiveth of Chriſt, and what he receives of it. The Church receives of Chriſt 4. moſt worthy benefits. The firſt, that Chriſt our Mediatour, God and man, hath truly given himſelfe unto us, and is become our lot and portion, and withall God the Father, and the holy Spirit, in him, as David ſaith, Ieho-va is the portion of mine inheritance, and of my cup: thou ſhalt maintaine my lot: the lines are fallen unto me in pleaſant places: yea I have a faire heritage. And *Pſal.*73.26. My fleſh faileth, and my heart alſo: but God is the ſtrength of my heart, and my portion for ever. The ſecond, is the Right of adoption, whereby all the faithfull whether in heaven or earth are actually made the true children of God. The benefit is wonderfull, howſoever carnall men eſteeme not of it. If a man ſhould either by election or birth, or any way elſe be made the Sonne and heire of an earthly Prince, hee would thinke himſelfe highly advanced: how highly then are they extolled which are made the ſonnes of God himſelfe? The third benefit, is a title, and right to the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt in his ſufferings and his fulfilling of the law. The excellencie of it is unſpeakable, becauſe it ſerves to award the greateſt temptations of the divell. When the divell replieth thus, thou art a tranſgreſſour of the law of God, therefore thou ſhalt be damned: by meanes of that communiõ which we have with Chriſt, we anſwer againe: that Chriſt ſuffered the curſe of the law to free us from due and deſerved damnation: and when he further replies, that ſeeing we never fulfilled the law, we cannot therfore enter into heaven, wee anſwer againe, that Chriſts obedience is a fulfilling of the law for us, and his whole righteouſnes is ours to make us ſtand righteous before God. The fourth benefit, is a right to the kingdome of heaven, as Chriſt comforting his diſciples ſaith, Feare not little flocke, it is your Fathers pleaſure to give you a kingdome: and hence it is ſundry times called * the inheritance, and the lot of the Saints.

* Act. 26. 18. Col. 1. 12. Eph. 1. 18.

Furthermore, for the conveyance of theſe benefits unto us, God hath ordained the preaching of the Word, and the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, eſpecially the Lords Supper; and hath commanded the ſolemne and ordinarie uſe of them in the Church. And hereupon the Lords Supper is called the Communion, The cup of bleſſing (ſaith Paul, 1 Cor. 10. 16.) which we bleſſe, is it not the Communion of the blood of Chriſt? and the bread which we breake, is it not the communion of the body of Chriſt? that is, a ſigne and ſeale of the communion.

Againe, the things which Chriſt receives of us are two: our ſins with the puniſhmẽt therof made his by application or imputation: and our afflictions with all the miſeries of this life which he accounts his owne, & therefore doth as it were put under his ſhoulders to beare the burthen of them. And this communion betweene Chriſt and us is expreſſed in the Scriptures by that bleſſed and heavenly bargaine in which there is mutuall exchange betweene Chriſt and us: he imparts unto us, Eſa. 55. 1. milke and wine without ſilver or money, to refreſh us, and gold tryed by the fire, that wee may become rich, and Rev. 3, 18. white raiment that we may be cloathed, and eye-ſalve to annoint our eyes that we may ſee: and we for our parts returne unto him nothing but blindneſſe, and nakedneſſe, and poverty, and the loathſome burthen of all our ſinnes.

The ſecond part of the communion, is that which the Saints have one with another. And it is either of the living with the living, or of the living with the dead. Now the communion of the living ſtands in three things: I. in the like affection: II. in the gifts of the ſpirit: III. in the uſe of temporall riches. For the firſt: communion in affection, is whereby all the ſervants of God are like affected to God, to Chriſt, to their owne ſinnes, and each to other. They are all of one nature and heart alike diſpoſed, though they be not acquainted, nor have any externall fellowſhip in the fleſh. As in a family children are for the moſt part one like another and brought up alike: even ſo it is in Gods family which is his Church: the members thereof are all alike in heart and affection: and the reaſon is, becauſe they have one ſpirit to guide them all: and therefore S. Peter ſaith, Act. 4. 32. The multitude of them that beleeved were of one heart and of one ſoule, neither any of them ſaid that any thing which he poſſeſſed was his owne, but they had all things common. And the Prophet Iſaiah foretelling the unity which ſhould be in the Kingdome of Chriſt, ſaid, Iſa. 11. 6, 7. The wolfe ſhall dwell with the lambe, and the leopard ſhall lye with the kid, and the calfe, and the lyon and the fat beaſt together, and a little child ſhall leade them. The cowe and the beare ſhall feed, and their yong ones ſhall lye together: and the lyon ſhall eate ſtraw like the bullocke. The ſucking child ſhall play upon the hole of the aſpe, and the weaned child ſhall put his hand into the cockatrice hole. By theſe beaſts are ſignified, men that be of a wicked and brutiſh nature: which when they ſhall be brought into the kingdome of Chriſt, ſhall lay aſide the ſame, and become loving, gentle, courteous, and all of one minde. And S. Peter 2 Pet. 1. 7. requires of the Church the practiſe of brotherly love, and that is to carry a tender affection to men, not becauſe they are of the ſame fleſh, but becauſe they are joyned in the bond of one ſpirit with us. Furthermore, by reaſon of this that all the children of God are of one heart, there followes another dutie of this communion, whereby they beare one the burthens of another, and when one member is grieved all are grieved; when one rejoyceth all rejoyce, as in the body when one member ſuffereth all ſuffer. Gal. 6. 2.

The ſecond branch of their communion, is in the gifts of Gods Spirit, as love, hope, feare, &c. And this is ſhewed, when one man doth imploy the graces of God beſtowed on him, for the good & ſalvation of another. As a candle ſpendeth it ſelf to give light to others: ſo muſt Gods people ſpend thoſe gifts which God hath given them for the benefit of their brethren. A Chriſtian man howſoever he be the freeſt man upon earth, yet is he ſervant to all men, eſpecially to the Church of God, to do ſervice unto the members of it by love for the good of all. And this good is procured, when we convey the graces of God beſtowed on us to our brethren: and that is done five wayes: I. by example: II. by admonition: III, by exhortation: IV. by conſolation: V. by prayer. The firſt, which is good example, we are enjoyned by Chriſt, ſaying, Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good works, and glorifie your Father which is in heaven. Gal. 5. 13. Mat. 5. 16.

And that our hearts might bee touched with ſpecial care of this duty, the Lord ſets afore us his owne bleſſed example, ſaying. Lev. 11.44. Be ye holy as I am holy: and Mat. 11.29. Learne of me that I am meeke and lowly. And Paul ſaith, 1 Corinth. 11.1. Be ye followers of me, as I follow Chriſt: and the higher men are exalted, the more carefull ought they to be in giving good example. For let a man of note or eſtimation doe evill, and he ſhal preſently have many followers. Evill example runnes from one to another like a leproſie or infection: and this Chriſt ſignified when he ſaid, that the fig-tree planted in the vineyard, If it beares no fruit, makes all the ground barren, Luk. 13.7. The ſecond meanes of communication of the gifts of God unto others, is admonition, which is an ordinance of God whereby Chriſtian men are to recover their brethren from their ſinnes. A man by occaſion fallen into the water, is in danger of his life; and the reaching of the hand by another is the meanes, to ſave him. Now every man when hee ſinneth, doth as much as in him lyeth, caſt his ſoule into the very pit of hell: and wholeſome admonitions are as the reaching out of the hand to recover him againe. But it will peradventure be ſaid, how ſhall wee proceede in admoniſhing of others? Anſw. Wee are to obſerve three things. The firſt is, to ſearch out whether wee that are to reproove bee faultie our ſelves in the ſame things or no. Firſt, we muſt take out the beame that is in our owne eye, and ſo ſhall we ſee cleerely to pull out the mote in our brothers eye, Math. 7.5. Secondly, before we reproove, we muſt be ſure that the fault is committed: we muſt not goe upon heare-ſay or likelihoods: and therefore the holy Ghoſt ſaith, Heb. 10.28. Let us conſider or obſerve one another to provoke unto love & good works. Thirdly before we reproove, wee muſt in Chriſtian wiſedome make choice of time and place: for all times and places ſerve not to this purpoſe. And therefore Salomon ſaith, It is the glory of a man to paſſe by an offence. Furthermore in the action of admoniſhing, two things are to bee obſerved: I. a man muſt deliver the words of his admonition (ſo farre forth as hee can) out of the Word of God, ſo as the party which is admoniſhed, may in the perſon of man ſee God himſelfe to reproove him. II. his reproofe muſt be made with as much compaſſion and fellow-feeling of other mens wants as may bee. As Paul ſaith, Galat. 6.1. If any man bee fallen by occaſion into any fault, ye which are ſpirituall (a) reſtore ſuch an one with the ſpirit of meekeneſſe. The third way of communicating good things to others, is exhortation: and it is a meanes to excite and ſtirre them on forward, which doe already walke in the way of godlineſſe. Therefore the holy Ghoſt ſaith, Hebrewes. 3.13. Exhort one another daily, leſt any of you be hardened through the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne. But alas, the practiſe of this duty, as alſo of the former, is hard to bee found among

A men; for it is uſuall in families, that maſters and fathers in ſtead of admoniſhing their ſervants and children, teach them the practiſe of ſin in ſwearing, blaſpheming, ſlandering, &c. and as for exhortation, it is not uſed. Let a man that hath the feare of God offend never ſo little, in ſtead of brotherly exhortation, hee ſhall heare his profeſſion caſt in his teeth, and his hearing of ſermons: this practiſe is ſo generall, that many beginning newly to tread in the ſteps of godlineſſe, are hereby daunted, and quite driven backe. The fourth way, is conſolation, which is a meanes appointed by God, whereby one man ſhould with words of heavenly comfort refreſh the ſoules of others afflicted with ſicknes, or any other way feeling
B the hand of God either in body or in minde. And this duty is as little regarded as any of the former. In time of mens ſickneſſe neighbours come in, but what ſay they? I am ſorry to ſee you in this caſe, I hope to ſee you well againe, I would be ſorry elſe, &c. Not one of an hundred can ſpeake a word of comfort to the wearie: but wee are faulty herein. For with what affection do we beleeve the cõmunion of Saints, when wee our ſelves are as drie fountaines, that do ſcarce convey a droppe of refreſhing to others? The laſt meanes, is prayer, whereby Gods Church procures bleſſings for the ſeverall members thereof, and they againe for the whole. And herein lies a principall point of the communion of Saints; which miniſtreth notable comfort to every Chriſtian
C heart. For hence wee may reaſon thus: I am indeede a member of the Catholike Church of God, and therefore though my owne praiers be weake, yet my comfort is this, I know that I am partaker of all the good prayers of all the people of God diſperſed over the face of the whole earth my fellow-members, and of al the bleſſings which God beſtowes on them. This will make us in all our troubles to ſay with Eliſha, 2 King. 6.16. Feare not, for they that bee with us are more then they that bee with them. When the people of Iſrael had ſinned in worſhipping the golden calfe, the wrath of the Lord was kindled, and made a breach into them, as cannon ſhot againſt a wall: but Moſes the ſervant of God ſtood in the breach before
D the Lord to turne away his wrath, leſt hee ſhould deſtroy them. And the prayer of Moſes was ſo effectuall, that the Lord ſaid, Exod. 32.10. Let me alone, as though Moſes by prayer had held the hand of God that hee could not puniſh the people. And ſome thinke that Stevens prayer for his enemies, when hee was ſtoned, was a meanes of Pauls converſion. And ſurely though there were no other reaſon, yet this were ſufficient to moove a man to imbrace Chriſtian religion, conſidering that being a member of the Church, he hath part in all the prayers of the Saints thorow the world, and of the bleſſings of God that come thereby.

Pſa. 106. 23.

The third part of this communion, is in temporall things, as goods & riches: whereby a As Chirurgians tenderly ſet armes and legs in joynt.

I meane,

(b) Spirituall communion doth not barre a division of temporall goods. Act. 4.31. 2 Cor. 9.1.

I meane, no (b) Anabaptisticall communion, but that which was used in the primitive Church, when they had all things common in respect of use: and some sold their goods and possessions and parted them to all men, as every one had neede. And by their example we are taught, to be content to imploy those goods which God hath bestowed on us, for the good of our fellow-members within the compasse of our callings, and to our abilitie, and beyond our abilitie, if need require. Paul saith, Gal. 6. 10. Doe good to all, but especially to them which are of the houshold of faith.

The communion of the living with the dead, stands in two things: the one is, that the Saints departed in the Church Triumphant doe in generall pray for the Church Militant upon earth, desiring the finall deliverance of all their fellow-members from all their miseries. And therefore in the Apocalyps they cry on this manner, How long Lord holy and true! doest not thou judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? I say in generall, because they pray not for the particular conditions and persons of men upon earth, considering they neither know, nor see, nor heare us: neither can they tell what things are done upon earth. The second is, that the godly on earth doe in heart & affection converse with them in heaven, desiring continually to be dissolved & to be with Christ. Now whereas the Papists doe further inlarge this communion, avouching that the Saints in heaven doe make intercession to Christ for us, and impart their merits unto us: and that we againe for that cause are to invocate them, and to doe unto them religious worship; we dissent from them, being resolved that these things are but inventions of mans braine, wanting warrant out of the Word.

Rev. 6.10.

Lastly, to conclude, a question may be demanded, how any one of us may particularly know & be assured in our selves that wee have part in this communion of Saints. Ans. Saint John opens this point to the full, when hee saith, 1 John 1.6,7. If we say that we have fellowship with him, and yet walke in darkenes, we lye: but if we walke in the light, as he is light, then we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Christ purgeth us from all our sins. In which words he makes knowledge of Gods will joyned with obedience, to be an infallible marke of one that is in the communion: as on the contrary, ignorance of Gods will, or disobedience, or both, to be tokens of one that hath neither fellowship with Christ, or with the true members of Christ. And therefore to end this point, if wee would have fellowship with Christ, let us learne to know what sinne is, and to flie from the same as from the bane of our soules, and to make conscience of every evill way.

The duties to be learned by the communion of Saints, are manifold. And first of all, if wee do beleeve the fellowship which all the faithfull have with Christ & with themselves; and be resolved that wee have part therein, then must we separate & withdraw our selves from all ungodly and unlawfull societies of men in the world whatsoever they be. Unlawfull societies are manifold, but I will only touch one, which every where annoyeth religion, and hindereth greatly this communion of Saints, & that is, when men joyne themselves in company to passe away the time in drinking, gaming, &c. Behold a large fellowship which beareth sway in all places; there is almost no towne but there is at the least one knot of such companions: and he that will not be combined with such loose mates, hee is thought to bee a man of no good nature; hee is foisted forth of every company; he is no body: & if a man will yeeld to runne ryot with them in the mispending of his time and goods, hee is thought to be the best fellow in the world. But what is done in this society? and how doe these cup-companions spend their time? surely the greatest part of day and night is usually spent in swearing, gaming, drinking, surfetting, revelling, & railing on the ministers of the Word, and such as professe religion, to omit the enormities which they procure to themselves hereby: and this behaviour spreads it selfe like a canker over every place, and it defiles both towne & country. But we that looke for comfort by the communion of Saints, must not cast in our lot with such a wicked generation, but separate our selves from them. For undoubtedly their societie is not of God, but of the divell: and they that are of this society, can not be of the holy communion of Saints: and surely except the Magistrate by the sword, or the Church by the power of the keyes, doe pull downe such fellowship, the holy societie of Gods Church and people must decay. Excommunication is a censure ordained of God for this end, to banish them from this heavenly communion of the members of Christ, that live inordinately and have communion with men in the workes of darkenesse.

Secondly, by this we are taught, that men professing the same religion, must be linked in society & converse together in Christian love, meekenes, gentlenes, and patience: as S. Paul taught the Philippians, If there be any fellowship of the spirit, if there be any compassion and mercy, fulfill my joy, that we may be like minded, having the same love, being of one accord, and of like judgement. And again, Keepe (saith he) the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. Why? marke how his reason is fetched from this communion: Because there is one body, one spirit, even as you are called into the hope of your vocation: one Lord, one faith, one hope, one baptisme, one God and Father of all, which is above all, & in you all. And no doubt the same reason made David say, Psal. 16.3. All my delight is in the Saints which be upon earth.

Phil. 1.1.2.

Eph. 4.3.

Verse 4, 5, 6.

Thirdly, every Christian man that acknowledgeth this communion, must carry about with him a fellow-feeling, that is, an heart touched with compassion in regard of all the miseries that befall either the whole Church or any member thereof, as Chriſt our head, teacheth us by his owne example, when he called to Saul, and ſaid, Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? giving him to underſtand, that hee is touched with the abuſes to his Church, as if they had directly bin done to his owne perſon. The prophet Amos reprooveth the people, becauſe they drank wine in bowles, & annointed theſelves with the chiefe ointmẽts: but why? was it not lawfull for them to do ſo? yes: but the cauſe for which they were reproved followes: No man (ſaith he) is ſorry for the afflictions of Ioſeph. In the middeſt of their delights and pleaſures they had no regard of the miſeries of the poore Church and ſervants of God elſewhere in affliction, which every man ought to ſhew forth in the practiſe of all duties of love: and therefore Paul ſaith, Pray alwaies with all manner of prayers & ſupplication in the ſpirit, & watch thereunto with all perſeverance & ſupplications for the Saints. And hee highly commendeth the Philippians, for communicating to his afflictions. And further he bids Philemon to comfort Oneſimus his bowels in the Lord. And S. Iohn ſaith, If a mans life would ſave his neighbours ſoule, he muſt lay it downe, if need require. We have all of us daily occaſion to practiſe this duty towards the afflicted members of Gods Church in other countries. For howſoever wee enjoy the Goſpel with peace, yet they are under perſecution for the ſame: & ſo oft as we heare report of this, we ſhould ſuffer our hearts to be grieved with them, and pray to God for them.

Phil. 4.14. Philem. 20.

1 Ioh. 3.16

We muſt here be admoniſhed not to ſeeke our owne things, but to referre the labours of our callings to the common good, eſpecially of the Church whereof we are members. As for them that ſeeke for nothing but to maintaine their owne eſtate and wealth, and therefore in their trades uſe falſe waights and meaſures, the ingroſſing, corrupting, mingling of wares, glozing, lying, ſmoothing, ſwearing, forſwearing, diſſembling, griping, oppreſſing of the poore, &c. they may plead for theſelves what they will, but in truth they never knew yet what the Communion of Saints meant.

Laſtly, conſidering we are all knit into one myſticall body, and have mutuall fellowſhip in the ſame, our duty is to redreſſe the faults of our brethren, and to cover them, as the hand in the body laies a plaiſter upon the ſore in the foote or in the legge, and withall covers it. Love covers the multitude of ſins. And when men diſgrace their brethren for their wants, and blaze them to the world, they doe not the duty of fellow-members.

Thus much for the firſt benefit beſtowed on the Church: the ſecond is, Forgiveneſſe of ſinnes: which may be thus deſcribed: Forgiveneſſe of ſins is a bleſſing of God upon his Church procured by the death and paſſion of Chriſt, whereby God eſteemes of ſinne as no ſinne, or, as not committed. In this deſcription I have couched five points, which we are ſeverally to conſider. The firſt, who is the author of forgiveneſſe of ſinnes?

A Anſ. God, whoſe bleſſing it is: for ſinne is only committed againſt God, and the violating of his lawes and commandements are properly ſinnes. And the offence done to any man or creature is no more in it ſelfe, but an offence or injurie: yea the breach of mans commandement is no ſinne, unleſſe it doe imply withall the breach of Gods commandements. Therefore it is a prerogative beloging to God alone to pardon ſin: and when we are taught to ſay, Forgive us our treſpaſſes, as we forgive them that treſpaſſe againſt us the meaning is not, that wee forgive ſinnes as they are ſinnes, but onely as treſpaſſes, that is, loſſes, hurts, and dammages done unto us by men. It may bee further ſaid, God hath given this power and commandement to his miniſters to forgive ſinnes, ſaying, Whoſe ſins ye remit, they are remitted. Anſ. Gods Miniſters doe not properly forgive ſinnes, but onely in the name of God according to his word pronounce to a penitent ſinner, that his ſinnes are pardoned and forgiven of God: and therefore it is a moſt certaine truth, that none can forgive ſinnes but God only: it was avouched by the Phariſees, & not denied by Chriſt. Hence it followes, that remiſſion of ſinne, being once granted remaines for ever, becauſe Gods love unto the elect is unchangeable, and his decree concerning their ſalvation cannot be altered. The ſecond point is, to whom remiſſion of ſinnes is given? Anſ. To the Catholike Church, that is, to the whole company of men predeſtinate to ſalvation: as Eſay ſaith, The people that dwell therein (that is, the Church) ſhall have their ſins forgiven. And, They ſhall call them the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord: and thou ſhalt be named, A citie ſought out, and not forſaken. And if there had beene an univerſall remiſſion of ſins to all men, as ſome doe dreame, it ſhould not here have bin made a peculiar prerogative of the Church. The third point is, what is the meanes whereby pardon of ſinne is procured at Gods hand? Anſw. The death and paſſion of Chriſt: ſo Paul ſaith, Rom. 4. 25. Chriſt died for our ſinnes: that is, Chriſt died to be a paiment & ſatisfaction to Gods juſtice for our ſinnes. And S Iohn ſaith, The blood of Ieſus Chriſt his Sonne cleanſeth us from all ſinne. And Peter ſaith, Knowing that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as ſilver and gold from your vaine converſation, &c. but with the precious blood of Chriſt, as of a lambe undefiled and without ſpot. The fourth point is, after what manner ſin is forgiven? Anſ. By an action of God, whereby for the merit of Chriſt, he eſteemes and accounts ſinne as no ſinne, or, as if it had never bin committed. Therefore David ſaith, Pſalme 32.2. Bleſſed is the man to whom the Lord imputeth no ſinne. And in Eſa. 44.22. the Lord ſaith; I have put away thy tranſgreſſions like a cloud, and thy ſinnes as a miſt. Now wee know that clouds and miſts which appeare for a time, are afterward by the Sunne utterly diſperſed. And King Hezechias when hee would ſhew that the Lord had forgiven him his ſinnes,

ſaith,

Iſai. 38. 17. ſaith, God hath caſt them behind his backe, alluding to the manner of men, who when they will not remember or regard a thing, do turne their backes upon it. And Micheas ſaith, that Mich. 7. 19. God doth caſt all the ſinnes of his people into the bottome of the ſea, alluding to Pharaoh, whom the Lord drowned in the bottome of the red Sea. And Chriſt hath taught us to pray thus: forgive us our debts, as wee forgive our debters: in Matth. 9. 12. which words is an alluding to creditours, who then forgive debts, when they account that which is debt, as no debt, and croſſe the booke. Hence it appeares that damnable and vile is the opinion of the Church of Rome, which holdeth that there is a remiſſion of the fault without a remiſſion of the puniſhment: and herewithall fall to the ground, the doctrine of humane ſatisfactions, and indulgences, and purgatory, and prayer for the dead, built upon this foundation, which are of the ſame kind.

Moreover, wee muſt remember to adde to this clauſe, I beleeve, and then the meaning is this: I doe not onely beleeve that God doth give pardon of ſinne to his Church and people (for that the very divels beleeve) but withall I beleeve the forgiveneſſe of mine owne particular ſinnes. Hence it appeares, that it was the judgement of the primitive Church, that men ſhould beleeve the forgiveneſſe of their owne ſinnes.

By this prerogative we reape endleſſe comfort: for the pardon of ſinne is a moſt wonderfull bleſſing, and without it every man is more miſerable and wretched, then the moſt vile creature that ever was. We loath the ſerpent or the toad; but if a man have not the pardon of his ſinnes, procured by the death and paſſion of Chriſt, he is a thouſand-fold worſe then they. For when they dye, there is the end of their woe and miſery: but when man dyeth without this benefit, there is the beginning of his. For firſt in ſoule till the day of judgement, and then both in body and ſoule for evermore, he ſhall enter into the endleſſe paines and torments of hell; in which if one ſhould continue ſo many thouſand yeares as there are drops in the Ocean ſea, and then be delivered, it were ſome eaſe: but having continued ſo long (which is an unſpeakeable length of time) he muſt remaine there as long againe, and after that for ever and ever without releaſe: and therefore among all the benefits that ever were or can be thought of, this is the greateſt and moſt pretious. Among all the burthens that can befall a man, what is the greateſt? Some will ſay, ſickneſſe, ſome ignominy, ſome poverty, ſome contempt: but indeed among all, the heavieſt and the greateſt, is the burthen of a mans owne ſinnes, lying upon the conſcience and preſſing it downe, without any aſſurance of pardon. David being a King had no doubt, all that heart could wiſh; and yet he laying aſide all the royalties and pleaſures of his Kingdome, Pſal. 32. 1. ſaith this one thing above all, that he is a bleſſed man that is eaſed of the burthen of his ſinne. A lazar man full of ſores is ugly to ſight, and we cannot abide to looke upon him: but no lazar is ſo loathſome to us, as all ſinners are in the ſight of God: and therefore David counted him bleſſed, whoſe ſinnes are covered. It may be, ſome will ſay, there is no cauſe why a man ſhould thus magnifie the pardon of ſinne, conſidering it is but a common benefit. Thus indeed men may imagine, which never knew what ſinne meant: but let a man onely, as it were, but with the tip of his finger have a little feeling of the ſmart of his ſinnes, he ſhall find his eſtate ſo fearefull, that if the whole world were ſet before him on the one ſide, and the pardon of his ſin on the other ſide, hee would chooſe the pardon of his ſins before ten thouſand worlds. Though many drouſie Proteſtants eſteeme nothing of it, yet to the touched conſcience it is a treaſure, which when a man finds he hides it, and goes home, and ſels all that he hath, and buyes it. Therefore this benefit is moſt excellent, and for it the members of Gods Church have great cauſe to give God thankes without ceaſing.

The duties to bee learned hence are theſe. And firſt of all here comes a common fault of men to be rebuked. Every one will ſay, that he beleeveth the remiſſion of ſinnes, yet no man almoſt laboureth for a true and certaine perſwaſion hereof in his owne conſcience: and for proofe hereof, propound this queſtion to the common Chriſtian; Doeſt thou perſwade thy ſelfe, that God gives remiſſion of ſinnes unto his Church? The anſwer will be, I know and beleeve it. But aske him further: Doeſt thou beleeve the pardon of thine owne ſinnes? and then comes in a blind anſwer, I have a good hope to God-ward, but I cannot tell, I thinke no man can ſay ſo much: for God ſaith to no man, thy ſins are pardoned. But this is to ſpeak flat contraries, to ſay they beleeve, and they cannot tell: and it bewraies exceeding negligence in matters of ſalvation. But let them that feare God, or love their owne ſoules health, give all diligence to make ſure the remiſſion of their owne ſins: withall avoyding hardneſſe of heart, and drowzineſſe of ſpirit, the moſt fearefull judgements of God, which every where take place. The fooliſh virgins went Math. 25. 3. forth to meet the bridegroome with lampes in their hands as well as the wiſe, but they never ſo much as dreamed of the horne of oyle, till the comming of the bridegroome. So many men live in the Church of God as members thereof, holding up the lampe of glorious profeſſion: but in the meane ſeaſon they ſeeke onely for the things of this life; never caſting, how they may aſſure themſelves in conſcience touching their reconciliation with God, till the day of death come.

Secondly, if we bee here bound to beleeve the pardon of all our ſins, then we muſt every day humble our ſelves before God, and ſeeke pardon for our daily offences: for hee gives grace to the humble or contrite; hee fils the Luk. 1. 53.

hungry with good things, when the rich are sent empty away. When Benhadad the King of Syria was discomfited and overcome by the King of Israel, by the counsell of his servants, who told him that the Kings of Israel were mercifull men, he sent them cloathed in sackcloth with ropes about their neckes to intreat for peace and favour. Now when the King saw their submission, he made a covenant of peace with him. We by our sins most justly deserve hell, death, and condemnation every day, and therefore it standeth us in hand to come into the presence of God, and to humble our selves before him in Sackcloth, and ashes, craving, and intreating for nothing in the world so much, as for the pardon of our sinnes, and that day by day without ceasing till the Lord give this blessed answer to our conscience, that all our sinnes are put out of his remembrance. Wee must not thinke that God putteth grace into mens hearts when they lye snorting upon their elbowes, and either not use, or despise the meanes: but we must first use the meanes, partly by making confession of our sinnes to God, and partly by crying to heaven for pardon: and then when by his grace we begin to desire grace, he gives further grace.

1 King. 20. 31.

Lastly, if we beleeve the pardon of our sins, then wee must change the tenour and course of our lives, and take heed of breaking Gods Commandements by doing any of those things, whereof our consciences may accuse us, and tell us, that by them we have displeased God heretofore. A man that for some misdemeanour hath beene cast into prison and lyen there many yeares winter and sommer in cold irons: when he obtaines liberty, he will often bethinke himselfe of his old misery, and take heed for ever lest he fall into the same offence againe: and he which hath seene his owne sins and felt the smart of them, and withall by Gods goodnesse obtained assurance touching the pardon of them, will never wittingly and willingly commit the like sinnes any more, but in all things change the course of his life. As for such as say, that they have the pardon of their sinnes, and yet live in them still, they deceive themselves, and have no faith at all.

Thus much for the second benefit, which God bestoweth on his Church, namely remission of sinnes: now followeth the third in these words: The resurrection of the body. In the handling whereof sundry points must be considered. The first, whether there be a resurrection or no? This question must needs be handled, because Epicures and Atheists in all ages, and at this day some doe call this article into question. Now that there is a resurrection of the body after death, it may be prooved by many arguments, whereof I will onely touch the principall. The first, is taken from the work of redemption. Saint Iohn writeth, that Christ came to dissolve the workes of the divell: which are sinne, and by sinne death: and hence I reason thus: If sinne and death are to be dissolved utterly, then the bodies of the faithfull which are dead in the grave, must needs be made alive: otherwise death is not abolished: but sinne and death must bee utterly abolished: therefore there shall be a resurrection.

Proofes of the resurrection.

1. 1 Ioh. 3. 8.

Secondly, God had made a covenant with his Church, the tenour whereof is this, I will be thy God, and thou shalt be my people. This covenant is not for a day or an age, or for a thousand yeares or ages, but is everlasting and without end, so as Gods people may say of God for ever, God is our God: and likewise God will say of his Church for evermore, this people is my people. Now if Gods covenant bee everlasting, then all the faithfull departed from the beginning of the world must be raised againe to life. And if God should leave his people in the grave under death for ever, how could they be called the people of God? for he is a God of mercy and of life it selfe: and therefore though they abide long in the earth; yet they must at length bee revived againe. This argument Christ useth against the Sadduces, which denied the resurrection: God is not the God of the dead but of the living; but God is the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob, which are dead; and therefore they must rise againe. The third argument must bee taken from the tenour of Gods justice. It is a speciall part of Gods glory, to shew forth his mercy on the godly, and his justice upon the wicked in rewarding them according to their workes, as the Apostle saith, God will reward every man according to his workes: to them that by continuance in well doing seeke glory, and honour and immortality, life eternall: but unto them that disobey the truth, that be contentious, and obey unrighteousnes, shall be indignation and wrath. But in this life God rewardeth not men according to their doings; and therefore Salomon speaking of the estate of al men in this world, saith, All things come alike to all, and the same condition to the just and unjust, to the good and bad, to the pure and polluted, to him that offereth sacrifice, and to him that offereth none. Nay which is more, here the wicked flourish, and the godly are afflicted. The ungodly have hearts-ease and all things at will: whereas the godly are oppressed and overwhelmed with all kinde of miseries, and are as sheepe appointed for the slaughter. It remaines therefore, that there must needs be a generall resurrection of all men after this life, that the righteous may obtaine a reward of Gods free mercy, and the wicked utter shame and confusion. But some will say, it is sufficient that God doe this to the soule of every man, the body needeth not to rise againe. I answer, that the ungodly man doth not work wickednesse only in his soule, but his body also is an instrument thereof: and the godly doe not onely practise righteousnesse in their soules but in their bodies also. The bodies of the wicked are the instruments of sin, and the bodies of the righteous are the weapons of righteousnesse, and therefore their bodies must rise againe, that both in body and soule they may receive a reward, according to that which they have wrought in them. The fourth argument, which is alſo uſed by Paul is this: 1 Cor. 15. 12. Chriſt himſelfe is riſen, and therefore all the faithfull ſhall riſe againe: for hee roſe not for himſelfe as a private man, but in our roome and ſtead, and for us. If the head be riſen, then the members alſo ſhall riſe againe: for by the ſame power whereby Chriſt raiſed himſelfe, hee both can and will raiſe all thoſe that be of his myſticall body, he being 1 Cor. 15. 20. the firſt fruits of them that ſleepe. The fifth argument is taken from expreſſe teſtimony of Scripture. 5. Iob hath an excellent place for this purpoſe: Iob 19. 25, 26, 27. I am ſure (ſaith he) that my redeemer liveth, and hee ſhall ſtand the laſt on the earth, and though after my skinne wormes deſtroy this body, yet I ſhall ſee God in my fleſh, whom I my ſelfe ſhall ſee, and mine eyes ſhall behold, and none other for me. And Saint Paul to the Corinthians avoucheth and prooveth this point at large, by ſundry arguments which I will not ſtand to repeat; this one remembred: 1 Cor. 15. Verſ. 14. and 18. 6. If (ſaith he) the dead riſe not againe, then your faith is vaine, our preaching is in vaine, and the godly departed are periſhed. The ſixt argument may bee taken from the order of nature, which miniſtreth certaine reſemblances of the reſurrection; which though they be no ſufficient proofes, yet may they bee inducements to the truth. Both Philoſophers and alſo Divines have written of the Phœnix, that firſt ſhee is conſumed to aſhes by the heate of the ſunne, and that afterward of her aſhes ariſeth a young one: and on this manner is her kind preſerved. Againe, ſwallowes, wormes, and flies, which have lien dead in the winter ſeaſon, in the ſpring, by the vertue of the ſunnes heat, revive againe: ſo likewiſe men fall in ſownes and trances, being for a time without breath or ſhew of life, and yet afterward come againe. And (to uſe Pauls example) before the corne can grow and beare fruit, it muſt firſt be caſt into the ground, and there rot. And if this were not ſeene by experience, men would not beleeve it. Againe, every preſent day is as it were dead and buried in the night following, and yet afterward it returnes againe the next morning. Laſtly, we reade how the old Prophets raiſed ſome from death: and our Saviour Chriſt raiſed Lazarus among the reſt, that had lien foure dayes in the grave and ſtanke: and why then ſhould any thinke it impoſſible for God to raiſe all men to life?

But let us ſee what reaſons may bee alleadged to the contrary. Firſt it is alleadged, that the reſurrection of bodies reſolved to duſt and aſhes, is againſt common ſenſe and reaſon. Anſ. It is above reaſon, but not againſt reaſon. For impotent and miſerable man, as experience ſheweth, can by art even of aſhes make the curious workemanſhip of glaſſe; why then may we not in reaſon thinke, that the omnipotent and everliving God is able to raiſe mens bodies out of the duſt. Secondly it is ſaid, that mens bodies being dead are turned into duſt, A and ſo are mingled with the bodies of beaſts and other creatures, and one mans body with another, and that by reaſon of this confuſion, men cannot poſſibly riſe with their owne bodies. Anſ. Howſoever this is impoſſible with men, yet it is poſſible with God. For he that in the beginning was able to create all things of nothing, is much more able to make every mans body at the reſurrection, of his owne matter, and to diſtinguiſh the duſt of mens bodies from the duſt of beaſts: and the duſt of one mans body, from another. The goldſmith by his art can ſunder divers mettals one from another: and ſome men out of one mettall can draw another, why then ſhould we thinke it B unpoſſible for the almighty God to doe the like? It may be further objected thus. A man is eaten by a wolfe, the wolfe is eaten of a Lyon, the Lyon by the fowles of the ayre, and the fowles of the ayre eaten again by men: againe one man is eaten of another, as it is uſuall among the Cannibals. Now the body of that man which is turned into ſo many ſubſtances, eſpecially into the body of another man, cannot riſe againe: and if the one doth, the other doth not. Anſw. This reaſon is but a cavill of mans braine: for we muſt not think that whatſoever entreth into the body, and is turned into the ſubſtance thereof muſt riſe againe, and become a part of the body at the day of judgement: but every man ſhall then have ſo much C ſubſtance of his owne, as ſhall make his body to be entire and perfect; though another mans fleſh once eaten be no part thereof. Againe, it is urged, that becauſe fleſh and blood cannot enter into the kingdome of God: therefore the bodies of men ſhall not riſe againe. 1 Cor. 15. 51. Anſ. By fleſh and blood, is not meant the bodies of men ſimply, but the bodies of men as they are in weakneſſe, without glory, ſubject to corruption. For fleſh and blood in Scripture, ſignifies ſometime the originall ſinne and corruption of nature, and ſometime mans nature ſubject to miſeries and infirmities, or the body in corruption before it be glorified, and ſo it muſt be underſtood in this place. Laſtly, it is objected that Salomon ſaith, The condition of the children Eccleſ. 3. of men, and the condition of beaſts are even as one 19. D condition. Now beaſts riſe not againe after this life, and therefore there is no reſurrection of men. Anſ. In that place Salomon expoundeth himſelf: They are like in dying: for ſo he ſaith, as the one dieth, ſo dieth the other: he ſpeaketh not of their eſtate after death.

The ſecond point to bee conſidered, is the cauſe of reſurrection. In mankind wee muſt conſider two parts, the Elect and Reprobate; and they both ſhall riſe againe at the day of judgement, but by divers cauſes. The godly have one cauſe of their reſurrection, and the ungodly another: The cauſe why the godly riſe againe, is the reſurrection of Chriſt, yea it is the proper cauſe which procureth and effecteth their reſurrection. In the Scripture Adam and Chriſt are compared together, and Chriſt is called the ſecond Adam: theſe were two roots. The firſt Adam was the root of all mankinde, and he conveyeth ſinne, and by ſin death to all that ſprang of him, Chriſt onely excepted: the ſecond Adam, which is the root of all the Elect, conveyeth life both in body and ſoule to all that are united to him: and by the vertue of his reſurrection they ſhall riſe againe after this life. For looke as the power of the Godhead of Chriſt when he was dead in the grave, raiſed his body the third day: ſo ſhall the ſame power of Chriſt his Godhead convey it ſelfe unto all the faithfull, which even in death remaine united unto him, and raiſe them up at the laſt day. And for that cauſe Chriſt is called a quickning ſpirit. 1. Cor. 15.45. Now the cauſe why the wicked riſe againe, is not the vertue of Chriſts reſurrection, but the vertue of Gods curſe ſet down in his word: In the day that thou ſhalt eate of the tree of knowledge of good and evill, thou ſhalt die the death, Gen. 2. 27. that is, a double death, both of body and ſoule. And therefore they ariſe onely by the power of Chriſt as he is a judge, that this ſentence may bee verified on them; and that they may ſuffer both in body and ſoule eternall puniſhment in hell fire.

Furthermore Saint Iohn ſetteth downe the outward meanes whereby the dead ſhall bee raiſed, namely, the voice of Chriſt: The houre ſhall come (ſaith he) in which all that are in the grave ſhall heare his voyce, & they ſhall come forth. Ioh. 15. 28. For as he created all things by his word, ſo at the day of judgement by the ſame voice all ſhall be raiſed againe. Thus may be a good reaſon to moove us to heare the miniſters of God reverently: for that which they teach, is the very word of God: and therefore wee are to pray that it may bee as effectuall in raiſing us up from the grave of ſinne in this life, as it ſhall be after this life, in raiſing us from the grave of death unto judgement.

Thirdly, we are to conſider what manner of bodies ſhall riſe at the laſt day. Anſ. The ſame bodies for ſubſtance: this Iob knew wel, when he ſaid, I ſhall ſee him at the laſt day in my fleſh, whom I my ſelfe ſhall ſee, and none other for mee, with the ſame eyes. Iob 19. 26, 27. Nevertheleſſe the bodies of the elect ſhall bee altered in qualitie, being made incorruptible and filled with glory. 1. Cor. 15. 43.

The laſt point to be conſidered, is the end why theſe bodies ſhall riſe againe. The principall end which God intendeth is his owne glory, in the manifeſtation of his juſtice and mercy. Now at the laſt day, when all men ſhall be raiſed to judgement by the voice of Chriſt, the godly to life, and the wicked to condemnation; there ſhall be a full manifeſtation both of his mercy and juſtice: and therefore by conſequent a full manifeſtation of his glory.

Thus much for the doctrines touching the Reſurrection: now follow the uſes. Firſt, it ſerveth wonderfully for the comfort of all Chriſtian hearts. David ſpeaking not onely of Chriſt, but alſo of himſelfe, ſaith moſt notably: Mine heart is glad, my tongue rejoyceth, and Pſal. 16. 9, 10. my fleſh alſo doth reſt in hope. Why ſo? For (ſaith he) thou ſhalt not leave my ſoule in the grave, neither wilt thou ſuffer thy holy one to ſee corruption. Though the dayes of this life be dayes of woe and miſery, yet the day of the reſurrection ſhall be unto all the children of God a time of rejoycing and felicity, and as Peter ſaith, It is the time of refreſhing. Act. 3. 19. Whoſoever is now an hungred, ſhall then eate and be filled with the fruit of the tree of life; and whoſoever is now naked, ſhall be then cloathed with the white garment dipped in the blood of the Lambe: and [a] whoſoever is now lame, ſhall have all his members reſtored perfectly. And as this day is joyfull to the godly, ſo on the contrary it is a day of woe and miſery to the ungodly: as Saint Iohn ſaith, They that have done evill, ſhall come forth to the reſurrection of condemnation. Ioh 5. 29. If they might ceaſe to live after this life, and dye as the beaſt doth, O then it would be well with them: for then they might have an end of their miſery: but the wicked muſt after this life riſe againe to condemnation, which is the accompliſhment of their eternall woe and wretchedneſſe; a rufull and dolefull caſe to conſider, and yet is it the ſtate of all unbeleeving and unrepentant ſinners. If a man were bidden to goe to bed, that after he had ſlept and was riſen againe, he might goe to execution, it would make his heart to ake within him: yet this, yea a thouſand fold worſe is the eſtate of all impenitent ſinners: they muſt ſleepe in the grave for a while, and then riſe againe, that a ſecond death may be inflicted upon them in body and ſoule, which is the ſuffering of the full wrath of God both in body and ſoule, eternally. This being ſo, let us imbrace the good counſell of S. Peter, who ſaith, Amend your lives and turne, that your ſinnes may be done away when the time of refreſhing ſhall come from the preſence of the Lord. Act 3. 19. If a man dye repentant for his ſinnes, it is a day of refreſhing; but if he dye in his ſins, impenitent, and hard-hearted, it is a day of eternall horrour, deſperation, and confuſion.

Againe, if we beleeve that our bodies ſhall riſe againe after this life, and ſtand before God at the laſt day of judgement, we muſt daily enter into a ſerious conſideration of this time, and have in mind, that one day we muſt meete the Lord face to face. A traveller comes into an Inne having but a penny in his purſe, he ſits downe and cals for all ſtore of proviſion and dainties: now what is to be thought of him? ſurely in the judgement of all men his behaviour betokens folly, or rather madneſſe. But why? becauſe hee ſpends freely, and hath no regard to the reckoning which muſt follow: how fooliſh then and mad is the practiſe of every man that liveth in his ſinnes, bathing himſelfe in his pleaſures in this world, never bethinking how he ſhall meete God at the laſt day of judgement, and there make reckoning of al his doings? An ancient divine writes of himſelfe that this ſaying ran in his mind, and ſounded alwayes in his eares: Ariſe ye dead and come Hieront.

unto judgement. And this ought alwaies to be ſounding in our eares, that while we have time we ſhould prepare our ſelves to meete God at the laſt day.

Thirdly, if we beleeve the reſurrection of the body, we are not to weepe and mourne immoderately for our friends deceaſed. Our Saviour Chriſt did weepe for Lazarus, & whē Steven was ſtoned to death, certaine men that feared God buried him, & made great lamentation for him: and therefore mourning is not condemned: & we muſt not be as ſtocks, that are bereft of all compaſſion: yet remember we muſt, what S. Paul ſaith to the Theſſalonians: I would not, brethren, have you ignorant concerning thoſe which are aſleepe, that yee ſorrow not, as others, which have no hope. For the godly man properly dyeth not, but layeth himſelfe downe to take a ſleepe after his manifold labours in this life; which being ended, he muſt riſe againe to joyes everlaſting: and therefore wee muſt needs moderate and mingle our mourning for the deceaſed, with this and ſuch like comforts.

1 Theſſ. 4. 13.

Fourthly, we are taught hence to labour & ſtrive againſt the naturall feare of death: for if there be a reſurrection of our bodies after this life, then death is but a paſſage or middle way from this life to eternall life. If a beggar ſhold be commanded to put off his old ragges, that hee might be cloathed with rich and coſtly garments, would he be ſorrie becauſe he ſhold ſtand naked a while till he were wholly beſtripped of his ragges? No ſurely: well, thus doth God when hee calls a man to death: hee bids him out off his old ragges of ſin and corruption, and bee cloathed with the glorious robe of Chriſts righteouſneſſe: and our aboad in the grave is but for a ſpace, while corruption be put off. This is Pauls argument, ſaying, We know that when our earthly houſe of this tabernacle ſhall be diſſolved, we have a building given of God, which is an houſe not made with hands, but eternall in the heavens.

2 Cor. 5. 1.

Fifthly, whereas the godly are ſubject to manifold afflictions and miſeries, both in bodie and minde in this life, here they ſhall finde a ſufficient ſtay to quiet and calme their minds, if they conſider that after this ſhort life is ended, there will enſue a joyfull reſurrection. Iob in the extremitie of all his temptations, made this the comfort of his ſoule, that one day hee ſhould riſe againe, in which he ſhould enjoy the glorious preſence of his Creator. And the holy Ghoſt ſaith, that the ſervants of God in the daies of Antiochus were wracked and tormented, and would not be delivered: why ſo? becauſe they looked for a better reſurrection.

Iob 19. 26.

Heb. 11. 35.

Laſtly, the conſideration of this point ſerveth to be a bridle to reſtraine a man from ſinne, and a ſpurre to make him goe forward in all godlineſſe of life and converſation. Saint Paul had hope toward God, that the reſurrection of the dead ſhould be both of the juſt and unjuſt. Now what did this moove him unto? Marke. Herein (ſaith he (a) that is, in this reſpect) I endeavour my ſelfe alwaies to have a cleare conſcience towards God and towards men. And let us for our parts likewiſe remember the laſt judgement, that it may bee a meanes to moove us ſo to behave our ſelves in all our actions, that we may keepe a good conſcience before God & before men: and let it alſo be a bridle unto us to keepe us backe from all manner of ſinne. For what is the cauſe why men daily defile their bodies and ſoules with ſo many damnable practiſes, without any remorſe of conſcience? Surely they never ſeriouſly remember the day of the reſurrection after this life, wherein they muſt ſtand before Chriſt to give an account of that which they have done in this life, whether it be good or bad.

Act. 24. 16.

(a) Or in the meane ſeaſon.

Thus much of the duties: now marke, it is further ſaid, The reſurrection of the body. If the body riſe, it muſt firſt fall. Here then this point is wrapped up as a confeſſed truth, that all men muſt die the firſt death. And yet conſidering that the members of the Church have the pardon of their ſinnes which are the cauſe of death, it may be demanded, why they muſt die? Anſw. We are to know that when they die, death doth not ſeaze upon them, as it is in his owne nature, a curſe: for in that reſpect it was borne of Chriſt upon the croſſe, and that for us: but for two other cauſes, which wee muſt thinke upon, as being ſpeciall meanes to make a man willing to die. I. They muſt die that originall corruption may be utterly aboliſhed: for no man living on earth is perfectly ſanctified; and originall ſinne is remaining for ſpeciall cauſes to the laſt moment of this life: then it is aboliſhed and not before. II. The godly die, that by death as by a ſtraight gate they may paſſe from this vale of miſery to eternall life. And thus Chriſt by his death makes death to be no death, and turnes a curſe into a bleſſing

And to proceede: It is not here ſaid, the reſurrection of the ſoule, but of the body onely: what then (will ſome ſay) becommeth of the ſoule? Divers have thought, that the ſoules then, though they doe not die, yet are ſtill kept within the body (being as it were aſleepe) till the laſt day. But Gods Word ſaith to the contrary. For the ſoules of the godly lie under the altar, and crie, how long Lord Ieſus? Divers in ſoule did ſuffer the woe and torments of hell: and Lazarus had joy in Abrahams boſome. Againe, ſome others thinke, that mens ſoules after this life do paſſe from one mans body to another: and Herod may ſeeme to have beene of this opinion: for when newes was brought him of Chriſt, he ſaid, that Iohn Baptiſt being beheaded was riſen againe, thinking that the ſoule of Iohn Baptiſt was put into the body of ſome other man. And for proofe hereof, ſome alleadge the example of Nabuchadnezzar, who forſaking the ſociety of men, lived as beaſts, and did eate graſſe like a beaſt: & they imagine that his owne ſoule went out of him and that the ſoule of a beaſt entered into the

roome thereof. But this indeed is a fond conceit: for even then hee had the ſoule of a man when he lived as a beaſt, being onely ſtriken by the hand of God with an exceeding madneſſe, whereby he was bereft of common reaſon; as doth appeare by that clauſe in the text, where it is ſaid, that his vnderſtanding, or knowledge returned to him againe. Dan. 4. 33. Againe, ſome other thinke, that the ſoule neither dyeth nor ſleepeth, nor paſſeth out of one body into another, but wandereth here on earth among men, and oftentimes appeareth to this or that man: and this is the opinion of ſome heretickes, and of the common people, which thinke that dead men walke: and for proofe hereof ſome alleadge the practice of the Witch of Endor, who is ſaid to make Samuel to appeare before Saul; but the truth is, it was not Samuel indeed, but onely a counterfeit of him. For not all the witches in the world, nor all the divels in hell are able to diſquiet the ſoules of the faithfull departed, which are in the keeping of the Lord without wandering from place to place. For when men die in the faith, their ſoules are immediately tranſlated into heaven, and there abide till the laſt judgement: and contrariwiſe if men die in their ſinnes, their ſoules goe ſtraight to the place of eternall condemnation, and there abide as in a priſon, as Peter ſaith. In a word, when the breath goeth out of the body, the ſoule of every man goeth ſtraight either to heaven or hell; and there is no third place of aboad mentioned in Scripture.

To conclude, the reſurrection of the body is expreſſely mentioned in the Creed, to ſhew that there is no reſurrection of the ſoule, which neither dyeth, nor ſleepeth, but is a ſpirituall and inviſible ſubſtance, living and abiding for ever as well forth of the body as in the ſame.

Thus much of the third prerogative or benefit: now followeth the fourth and laſt, in theſe words, And life everlaſting. To handle this point to the full, and to open the nature of it, as it deſerveth, is not in the power of man. For both the Prophet Iſaiah and S. Paul ſay, that the eye hath not ſeene, and the eare hath not heard, neither came it into mans heart to thinke of thoſe things which God hath prepared for thoſe that love him. Iſai. 6. 1. 1 Cor 2. 9. Againe Paul when hee was rapt into the third heaven ſaith, that hee ſaw things not to bee uttered. 2 Cor. 12. 4. Nevertheleſſe, wee may in ſome part deſcribe the ſame, ſo farre forth as God in this caſe hath revealed his will unto us. Wherefore in this laſt prerogative, I conſider two things; the firſt, is life it ſelfe, the ſecond, is the Continuance of life noted in the word everlaſting. Life it ſelfe, is that whereby any thing acteth, liveth, and mooveth it ſelfe: and it is two fold, uncreated, or created. Vncreated life is the very Godhead it ſelfe, whereby God liveth abſolutely in himſelfe, from himſelfe, and by himſelfe, giving life & being to all things that live and have being: and this life is not meant here; becauſe it is not communicable to any creature. Created life, is a quality in the creature; & it is againe twofold: natural, ſpiritual. Naturall life, is that whereby men in this world live by meate and drinke, and all ſuch meanes as are miniſtred by Gods providence. Spirituall life, is that moſt happy and bleſſed eſtate, in which all the elect ſhall reigne with Chriſt their head in the heavens after this life, and after the day of judgement for ever and ever. And this alone is the life which in the Creed we confeſſe and beleeve: and it conſiſteth in an immediate conjunction and communion or fellowſhip with God himſelfe: as Chriſt in his ſolemne prayer to his Father a little before his death ſignifieth: I pray not for theſe alone, but for them alſo which ſhall beleeve in me through their word, that they all may be one, as thou, O father, art in me and I in thee, even that they may be one alſo in us. Iohn 17. 20, 21. And when S. Iohn in the Revelation ſaith, Behold the Tabernacle of God is with men, he wil dwel with them, and they ſhall be his people, & God himſelfe ſhall be their God with them: Rev. 21. 3. he ſheweth that the very foundation of that happineſſe which God hath prepared for his ſervants, ſtands in a ſocietie betweene God and them, whereby God ſhal dwell with them in heaven, and they againe ſhall there enjoy his glorious preſence.

Touching this communion, three points muſt be conſidered. The firſt is, in what order men ſhall have fellowſhip with God? Anſw. This communion ſhall be firſt of all with Chriſt as he is man; and by reaſon that the manhood of Chriſt is perſonally united to the Godhead of the ſonne, it ſhall alſo be with Chriſt as he is God; and conſequently with the Father and the holy Ghoſt. The reaſon of this order is, becauſe Chriſt, though he be the author and the fountaine of eternall life as he is God, yet he conveyes the ſame unto us onely in and by his fleſh or manhood. Yet muſt we not here think, that life proceedeth from the manhood it ſelfe, as from a cauſe efficient: for the fleſh quickeneth not by any vertue from it ſelfe, but by the word to which it is perſonally united, it being as it were a pipe eternally to convey life from the Godhead unto us.

The ſecond point is, in what things this communion conſiſteth? Anſ. Saint Paul openeth this point to the very full, when he ſaith, that after Chriſt hath ſubdued all things unto him, then God ſhall be all in all, that is, God himſelfe immediately ſhall be all good things that heart can wiſh to all the elect. But ſome may ſay, What? is not God all in all unto us even in this life? for whatſoever good things we have, they are all from him. Anſ. It is true indeed, God is all in all even in this life: but how? not immediately, but by outward meanes; and that alſo in ſmall meaſure. For he conveies his goodnes and mercy unto us ſo long as we live on earth, partly by his creatures, and partly by his word and Sacraments: but after this life is ended, all helps & outward meanes ſhal ceaſe: Chriſt ſhal give up his kingdome, and as he is Mediatour ſhall ceaſe to put in execution the office of a Prieſt, a Prophet, or a King: all authoritie and 1 Cor. 15. 28.

power shall be abolished: and therefore al callings in the three maine estates of the Church, the Common-wealth, the familie shall have an end; there shall bee no more magistrate and subject, Pastour and people, master and servant, father and sonne, husband and wife: there shall bee no more use of meate, drinke, cloathing, respiration, physick, sleepe: and yet for all this, the condition of men shall bee many thousand fold more blessed then ever it was. For the Godhead in the Trinitie immediately without all meanes shall bee all things to all the chosen people of God in the kingdome of heaven, world without end. This may seeme strange to mans reason, but it is the very flat truth of Gods Word. S. Iohn in the description of the heavenly Ierusalem, saith, that there shall be no temple in it. Why? How then shall God bee worshipped? marke what followes, the Lord God Almightie and the Lambe are the temple of it. Whereby it is signified, that although now wee use the preaching of the Word, and the administration of the Sacraments, as meanes of our fellowship with God: yet when this life is ended, they must all cease, God and Christ being in stead of all these meanes unto us. And he addes further, the Citie hath no needs of the Sunne, nor of the Moone to shine in it. What then will some say, must there be nothing but darknes? Not so. For the glory of God doth light it, and the Lambe is the light of it. Againe he saith, that in the Paradise of God, there is the river of Water of life, and tree of life bearing fruit every moneth; and that is Christ. And therefore wee shall have no neede of meate, drinke, apparell, sleepe, &c. But Christ himselfe our head and Redeemer shall be in stead of them all, unto us: on whom all the elect shall feed, and by whom both in body and soule they shall be preserved evermore. If a man would have glory, the Father, Son, and holy Ghost shall be his glory: if a man desire wealth and pleasure, God himselfe shall be wealth and pleasure unto him, and whatsoever else the heart of man can wish. Hence it appeares, that this communion is admirable: and that no tongue can tell, nor heart conceive the least part of it.

Rev. 21. 22.

chap. 22. 2

The third point is, touching the benefits or prerogatives that proceede of this communion, and they are in number sixe, The first is an absolute freedome from all wants. In the minde there shall bee no ignorance, no unbeleefe, no distrust in God, no ambition, no envie, nor anger, nor carnall lusts, nor terror in conscience, or corrupt affection. In the body there shall bee no sore, no sicknesse nor paine: for God shall wipe away al teares from their eyes, nay then all defects or wants in body, or soule, or in both, shall bee supplyed, and the whole man made perfect every way.

Rev. 21. 4

The second is, perfect knowledge of God. In this life the Church and all the servants of God know him but in part. Moses would have seene Gods face, but hee was permitted to see onely his hinder parts; and as Paul saith, now wee know in part, and darkely, as through a glasse. In this life wee can no otherwise discerne but as an old man through spectacles: and the creatures, but specially the Word of God and the Sacraments, are the spectacles of our minde, wherein wee behold his

1 Cor. 13. 12.

A justice, mercie, love, &c. and without them wee can discerne little or nothing: yet after this life, when that which is perfect is come, and that which is imperfect is abolished, wee shall see God as hee is to bee seene, not as through a glasse, but face to face; and wee shall know him as wee are knowne of his Majestie, so far forth as possibly a creature may. God indeede is infinite, and therefore the full knowledge of his Majestie can no more be comprehended by the understanding of the creature, which is finite, then the sea by a spoone: yet nevertheless God shall be known every way of man, so farre forth as a creature may know the Creator.

B Now upon this that the elect have such fulnesse of knowledge, it may be demanded, whether men shall know one another after this life or no. Answ. This question is ofner mooved by such as are ignorant, then by them that have knowledge: and often times it is tossed in the mouthes of them that have little religion in their hearts: and therefore I answer first, men should rather have care to seeke how they may come to heaven, then to dispute what they shall do when they are there: the common proverbe is true, it is no good counting of chickens, before they be hatcht. Secondly I say, that men in heaven shall know each other: yea they shall know them which were never knowne or seene of them before in this life: which may bee gathered by proportion, out of Gods Word. Adam in his innocencie knew Eve, whom he had never seene before, and gave her a fit name so soone as she was created. And

Gen. 2. 23.

C when our Saviour Christ was transfigured in the the Mount, Peter knew Moses and Elias, whom before he had never seene, and therefore it is like that the elect shall know each other in heaven, where their knowledge and their whole estate shall be fully perfited. But whether they shall know one another after an earthly manner, as to say, this man was my father, this mine uncle, this my teacher, &c. the Word of God saith nothing: and therefore I will be silent, and we must be content a while to be ignorant in this point.

Mat. 17. 4.

The third prerogative of everlasting blessednesse, is, that the elect shall love God with as perfect love as a creature possibly can. The manner of loving God, is to love him for himselfe; and the measure, is to love him without measure: and

D both shall bee found in heaven. For the Saints of God shall have an actual fruition of God himselfe, and bee as it were swallowed up with a sea of his love, and wholly ravished therewith: for which cause, as farre as creatures can, they shall love him againe. Againe, the love of a thing is according to the knowledge thereof, but in this life God is knowne of man only in part, and therefore is loved onely but in part: but after this life, when the elect shall know God fully, they shall love him without measure: and in this respect love hath a prerogative above faith or hope, howsoever in some respects againe they goe beyond love.

The fourth prerogative is, that the Saints of God keepe a perpetuall Sabbath in heaven. In this life it is kept but every seaventh day, and when it is best of all sanctified, it is done but in part; but in heaven every day is a Sabbath: as the Lord

Isai.66. 23. Heb.4.9. saith by the Prophet Isaiah, From moneth to moneth, and from Sabbath to Sabbath, all flesh shall come before me: and therefore the life to come shall be spent in the perpetuall service of God.

Phil 3.21. Fiftly, the bodies of the elect after this life in the Kingdome of Heaven shall be like the glorious body of Christ: so Paul saith, Christ Iesus our Lord shall change our vile bodies, that they may be like his glorious body. Now the resemblance betweene Christs body and ours, standeth in these things: as Christs body is incorruptible, so shall our bodies be voyde of all corruption: as Christs body is immortall, so ours in the Kingdome of heaven shall never dye: as Christs body is spirituall, so shall our be made spirituall, as the Apostle saith, It is sown a naturall body, it is raised a spirituall body, not because the body shall bee changed into a spirit, for it shall remaine the same in substance, and that for ever: but because it shal be preserved by a spirituall and divine manner. For in this life it is preserved by meat, drinke, cloathing, sleepe, physicke, rest, and dyet, but after without all these meanes the life of the body shall bee continued, and body and soule keepe together by the immediate power of Gods spirit for ever and ever. Thus the body of Christ is now preserved in heaven, and so shall the bodies of all the elect be after the day of judgement. Furthermore, as Christs body is now a shining body, as doth appeare by his transfiguration in the mount, so in all likelihood after the resurrection the bodies of the elect shall be shining and bright, alwayes remaining the same for substance. Lastly, as Christs body after it rose againe from the grave, had this property of agility beside swiftnesse, to passe from the earth to the third heaven, being in distance many thousand miles from us, and that without violence: so shall the bodies of the Saints. For being glorified, they shall be able as well to ascend upward as to goe downeward, and to moove without violence, and that very swiftly.

Psal.16.11. The last and last prerogative, is an unspeakable and eternall joy, as David saith: in thy presence is fulnesse of joy: at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore. It is said, that when Salomon was crowned King, the people rejoyced exceedingly. If there were such great joy at his coronation which was but an earthly Prince, what joy then shall there be when the Elect shall see the true Salomon crowned with glory in the Kingdome of Heaven? It is said that the wise men which came from the East to worship Christ: when they saw the Starre standing over the place where the Babe was, were exceedingly glad: how much more shall the elect rejoyce, when they shall see Christ not lying in a Manger, but crowned with immortall glory in the Kingdome of Heaven? Wherefore this joy of the elect after this life is most wonderfull, and cannot be uttered.

1 King. 1. 40. Matth. 2. 10.

Matth. 26.44. Rom 8.17. The property of life eternall, is to be an inheritance which God bestowes on them which are made his sonnes in Christ, who is the onely begotten Sonne of the Father. Hence it followes necessarily, that in the Scripture it is called a reward, not because it is deserved by our workes, as the Church of Rome erroniously teacheth: but for

A two other causes. First, because life eternall is due to all that beleeve, by vertue of Christs merit. For his righteousnesse is made ours by imputation, so consequently the merit thereof is also ours: and by it (all personall merits in our selves utterly excluded) we deserve or merit eternall happinesse as a reward; which nevertheless in respect of our selves is the free and meere gift of God. The second is, because there is a resemblance betweene eternall life and a reward. For as a reward is given to a workman after his worke is done; so everlasting life is given unto men after the travels and miseries of this life are ended. Rom.6. 23.

The degrees of life are three. The first, is in this
B life, when men being justified and sanctified have peace with God. Many imagine, that there is no eternall life till after death: but they are deceived, for it begins in this world: as our Saviour Christ testifieth, saying, Verily, verily I say unto you, he that heares my words, and beleeves him that sent mee, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but hath passed from death to life. This being so, we are hence to learne a good lesson. Considering we looke for life everlasting after this life, we must not deceive our selves, lingring and deferring the time till the last gaspe; but we must lay the foundation of life eternall in our selves in this world, and have the earnest thereof laid up in our hearts against the day of death. But how is that done? we must repent us heartily of all our sinnes, and seeke to be assured in conscience that God the Father of Christ is our
C Father, God the Sonne our Redeemer, and God the holy Ghost our comforter. For as Christ saith, this is life eternall to know thee the onely God, and whom thou hast sent Iesus Christ. And we must goe further yet, endevouring to say with Paul, that we live not, but that Christ liveth in us: which when we can say, we have in us the very seed of eternall life. The second degree, is in the end of this life, when the body freed from all diseases, paines, and miseries is laid to rest in the earth, and the soule is received into heaven. The third, is after the day of judgement, when body and soule reunited shall be both advanced to eternall glory. Ioh.5.24. Mat. 9,10. Ioh.17.3. Gal.2.20. 1 Tim

Againe in this third degree of life, there bee in all likelihood sundry degrees of glory. Daniel
D speaking of the estate of the elect after this life, saith, They that be wise, shall shine as the brightnesse of the firmament, and they that turne many to righteousnesse, shall shine as the starres for evermore. Now we know there is difference betweene the brightnesse of the firmament and the brightnesse of the starres. Againe, there bee degrees of torments in hell, as appeares by the saying of Christ, It shall bee easier for Tyrus and Sidon in that day, then for this generation: and therefore there be proportionall degrees of glory. And Paul saith, There is one glory of the Sunne, another glory of the Moone, another glory of the Starres: for one starre differeth from another in glory: so is the resurrection of the dead. In which words he applyes the differences of excellency that bee in the creatures, to set forth the differences of glory that shall be in mens bodies after the resurrection. Furthermore (if wee may conjecture) it may bee, the degrees of glory shall be answerable to the di- Dan.12. Matth.11. 22. 1 Cor.15. 41,42.

vers

vers measures of gifts and graces bestowed on men in this life, and according to the imployance of them to the glory of God and edification of the Church. And therefore the twelve Apostles, who were excedingly enriched with the gift of the spirit, and were master-builders of the Church of the new Testament, shal sit on 12. thrones, and judge the 12. tribes of Israel. But it may be objected, that if there be degrees of glorie in heaven, some shall want glorie. Ans. Not so: though some have more, and some less, yet all shall have sufficient. Take severall vessels whereof some are bigger, and some lesse: & cast them all into the sea: some will receive more water, & some lesse, and yet all shal be full and no want in any: and so likewise among the Saints of God in heaven, some shal have more glory, some lesse, and yet all without exception full of glory. And whereas it is alleadged, that all the labourers in the vine-yard receive each of them a penny equally for their hire; the answer is, that our Saviour Christ in the Parable intends not to set forth the equalitie of celestiall glory, and what shall be the estate of the godly after this life: but the very drift of the parable is to shew, that they which are called first, have no cause to brag or insult over others, which as yet are uncalled, considering they may bee made equall, or be preferred before them.

Mat. 20. 9, 10.

Thus much of life it selfe; now followes the continuance thereof, which the Scriptures have noted in calling it eternall or everlasting. And to this end Paul saith, that Christ hath abolished death, and brought not only life, but also immortalitie to light by the Gospel. And this very circumstance serves greatly to commend the happinesse of the godly: in that, after they have made an entrance into it, they shall never see tearme of time or end. Suppose the whole world were a sea, & that every 1000. yeeres expired, a bird must carrie away, or drinke up one only drop of it: in processe of time it wil come to passe that this sea, though very huge, shall be dried up, but yet many 1000. millios of yeeres must bee passed before this can bee done. Now if a man should enjoy happines in heaven only for the space of time in which this sea is drying up, he would think his case most happy & blessed: but behold the elect shall enjoy the kingdom of heaven not only for that time, but whē it is ended, they shall enjoy it as long again, and when al is done, they shal be as far from ending of this their joy, as they were at the beginning.

2 Tim. 1. 10.

Having thus seene what life everlasting is, let us now come to the use of the article. And first of al, if we beleeve that there is an eternal happines, & that the same belongs unto us, then we must use this present world, & al the things therin as though we used them not: and whatsoever we doe in this world, yet the eyes of our minds must alwaies be cast toward the blessed estate prepared for us in heaven. As a Pilgrime in a strange land hath alwaies his eyes toward his journeyes end, and is then grieved when by any means he is out of his way: so must we alwaies have our minds & heares set on everlasting life, and bee grieved when wee are by any meanes hindred in the straight way, that leadeth thereunto: wee have a notable patterne of this dutie set out unto us in the Patriarke Abraham, who being called of God, obeyed to goe out into a place, which hee should afterward receive for inheritance, & he went out, not knowing whither he went: and by faith abode in the land of Canaan, as in a strange countrey, and as one that dwelt in tents. Now the cause that mooved him was life everlasting: for the text saith, He looked for a citie having a foundatiō, whose builder & maker is God. And we ought every one of us to be little affected to the things of this life, never setting our hearts upon them, but using them as a pilgrim doth use his staffe in the way: so long as it is an help & stay for him in his journey, he is content to carry it in his hand; but so soone as it begins to trouble him, he casts it away.

Heb. 11. 9. verſ. 10.

Secōdly, al that professe the Gospel of Christ, may hēce learn to beare with patience the crosses & afflictions which God shall lay on them in this world. It is Gods usual manner to begin corrections in his owne family upon his owne children; and as Peter saith, Iudgement begins at Gods house. Looke as a mother that weanes her child, laies worm-wood or some other bitter thing upon her breast, to make the child loath the milk: so likewise God makes us often feele the miseries & crosses of this life, that our love and liking may be turned frō this world & fixed in heaven. As raw flesh is loathsome to the stomacke; so is every sinner and unmortified man loathsome unto God: till the Lord by afflictions mortifie in him the corruptions of his nature, & specially the love of this world. But when a man is afflicted how shall he bee able to endure the crosse? Surely by resolving, that the Lord hath prepared life everlasting for him. Thus wee read that Moses by faith when hee was come to age, refused to be called the son of Pharaohs daughter, & chose rather to suffer adversitie with the people of God, then to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming the rebuke of Christ greater riches, thē the treasures of Egypt. But I pray you: What mooved Moses to be of this mind? The reasō is added: Because he had respect to the recōpence of reward, that is, he had alwaies a speciall regard of life everlasting, and that was it that made him content & willing to suffer affliction with the people of God. Here then behold a notable president for us to follow: In which we are taught that the best way to endure afflictions with patience, is to have an eye to the recōpence of reward: this is it that makes the yoke of Christ easie and lightsome. When it shall please God to bring unto us a cup of afflictions and bid us drink a draught thereof to the bottome, the meditation of life eternall must bee as sugar in our pockets to sweete the cup withall.

1 Pet. 4. 17.

Heb. 11. 24, 25, 26. Ibid.

Lastly, if this be true, that God of his goodnes and endlesse mercie toward mankind, hath prepared life everlasting, yet not for all men, but for the Elect, whose names are written in the booke of life; wee muſt above all things in this world ſeeke to bee partakers of the ſame. Let us receive this as from the Lord, and lay it to our hearts, whatſoever wee doe evening and morning, day or night, whether we be yong or old, rich or poore, firſt wee muſt ſeeke for the kingdome of heaven and his righteouſneſſe. If this benefit were common to all and not proper to the Church, leſſe care might be had: but ſeeing it is proper to ſome alone, for this very cauſe let all our ſtudies bee to obtaine the beginnings of life everlaſting given in this life. For if we have it not, whoſoever we bee, it had bin better for us that wee had never bin borne, or that wee had beene borne dogs and toades then men: for when they die, there is an end of their miſerie; but man, if he loſe everlaſting happines, hath 10000 millions of yeeres to live in miſerie and in the torments of hel; and when that time is ended, hee is as far from the end of his miſerie, as he was at the beginning. Wherefore I pray you, let not the divell ſteale this meditation out of your hearts, but be carefull to repent of all your ſinnes, and to beleeve in Chriſt for the pardon of them all; that by this meanes yee may come to have the pawne and earneſt of the ſpirit concerning life everlaſting, even in this world. What a miſerable thing is it, that men ſhould live long in this world, and not ſo much as dreame of another, till at the laſt gaſpe? Let us not ſuffer Satan thus to abuſe and bewitch us: for if wee have not eternall life in this world, we ſhall never have it.

Hitherto by Gods goodneſſe I have ſhewed the meaning of the Creed: now to draw to a concluſion; the generall uſes which are to bee made of it, follow. And firſt of all wee learne by it that the Church of Rome hath no cauſe to condemne us for hereticks: for wee doe truely hold and beleeve the whole Apoſtolicall Symbole or Creede, which is an epitome of the Scriptures, and the verie key of faith. It will be ſaid, that we deny the Popes ſupremacy, juſtification by workes, purgatorie, the ſacrifice of the Maſſe for the ſinnes of the quicke and the dead, the invocation and interceſſion of Saints, &c. which are the greateſt points of religion. It is true indeede, we deny and renounce them as doctrines of divels: perſwading our ſelves that if indeed they had bin Apoſtolicall, and the very grounds and pillars of religion, as they are avouched to bee, they ſhould in no wiſe have bin left forth of the Creede. For it is an over-ſight in making a confeſſion of our faith, to omit the principall points & rules of faith. It will be further ſaid, that in the Creed, wee beleeve the Church, and ſo conſequently are to beleeve all theſe former points which are taught and avouched by the Church. But this defence is fooliſh: for it takes this for granted, that the Church of Rome is the Church heere meant, which we deny, unleſſe they can prove a particular Church to be univerſall or Catholike. Nay, I adde further, that the principall grounds of popiſh faith, for which they contend with us as for life and death, are not mentioned in any other Creedes which were made by the Churches and Councels for many hundred yeeres after Chriſt.

Secondly, the Creede ſerves as a ſtore-houſe of remedies againſt all troubles and temptations whatſoever. I. If a man be grieved for the loſſe of earthly riches, let him conſider that hee beleeves God to bee his Creator, who will therefore guide and preſerve his owne workemanſhip, and by his providence miniſter all things needfull unto it. And that he hath not loſt the principall bleſſing of all, in that hee hath God to bee his Father, Chriſt to bee his Redeemer, and the holy Ghoſt to be his Comforter: and that conſidering he lookes for life eternall, hee is not to be overmuch carefull for this life: and that Chriſt being our Lord, will not forſake us being the ſervants in his owne houſe, but will provide things needfull for us. II. If any man be grieved in reſpect of outward diſgrace and contempt, let him remember that he beleeves in Chriſt crucified, and that therefore he is to rejoyce in contempt for righteouſneſſe ſake. III. They which are troubled for the deceaſe of friends, are to comfort themſelves in the communion of Saints, and that they have God the Father, and Chriſt, and the holy Ghoſt for their friends. IV. Againſt bodily captivitie, let men conſider that they beleeve in Chriſt their Lord, whoſe ſervice is perfect libertie. V. Againſt the feare of bodily diſeaſes, we muſt remember the reſurrection of the body, in which all diſeaſes and infirmities ſhall bee aboliſhed. VI. If a man feare death of the body, let him conſider that hee beleeves in Chriſt which died upon the croſſe, who by death hath vanquiſhed death. VII. The feare of perſecution is reſtrained, if wee call to remembrance that God is a Father Almightie, not only able, but alſo willing to repreſſe the power of the adverſarie, ſo farre forth as ſhall bee for the good of his children. VIII. Terrours ariſing of the conſideration of the laſt judgement are allayed by remembrance of this, that Chriſt ſhall bee our judge who is our Redeemer. IX. Feare of damnation is remedied by conſideration that Chriſt died to make ſatisfaction for us, and now ſits at the right hand of his Father to make interceſſion for us; and by the reſurrection of the body to life everlaſting. X. Terrours of conſcience for ſinne are repreſſed, if wee conſider that God is a Father, and therefore much in ſparing; and that it is a prerogative of the Church to have remiſſion of ſinnes.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE EDWARD, LORD RVSSELL, EARLE OF BEDFORD: GRACE AND PEACE BE MVLTIPLIED.

RIGHT Honourable, if you conſider what is one of the chiefeſt ornaments of this Noble ſtate, unto which God hath advanced you, it will appeare, that there is none more excellent then (a) the ſpirit of grace and prayer. For what doth your heart affect? Would you ſpeake the languages? Behold, by prayer you may ſpeake the moſt heavenly tongue that ever was (b) even the language of Canaan. Would you have the valour of Knighthood? By prayer you may ſtand in place where Gods hand hath (c) made a breach, and doe as much as (d) all the chariots and horſemen of a kingdome. Would you enjoy Gods bleſſings which you want? By prayer you may (as it were) put your hands into the cofers of Gods treaſures (e) and enrich your ſelfe. Doe you deſire the favour of Monarches and Princes? By prayer you may come in preſence, and have ſpeech with Iehovah the King of heaven and earth. Laſtly, would you know, whether now living you be dead, that being dead you may live for ever? By prayer a man may know, whether he be dead to ſinne, dead to the world, alive to God, live to Chriſt, and live eternally.

c Pſa.106. 23. Pſa.59.16

d 2 King. 2.12.

e Mat.7.7.

Prayer then, being ſo excellent a point of religion: I am enboldned to commend this ſmall treatiſe to your Honour: not ſo much for it ſelfe, as becauſe it doth ſet out the matter and true manner of invocation of Gods holy name. And I hope for your favour in accepting of it, the rather, becauſe I doubt not but your deſire is to be anſwerable to your moſt honorable, and for religion moſt worthy anceſtors, in the care of maintaining and countenancing any good thing that may any way ſerve for the furthering of the Goſpel of Chriſt.

Now Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, and God even the Father which hath loved us, and given us everlaſting conſolation, and good hope through grace, ſtabliſh your Honour in every good word and worke to the end.

Your H. to command,

An advertisement to the Reader.

Good Reader, there was a booke of late published in London under this title, PERKINS upon the Lords Prayer. In it I have double injury. First, it was printed without my knowledge or consent. And secondly, the booke is faultie both in the matter and manner of writing. In the matter, these things are not well set downe.

First, the commandement of Prayer, very easie to be kept, page 3. b.

2. Prayer is the restauration of the Gospel, p. 7. b.

3. The three first petitions concerne Gods glory: the three latter, the meanes of Gods glory. pag. 1. b.

4. Gods name taken for his Deitie, and not for his Attributes or Titles. p. 15. b.

5. A man must pray for the day of his death. p. 26. a.

6. Repentance is sufficient not onely to bring a true faith, but also to renew it. p. 34. a.

Now, considering by this ungodly practice, Christian and well disposed people are much abused, to omit the injury done to my selfe, I thought it my dutie to make a redresse by publishing this Treatise according as the points therein were delivered: otherwise I was not willing to have set downe any thing in the way of Exposition of the Lords Prayer: because it is already sufficiently performed by others.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE LORDS PRAYER IN THE WAY OF CATECHISME: ſerving for ignorant people, by W. Perkins.

Matthew 6. verſe 9.

After this manner therefore pray yee: Our Father, &c.

THE occaſion, and ſo alſo the coherence of theſe words with the former is this: The Evangeliſt Matthew ſetting downe the Sermons and ſayings of our Saviour Chriſt, keepes not this courſe to propound every thing as it was done or ſpoken; but ſometimes he ſets downe that firſt, which was done laſt, and that laſt which was done before: according as the ſpirit of God directed him. Which thing is verified in theſe words, where the prayer is mentioned; yet the occaſion wherefore our Saviour Chriſt taught his Diſciples to pray, is not here ſpecified. But in S. Luk. 11. 1. the occaſion of theſe words is evident. For there it is ſaid, that the diſciples of our Saviour knowing that Iohn taught his diſciples to pray, made requeſt to their maſter, that he would doe the ſame to them likewiſe.

Theſe few words ſet before the prayer are a commandement, and it preſcribes unto us two duties: the firſt, to pray; the ſecond, to pray after the manner following. Touching the firſt point, conſidering very few among the people know how to pray aright, we muſt learne what it is to pray.

To make prayer, is to put up our requeſts to God according to his word from a contrite heart, in the name of Chriſt, with aſſurance to bee heard.

For the better opening of theſe words, we are to conſider ſixe queſtions. The firſt is, to whom we are to pray. The anſwer is, to God alone. Rom. 10. 14. How ſhall they call on him in whom they have not beleeved? &c. Marke how invocation and faith are linked together. And Pauls reaſon may be framed thus: In whom we put our affiance or beleefe, to him alone muſt we pray: but we beleeve onely in God: therefore we muſt onely pray to him. As for Saints or Angels, they are in no wiſe to be called upon; becauſe not the leaſt tittle of Gods word preſcribes us ſo to doe: becauſe they cannot heare our prayers, and diſcerne what are the thoughts and deſires of our hearts: and becauſe invocation is a part of divine worſhip, and therefore peculiar to God alone.

Obiect. What need any man to pray unto God, conſidering hee knowes what we want before we aske, and is ready and willing to give that which we crave? Anſw. We pray not for this end to manifeſt our caſe to God, as though hee knew it not, to win and procure his favour and good will, but for other weightie ends. Firſt, that we might ſhew our ſubmiſſion and obedience to God, becauſe he hath given us a direct commandement to pray, and it muſt be obeyed. Secondly, that we may by invocation ſhew forth that we doe indeed beleeve and repent: becauſe God hath made the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes and of all good bleſſings to ſuch as doe indeed repent and humble themſelves under the hand of God, and by true faith apprehend and apply the promiſes of God unto themſelves. Thirdly, we pray to God that we may (as our dutie is) acknowledge him to be the fountaine, author and giver of every good thing. Laſtly, that we might eaſe our minds by powring out our hearts before the Lord: for this end hath he made moſt ſweet and comfortable promiſes, Prov. 16. 3. Pſal. 37. 5.

Obiect. What need men uſe prayer, conſidering God in his eternall counſell hath certainly determined what ſhall come to paſſe? Anſw. As God determines what things ſhall come to paſſe; ſo he doth withall determine the means whereby the ſame things are effected. Before all worlds God decreed that men ſhould live upon earth, and he decreed likewiſe, that meat, drinke, and cloathing ſhould be uſed, that life might be preſerved. Now prayer is one of the moſt excellent meanes whereby ſundry things are brought to paſſe: therefore Gods eternall counſell touching things to come, doth not exclude prayer and like meanes, but rather include and imply the ſame.

The ſecond queſtion is, what kind of action prayer is. An. It is no lip-labor: it is the putting up of a ſuit unto God, & this action is peculiar to the very heart of a man. Rom. 8. 26. The ſpirit makes requeſt for us. But how? with grones in the heart. Exo. 14. 15. the Lord ſaith to Moſes, Why cryeſt thou? yet there is no mention made that Moſes ſpake any word at all: the Lord no doubt, accepted the inward mourning and deſire of his heart for a cry, Pſa. 28. 10. and 12. 5.

The third queſtion is, what is the forme or rule according to which we are to pray? Anſ. It is the revealed will and Word of God. A man in humbling his ſoule before God, is not to pray as his affections carry him, and for what he liſt: but all is to be done according to the expreſſe Word. So as thoſe things which God hath commanded us to aske, wee are to aske, and thoſe things which hee hath not commanded us to aske, wee are in no wise to pray for, 1 *Ioh.*5.14. This is the assurance which we have in him, that if we aske any thing according to his will, he heareth us. This then is a speciall clause to bee marked, that men must pray in knowledge, not in ignorance: here weigh the case of poore ignorant people: they talke much of praying for themselves and others, they imagine that they pray very devoutly to God: but alas they doe nothing lesse, because they know not what to aske according to Gods will. They therefore must learne Gods Word, and pray according to the same, else it will proove in the end that all their praying was nothing but a mocking and flat dishonour of God. The fourth question is, with what affection a man must pray? Ans. Prayer must proceed from a broken and contrite heart. This is the sacrifice which God accepteth, *Psal.*51.17. When Ahab abased himselfe, though he did it in hypocrisie, yet God had some respect unto it. 1 *King.*21.29. saith the Lord to Eliah, Seest thou how Ahab is humbled before me? This contrition of heart stands in two things. The first of them is, a lively feeling of our owne sinne, misery, and wretched estate, how that we are compassed about with innumerable enemies, even with the divell and his angels, and within abound even with huge seas of wants and rebellious corruptions, whereby wee most grievously displease God, and are vile in our owne eyes. Being therefore thus beset on every side, we are to be touched with the sense of this our great misery. And hee that will pray aright, must put on the person and the very affection of a poore wretched begger, and certainely not being grieved with the rufull condition in which we are in our selves, it is not possible for us to pray effectually, *Psal.*130.1. Out of the deepes I called upon thee O Lord: that is, when I was in my greatest misery, and as it were not far from the gulfes of hell, then I cryed to God. *Isai.*26.16. Lord in trouble have they visited thee, they powred out a prayer when thy chastening was upon them. 1 *Sam.*1.15. I am a woman (saith Anna) of an hard spirit: that is, a troubled soule, and have powred my soule before the Lord. Hence it appeareth, that the ordinary prayers of most men grievously displease God, seeing they are made for fashion onely, without any sense and feeling of their miseries: common men come with the Pharisee in ostentation of their integrity, and they take great paines with their lips, but their hearts wander from the Lord. The second thing required in a contrite heart, is a longing desire and hungring after Gods graces and benefits whereof we stand in need. It is not sufficient for a man to buckle as it were, and to goe crooked under his sinnes and miseries; but also he must have a desire to be eased of them, and to be inriched with graces needfull.

Thus Hezechias the King, and the Prophet Isaiah the sonne of Amos prayed against Sennacherib, and cryed unto heaven, 2 Chron. 32.20. Where we may see what a marvellous desire they had to obtaine their request. So also, *Rom.*8.26. The spirit maketh request with groanes, so great that they cannot be uttered, as they are felt. David saith, *Psal.*143.6. That he desireth after the Lord, as the thirsty land. Now we know that the ground parched with heate opens it selfe in rifts and cranies, and gapes toward heaven as though it would devoure the clouds for want of moisture, and thus must the heart be disposed to Gods grace, till it obtaine it. The people of Israel being in grievous afflictions, how doe they pray? *They powre out their soules like water before the face of the Lord, Lam.*2.19.

The fift question is, in whose name prayer must be made. Ans. It must not be made in the name of any creature, but only in the name and mediation of Christ, *Ioh.*14.14. If ye aske any thing in my name I will doe it. A man is not to present his prayers to God in any worthinesse of his owne merits. For what is he, to make the best of himselfe, what can he make of himselfe? by nature he is no better then the very firebrand of hell, and of all Gods creatures on earth the most outragious rebell to God, and therefore cannot bee heard for his owne sake. As for Saints they can be no mediatours, seeing even they themselves in heaven are accepted of God not for themselves, but onely for the blessed merits of Christ. If any man sinne (saith Saint Iohn, 1 *epist. chap.*2.1.) we have an advocate with the Father Iesus Christ. But how prooves he this? It followes then, And he is the reconciliation for our sinnes. His reason stands thus: He which must be an advocate, must first of all be a reconciliation for us: no Saints can be a reconciliation for us; therefore no Saints can be advocates. Therefore in this place is manifest another fault of ignorant people. They cry often, Lord helpe me, Lord have mercy upon me: But in whose name pray they? poore soules like blind bayards they rush upon the Lord, they know no mediator in whose name they should present their prayers to him. Little doe they consider with themselves, that God is as well a most terrible judge, as a mercifull Father. The sixth question is; Whether faith be requisite to prayer or not. Ans. Prayer is to be made with faith, whereby a man must have certaine assurance to be heard. For he that prayeth, must stedfastly beleeve, that God in Christ will grant his petition. This affiance being wanting, it maketh prayer to be no prayer. For how can he pray for any thing effectually, who doubteth whether he shall obtaine it or no?

Wherefore it is an especiall point of prayer, to be perswaded, that God to whom prayer is made, not onely can, but also will grant his request. *Mar.*11.24. Whatsoever ye desire when ye pray, beleeve that ye shall have it, and it shall bee done unto you. Here we see two things required in prayer: the first, a desire of the good things which we want: the second, is faith, wherby we beleeve that God will grant the things desired.

The ground of this faith is reconciliation with God, and the aſſurance thereof. For unleſſe a man be in conſcience in ſome meaſure perſwaded that all his ſinnes are pardoned, and that he ſtands reconciled to God in Chriſt, he cannot beleeve any other promiſes revealed in the Word, nor that any of his praiers ſhal be heard.

Thus much of the definition of prayer: now let us ſee what uſe may bee made of this Commandement, pray ye thus. Seeing our Saviour commands his Diſciples, and ſo even us alſo to pray to God, it is our duty not onely to preſent our prayers to God, but alſo to doe it cheerefully and earneſtly. Rom. 15. 30. Alſo brethren I beſeech you that ye would ſtrive with me by prayer to God for me. What is the cauſe why the Lord doth often deferre his bleſſings after our prayers? no cauſe, but that he might ſtirre us up to bee more earneſt to cry unto the Lord. Exod. 32. 10. When Moſes prayed to God in the behalfe of the Iſraelites, the Lord anſwers, Let me alone: as though his prayers did bind the Lord, and hinder him from executing his judgements: wherefore this is good advice, for all Chriſtian men to continue and to be zealous in prayer. If thou be an ignorant man, for ſhame learne to pray: ſeeing it is Gods Commandement, make conſcience of it. We ſee that there is no man, unleſſe he be deſperately wicked, but will make ſome conſcience of killing and ſtealing: and why is this? Becauſe it is Gods Commandement, Thou ſhalt not kill, Thou ſhalt not ſteale. Well then, this alſo is Gods Commandement, to pray. Let this conſideration breed in thee a conſcience of this duty, and although thy corrupt nature ſhall draw thee away from it, yet ſtrive to the contrary, and know it certainely, that the breach of this Commandement makes thee as well guilty of damnation before God as any other. Furthermore, this muſt be a motive to pricke thee forward to this duty, that as God commands us to pray, ſo alſo hee gives the ſpirit of prayer, whereby the Commandement is made eaſie unto us. If the Lord had commanded a thing impoſſible, then there had beene ſome cauſe of diſcouragement, but commanding a thing through the grace of his Spirit very eaſie and profitable: how much more are we bound to obedience of the ſame? Againe, prayer is the Key whereby we open the treaſures of God, and pull downe his mercies upon us. For as the preaching of the Word ſerves to declare and to convey unto us Gods graces: ſo in prayer we come to have a lively feeling of the ſame in our hearts. And further, this muſt moove us to prayer, ſeeing in it wee have familiarity with Gods Majeſty. It is an high favour for a man to bee familiar with a Prince; how much more then to bee familiar with the King of Kings the mighty Iehovah? This then can be no burthen or trouble unto us, being one of the maine prerogatives that God beſtowes on his Church. For in the preaching of the Word, it pleaſeth God to talke to us; and in prayer, God doth vouchſafe us this honour, A to ſpeake, and as it were familiarly to talke with him, and not as to a fearefull Iudge, but as to a loving and mercifull God.

Conſider alſo that prayer is a worthy meanes of defence, not onely to us, but alſo to the Church and them that are abſent. By it Moſes ſtood in the breach, which Gods wrath had made into the people of Iſrael, and ſtayed the ſame, Pſa. 106. 13. By this, Chriſtian men fight as valiant champions againſt their own corruptions and all other ſpirituall enemies, Eph. 6. 18. Infinite were it to ſhew how many bleſſings the Lord hath beſtowed on his ſervants by prayer. In a word, Luther, whom it pleaſed God to uſe as a worthy inſtrument for the reſtoring of the Goſpel, teſtifieth of himſelfe, B that having this grace given him to call upon the name of the Lord, He had more revealed unto him of Gods truth by prayer, then by reading and ſtudy. The ſecond point of the Commandement, is to pray after the manner propounded in the Lords prayer. Where it is to be noted, that the Lords prayer is a direction, and as it were ſamplar to teach us how and in what manner we ought to pray. None is to imagine that we are bound to uſe theſe words only, and none other. For the meaning of Chriſt is not to bind us to the words, but to the matter and to the manner, and to the like affections in praying. If this were not ſo, the prayers of Gods ſervants ſet downe in the bookes of the old and new Teſtament ſhould all be faulty, becauſe they are not C ſet downe in the very ſame words with the Lords prayer, nay this prayer is not ſet downe in the ſame words altogether by Matthew and Luke. And whereas ſundry men in our Church, hold it unlawfull to uſe this very forme of words, as they are ſet downe by our Saviour Chriſt, for a praier; they are far deceived, as will appeare by their reaſons. Firſt (ſay they) it is Scripture, & therfore not to be uſed as a prayer. I anſwer, that the ſame thing may be the Scripture of God, and alſo the prayer of man, elſe the prayers of Moſes, David, and Paul, being ſet downe in the Scriptures, ceaſe to be prayers. Againe (ſay they) that in prayer wee are to expreſſe our wants in particular, and the graces which we deſire: now in theſe words all things D to be prayed for, are only in generall propounded. I anſwer, that the maine wants that are in any man, and the principall graces of God to be deſired, are ſet downe in the petitions of this prayer in particular. Thirdly, they plead that the patterne to make all prayers by, ſhould not be uſed as a prayer. I anſwer, that therefore the rather it may be uſed as a prayer: and ſure it is, that ancient and worthy Divines have reverenced it as a prayer; chooſing rather to uſe theſe words then any other, as Cyprian. Serm. de orat. Dominic. And Tertullian, lib. de fuga in perſecutione. And Auguſt. Serm. 126. de tempore. Wherfore this opinion is full of ignorance and error.

Well, whereas our Saviour firſt gives a Commandement to pray, and then after gives a direction for the keeping of it, this he doth to ſtirre up our dulneſſe, and to allure us by all meanes to the heavenly exerciſe of prayer: wherefore ſtill I ſay, imploy your ſelves in prayer fervently and continually, and if you can not doe it, learne to pray. Thus much of the commandement of our Saviour Chriſt: now follow the words of the prayer.

Our Father which art, &c.

THeſe words containe three parts: I. a preface. II. The prayer it ſelfe, containing ſixe petitions. III. the teſtification of faith in the laſt word, Amen.

Which although it be ſhort, yet it doth not cõtaine the ſmalleſt point in the prayer. It is (I ſay) a teſtification of our faith, whereas the petitions that goe before are only teſtifications of our deſires. Now of theſe three parts in order.

We muſt conſider how our Saviour Chriſt doth not ſet down the petitions abruptly, but he firſt begins with a ſolemne preface. Whereby wee are taught this leſſon; that hee which is to pray unto God, is firſt to prepare himſelfe, and not boldly without conſideration as it were, to ruſh into the preſence of God.

If a man bee to come before an earthly Prince, he will order himſelfe in apparell, geſture, and words, that he may doe all things in ſeemelineſſe and dutifull reverence: how much more are men to order themſelves, when they are to appeare before the living God? Eccleſ. 5. 1. Bee not raſh with thy mouth, and let not thy heart bee haſty to utter a thing before the Lord. And David, Pſal. 26. 6. waſhed his hands in innocencie, before he came to the altar of the Lord to offer ſacrifice.

The meanes whereby men may ſtirre up their dull and heavie hearts, and ſo prepare themſelves to prayer, are three. The firſt, is to reade diligently the Word of God, concerning thoſe matters about which they are to pray: & what then? this will be a meanes not onely to direct him, but alſo to quicken the heart more fervently to deliver his prayer. This is evident by a compariſon. The beames of the Sunne deſcending, heate not before they come to the earth, or ſome ſolid body where they may reflect, and then by that meanes the earth and ayre adjoyning is made hot: even ſo the Lord ſends downe unto us his bleſſed word, even as beames and the goodly ſun-ſhine, and thereby he ſpeakes to our hearts: now when wee make our prayers of that which we have read, Gods word is as it were reflected, and our hearts are thereby warmed with the comfortable heat of Gods holy ſpirit, to poure out our prayers to God more fervently. The ſecond meanes is to pray to God that he would ſtrengthen us with his ſpirit, that we might be able to pray as it is practiſed, Pſal. 143. 1. The third meanes is, the conſideration of Gods moſt glorious majeſtie, wherein wee are to remember firſt, his fatherly goodneſſe and kindneſſe, whereby he is willing; and ſecondly, his omnipotency, whereby he is able to grant our requeſt. One of theſe imboldened the leper to pray, Lord, if thou wilt thou canſt make me cleane, Matt. 8. 2. Therefore both together are more effectuall.

Now let us come to the preface it ſelfe, Our Father which art in heaven. It containes a deſcription of the true Iehovah to whom we pray, and that by two arguments: the firſt is drawne from a relation, Our Father: the ſecond is taken from the ſubject or place, which art in heaven.

Father.

1. The meaning.

IN the opening of this word, or title of God, two queſtions are to be opened.

1. Queſt. Whether by this title Father, is ſignified the whole Trinitie, or ſome one perſon thereof. Anſw. Otherwhiles this name is attributed to all the perſons in Trinitie, or any of them. Mal. 2. 10. Have we not all one father, &c. Luk. 3. 38. Which was the ſonne of Adam, which was the ſonne of God. And in Eſa. 9. 6. Chriſt is called the Father of eternitie, becauſe all that are truly knit to him, and borne anew by him, they are eternally made the ſonnes of God. Againe, oftentimes it is given to the firſt perſon in Trinitie, as in thoſe places where one perſon is conferred with another. And ſo in this place principally for ſome ſpeciall reſpects, this title agrees to the firſt perſon. For firſt, he is the Father of Chriſt as he is the eternall word of the Father, and that by nature, becauſe he is of the ſame eſſence with him. Secondly, he is the Father of Chriſt in reſpect of his manhood, not by nature or adoption, but by perſonall union, becauſe the humane nature doth ſubſiſt in the perſon of the Word. Thirdly, hee is a father to all the faithfull by adoption in Chriſt.

2. Queſt. Whether are wee to pray to the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, as to the Father? Anſ. Invocation belongs to all the three perſons in Trinitie, and not onely to the Father. Act. 7. 59. Steven prayeth, Lord Ieſus receive my ſpirit. 1. Theſſ. 3. 11. Now God our Father and our Lord Ieſus Chriſt guide our journey unto you. 2 Cor. 13. 13. The grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, the love of God, and the communion of the holy Ghoſt be with you. And men are baptized in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, that is, by calling on the name of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt.

Some may ſay, this prayer is a perfect platforme of all prayers, and yet we are taught to direct our prayers to the Father, not to the Sonne, or holy ſpirit. I anſwer, the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt, are three diſtinct perſons, yet they are not to bee ſevered or divided, becauſe they all ſubſiſt in one and the ſame Godhead or divine nature. And further in all outward actions, as in the creation and preſervation of the world, and the ſalvation of the elect, they are not ſevered or divided; for they all worke togeather, onely they are diſtinguiſhed in the manner of working. Now if they be not divided in nature or operation; then they are not to be ſevered in worſhip.

And in this place we principally direct our prayers to the Father, becauſe he is the firſt in order: yet ſo, as then we imply the Sonne and holy Ghoſt. For we pray to the Father in the name of the Sonne by the aſſurance of the holy Ghoſt. And to what perſon ſoever the prayer is directed, we muſt alwayes remember in mi ndeand heart to include the reſt.

2. The uſes.

THE uſes of this point are manifold.

1. Firſt, whereas we are taught to come to God as to a father, and therefore in the name of his Sonne our Saviour Chriſt: we learne to lay the firſt ground of all our prayers, which is, to hold and maintaine the union and the diſtinction of the three perſons in Trinitie. This being the loweſt and the firſt foundation of prayer, it is requiſite that all which would pray aright, ſhould have this knowledge, rightly to beleeve the Trinitie, and to know how the three perſons agree, and how they are diſtinguiſhed, and the order of them, how the Father is the firſt, the Sonne the ſecond, and the holy Ghoſt the third: and therefore how the Father is to be called upon in the name of the Son by the holy Ghoſt. By this the prayers of Gods Church, and the prayers of heathen men are diſtinguiſhed, who invocate God as a Creator out of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt. And hence it is manifeſt, that ignorant and ſilly people which doe not ſo much as dreame of the union, diſtinction, and order of the perſons in Trinitie, make but a cold and ſlender kinde of praying.

2. Secondly, we may learne hereby that we are not in any wiſe to invocate Saints and Angels, but onely the true Iehovah. The reaſon ſtands thus: This prayer is either a perfect platforme for all prayers, or not: to ſay it were not, were an injury to our Saviour Chriſt; to ſay it is ſo, is alſo to grant that it doth fully ſet downe to whom all prayers are to be made. Now, in theſe words there is ſet downe no invocation but of God alone: For in prayer to be tearmed, Our Father, is proper to God, Eſa. 63.16. Thou art our father: though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Iſrael know us not: yet thou, O Lord, art our father and redeemer. Papiſts therefore that are the great patrons of invocation of Saints, in their reformed breviaries and miſſals, deale very fondly: for firſt they pray to Mary, that ſhe would pray to Chriſt for them, and when they have ſo done, like juglers they come to Chriſt and pray unto him, that hee would accept Maries prayers for them.

3. Thirdly, we learne that there can be no intereeſſour betweene God and us, but onely Chriſt. For here wee are taught to come to God not as a judge, but as to a kinde and loving father. Now he is a father to us onely by Chriſt: as for Angels and Saints and all creatures, they are not able to procure by any meanes that God ſhould become a Father, no not ſo much as to one man.

4. Againe, if the God to whom we pray be a father, we muſt learne to acquaint our ſelves with the promiſes which he hath made in his word, to quicken our hearts in all our prayers unto him, and thereby to gather aſſiance to our ſelves and perſwaſion that he will grant our requeſts. For this word [Father] implies a readineſſe and willingneſſe in God to heare and be mercifull to our prayers. And a father cannot but muſt needs make promiſe of favour to thoſe that be his children, & therefore it cannot be that he ſhould call to God his father truly, which hath not in his heart this aſſurance, that God will fulfill all his promiſes made unto him. Promiſes made to prayer, as theſe and ſuch like, are to be marked, as follow. 2. Chron. 7.14. If my people, among whom my name is called upon, ſhoe humble themſelves, and pray, and ſeeke my preſence, and turne from their wicked waies, then I will heare in heaven, and bee merciſull unto their ſins. 2. Chron. 15.2. The Lord is with you while ye be with him, & if ye ſeeke him, he will be found of you. Eſa. 65.24. Before they call I will anſwer, and whiles they ſpeake I will heare. Mat. 7.7. Aske and it ſhall be given you, ſeeke and yee ſhall finde, knocke and it ſhall be opened. Luke 11.13. If ye which are evill can give good gifts unto your children, how much more ſhall your heavenly Father give the holy Ghoſt to them that deſire him? Rom. 10.12. Hee that is Lord over all, is rich unto all that call on him. Iam. 4.8. Draw neere unto God, and he will draw neere unto you.

5. If God be a Father who is called upon, then prayer is the note of Gods childe. S. Luke and S. Paul ſet out the faithful ſervants of God by this note, Act. 9.14. He hath authoritie to binde all that call on thy name. 1. Cor. 1.2. To them that are ſanctified by Ieſus Chriſt, Saints by calling with all that call on the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And contrariwiſe, Pſal. 14.4. it is made one of the properties of an Atheiſt, Never to call on the name of God. And ſuch perſons as neither will nor can, or uſe not heartily to pray to God, they may ſay that they are perſwaded there is a God, but in their doings they beare themſelves as if there were no God.

6. He which would pray aright, muſt be like the prodigall child, that is, he muſt, not onely confeſſe his ſin, ſaying, Father I have ſinned againſt heaven, and againſt thee, &c. but alſo have a full purpoſe never after to offend his father. For how can a childe call him father whom hee cares not continually to diſpleaſe through his lewd conditions? He cannot doe it; neither can any father delight in ſuch a child: therefore in prayer we muſt call to mind our lewdneſſe and rebellions againſt our heavenly Father, and with the Publican in heavineſſe of ſoule ſay; Lord be merciſull unto mee a ſinner. He which can truly doe this, is a kinde childe. If wee conſider our ſelves as wee are by nature, wee are the children of the divell: Luk. 15. 18.

no childe ſo like his father as we are like him; and in this eſtate we continually rebell againſt God, for the divell hath all the heart, our whole joy is to ſerve and pleaſe him. A man that is to pray muſt think on this, and be grieved thereat. And happy, yea a thouſand times happy are they, who have grace given them to ſee their eſtate, and bewaile it. And further, it is not ſufficient to confeſſe our ſinnes againſt our mercifull Father, but wee muſt ſet down with our ſelves never in ſuch ſort to offend him againe, and to leade a new life. This point is very profitable for theſe times. For many there bee when any croſſe and ſickneſſe comes on them, will pray and promiſe repentance and all obedience to Gods Word, if it ſhall pleaſe God to deliver them: but this uſually is but in hypocriſie, they diſſemble with God and man. For when their ſicknes is paſt, like a dogge that hath been in the water, they ſhake their eares, and runne ſtraight with all greedineſſe to their former ſins. Is this to call God Father? No, hee that doth this, ſhall not have God to be his Father: but the man that is wounded in his ſoule for his offences paſt, and carrieth a purpoſe in his heart never witting and willingly to offend God againe.

7. Laſtly, here we are to obſerve, that he which would pray, muſt be endued with the ſpirit of adoption: the actions whereof in the matter of prayer are twofold. The firſt, to moove the heart to cry & call on God as a Father. It is no eaſie thing to pray: for to a man of himſelfe it is as eaſie to moove the whole earth with his hand: how then comes it that we pray? It is a bleſſed work of the ſpirit. Rom. 8.15. We have received the ſpirit of adoptiõ wherby we cry, Abba, that is, father. And Rom. 8.26. Likewiſe the ſpirit helpeth our infirmities: for wee know not what to pray as we ought: but the ſpirit it ſelfe maketh requeſt. And Zach. 12.10. the holy Ghoſt is called the ſpirit of grace, and of deprecation and prayers. Well then, the man that would pray, muſt have Gods ſpirit to bee his ſchoole-matter, to teach him to pray with groanes and ſighes of the heart; for the words make not the prayer, but the groanes and deſires of the heart: & a man praies for no more then he deſires with the heart, and hee which deſires nothing praies not at all, but ſpends lip-labour. The ſecond worke of the ſpirit, is to aſſure us in our conſciences that we are in the ſtate of grace, reconciled to God. Rom. 8.16. The ſpirit of adoption beareth witneſſe with our ſpirits, that we are the children of God. And this inward certificate of the ſpirit in all exerciſes of invocation is very neceſſary: for hee which wants this aſſurance, if he be ſecure & benummed in his ſins, will not, and if he be touched in conſcience for them, for his life dares not call God Father. Alſo this confutes the opinion of the Church of Rome, which teaches, that man is to doubt whether he be adopted or no. For how can a man truly call God Father, when he doubts whether he be the child of God or no? It is a miſerable kinde of praying to call God Father, and withall to doubt whether he be a Father. Indeed it is true that doubts will often ariſe, but it is our duty to ſtrive againſt them, and not to yeeld to them. Yea but (ſay they) to be certaine of Gods mercy is preſumption. I anſwer, if it be preſumption, it is an holy preſumption, becauſe God hath bidden us to call him Father.

Our Father.

1. The meaning.

THus much of the argument of relation: now let us proceed. It is further ſaid, Our Father. And he is ſo tearmed, becauſe he is the Father of Chriſt by nature; and in him the Father of every beleever: yea of the whole body of the Church.

Queſt. Whether may it be lawfull for us in prayer to ſay, not our Father, but my Father? Anſ. A chriſtian may in private prayer ſay. My Father. This is warranted by the example of our Saviour, Mat. 26.39. O my Father, if it bee poſſible, let this cup paſſe frõ me. And Mat. 27.46. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? and Thomas prayed, My Lord, and my God. Ioh. 20.18. And Paul, 1 Cor. 1.4. I give thankes to my God, &c. And Gods promiſe is, Ier. 3.19. Thou ſhalt call me, my Father. The meaning of Chriſt is not to bind us to theſe words, but to teach us that in our prayers we muſt not have regard to our ſelves only, but alſo to our brethren, and therefore when we pray for them in our private prayers, as for our ſelves, we put in practiſe the true meaning of theſe words.

2. The uſes.

When we pray, we muſt not make requeſt only for our ſelves and our owne good, but for others alſo, as the Church and people of God, perſwading our ſelves that we alſo are partakers of their prayers: and for the better clearing of this point, let us ſearch who they are for whom we are to pray.

Of men there be two ſorts, ſome living, ſome dead. Of theſe two kinds, the living are to be praied for, & there is no praying for the dead.

A man that is dead, knowes what ſhall be his eſtate eternally: if he died a wicked perſõ, that is, an unrepentant ſinner, his ſtate ſhall be according, in eternall torment: if he died, having repented of his ſinnes, then hee ſhall reſt with God in his kingdome. Apoc. 14.13. Bleſſed are they which die in the Lord, for they reſt from their labours, & their works follow thẽ. Gal. 6.10. While we have time let us do good to all men. Where wee may note that there is a time, namely, after death, when we cannot do good to others.

Againe, of the living, ſome are our enemies, & ſome our friends: our friẽds are they which are of the ſame religion, affection, & diſpoſition. Foes are either private or publike. Publike foes, are either enemies to our country, as tyrants, traitours, &c. or enemies to our religion, as Iewes, Turkes, Papiſts, Infidels, Atheiſts.

Now towards all theſe, how ought a man to behave himſelfe in prayer? Anſ. Hee is to pray for them all, Mat. 5.44. Pray for them which hurt you, and perſecute you. 1 Tim. 2.1. I exhort that prayers, interceſſions, &c. be made for all men, for kings, &c. Yet when Paul gave this commandement, wee reade not that there were any Chriſtian kings, but all infidels. And the Iewes are commanded to pray for Babylon, where they were captive, Ier. 29.7. And ſeeke the proſperitie of the citie, whither I have cauſed you to be carried captive, and pray unto the Lord for it.

Queſt. How and in what manner are we to pray for our enemies? Anſ. Wee are to pray againſt their ſinnes, counſels, enterpriſes, but not againſt their perſons. Thus prayed David, againſt Achitophel, 1 Sam. 15.31. Lord, I pray thee, turne the counſell of Achitophel to fooliſhnes. And thus did the Apoſtles pray againſt their perſecutors, Act. 4. 29. O Lord behold their threatnings, and grant unto thy ſervants with all boldneſſe to ſpeake thy Word.

Queſt. David uſeth imprecations againſt his enemies, in which hee prayeth for their utter confuſion, as Pſal. 59. and 109. &c. The like is done by Paul, Gal. 5.12. 2 Tim. 4.14. and Peter, Act. 8. 20. though afterwards hee mittigates his execration. But how could they doe it? Anſ. I. They were endued with an extraordinarie meaſure of Gods ſpirit, and hereby they were enabled to diſcerne of their enemies, and certainely to judge that their wickedneſſe and malice was incurable, and that they ſhould never repent. And the like praiers did the primitive Church conceive againſt Iulian the Apoſtata, becauſe they perceived him to bee a malicious and deſperate enemie. II. They were endued with a pure zeale, and not carried with deſire of revenge againſt their enemies, intending nothing elſe but the glorie of God. Now for us it is good that wee ſhould ſuſpect our zeale, becauſe ſiniſter affections, as hatred, envy, emulation, deſire of revenge, will eaſily mingle themſelves therewith.

Queſt. How farre forth may wee uſe thoſe Pſalmes in which David uſeth imprecations againſt his enemies? Anſ. They are to be read and ſung with theſe caveats. I. We are to uſe thoſe imprecations indefinitely againſt the enemies of God and his Church: for wee may perſwade our ſelves, that alwaies ther be ſome ſuch obſtinate enemies: but wee muſt not apply them particularly. II. We muſt uſe them (as Auguſtine ſaith) as certaine propheticall ſentences of the holy Ghoſt, pronouncing the laſt ſentence of deſtruction upon finall impenitent ſinners, which oppoſe themſelves againſt Gods kingdome. III. They may bee uſed againſt our ſpirituall enemies, the fleſh, the divell, and his angels, and the world.

2. Furthermore whereas wee are taught to ſay, Our Father, this ſerves to put us in minde, that in praying to God, wee muſt bring love to men with us. Wee muſt all bee the children of one Father, lovingly diſpoſed one to another. For how ſhould he call God his Father, who will not take the child of God for his brother? Matt. 5.23,24. When thou art to offer thy gift unto God, if thy brother hath ought againſt thee: firſt bee reconciled, and then come and offer thy gift. So alſo Eſa. 1.15. the Lord ſaith, that whē they pray unto him he wil not heare. Why? becauſe their hands are full of blood. In theſe times many men can be content formally to pray, but yet they will not leave bribing, oppreſſion, deceit, uſury, &c. The common ſong of the world is, Every man for himſelfe, and God for us all: this is the common love and care that men have each to other. The prayers of ſuch are abominable, even as the ſacrifice of a dog, as Eſa. 66. 3. ſaith. For how can they call God their Father, that have no love to their brethren?

3. Thirdly, hence we may learne that God is no accepter of perſons. For this prayer is given to all men of what ſtate or degree ſoever. All then, as well poore as rich, unlearned as learned, ſubjects as rulers, may ſay, Our father. It is not with the Lord as it is with the world, but all are his children that doe beleeve. The poore man hath as good intereſt in Gods kingdome, and may call God Father as well as the king. Therefore the weaker ſort are to comfort themſelves hereby, knowing that God is a Father to them as well as to Abraham, David, Peter. And ſuch as are endued with more grace, muſt not therefore ſwell in pride, becauſe they have not God to bee their Father more then their inferiours have.
